Provided that where within 60 days after the application for stay has been granted the judgment-debtor does not apply to the Court which passed the decree for relief under Sec.19 or where an application has been so made and is rejected, the decree shall be executed as it stands, notwithstanding anything contained in this Act to the contrary."

3. A reading of Sec.20 of the Act clearly discloses that stay under the said section is a must. The word used in the section is 'shall'. Hence, when an application is made by a judgment-debtor that he is an agriculturist coming under the definition of the Act and that a decree has been passed against him in respect of a debt which arose prior to 1.3.1972 and that the said decree is not in accordance with law as it has not taken note of the fact that the judgment-debtor is an agriculturist debtor entitled to the benefits of scaling down under the Act, then the only thing that can be done by a court which passed the decree is to stay the decree. It has nothing more to do or probe into the truth of what the judgment-debtor says. That has to be done only when a judgment-debtor files a petition under Sec.19 of the Act before the court which is to execute the decree. Sec.20 of the Act also enjoins that within 60 days of obtaining the order for stay, the judgment-debtor shall apply to the executing court under Sec.19 at the risk of the stay being vacated.

4. In this state of law, it is rather unfortunate that the learned District Munsif rejected the application without even numbering the same with a laconic order stating that he does not find any reason to stay the proceedings. I need hardly to state that orders of this kind have been deprecated in several proceedings by the Apex Court and also by this Court. It is fundamental that whatever the order, it must contain the reasons therefor so as to enable the Court in appeal to understand why the application has been rejected and the order is tenable.

5. Against this order, when an appeal was filed in the Sub Court, Cuddalore, in C.M.A.No.47 of 1991, the learned Sub Judge dealt with the matter foreign to the scope of the questions involved in the appeal before him. The learned Sub Judge has dealt with Sec.47, C.P.C., as to how it was prior to 1976 Amending Act and how it has come to after the Amending Act, etc. The learned Sub Judge should have seen that Act IV of 1938 is a self contained enactment providing for appeals being laid under the Orders passed under the Act. There is no need for invoking any statutory provision under the Code of Civil Procedure, namely O.43, because Sec.25-A of Act IV of 1938 as amended by Act VIII of 1973 itself provides for appeal. It is, therefore, idle to discover any provision under O.43, C.P.C. for an appeal being laid, as no such provisions can possibly be found in that Act when already there is a provision in the Act itself for appeals. Therefore, I am constrained to state that the courts below have not bestowed any thought over the matter or satisfactorily dealt with the matter by taking into consideration appropriate and relevant provisions of law in regard thereto.

6. It is unfortunate that a debtor should knock about from one court to another and also incur needless expenditure. It has also to be taken note of that a great delay in determination of rights take place when the courts do not take pains to deal with a matter in accordance with relevant provisions of statute. In the instant case, in particular, this delay could have been avoided.

7. In the circumstances, the civil miscellaneous second appeal is allowed and the matter is remitted back to the court which passed the decree to determine the application filed by the appellant before it under Sec.20 of Act IV of 1938 in accordance with law, within two months from the date of receipt of a copy of this order after hearing both parties. There will be no order as to costs.

7th February, 1992.

Thirumuruga Kirupananda Variyar Thavathiru Sundaraswamigal Medical Educational and Charitable Trust

...Petitioner

Tamil Nadu Dr.M.G.R. Medical University and another

...Respondents.

(A) Practice and Procedure - Law Officer of High Court making a statement before Court - Statement made without instructions from Government - Government if can, contend that it was not binding on Government.

(B) Tamil Nadu Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Act (XXXVII of 1987) as amended by Act (XXXII of 1990) - Provision requiring prior permission of State Government for starting a private medical college - High Court passing order to amount that prior permission of Government should not be insisted upon - Right crystallised in favour of the party - State Government, if can insist on prior permission being obtained in view of the amended provision.

The petitioner, a Charitable Trust decided to start a private self-financing Medical College at Salem. It submitted an application to the Madras University in October, 1988. It was not considered on the ground that prior approval of the State Government was not obtained. The petitioner preferred a writ petition to quash that order. The then Government Pleader made a statement before the court that the respondent university would not insist upon prior permission of the Government.

A consent order was passed that if the petitioner applied for affiliation in the prescribed form, it would be considered by the university on merits without insisting upon prior permission of the Government. But the university rejected it on the ground that the application was a belated one. It was again challenged in a writ petition. The writ petition was allowed and the first respondent university was directed to reconsider the application. Once again the application was rejected by the University on the basis of the recommendations of the Inspection Commission. The petitioner filed the present writ petition to quash the order. On behalf of the State it was contended that the representations made before the High Court by the then Government Pleader would not bind the Government since it was not made on instructions from the Government and that in view of the amendment to the Tamil Nadu Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Act, 1987, by the amendment Act, 32 of 1990, prior permission of the State was mandatory.

Held:- When the responsible law officer of the High Court, who represents the Government, makes a statement before the Court, the same cannot be brushed aside so lightly by the Court. It is true that the same counsel represented both the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University and the Government in the abovementioned case. If the Government had really felt that at that point of time the law officer of the court had accepted an order without getting the instructions of the Government, it should have preferred an appeal against the said order. The Government Pleader in the High Court cannot be equated to a Government Pleader of a mofussil Court. The Government Pleader in the High Court has certainly got more responsibility than a Government Pleader in a mofussil Court. In Periyar and Pareekanni Rubbers Ltd. v. State of Kerala, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 2192, the Supreme Court was concerned about a Government Pleader in a mofussil court. The Government Pleader in the High Court has to be held as a responsible officer and his statement cannot be equated with a statement made by a Government Pleader in the trial Court. The court is equally of the view that the Government Pleader in the High Court is responsible for the Government and he is equally a responsible officer of the court also. It could even be said that all law officers of the High Court are responsible for the statements so made to the High Court.

The learned Advocate General cannot rely upon the amending Act to set at naught the right which has crystallised in favour of the petitioner. The University or the State cannot now build up an argument supported by the Amending Act XXXII of 1990, which came into force in the year 1990.

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein, and in the affidavit filed therewith, the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorarified mandamus calling for the records, comprised in the proceedings of the respondent dated 16.8.1991 in Lr.No.Affln. (1) 1238 of 1988 and quash the same and consequently direct the respondent to grant permanent affiliation sought for by the petitioner for its Medical College viz., Vinayaka Mission Kirupananda Variyar Medical College, Salem, from the academic year 1991-92. Mohan Parasaram, for Petitioner.

G.Rajagopal, Advocate General (State), for Respondent No.2.

The Court made the following

ORDER:- The above writ petition is preferred by the petitioner Trust challenging the order of Medical University (in short as 'the University') dated 16.8.1991 by which the application of the petitioner seeking affiliation to start the proposed Vinayaka Mission Kirupananda Variyar Medical College at Salem for the academic year 1991-92 has been rejected.

2. On an earlier occasion, Govindasamy, J. in W.M.P.No.20146 of 1991 in this writ petition by order dated 22.10.1991 directed the first respondent University to grant provisional affiliation subject to the petitioner fulfilling all the requirements in a period of two years and pending further orders. Against the said order a writ appeal was filed in W.A.No.1377 of 1991 and a Division Bench of this Court consisting of the Acting Chief Justice and Somasundaram, J. by order dated 26.11.1991 allowed the writ appeal setting aside the order of Govindasamy, J. in the above mentioned W.M.P.No.20146 of 1991, dated 22.10.1991 and further directed that the main writ petition itself be listed for hearing. That is how the petition is before me.

3. W.M.P.No.24518 of 1991 has been filed by the State praying to implead itself as a party in the writ petition and by order dated 17.12.1991 it has been impleaded as the second respondent in the writ petition.

4. The facts leading to the filing of the writ petition are:

The petitioner is a Charitable Trust which has been imparting education in the fields of medicine and engineering by starting various educational institutions. A pharmacy College, an Engineering College, a Dental College, a polytechnic, a Homeopathy Medical College and Industrial Training Institute and certain other institutions are being run by the petitioner Trust. The petitioner desired to start a private self-financing Medical College at Salem. The petitioner Trust is already running a hospital at Salem Town under the name and style 'Vinayaka Mission's Hospital'. Originally the petitioner had submitted an application to the University of Madras and subsequently submitted an application to the first respondent University in the month of October, 1988.

However, the said application submitted by the petitioner was not considered by the first respondent University on the ground that the petitioner should obtain prior approval from the State, that is to say, a no objection certificate from the Government of Tamil Nadu. Aggrieved by this, the petitioner preferred a writ petition in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 praying to quash the order of the first respondent dated 28.11.1988 and to direct the first respondent University to discharge its statutory obligations by considering the applications of the petitioner dated 2.12.1987 and 23.10.1988 for starting the Medical College and granting affiliation to it without insisting on any approval of the State Government or prior approval of the Medical Council of India. By order dated 13.4.1989, Venkataswami, J. in the said writ petition directed the first respondent University to consider the application of the petitioner without insisting upon prior permission of the Government and pass orders in accordance with law within eight weeks from the date of receipt of the application to be filed by the petitioner. Consequent upon this order, the petitioner submitted an application for affiliation with necessary fee to the second respondent in the month of October, 1989 with all relevant particulars. However, the first respondent University once again declined to grant the affiliation for the academic year 1989-90 on the ground that the application was a belated one. The said decision was challenged by the petitioner by way of a writ petition in W.P.No.10453 of 1990. Somasundaram, J. by order dated 1.2.1991 allowed the said writ petition setting aside the order of the first respondent University and further directed the first respondent to re-consider the application of the petitioner on merits in terms of the order of Venkataswami, J. dated 13.4.1989 in W.P.No.2276 of 1989. It is alleged in the affidavit filed in support of the petition that the petitioner has been driven from pillar to post for establishing a self-financing private medical college and that the request of the petitioner has been turned down by the first respondent University for some reason or other. It is further alleged in the affidavit that the petitioner being a fairly well known educational Trust wanted to establish a self financing medical college at Salem continuously, that even in the year 1988 the petitioner had purchased vast extent of lands in order to start a self-financing private medical college, that as early as on 10.3.1990 the petitioner invested a sum of Rs.50 lakhs in the fixed deposit in the joint names of the first respondent and the petitioner in the Vysya Bank Ltd. and that said fixed deposit is valid upto 10.3.2000. It is further alleged in the affidavit that the petitioner started construction of the Medical College in accordance with the prescribed norms, that it had completed construction of a full-fledged Medical College comprising of Lecture Theatres, Demonstration rooms, practical class rooms, Dissection hall, Museum room, Library etc., that sufficient number of rooms have been provided for each of the branches, that it had provided workshop, auditorium, play ground, quarters for staff, hostel facilities, administration block, gas plant, animal house, pharmacy, laundry and kitchen, and that sufficient number of equipments as are required in terms of the specifications of the Medical Council of India for starting a Medical College with a minimum strength of 100 students. It is further alleged in the affidavit that in respect of hospital facilities, the petitioner is running a private hospital at Salem with 60 beds of its own, that it is presently putting up a full fledged hospital with 1000 beds for which construction has already started and to be completed before March 1993, that the petitioner had appointed teaching staff for the first M.B.B.S. course comprising of 33 staff members in various discipline, that the petitioner has been paying salary to all those staff and teaching personnel, that the petitioner has to undergo all such formalities, because as per the University norms, the first respondent University will grant affiliation to a college only when it has already become functional and operational in all respects, that the petitioner has invested huge amounts in the establishment of the college so as to get the grant of affiliation, since the first respondent University will grant affiliation only to a college which has become already functional and not for institutions which are just springing up or likely to spring up and that the investment made by the petitioner is running to several crores of rupees which was obtained from financial institutions for which the petitioner is paying huge interest. It is further stated in the affidavit that the petitioner was very hopeful to get the affiliation from the first respondent University from the academic year 1991-92 onwards in terms of the directions of this Court given by Venkataswami, J. and Somasundaram, J. as it had satisfied all the norms and prescriptions, that the first respondent University appointed an Inspection Commission to inspect the petitioner College for which the petitioner had paid the necessary fees to the University, that the Inspection Commission has been appointed, that it inspected the petitioner college on 13.7.1991 and that it reliably understands that the report of the Inspection Commission is in favour of the petitioner stating the petitioner Trust satisfied all the norms prescribed for being affiliated. It is stated that at this stage, the petitioner has received the impugned communication. It is also stated in the affidavit that the first respondent University has not even chosen to call for the details from the petitioner before passing the impugned order and that had it been done, affiliation would have been granted to the petitioner in view of the earlier orders of this Court, mentioned hereinabove. It is further stated that the first respondent has acted arbitrarily and in an unreasonable manner without even giving an opportunity to the petitioner to put forth the relevant materials.

5. The petitioner further alleges in the affidavit that the impugned communication is illegal and is in violation of the principles of natural justice. It is stated in the affidavit that the first respondent University, in the impugned communication has pointed out that the application submitted by the petitioner for affiliation has to be rejected on four grounds, that none of the grounds is valid and sustainable in law. It is further alleged in the affidavit that with regard to the first ground that the buildings or administration blocks were not ready, the said buildings were ready several months ago and they were ready even during the month of March, 1991. It is further alleged in the affidavit that with regard to the second ground stating that there is no hostel blocks within the Medical College campus itself, that neither the norms of the Medical Council of India nor any other Statutes in force compels any Medical College to have the hostels within the College campus itself. It is further stated in the affidavit that several professional colleges have hostels elsewhere and some colleges do not have even hostel facilities. It is further stated in the affidavit that Mohan Kumaramangalam Government Medical College run by the Government at Salem and even the Madras Medical College do not have hostel facilities in those colleges is situated away from the college and that the first respondent has failed to note that the petitioner had already made arrangements for hostel facilities at Fairlands Salem and had also made suitable arrangements for ferrying students from the college to the hostel and back by arranging private buses. With regard to the third ground of deficiency pointed out by the first respondent University, the petitioner alleges that there was sufficient evidence which was made available even before the Inspection Commission that a full-fledged hospital would be ready before March, 1993, that there is sufficient hospital facilities available for the first year students, who are to undergo clinical training, which they have to undertake only after the completion of 18 months course after admission, that the petitioner had already made tie up arrangement with leading hospitals at Salem and that the first respondent University in respect of Self Financing Medical Colleges such as P.S.G. Institute of Medical Sciences, Coimbatore, the Medical College situated at Annamalai University and in respect of Sri Ramachandra Medical College, Madras, did not insist upon them the hospital facilities at the beginning when they were affiliated. It is further pointed out that even as on date some of the abovementioned Colleges still continue with the tie up arrangement only inspite of more than 5 or 6 years have elapsed after their affiliation. It is further stated that in the case of the petitioner, even prior to the affiliation being granted, it had made tie up arrangement with various hospitals, that it had provided facilities for 540 beds in various disciplines required at the end of 18 months and that the petitioner is constructing a big hospital of its own with 1000 beds and the said construction is expected to be finished even before March, 1993, and that it is not in any event essential that a hospital should be ready within 18 months if there is alternate tie up arrangement with other medical hospitals. With regard to the last ground mentioned in the impugned order for rejecting the application of the petitioner, it is alleged in the affidavit that the Inspection Commission did not ask for the encumbrance certificates and that had they been asked they would have been produced. It is pointed out in the affidavit that the petitioner had already obtained encumbrance certificates for a period of 13 years and patta and adangal extracts, that the said lands were purchased after obtaining legal opinion, that the lands had been sold by the kartha of the Hindu undivided family for the benefit of the minors and that no court permission is necessary since the property is a joint family property and the Kartha was entitled to deal with the property. With regard to the last ground of deficiency that no clearance certificate was obtained from the Authorised Officer under the Tamil Nadu Land Reforms Act, it is stated in the affidavit that the matter is pending with the Government under Sec.37-B of the Tamil Nadu Land Reforms (Fixation of Ceiling on Land) Act, 1961. According to the petitioner all the grounds shown in the impugned communication as entitled for rejection of the application are not valid in the eyes of law. It is further stated in the affidavit that the action of the first respondent University is liable to be set aside as the first respondent has neither furnished the copy of the inspection report nor has given effective opportunity to rebut the defects pointed out therein. It is also stated that the first respondent has acted arbitrarily and in an unreasonable manner finding out some reason or other to reject the application of the petitioner, that the treatment meted out to the petitioner is totally discriminatory, that several other Medical Colleges which had already been granted affiliation were treated favourably and that the action of the first respondent University is in violation of Art.14 of the Constitution of India. It is further stated that the action of the first respondent University is without any rationale and that it is violative of the principles of natural justice. With these allegations the petitioner Trust has come up to this Court praying for the issue of a writ of certiorarified mandamus to call for the records of the first respondent dated 16.8.1991 and quash the same and consequently to direct the first respondent University to grant permanent affiliation for the petitioner's college viz., Vinayaka Missions Kirupananda Variyar Medical College, Salem, for the academic year 1991-92.

6. A counter affidavit has been filed by the first respondent University. It is claimed in the counter affidavit that only on the recommendations of the Inspection Report dated 15.7.1991 and following the Statutes of the first respondent University, the application of the petitioner for affiliation has been rejected, that it is the duty of the petitioner to put forth all necessary and relevant documents to convince University to establish that it had complied with all the requirements required under law and that it is not for the University to give an opportunity to the petitioner in such matters. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that the petitioner cannot plead that it has not been given reasonable opportunity, that it is for the petitioner to satisfy the Inspection Commission that the Administration buildings are ready and that the petitioner has not produced any certificate from the architects and engineers. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that with regard to hostel facilities, it is for the petitioner to prove that it was taking steps to construct hostel within the campus and it had made arrangements for ferrying students from the hostel to the college and back by arranging buses. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that the Inspection Commission has pointed out that no activity is in evidence about the construction of a hospital which could be ready within 18 months, that there has to be a functioning outpatient department and that the functioning hospital of about 300 beds even at the time of initial inauguration of the college should progressively increase to 600 beds with two or three years and to 800 beds before the first batch reaches final year. It is also claimed in the counter affidavit that it is for the petitioner to prove that it had tie-up arrangements with leading hospitals at Salem and obtained necessary consent letters from the hospital in this regard. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that with regard to the colleges mentioned by the petitioner in its affidavit, affiliation was granted to those colleges by the University of Madras and not by the first respondent University and that those colleges have obtained prior permission of the Government as per G.O.Ms.No.1196, Health and Family Welfare Department, dated 24.7.1985, that there is no evidence produced by the petitioner that the tie up arrangements with the private hospitals would continue till the construction of its own hospital and that those are only consent letters and there is no binding agreement between the petitioner Trust and tie up arrangements. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that a functional hospital is needed for teaching, that the first respondent University has acted as per the recommendations of the Inspection Commission which in turn has considered the question from all aspects. With regard to infrastructural facilities, it is claimed in the counter affidavit that it is for the petitioner to prove and that it is not for the University to give an opportunity. With regard to the permission under

Sec.37-B of the Tamil Nadu Land Reforms (Fixation of Ceiling on Land) Act, 1961 to hold excess lands for running an educational institution for students hospital staff quarters, auditorium etc., no permission has been granted by the Government so far to the petitioner Trust to hold excess lands and that the appointment of the Inspection Commission itself is an opportunity to the petitioner to put forth its pleadings and all the relevant records etc. and that the petitioner cannot now plead that no opportunity was given to it. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that there is no violation of Art.14 of the Constitution and that the first respondent University has not acted in an arbitrary manner as contended by the petitioner. It is categorically claimed in the counter affidavit that it had acted only on the basis of the recommendations of the Inspection Commission. 7. A counter affidavit has been filed by the State of Tamil Nadu which has been impleaded as a party respondent in this writ petition. It is pointed out in the counter that the Government issued G.O.Ms.No.1196, Health, dated 24.7.1985 prescribing certain conditions for starting private medical colleges, that an amendment was brought to the Tamil Nadu Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Act 1987 (Tamil Nadu Act 37 of 1987) by Act 32 of 1990 that the above Act was given retrospective effect with effect from 24.9.1987, that in view of the amendment as mentioned hereinabove, obtaining prior permission from the Government has been made a condition precedent for affiliation, that inasmuch as the petitioner has not obtained prior permission from the Government, the University cannot grant affiliation and that therefore the present writ petition seeking a writ of certiorari and mandamus is not maintainable in law. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that no mandamus can be issued against the provision of the Statute and as such this Court should not accede to the request of the petitioner. It is pointed out in the counter affidavit that this Court has upheld that validity of the amended Act made to Act 37 of 1987 in W.P.Nos.10952 and 17075 of 1990. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that when the petitioner challenged the order of the first respondent University insisting upon the prior approval of the University, by way of a writ petition. In W.P.No.2776 of 1989 an order has been made by Venkataswami, J. on 13.4.1989, and that the earlier order passed in the above writ petition was based on the statement made by the counsel for the University who was also the then Government Pleader and the order was not made following any earlier decision of the Government. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that originally there was no provision in the Tamil Nadu Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Madras Act, 1987 (Tamil Nadu Act 37 of 1987) requiring prior approval of Government and as such the petitioner cannot rely upon the judgment of Venkataswami, J. mentioned hereinabove. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that by the Tamil Nadu Act 32 of 1990 an amendment has here introduced with retrospective effect, that as per the amended provisions of the Act for obtaining affiliation, prior permission from the Government is, mandatory and therefore while disposing of the petition, the statutory authorities are bound in law to take into account the change of position in law. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that the application of the petitioner seeking for affiliation is still pending and that the petitioner cannot contend that in view of the earlier orders of this Court in W.P.No.2776 of 1989, no prior permission is necessary. It is further claimed in the counter affidavit that the order of Somasundaram, J. in W.P.No.10453 of 1990 dated 1.12.1991 will not bind the State since the State was not a party in that writ petition. It is further claimed in the writ petition that the petitioner Trust applied for prior permission on 29.10.1986, 19.1.1987 and 13.2.1987, that the Government after considering the matter on 3.8.1988 rejected the application of the petitioner, that the petitioner Trust made an application on 6.2.1989 and that even after the disposal of Writ Petition No.2776 of 1989 on 13.4.1989, a letter was addressed to the then Chief Minister by Mr.Kripananda Variyar on 23.7.1990 and that a reply has been given to the petitioner. 8. A reply affidavit has been filed by the petitioner. It is stated that the Tamil Nadu Act 32 of 1990 cannot be made applicable to the petitioner's case in view of the orders passed by Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2276 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 in which the University as well as the Government are parties. It is further stated in the reply affidavit that in view of the orders of Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 a right has been crystallised in favour of the petitioner, that both the University and the Government were parties and that once the right is crystallised in favour of the petitioner, it is not necessary for the petitioner to have made the Government as a party in the subsequent W.P.No.10453 of 1990. It is further stated in the reply affidavit that the facts of the writ petition where the validity of the Act 32 of 1990 has been upheld, are different from the facts of this case, that if the amended Act is applicable then the statutes subsequently framed by the University would also be applicable and that would lead to an anomalous position wherein the very application originally submitted by the petitioner would be defective by subsequent enactment and that the application of the petitioner should be disposed of only in accordance with the provisions of the law which was prevailing as on the date of the application and in view of the orders passed by Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989. It is further stated in the reply affidavit that in the abovementioned case, the learned Government Pleader represented not only the first respondent University, but also the Government, that the orders of Venkataswami, J. became final and that it is not correct to state that the petitioner is estopped since it had already made application because they were all made without prejudice to the rights of the petitioner and that cannot be a ground which would attract the principles of estoppel.

9. Mr.Mohan Parasaran, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner contends that when Venkataswami, J. has passed an order in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989, both the University and the Government were parties, that order had become final and that it is not open to the State or the University to insist upon the prior permission of the Government for affiliation, taking shelter under the amended Act 32 of 1990. Learned counsel refers to the decision in Madan Mohan Pathack v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 803; 1978 Lab.I.C. 612; (1978)2 S.C.C. 56; (1978)1 Lab.L.J. 496; (1978)3 S.C.R. 334, for the proposition regarding the issue of a writ of mandamus and submits that the petitioner has got consent letters from other hospitals for tie up facilities and that the construction of the petitioner's own hospital building is being completed. He further contends that the application of the petitioner should be considered as if the amending Act has not come into force, that the date of submission of the application is the criteria, and that the procedure as on the date of application has to be adopted and not on the date of the consideration of the application. For this purpose, the learned counsel relies upon the decision in State of Kerala v. K.G.Madhavan Pillai, A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 49. The learned counsel also raised contention based on the principle of estoppel relying upon the decision in M/s.VIJ Resins (P) Ltd. v. State of J.& K., A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1629. He further states that the petitioner Trust has invested huge amounts. He further contends that hostel facilities are provided for, that tie-up arrangements are made with other hospitals, that with regard to title deeds, legal opinions have been obtained and that with regard to clearance under Sec.37-B of the Tamil Nadu Land Reforms (Fixation of Ceiling on Land) Act, the matter is pending before the Government. According to the learned counsel, the first respondent University has not considered these matters in the proper perspective.

10. Mr.Sukuntharaj, the learned counsel appearing for the first respondent University refers to statute 4 of the Tamil Nadu Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Act which has been published on 20.3.1991. According to the learned counsel the affiliation to the petitioner College was rejected on the basis of the Inspection Commission report made on 13.7.1991. The application for affiliation was made on 13.10.1989. The application for affiliation was made on 13.10.1989. The learned counsel fairly states that nothing is said in the impugned order about the prior permission of the Government.

11. Learned Advocate General, who appears for the second respondent State, contends that the representations made by the then Government Pleader before Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 will not bind the Government since it was not made on instructions from the Government. It is further stated by the learned Advocate General that representations were made by the then Government Pleader in the above mentioned writ petition only on behalf of the University since same counsel appeared for both the Government and the University. According to the learned Advocate General, how far the representations of the then Government Pleader will bind the Government is a question to be considered by this Court. Learned Advocate General has pointed out that Venkataswami, J. In W.P.No.2776 of 1989 by order dated 13.4.1989 directed the respondent University to pass orders on the application of the petitioner for affiliation "in accordance with law" and as such the petitioner has to obtain prior permission from the Government as per law stands to-day. Learned Advocate General further argues that assuming any concession has been made by the then Government Pleader, it will not bind the Government and refers to the decision in Periyar and Pareekanni Rubbers Ltd. v. State of Kerala, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 2192, for this proposition. He further points out that the prayer in the writ petition W.P.No.2776 of 1989 has been asked only against the University and not against the State. He further points out that the amending Act came into force on 6.7.1990, that the W.P.No.10453 of 1990 has been filed by the petitioner on 9.7.1990, i.e., only after the amending Act came into force and that since the Government was not a party to the said writ petition the attention of the learned Judge was not drawn to the Amending Act. It is further contended by the learned Advocate General that the prayer in the writ petition is for permanent affiliation for the year 1991-92 and that the writ petitioner has been filed on 23.9.1991. With regard to the decision relied on by the petitioner in Madan Mohan Pathak v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 803; 1978 Lab.I.C. 612; (1978)2 S.C.C. 56; (1978)1 Lab.L.J. 496; (1978)3 S.C.R. 334, the learned Advocate General pointed out that Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 did not issue any rule nisi; that no relief was given and that the principles applied in the abovementioned cases will not apply to the facts of the case. According to the learned Advocate General, the principles laid down in A.V.Nachane v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1126; 1982 Lab.I.C. 181; (1982)1 S.C.C. 705; (1982)1 Lab.L.J. 110, also will not apply to the facts of the case since no relief was asked for in the earlier writ petition. It is also pointed out by the learned Advocate General that no mandamus can issue against the first respondent University not to perform statutory obligations in view of the amending Act. He further points out that this Court has upheld the validity of the Amending Act 32 of 1990 in W.P.No.10952 of 1990 and as such prior permission is necessary for seeking affiliation. The learned Advocate General also relies upon the decision in K.P.Doctor v. State of Bombay, A.I.R. 1955 Bom. 220, for hardships.

12. Replying to those contentions Mr.Mohan Parasaran, the learned counsel for the petitioner

Trust, contends that the relief asked for in the earlier writ petition was in the negative fashion against the Government, that the judgment relied on by the Advocate General in Periyar and Pareekanni Rubbers Ltd. v. State of Kerala, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 2192, is only 'obiter', that the Supreme Court did not narrated. Principle any in the above-mentioned decision. The learned counsel further submits that the Government Pleader in the High Court is a responsible officer than a law officer in the mofussil Courts, that no counter affidavit has been filed even now by the State to the effect that it had not given any instructions to the then Government Pleader, that by order of Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 issuing a writ of mandamus, a right has accrued and crystallised in favour of the petitioner and that it cannot be taken away when the said order has become final inter parties. The learned counsel further submits that the first respondent University should be asked to consider the application of the petitioner on the basis of law prevailed in the month of October, 1989 and he relies upon an unreported decision of a Division Bench of this Court in The Tamil Nadu Christian Revival Mission Organisation Rep. By Its Secretary and others v. The State of Tamil Nadu represented by Secretary, Education Department, Madras and others, W.A.No.543 of 1991, dated 16.4.1991, wherein the Division Bench has held that old Rules are applicable with regard to minority institutions. Learned counsel also relies upon the decision in Rajah Muthiah Medical College Students Council v. State of Tamil Nadu, 1991 W.L.R. 959, for the proposition that an application has to be considered as per the law prevailed on the dated of application and that the subsequent change in law could not be considered.

13. I have given my careful consideration to the arguments of Mr.Mohan Parasaran, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner Trust, Mr.Sukuntha Raj, the learned counsel the learned counsel appearing for the first respondent University and of the learned Advocate, General appearing for the State of Tamil Nadu, the second respondent herein. I have also perused the files produced before me.

14. On the facts and circumstances of the case, the first point to be considered is what is the effect of the order of Venkataswami, J. Passed in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989. In the abovementioned case, the writ petition was filed by the petitioner Trust praying for the issue of a writ of certiorarified mandamus calling for the records comprised in the proceedings of the respondent University dated 8.12.1987 and 28.11.1988 and quash the said proceedings as invalid and 'also to direct the respondent University to discharge its statutory obligations by considering the applications of the petitioner dated 2.12.1987 and 23.10.1988 for starting the Medical College and granting affiliation to it without insisting on any approval of the State Government or the prior approval of the Medical Council of India. In the abovementioned writ petition, Venkataswami, J. on 13.4.1989 passed an order which is to the following effect:

"By consent, main writ petition has been taken up for final disposal.

After hearing Mr.Mohan Parasaran learned counsel for the petitioner and the learned Government Pleader following order is passed in view of the fact that the learned Government Pleader now states that the University will not insist upon prior permission of the Government.

The petitioner will apply for affiliation in the prescribed form, for which purpose, on requisition the second respondent University will supply the same on payment of required fee. As and when the petitioner files the application in the prescribed forms, second respondent University will consider the same on merits, without insisting upon prior permission of the Government and pass orders in accordance with law. The University will dispose of the application as mentioned above within 8 weeks from the date of receipt of the application as mentioned above. The writ petition is ordered accordingly....."

Subsequently, the petitioner came before this Court by way of filing a writ petition in W.P.No.10453 of 1990 and Somasundaram, J. by order dated 1.2.1991 allowed the said writ petition and the operative portion of the order reads as follows:

"The impugned order is set aside and the first respondent is directed to re-consider the application of the petitioner dated 30.10.1989 on merits in terms of the orders of this Court dated 13.4.1989 in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 and pass orders on or before 1.7.1991."

The abovementioned writ petition was filed for the issuance of a writ of certiorari and mandamus to call for the records of the respondent University dated 15.12.1989 and to quash the same and to direct the respondent University to reconsider the application of the petitioner dated 30.10.1989 on merits in terms of the orders of this Court made in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989, cited supra. So, both the abovementioned writ petitions were filed by the petitioner seeking for affiliation. In both the writ petitions mentioned hereinabove, the relief sought for by the petitioner was one and the same though in the later writ petition, the Government of Tamil Nadu was not a party. Though no relief was sought for by the petitioner against the Government in the earlier W.P.No.2776 of 1989, as pointed out by the learned Advocate General, yet the Government was made a party therein and the then Government Pleader represented the Government in that case before Venkataswami, J. When a responsible law officer of the High Court, who represents the Government, makes a statement before the Court, I do not think that the same cannot be brushed aside so lightly by the Court. It is true that the same counsel represented both the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University and the Government in the abovementioned case. If the Government had really felt that at that point of time the law officer of the court had accepted an order without getting the instructions of the Government, it should have preferred an appeal against the said order of Venkataswami, J. made in W.P.No.2776 of 1989, dated 13.4.1989. It is not as if institutions are started without obtaining permission from the Government at that point of time. As seen from the counter affidavit, self-financing private medical colleges were started only after obtaining prior permission from the Government. The only difference is now the Legislature has enacted a proviso as an Amendment to the section of the Act requiring prior permission as mandatory for getting affiliation which was given earlier by way of an executive order. When the order of Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 had become final and no appeal has been preferred against the said order, I do not think the State can rely upon the amendment made in the year 1990 and use, it against the petitioner and contend that the prior permission has to be obtained in view of the amended Act which came into force in the year 1990 with retrospective effect. A similar question was considered by the Supreme Court in Madan Mohan Pathak v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 803: 1978 Lab.I.C. 612: (1978)2 S.C.C. 56: (1978)1 Lab.L.J. 496: (1978)3 S.C.R. 334. In that case a writ or mandamus was issued by the Calcutta High Court directing the Life Insurance Corporation of India to pay annual cash bonus to Class III and Class IV employees in terms of a settlement and that order has become final. Immediately after the said decision, the Parliament passed an enactment. Even after passing the enactment of Legislature whether the issue of the writ of mandamus by the Calcutta High Court is effective was the question. The Supreme Court in that case has held that the issue of writ of mandamus issued by the Calcutta High Court remain untouched and that the same was not taken away by the enactment passed by the Parliament subsequently. The Supreme Court has further held in that case that the issue of a writ of mandamus passed in favour of the employees of L.I.C. had become crystallised in the said judgment and therefore they become entitled to enforce the writ of mandamus grants by the Calcutta High Court. It is further held in the said judgment that as the judgment of the Calcutta High Court was allowed to become final and the appeal against it was not pressed, the judgment could not be disregarded or ignored and in any event irrespective of whether the Act was constitutionally valid or not, the Life Insurance Corporation of India was bound to obey the writ of mandamus issued by the Calcutta High Court. Speaking for the Bench, Beg, C.J. has observed as follows: (at p.804)

".....The rights of the citizen against the State which had passed in those embodied in a judgment and become the basis of a mandamus from the High Court could not be taken away in indirect fashion, by enacting such an ordinary Act of Parliament..."

In Life Insurance Corporation of India v. D.J.Bahadur, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 2181, a writ was issued by the Supreme Court directing the Life Insurance Corporation of India to give effect to the terms of 1974 settlements relating to bonus until superseded by a fresh settlement. The effect of that order came for consideration in A.V.Nachane v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1126: 1982 Lab.I.C. 181: (1982)1 S.C.C. 705: (1982)1 Lab.L.J. 110, and the question arose in that case was whether Rule 3 of the Life Insurance Corporation of India Class III and Class IV Employees (Bonus and Dearnness) Allowances can nullify the effect of a writ issued by the High Court in the case of Life Insurance Corporation of India v. D.J.Bahadur, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 2181. In that case it has been held that Rule 3 cannot make the writ issued by the Court nugatory in view of the decision of the majority in Madan Mohan Pathack v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 803: 1978 Lab.I.C. 612: (1978)2 S.C.C. 56: (1978)1 Lab.L.J. 496: (1978)3 S.C.R. 334. In the abovementioned case, Chinappa Reddy, J. has observed as follows: (at p.1137)

“.....The attempt made to supersede the settlements, in so far as they related to the payment of bonus, by enacting the Life Insurance Corporation (Modification of Settlement) Act, 1976 failed, firstly because the Act was held to violate the provisions of Art.31(2) of the Constitution and secondly because the Act could not have retrospective effect so as to absolve the Life Insurance Corporation from obeying the writ of mandamus issued by the Calcutta High Court, which had become final and binding on the parties. This was the decision of this Court in Madan Mohan Pathack v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 803: 1978 Lab.I.C. 612: (1978)2 S.C.C. 56: (1978)1 Lab.L.J. 496: (1978)3 S.C.R. 334, all the seven Judges who constituted the Bench agreeing that the Act violated the provisions of Art.31(2) and four out of the seven Judges, namely, Beg, C.J., Bhagawati, Krishna Iyer and Desai, JJ., taking the view that the Act did not have the effect of nullifying the writ of mandamus issued by the Calcutta High Court and the other three Judges, Chandrachud, Fazal Ali and Shinghal, JJ., preferring not to express any view on that question....”

In view of the categorical decisions rendered by the Supreme Court which are heavily relied on by Mr.Mohan Parasaran, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner, I am of the view that in so far as the order of Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 has not been touched upon or set aside, I do not think the learned Advocate General can rely upon the amending Act to set at naught the right which has crystallised in favour of the petitioner. In the order of Somasundaram, J. in W.P.No.10453 of 1990 dated 1.2.1991, it is seen that though the State is not made a party therein, yet the prayer in the said writ petition is to follow the directions given by Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989. So, it is clear that the first respondent University is bound by the abovementioned orders of this Court and that is why the first respondent University has conveniently omitted to mention the amending Act in the impugned order. There is no whisper about the amending Act in the impugned order and that the University has not stated therein that prior permission is necessary for getting affiliation. It is only the State Government, which has been impleaded itself in the writ petition subsequently, has taken the stand based upon the amending Act. So I am of the view, that for all practical purposes, the first respondent University has not relied upon the amending act in the impugned order. It is clear that the first respondent University has not applied its mind before passing the impugned order and it has left out purposely the amending Act in the impugned order.

15. I have gone through the files produced by the State. As soon as Venkataswami, J. has passed an order in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 on 13.4.1989, the Registrar of the first respondent University was required to furnish some particulars with regard to the disposal of the said writ petition. For this, the Registrar of the University on 6.12.1989 has written a letter to the then Joint Secretary to Government, Madras, stating regarding the statement of the Government Pleader before the Court with regard to Government Permission the Government Pleader was of the view that permission of the State Government for granting affiliation to Professional Colleges cannot be insisted upon in view of the decisions of the orders of this Court. He mentioned in his letter the orders of a Division Bench of this Court in W.P.No.6930 of 1988, dated 23.2.1989 and also the judgment of another Division Bench of this Court which is reported in P.Kasilingam v. P.S.G. College of Technology, 1984 Lab.I.C. 1134. It is also seen from the file that since the Tamil Nadu Amending Act is still awaiting the assent of the President of India all those factors would have prompted the then Government Pleader to make the statement in question. The abovementioned letter has been written by the Registrar of the respondent University to the State as early as 6.10.1989 and the State has kept quiet and allowed the order of Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 to become final. So it is not as if the State was not aware of the fact of what has been happened before Venkataswami, J. and nothing prevented the State from taking the matter on appeal. Having failed to do so in view, the learned Advocate General cannot be allowed to contend that the order of Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 has become ineffective in view of the amending Act 32 of 1990. Therefore, I am of the view that the contention of Mr.Mohan Parasaran, the learned counsel for the petitioner based on the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in Madan Mohan Pathak v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 803: 1978 Lab.I.C. 612: (1978)2 S.C.C. 56: (1978)1 Lab.L.J. 496: (1978)3 S.C.R. 334, and A.V.Nachane v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1126: 1982 Lab.I.C. 181: (1982)1 S.C.C. 705: (1982)1 Lab.L.J. 110, has got to be upheld.

16. I do not think the reliance made by the learned Advocate General in Periyar and Pareekanni Rubbers Ltd. v. State of Kerala, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 2192, will apply to the facts of this case. The above mentioned case arose under the Land Acquisition Act. A concession was made by the local Government Pleader in the trial Court with regard to a document which will form the basis for determination of the market value and in such circumstances, the Supreme Court has observed as follows:

".....Any concession made by the Government Pleader in the trial Court cannot bind the Government as it is obviously always unsafe to rely on the wrong or erroneous or wanton concession made by the counsel appearing for the State unless it is in writing on instructions from the responsible officer. Otherwise it would place undue and needless heavy burden on the public exchequer. But the same yardstick cannot be applied when the Advocate General has made a statement across the bar since the Advocate General makes the statement will all responsibility....."

I am of the view that the judgment of the Supreme Court mentioned hereinabove has to be confined to the facts of that case alone. I do not think that any principle is decided in that case. Even otherwise, as I have already said the State Government was aware of the order of Venkataswami, J. passed in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 dated 13.4.1989 and asked the University about it and the University has also replied as to how the learned Government Pleader has made a statement before Venkataswami, J. That apart, as I have already stated the Government Pleader in the High Court cannot be equated to a Government Pleader of a mofussil Court. The Government Pleader in the High Court has certainly got more responsibility than a Government Pleader in a mofussil Court. In Periyar and Pareekanni Rubbers Ltd. v. State of Kerala, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 2192, the Supreme Court was concerned about a Government Pleader in a mofussil Court. In my view, the Government Pleader in the High Court has to be held as a responsible officer and his statement cannot be equated with a statement made by a Government Pleader in the trial Court. I am equally of the view that the Government Pleader in the High Court is responsible for the Government and he is equally a responsible officer of the Court also. It would even go to the extent of saying that all law officers of the High Court are responsible for the statements so made to the High Court. Moreover, the statement made by the then Government Pleader before Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 is on a point of law and not on facts. I think the law officer is a person who can decide about the question of law and argues when considering the facts and circumstances of a particular case in which he appears before the court. I am also cannot satisfied with the contention of the learned Advocate General in Madan Mohan Pathak v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 803: 1978 Lab.I.C. 612: (1978)2 S.C.C. 56: (1978)1 Lab.L.J. 496: (1978)3 S.C.R. 334, the Supreme Court was considering a case about wages, the principle will be different on the facts of this case. Whether the relief sought for is for wages or for any other reliefs, the principle will be one and the same. The statement made by the then Government Pleader before Venkataswami, J. in W.P.No.2776 of 1989 is that the respondent University will not insist upon prior permission of the Government. As such I do not think the University or the State can now build up an argument supported by the amending Act 32 of 1990 which came into force in the year 1990. But the writ sought for here is to quash the order of the first respondent University refusing the grant of affiliation. Obtaining prior permission of the Government as a mandatory provision, come only at the later stage. As I have already stated, in the impugned order, there is no mention about the amending Act 32 of 1990.

17. As I am concerned only with order of the University, which is impugned before me, I am of the view that the reasons stated in the impugned order are wholly extraneous. All the reasons which have been stated in the impugned order could have been verified with the petitioner before passing such an order. On a scanning of the affidavit and after having given due consideration to the arguments of Mr.Mohan Parasaran, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner, I am of the view that all the reasons stated in the impugned order for refusing grant of affiliation are not correct. The buildings are ready and tie up arrangements were made with other hospitals and with regard to encumbrance certificate and clearance certificate under Sec.37-B of the Tamil Nadu Land Reforms (Fixation of Ceiling on Land) Act, the respondent University could have easily obtained a reply from the petitioner Trust by asking it to explain. So I am fully satisfied that the reasons stated in the impugned order are not convincing to reject the application of the petitioner dated 30.10.1989 praying for affiliation to start a Medical College for the academic year 1990-91. In the reply affidavit filed by the petitioner, it has been clearly explained as to how the rejection of the application of the petitioner shows that non-application of the mind of the respondent University. In my view, the respondent University has not considered the aspect of granting of affiliation in the correct perspective. So I am of the view that the respondent University has taken irrelevant and extraneous considerations while rejecting the application of the petitioner for affiliation. I am of the view that on this ground alone the impugned order has to go.

18. The contention raised by Mr.Mohan Parasaran, the learned counsel for the petitioner on the basis of an unreported decision of a Division Bench of this Court in The Tamil Nadu Christian Revival Mission Organisation rep. by its Secretary and others v. The State of Tamil Nadu represented by Secretary, Education Department, Madras and others, W.A.No.543 of 1991 dated 16.4.1991, has no substance. A reading of the above mentioned Judgment will show that no principle has been decided in that case.

19. With regard to the contention raised by Mr.Mohan Parasaran regarding the principle of estoppel, I do not think that it will apply to the facts of the case on hand, as no promise was given either by the respondent University or by the state that affiliation will be granted. As rightly stated by the learned Advocate General, the application of the petitioner for affiliation is still pending.

20. Coming to the question regarding statute framed it is necessary to go through some of the provisions of the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Statutes. Sub-sec.(3) of Sec.67 of the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Tamil Nadu Act, 1987, reads as follows:

“Notwithstanding anything contained in Sub-sec.(1), all statutes, ordinances and regulations made under the said Acts, and in force on the notified date shall in so far as they are not inconsistent with this act, continue to be in force in respect of the Colleges and institutions referred to in the said Sub-sec.(1) until they are replaced by the statutes ordinances and regulations to be made under this Act.....”

In view of the above said provision, the Statutes framed under the Madras University Act, 1923 will be applicable till now statutes are made. Under Sec.42 of the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Act, statutes are framed and published in the Gazette dated 20.3.1991 and the University has framed statutes elaborately for affiliation of Medical Colleges. The statutes received the assent of the Chancellor on 19.9.1990 and 14.12.1990. Under statute 1, the statute shall come into force from the date of assent of the Chancellor. As such, factually the statutes are framed now by the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University and the statutes made under the Madras University Act will no longer apply for the purpose of affiliation. It is seen that Sec.42(2)(n) of the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University Tamil Nadu Act, 1987 provides for conditions of affiliation of colleges to the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University. As such, as on date, the statutes framed by the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University have come into force and they have to be followed. Statute 4 is in the following terms:

“.....4(1)(i) Only Educational Trusts/Societies with sufficient financial soundness and which satisfy the conditions stipulated hereunder shall be eligible to apply for certificate of Registration for starting a private medical college.

(ii) Conditions to be satisfied by the Trust/Society applying for Certificate of Registration - (a) The Trust/Society shall be in possession of a hospital being run by it with not less than 300 beds with an administrative block.

(b) The hospital and the administrative block are to have been located in an area of 50 acres in urban agglomeration or 100 acres in other area.

(2) Application from individuals for Certificate of Registration will not be entertained....”

Statute 44 of the Dr.M.G.R. Medical University in the following terms:

“.....It shall be competent for the University to send an Inspector at any time to inspect the Medical College after two weeks notice to the management of the college and on receipt of report from the Inspector, the University may take any decision which in its opinion deems fit and necessary....”

So I am not convinced with the arguments of Mr.Mohan Parasaran that the law as it stood in the year 1990 has to be followed in granting the affiliation. It is well settled that no mandamus can issue against a statute. I do not think any authority is needed to be cited for this proposition. So when the Tamil Nadu Dr.M.G.R. Medical University to ignore the statutes and grant affiliation. A Division of this Court in Adhiyaman Educational and Research Institutions v. State, A.I.R. 1991 Mad. 246, has come down heavily on the Madras University in granting provisional affiliation under Statute 44(a) of the Madras University. In that case, the Division Bench of this Court has observed as follows: (at p.226)

“.....But, admittedly the University of Madras had been following an unhealthy and unwarranted practice of granting affiliation or approval even without satisfying itself that at least the essential conditions prescribed are satisfied or fulfilled by the concerned college. Admittedly, in the recent years, the Syndicate of the University of Madras has been granting provisional affiliation to all the applicants, whether they satisfied the requirements or not, but the grant is made with the direction that the conditions should be complied with by the applicants. By adopting the said practice, the University of Madras has been doing a great disservice to the cause of education as well as the society. The members of the public comprising parents and students are being misled by the grant of provisional affiliation by the University. It is also a matter for regret that the University has been simply winking at the commencement of colleges and courses by the aspirants for affiliation even before the actual provisional affiliation. Invariably, the applicants for affiliation commence the colleges immediately after sending the applicants for affiliation. Even though the University is fully aware of this illegal practice of commencement of colleges and admitting students therein, it has not taken any steps to prevent the same. If the University has been strictly adhering to the procedure prescribed in Statutes 37 to 41, cases of this type would not have arisen. The University could also have prevented thereby the mushroom growth of private educational institutions by persons who commence such institutions purely as business and now as service to the society....”

The Decision in the abovementioned case, has further observed as follows: (at p.267)

“.....Yet another aspect of the matter has to be referred to in this connection. The University of Madras grants provisional affiliation as a rule for a period of one year only in the first instance and thereafter, extends the same on application by the colleges for such extension. This practice is adopted irrespective of the number of years for which the concerned course is to be conducted. For example, if a course of study, say Bachelor of Arts, is for three years, the University grants affiliation provisionally for one year leaving the matter of extension of affiliation for the second and third years in doubt, or rather reserving its right to exercise the power of refusal to extend the provisional affiliation for the second and third years. What is the fate of the students who get admitted into such colleges and commence their studies, if after their completing the first year are to be told that the college will not have affiliation for the second and third years? Similarly, for Engineering courses which are known to be for four or five years, provisional affiliation is being granted for one year initially with the uncertainty of its extension for the subsequent years. Here again, there will be a hanging sword over the heads of the students who join the colleges which have obtained provisional affiliation for the first year and which may not get extension for the subsequent years. The Madras University does not seem to have given any thought whatever to this aspect of the matter. It is a mystery as to what prevents the University from satisfying itself that all the conditions prescribed for grant of affiliation or approval are fulfilled and then grant affiliation provisionally or permanently for the entire course of three years, four years or five years as the case may be. That will assure at least one set of students that they can have their education completed in one course in one college without being driven from pillar to post during the course of study. It is very unfortunate that the University of Madras, which is the custodian of education in this State should forego the interests of the students in this manner. It is high time that the University puts an end to this illegal practice of granting provisional affiliation to educational institution even without substantial compliance with the conditions prescribed therefor....."

In view of what the Division Bench of this Court has said in the abovementioned case, I do not think the petitioner can even ask for provisional affiliation, if not a permanent affiliation, as per the statutes. So, I agree with the argument of Mr. Sukuntharaj, the learned counsel appearing for the first respondent University that there are no provisions under the old statutes for giving affiliation without prior permission and only recently Statute 4 has been framed by the University which has been extracted above which will apply to the petitioner's case. The learned counsel for the petitioner relies up the decision in State of Kerala v. K.G. Madhavan Pillai, A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 49, where permission was granted for opening of new schools and unilateral action was taken by the Government later. I do not think that this will apply to the facts of the case on hand. In my view, the statutes framed with regard to infrastructural facilities will apply to the case of the petitioner though prior permission of the Government is not necessary.

21. In view of the abovementioned discussion, though prior permission is not necessary on the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, I am satisfied that the reasons given by the first respondent University in the impugned order rejecting the application of the petitioner for affiliation are extraneous. In my view, had the respondent University verified the factual position with the petitioner Trust, they could have been satisfied with the reply of the petitioner Trust in granting affiliation. On the face of it, the impugned order is not correct and in my view, it has got to be set aside. It is open to the respondent University to consider the matter afresh after giving an opportunity to the petitioner Trust. Since the petitioner is driven from pillar to post from the year 1987, I do hope that the respondent University will pass orders on merits on or before 1.4.1992. As such, the impugned order of the first respondent University is set aside and the writ petition is allowed and the matter is remitted back to the respondent University with a direction to consider the matter as stated above and pass orders afresh on or before 1.4.1992 after giving notice to the petitioner Trust. However, there will be no order as to costs.

...Respondent.

Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960), Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) - Landlady requiring premises for running a mess to feed about 10 persons - Possession of necessary funds to run the mess, held sufficient to show that she has taken steps in furtherance of starting business.

The petitioner/landlady filed a petition for eviction of the respondent-tenant on the ground that she required the premises for starting a mess to feed about ten persons and that she had the necessary funds to start the mess. The petition was allowed by the Rent Controller, but the Appellate Authority set aside the order holding that the landlady had not taken any steps to buy vessels and other materials to start the mess. In revision, Held:- According to the facts arising in the present case, the landlady is not having any other premises for her own in the same town and her husband is also an unemployed person. Even according to the tenant, a major portion of the petition premises is uninhabitable. According to the landlady, she wanted to start a small mess to feed about 10 people so that she can earn some income out of that and in order to start a petty mess like this, utensils for cooking, tumblers for providing water, mats for providing sitting arrangements to the customers and leaves for serving the food alone are essential. In order to obtain all these materials the cost cannot go beyond Rs.2,000. According to the landlady, she is possessed of sufficient means to start this petty mess. Since the mess which the landlady is going to start is petty in nature, possession of enough funds is itself sufficient to show that the landlady has taken one step in furtherance of starting the mess. The Court made the following ORDER:- The landlord is the petitioner herein. The landlady filed a petition for eviction against the tenant under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act. The case of the landlady is as under:

She purchased the petition premises from one Krishnamurthy under a registered sale deed dated 25.6.1986. The petition premises is having three Door numbers namely 7, 8 and 9. For Door No.7 the monthly rent is Rs.100 and for Door Nos.8 and 9 the monthly rent is Rs.100. The tenant is using the entire premises as a godown. The husband of the landlady is an unemployed person. The landlady is looking after her household work. Both the husband and wife now desire to start a mess in the petition premises. They are having sufficient means to start the mess. The landlady is not having any other premises of her own in the same town. Hence the landlady required the petition premises for conducting a mess under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. The landlady sent a notice to the tenant on 10.11.1986, calling upon the tenant to quit and deliver vacant possession. The tenant sent a reply dated 18.11.1986 refusing to vacate the premises.

2. The case of the tenant is as under:

The respondent herein alone is not a tenant in respect of the petition premises. According to the tenant he is a partner in the partnership concern with the other partner and the firm is the tenant in the petition premises. Therefore without impleading the other partners, the petition is not maintainable. The husband of the landlady is doing pawnbroker business. The landlady is having several premises of her own in the same town and it is not correct to state that the husband of the landlady is an unemployed person. Since the tenant refused to pay higher rent as demanded by the landlady she came forward with the present revision petition. The landlady and her husband are not having any previous experience in conducting the mess. Therefore the requirement of the petition premises by the landlady is not bona fide. Hence the petition is liable to be dismissed.

3. The husband of the landlady was examined as P.W.1. The tenant was examined as R.W.1. The landlady filed 3 documents. The tenant filed 9 documents. Considering the above facts the rent controller came to conclusion that the requirement of the landlady under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act is bona fide. Accordingly the Rent Controller ordered eviction. On appeal the Rent Control Appellate Authority set aside the order passed by the Rent Controller, allowed the appeal and dismissed the petition for eviction. It is against this order the landlady has filed this revision before this Court.

4. The learned counsel appearing for the landlady/petitioner herein submitted as under:

The rent control appellate authority was not correct in reversing the well considered order of the rent controller. For starting a mess to feed about 10 people no prior experience is necessary. So also for starting a mess of this nature permission also need not be obtained from the Municipality. To start mess of this nature a capital of Rs.1,000 to Rs.2,000 would be sufficient. The landlady is having sufficient funds to start the mess. In conducting the mess no employees are necessary. Both the petitioner and her husband can conduct the mess by themselves. The Rent Control Appellate Authority pointed out that in order to start the mess the landlady has not taken any steps to buy vessels and other materials. But the fact remains that these small articles can be purchased at any time after possession is obtained from the tenant. Therefore on this score it cannot be said that no step was taken in furtherance of starting of the mess. The husband of the landlady is an unemployed person and in order to provide employment to her husband the landlady is desirous of starting the mess. The landlady is not having any other premises of her own in the same town. It was therefore pleaded that the order passed by the Rent Control Appellate Authority may be set aside and the order of rent controller be restored.

5. On the other hand the learned counsel appearing for the respondent/tenant submitted as under:- The landlady has not taken any steps to start the mess as desired by her. The tenant is now using the petition premises as a godown. So much of place is not necessary for running a mess as contemplated by the landlady. The landlady has come forward with this petition since the tenant refused to pay the higher rent as demanded by her. The landlady's husband is doing pawn broker business. Therefore it is not correct to state that her husband is an unemployed person. The landlady is having other premises of her own in the same town. No licence was obtained by the landlady for starting the mess. It was therefore pleaded that the rent control appellate authority was correct in dismissing the petition for eviction.

6. I have heard the rival submission.

7. The tenant contended that he is a partner in the partnership firm and the partnership firm is the tenant in respect of the petition premises. In as much as all the partners were not impleaded the petition is liable to be dismissed. But the fact remains that both the authorities below have concurrently come to the conclusion that the partnership firm is not a tenant, but only the individual is the tenant. No fresh material was placed before this Court to dislodge this finding.

8. The petition premises consisting of three portions. The landlady purchased the petition premises on 28.7.1986. Even prior to her purchase the tenant was in the occupation of the petition premises. The tenant is using the petition premises as a godown. The landlady required the same for the purpose of starting a mess. According to the landlady she is desirous of starting a mess to feed about 10 people so that she can provide employment to her unemployed husband. The landlady submitted that she is not having any premises of her own in the same town. But the tenant submitted that the landlady is having several premises in the same town. But there was no evidence on record on the side of the tenant to prove his version. Further according to the tenant the petition premises is an old one and the portions under Door Nos. 7 and 9 are not fit for human habitation. Even though three door numbers are given, the petition premises is a single unit. The tenant submitted that the landlady has not taken any steps towards starting the mess and according to the tenant a mere desire to start a mess would not be sufficient to show that the landlady required the petition premises bona fide for starting a mess. The tenant further pointed out that the landlady has not obtained any licence from the Municipality for running the mess. Again it was pointed out that the landlady has not purchased any vessels or other equipments for running the mess. On the other hand, the land lady pointed out that she is planning to start a mess in a limited scale to provide food for about 10 people for which no licence is required from the Municipality. She further stated that in order to start a mess of this nature a capital of Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000 is sufficient and the landlady is possessed of sufficient means to start the mess.

9. In order to obtain eviction under Sec. 10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act for the purpose of running a business the landlady must prove that either she is already running a business or she has taken one step in furtherance of the starting of that business. The landlady pointed out that for the purpose of starting a mess of this nature possession of enough funds is sufficient, because the articles to be purchased are not of great value. She can purchase the vessels and other equipments like mat, etc., at any time before obtaining possession since she is having sufficient funds for the said purpose. The tenant submitted that the landlady demanded higher rent from the tenant and when he refused to pay the same, the landlady came forward this petition. In order to support this version the tenant pointed out that periodically the rent was increased by the landlady. But the fact remains that there is no evidence on the side of the tenant to show that before filing the petition the landlady demanded higher rent from the tenant. Another submission made by the tenant was that the place in which the petition premises is situated was not conducive to start a mess as desired by the landlady. But the landlady pointed out that the petition premises is situated in Tirunelveli Town in an important business centre and therefore the present place will be advantageous for starting the mess. It also remains that it is not for the tenant to suggest that the petition premises is either insufficient or unfit for the business which the landlady is going to conduct.

10. The Rent Control Appellate Authority relied upon a decision in the case of Kanakavel Pillai v. Drugs and Chemicals, (1980)2 M.L.J. 392, in order to support his conclusion that the landlady has not taken any steps towards starting of the mess and therefore she is not entitled to an order of eviction. But according to the fact arising in this case the landlady wanted to commence plastic business. Therefore this Court pointed out that one step in furtherance of starting the plastic industry was not taken by the landlady. But in the same decision this Court pointed out that in a case where the landlady wanted to start a petty shop, the above said test need not be applied. Yet another decision relied on by the learned Rent Control Appellate Authority was that reported in R. Sridharan v. Commissioner of Wealth Tax, Madras, (1971)1 M.L.J. 249: A.I.R. 1970 Mad. 308, in the case of wherein this Court pointed out that the mere intention to carry on business will not enable the landlord to get an order of eviction under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. He must take one step in furtherance of the business which he is going to start.

11. According to the facts arising in the present case the landlady is not having any other premises of her own in the same town and her husband is also an unemployed person. Even according to the tenant a major portion of the petition premises is uninhabitable. According to the landlady she wanted to start a small mess to feed about 10 people so that she can earn some income out of that and in order to start a petty mess like this utensils for cooking, tumblers for providing water, mats for providing sitting arrangements to the customers and leaves for serving the food alone are essential. In order to obtain all these materials the cost cannot go beyond Rs.2,000. According to the landlady, she is possessed of sufficient means to start this petty mess. Since the mess which the landlady is going to start is petty in nature, possession of enough funds is itself sufficient to show that the landlady has taken one step in furtherance of starting the mess. The landlady further submitted that in order to run a petty mess like this, no licence is also needed from the Municipality. In the case of S.N.K. Ramaswamy Pillai v. Karmega

Thevar, (1964)1 M.L.J. 89, this Court while considering the provisions of Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act pointed out that,

"There is no reason why a landlord having the capital ready and the intention as well to do business cannot be said to have commenced his business, though the activity relating to it has to await the securing of accommodation."

In the case of Mari Ammal v. Kandaswamy, 1977 T.L.N.J. 499, this Court pointed out that,

"Giving the fullest meaning to the expression, a business which he is carrying on, it is not possible to interpret the expression in the same manner in all cases irrespective of the nature of the business. Certain business may require elaborate preparation and certain other business may not require any preparation at all. For instance, the business with which we are concerned, viz., a betel-nut business does not require any elaborate preparation at all and all that is required is an intention to start the business and possession of capital, which admittedly, will be very small, to start the business. It is not as if, for the purpose of having recourse to the particular statutory provision, a landlord must take a building on lease from a third party and commence his business in that building and thereafter apply under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) for getting possession of his own building for the purpose of carrying on that business which till then he was carrying on in a rented building. To construe Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) in that manner will be against all notions of common-sense and will not be even in consonance with the object of the Act. Certainly it cannot be the intention of the Act to prevent a landlord who, for the purpose of eking out his livelihood, wants to carry on a business of his own in his own premises from doing so."

Considering the nature of the petty mess the landlady is going to start in her own premises and in the light of the above said judicial pronouncements cited supra I am of the opinion that the landlady in the present case established her bona fide in requiring the petition premises under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. For the foregoing reasons I set aside the order passed by the rent control appellate authority and restore the order passed by the rent controller.

12. In the result, the order of eviction passed by the rent controller under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act is sustained. Accordingly the revision is allowed. However there will be no order as to costs.

v.

The Divisional Development Officer, Cheranmahadevi, Tirunelveli District and others

...Respondents.

Constitution of India (1950), Art.226 - Natural justice - Tamil Nadu Water Supply and Drainage Board installing overhead tank in a village imposing condition that individual house service connections, should not be given - Panchayat passing resolution to provide house service connection and giving connection to certain persons - Beneficiaries filing writ petitions to enforce such right - If maintainable. Under the Rural Water Supply Scheme, the Tamil Nadu Water Supply and Drainage Board installed an overhead tank for the benefit of the villagers of Kundakulam Panchayat in 1988. While handing over charge of the tank to the Panchayat, the Board imposed a condition that no individual house service connection should be given. The District Collector of Tirunelveli issued an order in 1988 to all the Panchayat Union Commissioners that no individual house service connection should be given from the overhead tanks installed under the above scheme. The Commissioner of the Radhapuram Panchayat Union also passed a similar order to all the Presidents of the Panchayats within his jurisdiction. However, the Kudankulam Panchayat passed a resolution in April, 1989 to provide house service connection and gave connection to some persons. The petitioners in W.P.No.7591 of 1992 filed a writ petition for the issue of a writ of mandamus directing the respondents to disconnect all the service connections thus given. The petitioners in W.P.No.9423 of 1992 filed the petition for forbearing the respondents from disconnecting the connections without furnishing the particulars of G.O.No., Rules, directions referred to in the notice sent by the respondents.

Held: On the facts referred to, the petitioners cannot claim any right in them to continue the water connections given to their houses. The very basis of giving connections to their houses was illegal and it was pursuant to a resolution passed by the Panchayat contrary to the instructions given by the authorities and contrary to the conditions stipulated at the time of handing-over the overhead tank to the Panchayat. When the connections given to the petitioners were based on an illegality at the inception, they cannot claim any right to have them continued and contend that they are entitled to get some more particulars from the authorities concerned. All the relevant particulars were made available to them in the counter-affidavit filed by the first respondent in W.P.No.11292 of 1990. Apart from that no particulars are necessary to be given to the petitioners herein or the petitioners in W.P.No.9423 of 1992. In any event, it has been held by the Supreme Court in several cases that the principle of natural justice need not apply as a matter of rule in every case. They can be excluded in certain cases. In the present case, it has been pointed out by the authority that it is against the interest of the general public of the village to grant house service connection as they would not be able to have sufficient supply of drinking water if individual house service connections are given. That is why even when the tank was handed-over to the Panchayat, a condition was imposed. When it is against the interest of the public at large, the Court should take into account only such interest and should not give credit to the grievance of a few individuals of the village. Particularly, when the said benefits were given to the said individuals by the authorities illegally. Hence, the petitioners in W.P.No.9423 of 1992 have no right to be enforced under Art.226 of the Constitution of India. They cannot contend that the connections given to their houses should be continued on the only ground that they have not been furnished with the orders of the authorities and the documents referred to by the authorities in their notice.

V.R.Rajasekaran, Government Advocate, for Respondent Nos.1 and 3.

Liaqat Ali, for State.

ORDER: These two writ petitions are connected. They relate to the same matter. The petitioner in W.P.No.7591 of 1992 is a permanent resident and native of Kudankulam village which falls within the jurisdiction of Radhapuram Panchayat Union. He has filed the writ petition in the interest of all the residents of the village. Under the Rural Water Supply Scheme, the Tamil Nadu Water Supply and Drainage Board installed an overhead tank for the benefit of the villagers in 1988. The village is generally a drought prone area and the villagers have to walk for 4 to 5 Kms. to fetch water for drinking and bathing. When the tank was installed after the great efforts of the villagers, the Tamil Nadu Water Supply and Drainage Board imposed a condition when handing over charge of the tank to the Panchayat that no individual house service connection should be given. The tank is installed with a capacity of 1,00,000 litres. 35 water tapes were also installed in the village to supply water to the residents of the village.

2. The District Collector of Tirunelveli District issued an order in 1988 to all the Panchayat Union Commissioners that no house service connection should be given from the overhead tank installed under the scheme. The 2nd respondent also passed an order on 1.11.1988 to all the Presidents of the Panchayat Board under his jurisdiction directing them not to provide house service connection. In spite of strict instructions by the Collector and the 2nd respondent, the Panchayat passed a resolution in April, 1989 to provide house service connection on a monthly charge of Rs.15 per house and on a deposit of Rs.300. It is alleged by the petitioner in the writ petition that the President got the resolution passed with the connivance of other members of the Panchayat with a view to get water service connection to their houses and to make money out of it. It is not necessary for me to consider the correctness of the said allegations as the persons to whom the house connections were given are not impleaded as parties in that writ petition.

3. Suffice it to point out that the house service connections have been given against the instructions issued by the Collector and the Commissioner of the Panchayat Union and the resolution of the Panchayat was contrary to the said instructions. It is also contrary to the specific condition imposed by the TWAD Board at the time of giving charge of the overhead tank to the Panchayat.

4. The Divisional Development Officer, Chcranmahadevi, passed an order dated 12.7.1990 that Koodankulam and Radhapuram are drought areas and the action of the Panchayat in passing a resolution to give house service connection was totally illegal and it would affect severely the residents of Koodankulam. The President of the Panchayat instead of disconnecting the water connection issued an order directing the persons who got house service connections not to take water from the taps installed in their houses. Aggrieved thereby those persons filed W.P.No.11292 of 1990 in this Court. In that writ petition, the petitioner in W.P.No.7591 of 1992 got himself impleaded as a party. The writ petition was disposed on 24.4.1992. An order was passed allowing the writ petition on the sole ground that no notice was given to the petitioners therein before the impugned order was passed. The court observed that action could be taken after issuing due notice to the petitioners therein.

5. Pursuant to the said order, the Panchayat Union issued a notice on 22.6.1992 to the persons who got house service connection. In that notice, they had referred to the condition imposed in the scheme under which the overhead tank was installed and handed over to the Panchayat. It is also stated in the notice that 'the condition was violated and the resolution was passed by the Panchayat to give house connection to 15 persons. It is further stated that the Divisional Development Officer as well as the Commissioner of Panchayat Union had given instructions already that house connections should not be given and, therefore, action is being taken to disconnect the connections already provided. A reference is made to the writ petition filed in this Court and orders passed therein. The notice called upon the petitioners in W.P.No.9423 of 1992 who had the house connection to send their objections if any within 15 days from the date of receipt of notice and otherwise action would be taken to disconnect the pipe.

6. On receipt of the said notice, the petitioners caused through their advocate the issue of a telegram. In that telegram he wanted copies of Water Board's communication, orders of the Director of Rural Development and the District Collector under which tap connection was said to be prohibited and that without the said documents it would be impossible for the petitioners to submit an effective reply. They also prayed for extension of time by 15 days after furnishing of the said documents. A notice was issued on 30.6.1992 by counsel. In the notice also there was a prayer for extension of 15 days after furnishing of documents.

7. Thereafter, they filed W.P.No.9423 of 1992 with a prayer for issue of mandamus forbearing the respondents from disconnecting the water service connection given to the petitioners.

8. There is no justification for the request made by the petitioners for furnishing of the documents set out in the telegram issued by the advocate. Even in the counter affidavit filed by the Divisional Development Officer, Cheranmahadevi, in W.P.No.11292 of 1990 in which he was the first respondent, all the relevant particulars had been set out. The said counter affidavit refers to the resolution passed by the Panchayat on 29.3.1989 and points out that in view of the fact that the Managing Director of Tamil Nadu Water Supply and Drainage Board had specifically instructed not to extend water supply for private purposes as the people belonging to economically weaker sections would be deprived of getting enough water for their requirements if individual house service connection were given, the resolution of the Panchayat was not valid. The number of the letter and the date thereof were set out in that affidavit. There is also reference in that affidavit to the instructions issued by the Commissioner, Panchayat Union, Radhapuram, on the basis of guidance given by TWAD Board and also to the contentions of the petitioners therein against the orders issued in proceedings A5/3433/90, dated 12.7.1990. A reference was made to the notice issued by the President of the Panchayat on 16.5.1990 in the first instance and the second notice on 14.7.1990. It was also pointed out that no reply was sent by the petitioners to the notice dated 16.5.1990. It was stated in the counter affidavit that the decision to disconnect the individual house connection was taken with the sole intention that economically weaker sections should not be deprived of their chance of getting enough drinking water and there was no sufficient supply so as to give house connection to the residents of the villages.

9. I am of the view that on the facts referred to above, the petitioners cannot claim any right in them to continue the water connections given to their houses. The very basis of giving connections to their houses was illegal and it was pursuant to a resolution passed by the Panchayat contrary to the instructions given by the authorities and contrary to the conditions stipulated at the time of handing over the overhead tank to the Panchayat. When the connections given to the petitioners were based on an illegality at the inception they cannot claim any right to have them continued and contend that they are entitled to get some more particulars from the authorities concerned. All the relevant particulars were made available to them in the counter affidavit filed by the first respondent in W.P.No.11292 of 1990. Apart from that no other particulars are necessary to be given to the petitioners therein or the petitioners in W.P.No.9423 of 1992.

10. In any event, it has been held by the Supreme Court in several cases that the principles of natural justice need not apply as a matter of rule in every case. They can be excluded in certain cases. Vide Union of India v. Tulsiram Patel, A.I.R. 1985 S.C. 1416 at page 1462, para 101. In the present case, it has been pointed out by the authority that it is against the interest of the general public of the village to grant house service connection as they would not be able to have sufficient supply of drinking water if individual house service connections are given. That is why even when the tank was handed over to the Panchayat a condition was imposed. When it is against the interest of the public at large, the court should take into account only such interest and should not give credit to the grievance of a few individuals of the villages particularly when the said benefits were given to the said individuals by the authorities illegally.

11. Hence, the petitioners in W.P.No.9423 of 1992 have no right to be enforced under Art.226 of the Constitution of India. They cannot contend that the connections given to their houses should be continued on the only ground that they have not been furnished with the orders of the authorities and the documents referred to by the authorities in their notice. At any rate, I refuse to exercise my discretion under Art.226 of the Constitution in favour of the petitioners in the said writ petition. Consequently, the said Writ Petition No.9423 of 1992 is dismissed.

12. In the other writ petition, the prayer is for issue of mandamus directing respondents 1 to 3 to disconnect all the house service water connections given by the then President of Koodankulam in violation of the orders of the District Collector and the Commissioner of Radhapuram Panchayat Union. It follows automatically that this writ petition should be allowed and mandamus should be issued as prayed for by the petitioners. Respondents 1 to 3 in W.P.No.7591 of 1992 are directed to disconnect the house service water connections given by the then President of Koodankulam Panchayat Union within one week from this date. There is no necessity for the respondents to give any further notice to the persons who have obtained house connections under the illegal resolution passed by the Panchayat earlier. The writ petition (W.P.No.7591 of 1992) is ordered accordingly. There will be no order as to costs.

The Regional Commissioner, Employees Provident Fund (Tamil Nadu and Pondicherry States)

...Respondent.

(A) Evidence Act (I of 1872), Secs.107 and 108 - Person shown to be alive within 30 years - Claiming to have him dead - Burden of proof - Person proved to have not been heard of for seven years - Claim that such person is alive - Burden of proof.

(B) Constitution of India (1950), Art.226 - Claim by nominee for Provident Fund relying on Secs.107 and 108 of Evidence Act - Rejection by Provident Fund Authorities - Remedy open - Proceedings under Art.226, if will lie.

The deceased 'K' originally nominated his father to receive the provident fund due to him. Since the father's whereabouts were not known to the deceased for more than ten years, it was presumed that he was dead. The deceased, therefore, sent a fresh nomination on 7.2.1976 to the Respondent, the Regional Provident Fund Commissioner nominating the petitioner to receive the provident fund amount. The deceased informed the Respondent that the nominee was his friend. No communication was received by the deceased, accepting or rejecting the fresh nomination. After the death of the deceased on 20.12.1981, the petitioner moved the respondent. The petitioner was asked to obtain a succession certificate before a court of law. When the petitioner moved the Court for the issue of a succession certificate, it was returned with the endorsement that since the nominee was not an heir of the deceased and since the nomination was in dispute, he was not entitled to file the petition until it was declared that he was the proper nominee. He then filed a petition for the issue of a writ of mandamus directing the Respondent to accept the fresh nomination made by the deceased. There was no evidence that the father of the deceased was dead.

Held:- A careful analysis and consideration of Secs.107 and 108 of the Evidence Act would go to show that if a person was shown to be alive within 30 years, the factum of death is to be proved and the burden lies upon the person who claims that such a person was dead. Likewise, when it is proved that a person has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that such a person is alive is on the person who affirms it. There is nothing on record before the Court to show that the person concerned, namely, the father of the deceased 'K', who was shown or admitted to be alive within 30 years to be dead. Likewise there are no facts to prove that the whereabouts of the father of the deceased who was not heard of for seven years by the said or anybody who would naturally have heard of him. The petitioner, at any rate, could not claim to be such a person and his plea has no relevance. In the absence of any concrete material to attract the presumption postulated under the above two provisions contained in the Evidence Act, it is not possible for this Court to countenance the plea that the father of the deceased subscriber should be deemed to have died and it is only on that basis the second nomination in 1978 in favour of the petitioner was made. [Para 8]

If the petitioner cannot and is not eligible to secure a succession certificate, it does not preclude the petitioner either to file a suit for recovery of the money or for getting appropriate declaration from the competent Civil Court as is permissible in law declaring his entitlement to the amount and whatever may be the course that has to be adopted lawfully to get the money from the account of the deceased 'K', the course adopted by moving this Court under Art.226 of the Constitution of India cannot be approved, in the light of the existing provisions of the Provident Fund Scheme, 1952. So long as there is no proof before this Court to show that the father of the deceased is no more the claim cannot be countenanced on a due consideration in these proceedings under Art.226 of the Constitution of India since these proceedings will be more inappropriate to give any such declaration either on the issue of the deemed death of the father of the deceased K.Raman or on the consequential entitlement of the petitioner to the amount lying to the account of the deceased subscriber in the Scheme in

[Para 9]

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein, and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of mandamus directing the respondent to accept the first nomination made by the deceased K.Raman, nominating the petitioner as a fresh nominee as early as on 7.2.1976, thereby enabling him to claim the amount due.

R.Subramaniam for M/s.King and Partridge, for Petitioner.

P.Narasimhan, Senior Central Government Standing Counsel, for Respondent.

ORDER:- The above writ petition has been filed for a writ of mandamus directing the respondents to accept the fresh nomination made by the deceased K.Raman, nominating the petitioner as a fresh nominee as early as on 7.2.1976, thereby enabling him to claim the amount due since the father's whereabouts were not known to the deceased for more than ten years, it was presumed that he was dead and therefore the deceased K.Raman was obliged to send fresh nomination on 7.2.1976 to the Regional Provident Fund Commissioner, Madras, nominating the petitioner to receive the provident fund amount due to him. On receipt of such nomination the Regional Provident Fund Commissioner was said to have returned the papers asking the deceased to state his relationship to the petitioner and the deceased appears to have informed the Commissioner that the relationship between him and the petitioner was 'friend'. It is the contention for the petitioner that though as early as on 7.2.1976 another nomination was sent in the place of K.Krishnan Nair, no communication was received by the deceased during his life time whether the fresh nomination submitted was accepted or not and that therefore the deceased K.Raman, bona fide believed that the fresh nomination submitted by him was accepted. It is also contended that the deceased appointed the petitioner as nominee to receive the gratuity amount due under the Payment of Gratuity Act, 1972 and on the strength of such nomination the petitioner already received the amount from the company where he was employed, after the death of Mr.K.Raman, on 20.12.1981. The petitioner appears to have moved the Regional Provident Fund Commissioner, who in his reply dated 6.7.1982 has stated that the change in the nomination should have been made only in Form No. VIII not in Form No. II and that therefore, the petitioner was asked to obtain a Succession Certificate before the Court of Law. The writ petitioner would also claim that when he moved this Court on the Original Side for issue of a Succession Certificate in his favour, the same was returned with an endorsement that since the nomination of the petitioner is in dispute and he is not the heir of the deceased, until it was declared legally that he is the proper nominee, he is not entitled to file the petition under the provisions of the Indian Succession Act. In the above circumstances, the writ petition came to be filed with the relief prayed as referred to supra.

2. Reliance is placed on paragraphs 61(1) (5) and (6) of the Employees Provident Fund Scheme, 1952 to claim the relief prayed for. The respondent has filed a counter affidavit contending that during his life time the deceased K. Raman nominated his father in Form No. II on 13.8.1962, that he submitted another Form No. II dated 21.12.1978 nominating the petitioner as his nominee to receive the Provident Fund amount, that the said renomination was not in accordance with Paragraph 61(8) of the Employees Provident Fund Scheme, and therefore, it cannot be accepted. It is also contended placing reliance upon paragraph 2(g) of the Scheme that a member is required to nominate only members of 'family' as defined, and inasmuch as the original nomination in favour of the father was accepted and the same was still in force, the petitioner's claim that he is the nominee of the deceased member, cannot be treated as valid and that the settlement of provident fund account has to be regulated under paragraph 70(ii) of the scheme. With that object, it is claimed that the petitioner was required to get a Succession Certificate from a Court of law to ensure payment to the proper legal heirs of the deceased and that instead of obtaining such a Succession Certificate or orders confirming his entitlement for the said accumulated provident fund amount, the petitioner has approached this Court with the above writ petition.

3. The respondent also claimed in the counter affidavit that the deceased member died on 20.12.1981 as a bachelor, that the nomination of his father on 13.8.1962 was acceptable and though the member has nominated the petitioner in December, 1978 the change of nomination in favour of the petitioner, who was only a friend could not be countenanced in accordance with the statutory provisions and that therefore the petitioner does not fall within the provisions envisaged under para. 61(1) of the scheme. It is also claimed that any nomination made by a member of the scheme in favour of the person not belonging to his family is invalid and that therefore the renomination made cannot be accepted and the nomination made originally in favour of his father is subsisting and more so because the petitioner could not produce any documentary evidence to prove the death of the original nominee at the time of execution of another nomination. It is stated that the mere declaration of the member regarding 'no family' and appointing his friend to receive the provident fund proceeds cannot be accepted, unless it is proved that the original nominee had expired. It is also stated, the fact that the petitioner was the son of the manager of the establishment in which the late member was lastly employed create suspicion in the mind of the respondent and there was a room for admitting the bona fides of the nomination, since no Last Will of the deceased was produced by the petitioner. The respondent further specifically averred that "the averment that the late member Raman, made attempts to trace his father, is not acceptable and a valid fact to be relied upon. Had it been true, the deceased member would have stated so while executing another nomination." The respondent further contends that in the peculiar circumstances of the case the petitioner, has to satisfy himself beyond doubt, that no other family member of the deceased member is alive and the nomination in question cannot be immediately accepted. The fact relating to the nomination and payment under Gratuity Act is said to be not a relevant consideration for the issue raised under the Provident Fund Scheme and the petitioner should have at any rate try to obtain a Succession Certificate issued by the competent Court of law and in the absence of valid orders of the Court of law, the claim of the petitioner for the release of the provident fund amount of deceased Raman is not sustainable in law and on facts. Reliance is also placed on para. 70(ii) as well as para 61 and the various sub-paragraphs incorporated in the said paragraph. That apart the respondent contended that the claim of the petitioner could not be countenanced in law.

4. The learned counsel for the petitioner while reiterating the stand taken in the affidavit contended that inasmuch as the whereabouts of the father of the deceased was not known for more than ten years, and he should be presumed to be dead, the nomination in favour of the petitioner must be construed as a fresh nomination though the case is not one falling within the category of modification of an existing nomination and that in any event, the non-filing of modification in Form No. VIII is a mere irregularity and is curable too, and that by keeping silent during the period of the life time of the deceased, the respondent has disabled the petitioner of the scope and opportunity to file an appropriate nomination in the paper form and manner and that inasmuch as the petitioner has moved the Civil Court and has been told that a Succession Certificate cannot be issued at his instance, the petitioner had no other go except to file the above writ petition.

5. Mr. P. Narasimhan, learned counsel appearing for the respondent while reiterating the stand taken in the counter affidavit contend that there are no material on record to demonstrate the claim that the father of the deceased was dead and that in such circumstances and for the said reason only a nomination in favour of the petitioner had been made. The learned counsel also would contend that in the light of the provisions contained in paras. 61 and 70 and the scheme, the objection taken by the respondent was well merited and that in the absence of any Succession Certificate, the petitioner could at least produce proper declaration of the competent Civil Court that he is entitled to recover the money from the respondent, which is lying to the account of the deceased K. Raman and that therefore, the claim now made in these proceedings cannot be countenanced.

6. I have carefully considered the submissions of learned counsel appearing on either side. The relevant portion of para 61 of the Employees' Provident Funds Scheme, 1952, necessary for the case on hand reads as hereunder:

- "61(1) Each member shall make in his declaration in Form 2, a nomination conferring the right to receive the amount that may stand to his credit in the Fund in the event of his death before the amount standing to his credit has become payable, or where the amount has become payable before payment has been made.
- (2) A member may in his nomination distribute the amount that may stand to his credit in the Fund amongst his nominees at his own discretion.

(3) If a member has a family at the time of making nomination, the nomination shall be in favour of one or more persons belonging to his family. Any nomination made by such member in favour of a person not belonging to his family shall be invalid.

(4) If at the time of making a nomination the member has no family the nomination may be in favour of any person or persons but if the member subsequently acquires a family, such nomination shall forthwith be deemed to be invalid and the member shall make a fresh nomination in favour of one or more persons belonging to his family.

(5) A nomination made under Sub-paragraph (1) may at any time be modified by a member after giving a written notice of his intention of doing so in Form 8 annexed hereto. If the nominee predeceases the member, the interest of the nominee shall revert to the member who may make a fresh nomination in respect of such interest.

(6) A nomination or its modification shall take effect to the extent that it is valid on the date on which it is received by the Commissioner."

Paragraph 70 of the Scheme reads as under:

"70. On the death of a member before the amount standing to his credit has become payable, or where the amount has become payable before payment has been made--

(i) If a nomination made by the member in accordance with paragraph 61 subsists, the amount standing to his credit in the Fund or that part thereof to which the nomination relates, shall become payable to his nominee or nominees in accordance with such nomination; or

(ii) if no nomination subsists or if the nomination relates only to a part of the amount standing to his credit in the Fund, the whole amount or the part thereof to which the nomination does not relate, as the case may be, shall become payable to the members of his family in equal shares;" (Proviso omitted)

The learned counsel for the respondent made available the file containing the nomination form referred to supra and also the Contribution Cards. Neither in the Form No. II dated 21.12.1978 nor in any separate communication as such any reason is disclosed by the deceased subscriber as to the reason for the second nomination, be it be treated as modification or fresh nomination. It is only in the affidavit of the writ petitioner that the reason, namely, the deemed death of the father is pleaded to justify the nomination in favour of the petitioner in 1978 as fresh nomination. Having regard to the plea for the petitioner that on the deemed death of the deceased Raman's father, the nomination in his favour had become ineffective and rendered non-existent thereby facilitating, according to the petitioner the fresh nomination without resorting to the filing of the modification form in Form No. VIII. The first question that would arise for consideration in the background of the above facts and the governing provisions under the scheme would be as to whether the death of the father of the deceased subscriber could be presumed inasmuch as only on such presumption coming into operation the nomination of the petitioner can be countenanced.

7. Sec.107 of the Evidence Act lays down that-"When the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is shown that he was alive within thirty years, the burden of proving that he is dead is on the person who affirms it."

Equally Sec.108 of the Evidence Act lays down that-

"When the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is proved that he has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that he is alive is (shifted to) the person who affirms it."

8. A careful analysis and consideration of the above provisions would go to show that if a person was shown to be alive within 30 years, the factum of death is to be proved and the burden lies upon the person who claims that such a person was dead. Likewise, when it is proved that a person has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that such a person is alive is on the person who affirms it. There is nothing on record before the Court to show that the person concerned namely, the father of the deceased K.Raman, who was shown or admitted to be alive within 30 years, to be dead. Likewise there are no facts to prove that the whereabouts of the father of the deceased Raman was not heard of for seven years by the said Raman or anybody who would naturally have heard of him. The petitioner, at any rate, could not claim to be such a person and his plea has no relevance. In the absence of any concrete material to attract the presumption postulated under the above two provisions contained in the Evidence Act, it is not possible for this Court to countenance the plea that the father of the deceased subscriber should be deemed to have died and it is only on that basis the second nomination in 1978, in favour of the petitioner was made. The respondent therefore cannot be found fault with for taking the stand that so long the earlier nomination was kept alive particularly in the absence of or without any proper modification of the same by filing Form No. VIII the nomination in favour of the petitioner cannot be legally accepted or countenanced and action taken to pay the amount lying to the credit of the deceased to the petitioner as claimed by him.

9. The next aspect that would require to be considered is as to what is the further course of action. The learned counsel for the petitioner would contend that in the light of the advice given by the respondent to secure a Succession Certificate, the petitioner genuinely moved this Court on the Original Side and that the matter has been returned with an endorsement that no action would lie at the instance of the petitioner to secure a Succession Certificate, he being not a designated legal heir. In my view, the objection, if any, taken to the maintainability of the application for Succession Certificate per se does not lead to the inevitable consequence of a recommendation of the claim by this Court in these proceedings under Art.226 of the Constitution of India. If the petitioner cannot and is not eligible to secure a Succession Certificate, it does not preclude the petitioner either to file a suit for recovery of the money or for getting appropriate declaration from the competent Civil Court as is permissible in law declaring his entitlement to the amount and whatever may be the course that has to be adopted lawfully to get the money from the account of the deceased K.Raman, the course adopted by moving this Court under Art.226 of the Constitution of India cannot be approved, in the light of the existing provisions of the Scheme, to which reference has already been made. So long as there is no proof before this Court to show that the father of the petitioner was no more, the claim cannot be countenanced on a due consideration in these proceedings under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, since these proceedings will be more inappropriate to give any such declaration either on the issue of the deemed death of the father of the deceased K.Raman or on the consequential entitlement of the petitioner to the amount lying to the account of the deceased subscriber in the Scheme in question.

10. For all the reasons stated above, I see no reason to interfere in the matter by issuing a writ of mandamus as prayed for and the writ petition therefore fails and shall stand rejected. The rejection of the writ petition as well as the observations if any made are for the purpose of considering the validity of the nomination under Art.226 of the Constitution of India and shall not preclude in any manner the petitioner from vindicating his right in accordance with law and as and when any such move is made, the claim of the petitioner shall be considered by the appropriate forum or court influenced by any of the observations made in this order. The writ petition is rejected. No costs.

(A) Guardian and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), Secs.17 and 25 - Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act (XXXII of 1956), Sec.6 - Minor Child - Guardianship - Right of father.

In the absence of any positive proof that the father has suffered any disqualification from being the guardian and custodian of the minor child, the father alone will be the fit and proper person to have the child's custody. [Para 15]

(B) Guardian and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), Sec.17 - Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act (XXXII of 1956), Sec.6 - Minor child - Father if can substitute another person to be guardian, during his life time - Father entrusting custody of minor child to another - If can desire return of child to his custody.

The father is the natural guardian of his child. He cannot therefore, during his life time substitute another person to be the guardian in his place. He may, in the exercise of his discretion as guardian, entrust the custody and education of the child to another, but the authority he thus confers is a revocable authority, and if the welfare of his child requires it, he can, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, take such custody and education once more into his own hands. Therefore, it can be safely held that the father can desire the return of the child to his custody even though he left the child for a few years in charge of his parents-in-law and it is not sufficient to deprive a father of the custody of his child simply because he left the child for a few years in charge of his parents-in-law and desire to return to his custody of the minor child.

Appeal against the Order of the District Court, Chengalpattu, dated 9.1.1992 and made in G.W.O.P.No.156 of 1990.

R.Subramanian, for Appellants.

S.Balasubramanian for A.V.Munuswamy, S.M.M.Hussain and D.Umakanth, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The respondents before the lower court are the appellants herein. The present appeal has been directed against the judgment and decree dated 9.1.1992 in G.W.O.P.No.156 of 1990 on the file of the District Judge, Chengalpattu.

2. The respondent herein, who is the father of the minor Ramachandran alias Anandan now aged about 4 1/2 years, has filed the Guardian Wards O.P.No.156 of 1990 under Sec.25(1) of the Guardian and Wards Act, read with Sec.6(a) of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, to direct the respondents/appellants herein, who are the maternal grand parents of the minor, to hand over the custody of the minor to the respondent herein.

3. The short facts are, the respondent married the appellants' daughter Dhanalakshmi on 12.2.1987 at Villivakkam and that the marriage was solemnized according to Hindu rites and Custom. The respondent is employed in Tamil Nadu Civil Supply Corporation at Kancheepuram, which is his native place. They were living happily for two years after the marriage at Kancheepuram. The minor child was born on 7.2.1988 at Rakki Hospital, Ambattur. The respondent was then transferred to Ponnammallee and was living with his wife at the residence of the appellants at Ambattur. The respondent was again transferred to Chengalpattu. Hence, he has once again moved to Kancheepuram with his wife and the minor. On 3.4.1990, the respondent's wife got injured in the stove fire accident and was admitted to Kancheepuram Headquarters Hospital. In spite of best treatment given to her, the hospital authorities advised the respondent to take her to Kilpauk Medical College Hospital for further treatment and for plastic surgery. But, on 29.5.1990, she expired in the Kilpauk Medical College Hospital. The dead body was handed over to the respondent after post-mortem. The body was taken to Ambattur at the request of the appellants. The appellants, with the aid of police and under threat and coercion, forced the respondent to sign in a blank stamp paper. The appellants are very poor people and have no means of livelihood. The minor is of tender age and has to be admitted in a school and has to be given proper nourishment. The respondent is very much attached to the minor and he alone is the fit and proper person to maintain and have custody of the minor. The respondent is now working as a Helper in the Tamil Nadu Civil Supply Corporation and earning Rs.1,200 per month. He can properly bring up the minor. The appellants are not entitled to have the custody of the minor. The respondent issued notice to the appellants on 7.6.1990. He issued another notice on 14.7.1990 seeking custody of the minor child. The appellants, though received the notice, have not complied with the demand. Hence, the respondent has filed the above Guardian and wards O.P. for the relief mentioned above.

4. The appellants, as respondents, resisted the petition by filing a counter. Though several contentions have been raised in the counter, it is relevant if I refer to the contentions which are necessary. According to the appellants the respondent never cared to look to the child's wants. The minor child is in the custody of the appellants ever since its birth. It is false to state that they did not provide necessary food and medicine. The respondent cannot maintain the minor as he is living separately after he got divided from his father, step mother and step sister. The respondent himself has to look for someone else for his daily bread. The respondent is incapable of attending on the tender child. The welfare of the minor shall be the paramount consideration and no person shall be entitled to the guardianship by virtue of the provisions of the abovesaid Act or any law relating to guardianship if the Court is of opinion that the guardianship will not be for the welfare of the minor. There are not bona fides on the part of the respondent. It will not be in the interest of the minor child to appoint the respondent as the guardian of the minor.

5. The appellants filed an additional counter stating that the respondent had executed an agreement on 30.5.1990 agreeing to leave the minor child with the appellants as per the wishes of his wife. He had also agreed to pay Rs.300 per month for the maintenance of the child. Further, he had returned all the articles that were given to the respondent's wife as Sridhana and had also agreed to give his ancestral property to his minor son. The said agreement was executed by the respondent on his own accord. It was attested by his father Thanagavelu, his brothers Karunanidhi and Dayalan and by his uncle Arunachala Mudaliar and two others of Ambattur. As such, the minor was looked after by the appellants as per the best wishes of their deceased daughter Dhanalakshmi and as agreed by the respondent. If the minor child is entrusted with the respondent, it will be detrimental to the welfare of the minor child.

6. The learned District Judge, Chengalpattu, on a consideration of the entire facts and circumstances of the case, allowed the petition filed by the respondent herein and directed the appellants to hand over the custody of the minor child to the respondent within two months from the date of his order. However, the appellants were permitted, if they so desire, to take the minor child during quarterly, half yearly and summer vacations and have his custody temporarily. Aggrieved against the judgment and decree of the court below, the respondents therein have filed this appeal.

7. In the appeal, the appellants have raised the following grounds:

- (i) The claim of the father/respondent is not bona fide when he himself has admitted about the second marriage in the witness box;
- (ii) The court below has not considered the welfare of the minor child.
- (iii) The court below ought to have held that the welfare of the child will be better if it is with the grand parents/appellants since the child was brought up by them from the date of death of the respondent's wife;
- (iv) The court below ought to have considered the agreement executed by the respondent wherein he undertook to provide maintenance as well as the ancestral properties to the minor child, which should be brought up by the appellants.
- (v) The court below ought to have found that the wife of the respondent died in suspicious circumstances and that the appellants did not pursue the matter since the respondent volunteered for certain conditions as stipulated in the agreement dated 30.5.1990;
- (vi) The court below ought to have found that the respondent has lost his right to claim the custody of the minor child in view of his conduct and treatment of his wife Dhanalakshmi, which resulted in her death.
- (vii) The court below ought to have found that the appellants have sufficient means and capacity to bring up the minor child.
- (viii) The court below ought to have examined the minor child to know about his likes and dislikes as well as the harassment caused to his deceased mother by the respondent.

8. I have heard Mr.R.Subramaniam, learned counsel for the appellants and Mr.S.Balasubramaniam, learned counsel for the respondent.

9. Mr.R.Subramaniam reiterated the grounds raised by him in the appeal at the time of argument. I have been taken through the entire pleadings filed by both parties and the order of the court below. I am unable to accept the contentions raised by the learned counsel for the appellants. I have also carefully gone through the order of the court below and I am of the view that the court below has allowed the respondent's claim for custody of his minor child on a proper consideration of the entire facts and circumstances of the case and also following the decisions of our High Court reported in J.Velan v. G.Muthu, (1990)2 M.L.J. 417 and Mary Vanitha v. Babu Royan, (1991)2 M.L.J. 231. It is pertinent to notice here that the counsel for the appellants herein appeared for the respondents in O.P.No.30 of 1988 J.Velan v. G.Muthu, (1990)2 M.L.J. 417. Similar contentions raised by the learned counsel for the appellants herein have also been raised in the above case and the same was negatived by me on an elaborate consideration of the same. It is also further pertinent to notice that the appeal (O.S.A.) filed by the respondents therein was also dismissed by a Division Bench of this Court.

10. Let me now consider the contentions raised by Mr.R.Subramaniam, learned counsel for the appellants in this appeal. According to Mr.R.Subramaniam, the respondent is unfit to have the custody of the child since he has married for the second time, which has been admitted by him in the witness box. I am unable to accept this contention in view of the decision of our High Court reported in Sorra Reddi v. Chenna Reddi, (1950)1 M.L.J. 83: A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 306, wherein Govinda Menon and Basheer Ahmed Sayeed, JJ., have clearly laid down that the father ought to be the guardian of the person and property of the minor under ordinary circumstances and the fact that a Hindu father has married a second wife is no ground whatever of depriving him of his parental right of custody. In the said case, it was argued that the minor might have developed love and attachment to the other relations with whom was, and this argument was negatived. In the instant case, the very same argument was advanced by the learned counsel for the appellants that the minor has developed love and attachment with the grandparents/appellants with whom he was. Applying the said ratio in the abovesaid decision, I have no hesitation to negative the said contention.

11. Mr.R.Subramaniam next argued that the welfare of the child will be better with the appellants since the minor was brought up by them from the date of death of the respondent's wife. Here again, I am unable to accept the said contention. The father is the natural guardian of his child. He cannot, therefore, during his life time substitute another person to be the guardian in his place. He may, in the exercise of his discretion as guardian, entrust the custody and education of the child to another, but the authority he thus confers is a revocable authority, and if the welfare of his child requires it, he can, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, take such custody and education once more into his own hands. Therefore, it can be safely held that the father can desire the return of the child to his custody even though he left the child for a few years in charge of his parents-in-law and it is not sufficient to deprive a father of the custody of his child simply because he left the child for a few years in charge of the appellants and desire to return to his custody of the minor child. Therefore, I reject the contention of the learned counsel for the appellants that the welfare of the child will be better only if it is with the appellants since the child was brought up by them from the date of death of the respondent's wife.

12. Mr.R.Subramaniam then contended that the court below ought to have examined the child to know about its likes and dislikes as well as the harassment caused to its deceased mother by the respondent. This contention is wholly unacceptable and misconceived. Admittedly, the child is of tender age and on the date when the petition was filed, it was only 2 1/2 years old and now it is 4 1/2 years old. No child of tender age will be in a position to express any opinion in regard to its likes and dislikes as well as the harassment said to have been caused to its deceased mother by the father. In this connection, I have also carefully considered the counter-affidavit filed by the appellants, which is very silent on this aspect. Nothing is stated in the counter-affidavit with regard to the harassment said to have been caused by the respondent. It is well settled that in the absence of any pleadings, the parties are not permitted to put forth any case other than those which have been raised in the pleadings. Nothing has been said in the counter-affidavit that the respondent has ill-treated his wife Dhanalakshmi or that the respondent was responsible for the death of his wife. Hence, this contention has no merits.

13. Mr.R.Subramaniam next urged that the appellants have got sufficient means and capacity to bring up the child. I am unable to accept this contention as well. The respondent is employed in the Tamil Nadu Civil Supply Corporation and is earning Rs.1,200 per month. Being the natural guardian having love and affection with the minor, besides sufficient monetary sources to bring up the minor child, the custody of the minor was ordered in his favour by the court below. The appellants are not financially sound to bring up the minor. There is nothing to show or seen from the counter-affidavit that the appellants are under affluent circumstances. A specific averment has been raised by the respondent in paragraph 5 of his petition that the appellants are very poor and have no means of livelihood and that the respondent alone is fit to have the custody of the minor child and to maintain it. Nowhere in the counter-affidavit it is stated that the appellants are in affluent circumstances and they have sufficient means to bring up the child. The additional counter-affidavit is also very silent on this aspect. On the other hand, respondent has clearly stated in his petition that he is working as a Helper in the Tamil Nadu Civil Supply Corporation and is earning Rs.1,200 per month and he can properly bring up the child and that he being the father, as the natural guardian has no adverse interest and that the interest and welfare of the child will be protected by him as the natural guardian.

14. Next, Mr.R.Subramaniam contended that the court below ought to have considered the agreement executed by the respondent on 30.5.1990 wherein he undertook to provide maintenance as well as the ancestral properties to the minor child, which should be brought up by the appellants, and in the circumstance, the court below ought to have held that the respondent is estopped from claiming custody of the minor child. There is nothing to show that this point has been argued before the learned District Judge. Hence, I am of the view, the appellants are not entitled to raise this point in this Court when the same has not been argued in the court below. Even otherwise, I am of the view, the said point now argued for the first time is not germane to the point involved in this appeal. Further, this is not forum to decide such a dispute.

15. Lastly, it was argued by the learned counsel for the appellants, that the welfare of the minor will be better with the appellants. I am unable to accept the said contention as well. There is absolutely no circumstance which warrants deprivation of parental rights of the father. It is not proved by the appellants that the father does suffer from any circumstance which would deprive his parental right. The mere fact that the appellants, being grand parents, are much attached to the minor is not at all a ground to negative the claim of the father, the natural guardian. In any event, such custody cannot have any preference to the legitimate right of the natural father. It is also not proved in this case that the respondent has shown any lack of interest in the minor. If that is so, that will be a circumstance, which will have a bearing on the question of interest and welfare of the minor. In the absence of proof in that context, in my opinion, the custody of the minor cannot be denied to the father. The interest of the infant will be saved if the infant is in the custody of natural father, lest the child will forget the face of the father for ever. There are no indications in this case which are likely to unfit the respondent to bring up the small boy. The respondent seems to be anxious to have his own child with him in order to properly look after the child and also to provide further education. The feelings between the parties being what they are, I think it is also natural for the father to feel that if the minor child continues to live with its maternal grand parents, it may be brought up to date the father or to have adverse inference against him at a later stage. This, in my opinion, is not desirable. In the absence of any positive proof that the father has suffered any disqualification from being the guardian and custodian of the minor child, the father alone will be the fit and proper person to have the child's custody. Thus, on a consideration of the entire facts and circumstances of the case and also the law on the subject, I am of the clear view, that the respondent/father alone is the fit and proper person to have the custody of his child. I am also of the view that the welfare of the child will be amply protected only if the child is allowed to be in the custody of its father atleast from now. No other points were argued by both side.

16. For all the fore-going reasons, I confirm the order of the court below and dismiss the appeal. However, there will be no order as to costs. I make it clear that the appellants being the grand parents are entitled to have the custody of the minor child on festive occasions and also during school holidays as directed by the court below. The parties will sink their differences and will have a good relationship at least hereafter in the interest of the minor child. Time for delivery one week

Held: The tribunal has found, after discussing the evidence on record that the evidence is totally insufficient to hold that the charges are proved. Case referred to:

Bharat Iron Works v. Bhagubhai, A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 98. [Para 6]

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorari calling for the records of the first respondent in Petition No.83 of 1990 in Ind.No.62 of 1982, dated 31.1.1992 and quash the same.

Mrs. Bhagirathi Narayanan, for Petitioner.

ORDER: The petitioner filed an application under Sec.33(2)(b) of the Industrial Disputes Act for approval of the order of dismissal passed by the petitioner against the second respondent herein, who is a driver for act of misconduct. According to the petitioner, the second respondent drove the bus in a rash and negligent manner and caused an accident whereby two persons were killed and one person was seriously injured. According to the second respondent, the accident took place not an account of any negligence on his part but when he was driving the bus along the left side of the road a buffalo crossed the road all on a sudden and he applied the brakes in order to avert dashing against it. At that time, a motor-cyclist and a scooterist, who were coming in the opposite direction were riding their vehicles rashly and negligently and when the buffalo hit against the motor cyclist, he fell down and he was caught under the bus. The buffalo's horn was broken and fell on the road. It is also the case of the driver that the negligence was only on the part of the motor cyclist and scooterist and he had been driving the vehicle carefully in accordance with the road rules.

2. In the domestic enquiry held by the petitioner, the only witness examined by the management was an Engineer by name Ganesan to whom the conductor of the bus was said to have given a report as soon as the accident took place on 15.10.1989. It is stated by the said Engineer that when he got the report of accident, he went to the spot and saw the tyre marks the road and according to him, the driver would have turned the bus to the right and he would not have applied the brakes as stated by him. According to the engineer's evidence, the bus was stopped on the right side of the road and the dead bodies were lying there near the bus. No other person who could have given evidence about the accident was examined.

3. The conductor of the bus was not examined as a witness. He was a person present at the spot of the accident and he could have given direct evidence as to how an accident happened. Apart from the conductor, there was another person who had witnessed the accident as is evident from the first information report given to the police. One Vijayagopal son of Viswanatha Konar claimed to have come driving a TVS 50 and he was going from west to east at some distance behind the scooter and the motor cycle and witnessed the accident. He gave information to the police even before the petitioner's people went there. He could have been examined as a witness. Instead of doing so, the management relied only on the evidence of the Engineer, who was not an eye witness. The Engineer was only drawing inferences from the tyre marks on the road and other physical features.

4. It is contended vehemently that the fact that the bus stopped on the right side of the road and the Engineer was not cross-examined by the driver as regards the van coming from the opposite direction will show that a prima facie case has been made out against the driver. According to learned counsel it is sufficient for an applicant under Sec.33(2)(b) of the Act to make out a prima facie case for passing of an order of dismissal. According to her, in this case the evidence on record is more than ample to justify the same.

5. The tribunal has found, after discussing the evidence on record, that the evidence is totally insufficient to hold that the charges are proved. Thus, the tribunal has considered the evidence on record and come to the conclusion that the findings recorded by the domestic enquiry officer are perverse. That, the tribunal is entitled to do.

6. Reliance is placed on the judgment in Bharat Iron Works v. Bhagubhai, A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 98. The Supreme Court held that there is no defect in procedure in a domestic enquiry against an employee, the tribunal, while granting or withholding permission under Sec.33 does not sit as a court of appeal, weighing or reappreciating the evidence for itself but only examines the finding of the enquiry officer on the evidence in the domestic enquiry as it is, in order to find out either whether there is a prima facie case or if the findings are perverse. Thus, the Supreme Court has held that the tribunal is entitled to consider whether the finding of the domestic enquiry officer is perverse or not. The judgment really does not in any way support the petitioner herein. In this case, the tribunal has further taken into account all the relevant facts and come to the conclusion that the finding of the domestic enquiry officer is perverse.

7. The order of the tribunal does not suffer from any error apparent on the face of the record and does not warrant interference under Art.226 of the Constitution of India.

8. The writ petition is dismissed.

(A) Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Sec.35 - Scope of - "Same transaction" - Transactions if should be under one document only.

Sec.35 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplates 'same transaction' and not 'same instrument'. To be the same transactions, the transaction need not necessarily be under one document only. [Paras 14 & 17]

(B) Evidence Act (I of 1872), Secs.107 and 108 - Effect of - Burden of proof that a person is alive - When shifted to person affirming it.

A combined effect of Secs.107 and 108 of the Evidence Act would show that it is only upon proof that a person concerned has not been heard of for seven years by those who would have naturally heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that he is alive is shifted to the person who affirms that he is alive [Para 19]

JUDGMENT: The plaintiff Indirani Ammal, who has filed a suit for partition, since she is not satisfied with the decree passed partially has filed this appeal.

2. The plaintiff filed the suit alleging as follows: The plaintiff is the daughter of one Thayarammal by her husband Ezhumalai. About 25 years ago Thayarammal left her husband and came to live with one P.V.Gopalan Nair as his mistress. The plaintiff was brought up by them and she was living with them till her marriage. First defendant was born to Thayarammal and Gopalan Nair. Plaintiff Schedule item 1 house property was owned by the plaintiff's mother Thayarammal and Gopalan Nair which has been purchased by them under Ex.A-1 Sale Deed, dated 19.4.1974. The plaintiff item 2 land measuring 1.09 acres was owned and possessed by Thayarammal and first defendant which has been purchased by them under Ex.A-2 Registered Sale Deed dated 27.1.1972. Thayarammal was thus entitled to a moiety in each of the said properties. Thayarammal pre-deceased Gopalan Nair on 10.10.1975. She left behind the plaintiff and the first defendant as her heirs. Gopalan Nair was not married to Thayarammal and she was only her paramour. He also died on 1.8.1978. Both the plaintiff and the first defendant as the heirs of Thayarammal inherited her right to moiety in both the properties. The plaintiff became entitled to 1/4th share in the said properties and the first defendant became entitled to 1/4th share in the first item and 3/4th share in second item. Thayarammal had left a fixed deposit amount of Rs.10,000, viz., The third item in the plaintiff schedule with the second defendant Bank. The plaintiff became entitled to a moiety in this deposit amount also. While so the plaintiff learnt that Gopalan Nair had executed a settlement deed in favour of the first defendant on 24.10.1975 purporting to settle the entire first item house. Since Gopalan Nair was entitled to only a moiety in the said property he was not competent to execute a settlement deed in respect of the other moiety which was owned and possessed by Thayarammal. The settlement deed is void in so far as the plaintiff's 1/4th share is concerned. Since it is no longer possible to be a co-owner with the first defendant the plaintiff had to file a suit for partition of her shares in the three items of properties. She has also prayed for mesne profits in respect of the first item of properties for the past three years.

3. The first defendant resisting the suit contended in her written statement that her father Gopalan Nair got Rs.10,00,000 in a lottery and with that amount he purchased the suit item 1 in the name of himself and Thayarammal. The purchase in the name of Thayarammal also will not confer any beneficial interest on her and Gopalan Nair had absolute right to settle this property. Gopalan Nair settled this property upon this defendant who is his daughter out of love and affection. Just three days after the settlement on this defendant, due to the persuasion of herself and her husband

Gopalan Nair settled another house property at No.4/1, Eswaran Koil Street, Gowripet, Avadi, Madras, worth about Rs.75,000 on 27.10.1975 in favour of the plaintiff. In view of the fact that the plaintiff was brought up by Gopalan Nair as a sort of family arrangement he settled on her substantial property. For the third item fixed deposit amount also Gopalan Nair did not intend to confer any right on Thayarammal and this defendant was made nominee for that amount and only she is entitled to this amount and the plaintiff cannot have any claim in it. This defendant is not liable to pay any mesne profits to the plaintiff.

4. The second defendant Bank filed a written statement only stating that with regard to third item deposit of Rs.10,000 it would abide by the orders of the court.

5. The trial court on consideration of the evidence adduced in the case held that in all the three items Thayarammal had beneficial interest and it rejected the case of the first defendant that Gopalan Nair alone had right in them. It further held that subsequent to the settlement deed dated 24.10.1975 in favour of the first defendant in respect of the first item of suit property, Gopalan Nair has executed another settlement deed Ex.B-1, dated 28.10.1975 in respect of another house in favour of the plaintiff and the plaintiff has elected to be satisfied with that settlement deed in her favour and not to claim any share in the suit schedule first item and therefore the settlement deed Ex.A-5 is valid and binding on the plaintiff. It also held that it must be presumed that Gopalan Nair was married Thayarammal. On these findings the trial Court held that the plaintiff is not entitled to any share in the first item property but she is entitled to 1/6th share in the second item and 1/3rd share in the third item.

6. The two questions that arise for consideration in this appeal are:

- i. Whether the finding of the trial Court that the settlement deed Ex.A-5 is valid is not correct?
- ii. Whether the first finding of the trial Court that Gopalan Nair was the husband of Thayarammal also is not correct?

7. The facts not disputed are, the plaintiff was born to Thayarammal through her father Ezhumalai and when she was an infant (3 years) Thayarammal left Ezhumalai with the plaintiff came to Gopalan Nair and lived with him as a wife. There is no evidence as to whether Ezhumalai was heard thereafter excepting that of the plaintiff as P.W.1 that she had seen Ezhumalai in her 10th year. It is not in dispute that Gopalan Nair in a lottery got a sum of Rs.10,00,000 and with that sum he purchased properties both in his name and in the name of Thayarammal and in the joint names of both of them.

8. The first item of suit schedule is a house property purchased in the name of Thayarammal and Gopalan Nair under Ex.A-1 dated 19.4.1972. Another property has been purchased in the name of Gopalan Nair alone under two sale deeds dated 7.12.1969 and 31.5.1971. Gopalan Nair has executed a settlement deed on 24.10.1975 in respect of item I i.e. the property purchased under Ex.A-1 in favour of the first defendant under Ex.A-5 and he executed another settlement deed Ex.B-1 on 28.10.1975, in respect of the other house property, i.e. the property purchased under two sale deeds dated 7.12.1969 and 31.5.1979 in favour of the plaintiff.

9. It is in evidence that Thayarammal died on 10.10.1975. Therefore, it is seen that the abovesaid settlement deeds have been executed soon after her death. Quite possibly Gopalan Nair wanted to make sure that both the first defendant-his own daughter and also the plaintiff who had been brought up by him as his own daughter had separate houses independently free from any dispute or trouble and therefore he executed Ex.B-1 settlement deed in favour of the plaintiff in respect of the house purchased in his name, in favour of the first defendant and Ex.A-5 settlement deed in favour of the first defendant in respect of the house purchased in his name and in the name of Thayarammal.

10. According to the first defendant, under a family arrangement Gopalan Nair executed those two settlement deeds. While Ex.A-5 has been executed on 24.10.1975 in favour of the first defendant Ex.B-1 has been executed just three days after, i.e. on 28.10.1975. It is the evidence of the plaintiff that she has not raised any objection with regard to the settlement Ex.A-5 until the time of the death of Gopalan Nair. It is her further evidence that after the settlement deeds for six months Gopalan Nair was with the first defendant in the Annamalaipuram house which has been settled on the first defendant thereafter for six months he was living with the plaintiff in Avadi house (which has been settled on the plaintiff); and then he went to Kerala and there he died. It may be recalled that both the houses have been purchased by Gopalan Nair only with his own funds. These facts probabilise that it was under some family arrangements as contended by the first defendant these two settlement deeds were executed.

11. Besides the defendant as D.W.1. D.Ws.2 Batcha Mohideen and D.W.1 Gabriel also have given evidence that under an arrangement arrived at in the family in which the plaintiff as well as her husband also participated Gopalan Nair executed, the two settlement deeds. D.W.2 is the attestor and D.W.3 is the writer of both the settlement deeds. The plaintiff (P.W.1) has admitted in her evidence that it is only under Ex.B-1 she is in enjoyment of the Avadi house.

12. The trial Court seems to think that there is no sufficient evidence to show that there was family arrangement but however it took the view that the evidence and the circumstances show that the plaintiff elected to be satisfied with the Avadi house settled in her favour and not to claim any right in the other Annamalaipuram house. It appears the trial Court did not believe the evidence regarding the alleged family arrangement mainly for the reasons that D.Ws.1 to 3 have stated that the plaintiff executed a release deed, but no such release deed has been filed. But I do not think that for that reason alone the evidence of D.Ws. can be rejected. There may be some discrepancies in their evidence. But I do not see any material discrepancy that affects the voracity of their evidence. In my view, the circumstances in the case are tell-tale that it was only under some agreed family arrangement the settlement deeds were executed and the plaintiff took possession of the Avadi house.

13. It is argued by Mr.N.Varadarajan, learned counsel for the appellant-plaintiff that no mention whatsoever has been made either in Ex.B-1 on in A-5 about any family arrangement or that the plaintiff elected to have the Avadi house. That may be so. But in the circumstances Gopalan Nair might have thought that such averments, especially when it is he who purchased both the houses and he is giving them are not necessary in the documents.

14. It is then contended that only in the case of same transaction the question of election under Sec.35 of the Transfer of Property Act arises, but in this case there are two transactions one under Ex.A-5 and another under Ex.B-1. But to be the same transaction the transaction need not necessarily be under one document only. As pointed out above whereas Ex.A-5 has been executed on 24.10.1975. Ex.B-1 has been executed just three days after, i.e., on 28.10.1975. Gopalan Nair has died on 1.8.1975, i.e., more than 2 1/2 years after the settlement deeds and as pointed out above, the plaintiff when he was alive, did not raise any objection whatsoever regarding Ex.A-5.

15. Mr.Varadarajan, would further submit that whereas the value of the Avadi property as seen from the value stated in Ex.B-1 is only Rs.40,000 the value of the Annamalaipuram property as seen from the value stated in Ex.A-5 is Rs.1,25,000 and this shows that the plaintiff would not have elected as contended. But here it is to be again recalled that both the properties were purchased by Gopalan Nair, but for the settlement deed Ex.B-1 will not have any right in the Avadi property and in the Annamalaipuram property she would have had a share only in respect of the share of her mother Thayarammal in which share the first defendant will also be entitled to a share. From all these it appears to me very clear that both Exs.A-5 and B-1 has been executed as parts of the same transaction and the plaintiff had elected to be satisfied with the Avadi house property.

16. Mr.Varadarajan on a decision in Ramayya and another v. Mahalakshmi, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 357, wherein it has been held that:

"Although the doctrine of election provides that a man is not at liberty to take under a Deed or Will and at the same time to dispute the operation of that Deed or Will in other respects, yet a person who accepts the benefit under a Will is not precluded from disputing some transaction in which the testator was engaged long before his death and which is not the subject of the Will at all".

It is apparent even from the passage quoted above that the facts in that case are entirely different from the facts in our case. Therein the dispute was in respect of a transaction long before the testator's death and therefore it was held that no election under the Will can be pleaded. Hence this judgment is of no help to the plaintiff.

17. Mr.Varadarajan cited another decision also in Makineni Virayya v. Mad.Amianchi Bapayya, (1945)2 M.L.J. 208: A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 492, wherein too the facts are entirely different from the facts in the present case. This is clear from the following passage in the judgment:

"On the facts of this case, there can be no question of election in the strict sense of the doctrine, for at the time when the plaintiff is supposed to have made his election he could not have given up the property which he now claims as he became entitled to it only long after".

Mr. Varadarajan however further submits that this judgment would also show that the person who is said to have elected must have got the benefit under the same instrument and in this connection he points out a sentence in the judgment which reads:

"And moreover, for the purpose of this doctrine the person sought to be precluded from setting up his right must have taken some benefit directly under the instrument".

But this has been said in the circumstances of that case where there was only one instrument. The judgment does not say that there can be one instrument only. Sec.35 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplates "same transaction" and not "same instrument". In Mulla's Transfer of Property Act, Seventh Edition, at page 159 under the heading 'same transaction' it is stated that 'election may arise when the two donations are conferred by two different instruments, if the two instruments are used to carry out one transaction'. In consideration of the said facts and circumstances in the case I am satisfied that the lower court has correctly held that the plaintiff has elected to be satisfied with the execution of the settlement deed Ex.B-1 in her favour in respect of the Avadi house and not to claim any right in the Annamalaiapuram property settled under Ex.A-5 in favour of the first defendant.

18. Coming to the question as to whether Thayarammal was the wife of Gopalan Nair as held by the Court below, Mr. Varadarajan would contend that it is nobody's case that Ezhumalai-father of the plaintiff died and unless the husband is dead a wife cannot marry a second time and therefore it cannot be believed that Thayarammal had married Gopalan Nair. There is no doubt that there is considerable force in this argument of the learned counsel.

19. It is contended on behalf of the first defendant that under Sec.108 of the Evidence Act if a person is not heard of for seven years he must be presumed to have died and since Ezhumalai had not been heard of for the last 20 years he must be presumed to have died. As per Sec.107 of the Evidence Act "when the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is shown that he was alive within thirty years, the burden of proving that he is dead is on the person who affirms it". Then Sec.108 states that "provided that when the question is whether a man is alive or dead and it is proved that he has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that he is alive is shifted to the person who affirms it". A combined reading of these two sections would show that it is only upon proof that a person concerned has not been heard of for seven years by those who would have naturally heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that he is alive is shifted to the person who affirms it that he is alive.

20. Mr. Varadarajan would rightly point out that there is no evidence whatever to show that for seven years Ezhumalai was not heard of by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive. The plaintiff (P.W.1) alone has just stated that she has seen her father Ezhumalai when she was 10 years only

(என் அப்பா ஏழுமலையை நான் 10 வயதில் பார்த்திருக்கிறேன்)

From this alone it cannot be stated that it has been proved that Ezhumalai has not been heard of for seven years by those who would have naturally heard of him if he had been alive. It follows therefore that there is no burden on the first defendant to show that he is alive. In these circumstances, it cannot be held that it can be presumed that Ezhumalai was not heard of Gopalan Nair married Thayarammal. In those circumstances, it is difficult to believe that Gopalan Nair married Thayarammal.

21. No one has spoken to any such marriage. The only argument is that it is even admitted by the plaintiff herself that Gopalan Nair and Thayarammal had been living as husband and wife throughout and from this it could be presumed that there was marriage. That would arise only in case if Ezhumalai had died. May be in the reply notice sent by the first defendant's counsel to the plaintiff's counsel it is stated that Thayarammal became the wife of Gopalan Nair in or about 1952. But this version by the first defendant herself will not help her to establish that there was any marriage between Gopalan Nair and Thayarammal. In Ex.A-1 sale deed dated 19.4.1972 executed by one Saroja Somayaji in favour of Gopalan Nair and Thayarammal it is mentioned that Thayarammal is the wife of Gopalan Nair. May be thinking that Thayarammal is the wife of Gopalan Nair, the vendor mentioned so in the document.

22. But in the sale deeds Ex.A-2 dated 27.1.1972 and Ex.A-3 sale deed dated 10.2.1976 by Gopalan Nair Thayarammal has been referred to as Gopalan Nair's 'Abhimana Bariyal' (அபிமான பரியல்). As regards this word 'Abhimana Bariyal' whereas it is contended on behalf of the plaintiff that it refers to concubine it is contended by the first defendants that it refers to wife. In this connection, Mr. Varadarajan, learned counsel appearing for the appellant-plaintiff cited a Division Bench decision of this Court in Mohan and another v. Santha Bai Ammal and others, (1989)2 L.W. 197, wherein it is categorically ruled that the word 'Abhimana Manaivi' does not refer to a wife and it means only the 'wife of affection'.

A reference in Winslow's 'A comprehensive Tamil and English Dictionary' at page 27 would show that the meaning of 'Abhimana Bariyal' which means 'Abhimana Manaivi' would only mean someone other than the real wife and that could be concubine. If a wife is to be referred to only as wife (Manaivi) and there is absolutely no necessity to refer to her as 'abhimana manaivi' or 'abhimana bariyal'. This itself would show that an 'abhimana bariyal' is not a wife. It is therefore clear that it cannot be held that Thayarammal was the wife of Gopalan Nair as the trial Court did.

23. Now in as much as Thayarammal was not the wife of Gopalan Nair as held above, the plaintiff will be entitled to 1/4th share in the second item and half share in the third item.

24. In the result, the appeal is partly allowed, the judgment and decree of the court below are confirmed as regards the first item property is concerned and it is modified as regards items 2 and 3 i.e. the plaintiff will be entitled to 1/4th share in the second item and 1/2 share in the third item and not 1/6th share in the item 2 and 1/3rd share in item 3 as held by the trial court. The appeal is thus disposed of. There will be no order as to costs.

17th August, 1992.

Tvl.Pandiyam Roadways Corporation Ltd., Madurai ...Petitioner
v.

Tvl.Flower Transports (P) Ltd., Rajapalayam and others ...Respondents.

(A) Motor Vehicles Act (LIX of 1988), Sec.71(1) - State Transport Appellate Tribunal granting 'permit to ply' buses between two points not falling within approved scheme - Petitioner, State Transport undertaking objecting to the grant of such permit - Filing writ petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India - Maintainability - Constitution of India (1950), Art.226.

(B) Motor Vehicles Act (LIX of 1988), Sec.80(3) - Whether contains a special rule for stage carriage permits - Application for inclusion of a new route or alteration of a route whether will not lie in the case of a stage carriage permit.

(C) Tamil Nadu Motor Vehicles Rules (1940), Rule 3(e) - Aggregate distance of town service or city service route - Permit containing two routes - Distance whether to be computed with reference to each route.

Held:- The order made by the tribunal granting variation of permit does not in any manner affect any right of the petitioner (a State Transport Undertaking) herein. The route does not fall within the approved scheme. The petitioner has no grievance as such against the order. In this case, the tribunal has found that the grant of the application made by the first respondent will be most beneficial to the travelling public and no inconvenience will be caused to them in any manner. Hence, it must be held that the petitioner is not a person aggrieved and it is not entitled to maintain a writ against the order of the tribunal.

The language of sub-sec.(3) of Sec.80 is significant. It can be analysed as follows:- An application to vary the conditions can be made (1) by inclusion of a new route or routes or a new area of (2) by altering the route or routes or areas covered by it or (3) by increasing the number of trips above the specified maximum or (4) by variation, extension or curtailment of the route or routes or the area specified. As regards the four alternatives set out above all of them will apply to a stage carriage permit. Alternatives 1 and 2 will have application to permits other than stage carriage permit. No doubt, the fourth alternative may apply to some extent to contract carriage permit; but generally such permits are issued for a Stage or throughout the country. The Parliament has deliberately used the expression 'or' or a conjunctive and not as a disjunctive. Hence, there is no scope for contending that the sub-section contains a special rule for stage carriage permits and a general rule for all the permits with the result the special will prevail over the general. Even assuming that the provision for a stage carriage permit is a special rule, unless there is a repugnancy between the general rule and the special rule, there is no question of the special overruling the general. If both can stand together, then the rule that 'special rule excludes general' cannot be invoked. In view of the views expressed by Ramamurthy, J. in Natesa Mudaliar v. Thanapal Bus Service, A.I.R. 1964 Mad. 136, by Veerasami, J. in Swamy Motor Transport (P) Ltd. v. Raman and Raman (P) Ltd., (1965)1 M.L.J. 594, and the decision in Narayana Reddy v. Secretary Regional Transport Authority, Cudappah and another, (1960)2 An.W.R. 91, it must be held that the first part of the section will also apply to all permits including stage carriage permit and the only exclusion is a temporary permit. There is no warrant for applying the maxim generalis specialibus non derogant.

Rule 3(e) of the Tamil Nadu Motor Vehicles Rules refers only to the aggregate distance of a town service or city service route. If a permit covers two routes, each of them shall not exceed 30 kms. There can be no dispute that a permit can cover more than one route. Sec.70(1)(a) and Sec.72(2)(i) of the Act use the expression 'route or routes'. Hence, aggregate distance referred to the Rule 3(e) must be computed with reference to each route. Moreover, in this case another permit has been issued to the 1st respondent to run a town service between Srivilliputhur and Sivakasi. Rule 3(e) does not refer to the aggregate of the distance covered by two permits and hence there is no violation of the rule in this case.

V.T. Gopalan, for Respondent No.1.

V.R. Rajasekaran, for Respondent No.2.

ORDER: The petitioner is a State Transport Undertaking operating number of stage carriage services in the entire Madurai District and also on the adjoining inter-district and inter-State routes. The first respondent is a stage carriage operator, operating on the Srivilliputhur Town Service route between Srivilliputhur and Puthur (via.) Rajapalayam, Seithur, Muhavoor and Dhalavoipuram. It made an application for variation of permit conditions involving

- 1) conversion of the route from town service into mofussil service;
- 2) extension of route from Srivilliputhur to Sivakasi by means of 12 singles; and
- 3) reduction of:
 - (a) 10 singles from Rajapalayam to Dhalavoipuram; and
 - (b) 6 singles from Dhalavoipuram to Puthur.

The Regional Transport Authority/second respondent rejected the application holding that the advantage of the proposal is outweighed by greater disadvantages and that the application is not in public interest. An appeal was preferred by the first respondent to the tribunal/third respondent. 2. When the appeal was taken up for consideration, counsel for the first respondent made the following endorsement:

"This appellant is not pressing for conversion of town service into mofussil service and prays that the new sector sought for, i.e., Srivilliputhur to Sivakasi may be granted as a town service and by way of an independent route in the existing permit instead of by way of extension as this course will obviate the objection of the Corporation that if converted into a mofussil route, the approved scheme Madurai to Shencottah published on 28.5.1975 will be a bar."

Obviously, the endorsement was made in order to avert the objection raised by the petitioner herein to the grant of conversion, as the route, if converted, would fall within an approved scheme. Even after the aforesaid endorsement was made modifying the prayer, the petitioner put forward several objections to the grant of the application of the petitioner. An objection was raised by the first respondent that the petitioner had no locus standi to raise any objection to the application of the first respondent and the only purpose for which notice was issued to the petitioner was to get the details of approved schemes. The tribunal overruled the said contention of the first respondent and considered the objections raised by the petitioner herein. However, the tribunal rejected the objections of the petitioner on merits and allowed the appeal filed by the first respondent, on the following terms:

"The appellant is permitted to ply nine singles between Puthur and Srivilliputhur instead of eight singles, and eight independent singles is granted between Srivilliputhur and Sivakasi. The permit holder is allowed to do one additional singles from Puthur to Rajapalayam in order to maintain the present night halt. Curtailment of two singles between Puthur and Rajapalayam, curtailment of three singles from Dhalavoipuram to Srivilliputhur and curtailment of one single from Dhalavoipuram to Rajapalayam are allowed. The lower authority is directed to issue another permit to the bus of the appellant to do eight independent singles between Srivilliputhur to Sivakasi as a multi-pronged route, and the same shall be issued within a month from the date of the receipt of the records without fail. After the issuance of the abovesaid permit by the Regional Transport Authority, Kamarajar District at Virudhunagar, the Secretary to the Regional Transport Authority, shall fix suitable timings within two months. The conversion of the route from town service to mofussil, prayed for in the application is rejected. The pattern of trips shall be as follows: The bus of the appellant shall depart from Rajapalayam in the morning as at present and do its first single between Rajapalayam and Srivilliputhur singles 2 to 5 shall be done between Srivilliputhur and Puthur. Thereafter, the appellant shall do eight continuous independent singles, i.e., singles 6 to 13 between Srivilliputhur and Sivakasi. Thereafter singles 14 to 18 shall be done between Srivilliputhur and Puthur continuously and the 19th single shall be done from Puthur to Rajapalayam and the bus shall halt for the night at Rajapalayam."

3. Aggrieved by the said order of the tribunal, the petitioner has filed this writ petition challenging the same. A preliminary objection is raised by learned counsel for the first respondent that the petitioner is not an aggrieved person and he is not entitled to maintain the writ petition. It is also argued by learned counsel that the petitioner had no right to raise objections even before the Regional Transport Authority or before the State

Transport Appellate Tribunal. According to him, the policy under the new Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') has changed from that which prevailed under the old Act. It is pointed out by him the grant of permits has been considerably liberalised and there is no scope for objections by other parties. It is also submitted that the only particulars which should be furnished by the petitioner Corporation when applications for grant of permits or variation of conditions of permit are considered, are the details of the approved schemes. Beyond that, the petitioner Corporation has no right, according to him, to raise any objections on the merits of the application. Reliance is placed on the following passages in the judgment of the Supreme Court in Mithilesh Garg v. Union of India and others, etc., A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 443:

"5. A comparative reading of the provisions of the Act and the old Act makes it clear that the procedure for grant of permits under the Act has been liberalised to such an extent that an intended operator can get a permit for asking irrespective of the number of operators already in the field. Under Sec.57 read with Sec.47(1) of the old Act an application for a stage carriage permit was to be published and kept for inspection in the office of the Regional Transport Authority so that the existing operators could file representations/objections against the said application. The application, along with objections, was required to be decided in a quasi-judicial manner. Sec.47(3) of the old Act further permitted the imposition of limit on the grant of permits in any regional, area or on a particular route. It is thus obvious that the main features of Chapter IV "control of transport vehicles" under old Act were as under:

1. The applications for grant of permits were published and were made available in the office of the Regional Transport Authority so that the existing operators could file representations;
2. The applications for grant of permits along with the representations were to be decided in quasi-judicial manner; and
3. The Regional Transport Authority was to decide the applications for grant of permits keeping in view the criteria laid down in Sec.47(1) and also keeping in view the limit fixed under Sec.47(3) of the Act. An application for grant of permit beyond the limited number fixed under Sec.47(3) was to be rejected summarily. 6. The Parliament in its wisdom has completely effaced the above features. The scheme envisaged under Secs.47 and 57 of the old Act. The right of existing - operators to file objections and the provision to impose limit on the number of permits have been taken away. There is no similar provision to that of Sec.47 and Sec.57 under the Act. The statement of objects and reasons of the Act shows that the purpose of bringing in the Act was to liberalise the grant of permits. Sec.71(1) of the Act provides that while considering an application for a stage carriage permit the Regional Transport Authority shall have regard to the objects of the Act. Sec.80(2), which is the harbinger of Liberalisation, provides that a Regional Transport Authority shall not ordinarily refuse to grant on application for permit of any kind made at any time under the Act. There is no provision under the Act like that of Sec.47(3) of the old Act and as such no limit for the grant of permits can be fixed under the Act. There is, however, a provision under Sec.71(3)(a) of the Act under which a limit can be fixed for the grant of permits in respect of the routes which are within a town having population of more than five lakhs.

More operators mean healthy-competition and efficient transport system. Overcrowded buses, passengers standing in the aisle, clinging to the bus-doors and even sitting on the roof-tops are some of the common sights in this country. Moreover one finds a bus which has noisy engine, old upholstery, uncomfortable seats and continuous emission of black-smoke from the exhaust pipe. It is, therefore, necessary that there should be plenty of operators on every route to provide ample choice to the commuter-public to board the vehicle of their choice and patronise the operator who is providing the best service. Even otherwise, the liberal policy is likely to help in the elimination of corruption and favouritism in process of granting permits. Restricted licensing under the old Act led to the concentration of business in the hands of few persons thereby giving rise to a kind of monopoly, adversely affecting the public interest. The apprehension of the petitioners that too many operators on a route are likely to affect adversely the interest of weaker section of the profession is without any basis. The transport business is bound to be ironed-out ultimately by the rationale of demand and supply. Cost of a vehicle being as it is the business requires huge investment. The intending operators are likely to be conscious of the economics underlying the profession. Only such number of vehicles would finally remain in operation on a particular route as are economically viable. In any case the transport system in a state is meant for the benefit and convenience of the public. The policy to grant permits liberally under the Act is directed towards the said goal.

It is thus a guaranteed right of every citizen whether rich or poor to take up and carry on, if he so wishes, the motor transport business. It is only the State which can impose reasonable restrictions within the ambit of Art.19(6) of the Constitution of India. Secs.47(3) and 57 of the old Act were some of the restrictions which were imposed by the State on the enjoyment of the right under Art.19(1)(g) so far as the motor transport business was concerned. The said restrictions have been taken away and the provisions of Secs.47(3) and 57 of the old Act have been repealed from the Statute Book: The Act provides liberal policy for the grant of permits to those who intend to enter the motor transport business. The provisions of the Act are in conformity with Art.19(1)(g) of the Constitution of India. The petitioners are asking this Court to do what the Parliament has undone. When the State has chosen not to impose any restriction under Art.19(6) of the Constitution of India in respect of motor transport business and has left the citizens to enjoy their right under Art.19(1)(g) there can be no cause for complaint by the petitioners."

4. According to learned counsel for the first respondent, notice was issued to the petitioner by the Regional Transport Authority and the objections raised by the petitioner were considered. According to him, Rules 136 and 141 of the Tamil Nadu Motor Vehicles Rules prescribe public hearing and hearing of representative or accredited agent. It is submitted by him that Rule 157(2)(a) of the said Rules provides for filing an appeal against an order granting or refusing to grant an extension or variation or curtailment of an existing route or area covered by a permit. It is contended that the petitioner had, therefore, a right to be heard by the Regional Transport Authority as well as the Appellate Tribunal. I am of the view that it is wholly unnecessary for me to decide the question whether the State Transport Undertaking had a right to be heard by the Regional Transport Authority or the tribunal. In the present case, the petitioner has been heard by both the Authorities. The objections raised by the petitioner have been overruled by the tribunal. Hence, the first respondent is not affected in any way by the tribunal allowing the petitioner to prefer its objections to the application made by the first respondent. It would be necessary to consider such a question in cases where the tribunal refuses to hear the State Transport Undertaking or other objectors and in cases where objections preferred by the objectors including the State Transport Undertaking are upheld. Hence, I do not propose to consider the said question here.

5. However, it is necessary to decide whether the petitioner is entitled to maintain the writ petition. The contention of the first respondent that the petitioner is not a person aggrieved and he cannot invoke the jurisdiction of this Court under Art.226 of the Constitution of India is well-founded. The order made by the tribunal does not in any manner affect any right of the petitioner herein. The route does not fall within the approved scheme. The petitioner has no grievance as such against the order. But, learned counsel for the petitioner contends that the tribunal has acted in contravention of the provisions of the Statute and the rules made thereunder. According to him, even a member of the public can bring to the notice of this Court under Art.226 of the Constitution a violation of statutory provision and get a direction that the statutory authority should comply with the statute and the rules made thereunder. It is rightly submitted by learned counsel for the first respondent that if the petitioner has filed the writ petition as a member of the public and if this matter is to be treated as a public interest litigation, then the test of public injury should be satisfied. It is submitted that in the present case, there is no such public injury and the petitioner cannot sustain the writ petition on the only ground that some provisions of the statute and the rules are violated.

6. In The Nagar Rice and Flour Mills v. Teekappa Gowda & Bros. and others, A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 246: (1970)2 S.C.J. 473, it was held that a rice mill owner had no locus standi to challenge under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, the setting up of a new rice mill by another, even if it was in contravention of Sec.8(3)(c) of the Rice Milling Industry (Regulation) Act, 1958, because no right vested in such a person was infringed. The position was reiterated in Nasbhai Motibhai Desai v. Roshan Kumar, Haji Bashir Ahmed and others, A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 578. It was held that a rival in trade, in that case a cinema theatre owner, had no locus standi to invoke the special jurisdiction under Art.226 of the Constitution of India.

7. Following the said rulings, a Full Bench of this Court held in M.L.Krishnamurthi v. The District Revenue Officer, Vellore, (1989)2L.W. 442, that an existing rice mill owner was not a person aggrieved, when permit or licence under the Rice Milling Industry (Regulation) Act was granted to another person, for entitling him to file a writ petition challenging the grant. In Mithilesh Garg v. Union of India and others, etc., A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 443, already referred to in this judgment, the Apex Court has quoted in extenso the observations made by Sarkaria, J. in Nasbhai Motibhai Desai v. Roshan Kumar, Haji Bashir Ahmed and others, A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 578, and reiterated the proposition.

8. Learned counsel for the petitioner places reliance on the decisions in Surendra Rao v. Regional Transport Authority, Gorakhpur, A.I.R. 1992 All. 211 and Quilon District Private Bus Operators' Association v. State Transport Appellate Tribunal, Ernakulam, A.I.R. 1992 Ker. 267. In the former case it is held that an existing operator has an alternative remedy of revision before the tribunal against the order of the Regional Transport Authority granting stage carriage permit to an applicant. That has no relevance in this case. In the latter case, it is held that any member of the public having sufficient interest can maintain an action for judicial redress for public injury arising from breach of public duty or violation of some provisions of the Constitution or the law and seek enforcement of such public duty and observance of such constitutional or legal provision. The sine qua non is public injury. Mere violation of a provision of law is not sufficient to enable the third party who is not aggrieved, to challenge the order in question. Hence, that judgment also does not help the petitioner.

9. If the petition is to be treated as a public interest litigation, it is necessary for the petitioner to establish that the impugned order causes injury to public interest. The following passage in the judgment of the Supreme Court in S.P.Gupta and others v. President of India and others, A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 149, is relevant:

"18. But there may be cases where the State or a public authority may act in violation of a constitutional or statutory obligation or fail to carry out such obligation, resulting in injury to public interest or what may conveniently be termed as public injury as distinguished from private injury." (Italics mine).

10. Again in Shri Sachidanand Pandey v. The State of West Bengal, A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1109, it is ruled thus:

"60. It is only when Courts are apprised of gross violation of fundamental rights by a group or a class action or when basic human rights are invaded or when there are complaints of such acts as shock the judicial conscience that the courts, especially this Court, should leave aside procedural shackles and hear such petitions and extend its jurisdiction under all available provisions for remedying the hardships and miseries of the needy, the underdog and the neglected. I will second to none in extending help when such help is required. But this does not mean that the doors of this Court are always open for anyone to walk in. It is necessary to have some self imposed restraint on public interest litigants."

11. Learned counsel for the petitioner relies on the following passage in the judgment in Bangalore Medical Trust v. B.S.Muddappa, A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 1902:

"36. Locus standi to approach by way of writ petition and refusal to grant relief in equity jurisdiction are two different aspects, may be with same result. One relates to maintainability of the petition and other to exercise of discretion. Law on the former has marched much ahead. Many milestones have been covered. The restricted meaning of aggrieved person and narrow outlook of specific injury has yielded in favour of broad and wide construction in wake of public interest litigation. Even in private challenge to executive or administration action having extensive fall out the dividing line between personal injury or loss and injury of a public nature is fast vanishing. Law has veered round from genuine grievance against order affecting prejudicially to sufficient interest in the matter. The rise in exercise of power by the executive and comparative decline in proper and effective administrative guidance is forcing citizens to espouse challenging with public interest flavour. It is too late in the day, therefore, to claim that petition filed by inhabitants of a locality whose park was converted into a nursing home had no cause to invoke equity jurisdiction of the High Court. In fact public spirited citizens having faith in rule of law are rendering great social and legal service by espousing cause of public nature. They cannot be ignored or overlooked on technical or conservative yardstick of the rule of locus standi or absence of personal loss or injury. Present day development of this branch of jurisprudence is towards freer movement both in nature of litigation and approach of the courts. Residents of locality seeking protection and maintenance of environment of their locality cannot be said to be busy bodies or interlopers. S.P. Gupta v. President of India, A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 149, Akhil Bhartiya Soshit Karmachari Sangh v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 298 and Fertilizer Corporation Kamgar Union v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 344. Even otherwise physical or economic injury may give rise to civil or criminal action but violation of rule of law either by ignoring or affronting individual or action of the executive in disregard of the provisions of law raises substantial issue of accountability of those entrusted with responsibility of the administration. It furnishes enough cause of action either for individual or community in general to approach by way of writ petition and the authorities cannot be permitted to seek shelter under cover of technicalities of locus standi nor they can be heard to plead for restraint in exercise of discretion as grave issues of public concern out weight such considerations."

That was a case in which conversion of a public park into a private nursing home was held to be illegal. It was a clear case of public injury. Hence, the observations of the Supreme Court made in the context of the facts of that case cannot help the petitioner herein.

12. In this case, the tribunal has found that the grant of the application made by the first respondent will be most beneficial to the travelling public and no inconvenience will be caused to them in any manner. The following passages in the order of the tribunal are relevant:

"17. At present, the appellant is plying eight singles between Puthur and Srivilliputhur, one single between Srivilliputhur and Rajapalayam, and single between Rajapalayam and Dhalavoipuram and three singles between Srivilliputhur and Dhalavoipuram. Out of the above, the appellant has prayed for reduction of 10 singles from Rajapalayam to Dhalavoipuram, and six singles from Dhalavoipuram to Puthur. In the sector between Seithur and Rajapalayam, six town buses are plying doing 98 singles and the occupancy ratio is 54%. In the sector between Dhalavoipuram and Seithur, 4 town buses are plying doing 70 singles and the occupancy ratio is 42%. In the sector between Dhalavoipuram and Puthur, 4 towns buses are plying doing 62 singles and their occupancy ratio is 51% only. On an appreciation of the pros and cons and in order to rationalise and make it more viable and also to provide maximum benefit to the travelling public, in my view, it would be expedient to make the sector Puthur to Srivilliputhur a straight route instead of small, independent sectors. Hence I am persuaded to hold that the existing two singles between Puthur and Rajapalayam and three singles between Dhalavoipuram and Rajapalayam and one single between Rajapalayam and Dhalavoipuram can be curtailed considering the poor occupancy ratio in those sectors. I am clearly of the opinion that no inconvenience will be caused to the travelling public and the other bus operators by doing so and the curtailment can be effectively compensated by straightening the sector between Puthur and Srivilliputhur by granting nine single between the sector, viz., Puthur to Rajapalayam may be granted in order to maintain the existing night halt.

18. In the sector between Srivilliputhur and Sivakasi only 11 buses are plying doing 134 singles and considering the occupancy ratio, viz., 94% which is extremely high, I am clearly of the opinion that there is sufficient justification to run more buses in that sector as that alone will help the travelling public to reach Sivakasi without any loss of time. Admittedly, Sivakasi is a big industrial town and there are number of match factories, and other factories and therefore running more buses will help the travelling public to reach Sivakasi conveniently and the workers to reach their factories punctually. On a careful analysis of the entire matter and on making a calculation of the timing that will be consumed and the maximum distance that can be covered in a day, viz., 500 km., I am persuaded to hold that the permit holder can be allowed to run eight independent singles between Srivilliputhur and Sivakasi and the same will be most beneficial to the travelling public."

Hence, I hold that the petitioner is not a person aggrieved and it is not entitled to maintain a writ against the order of the tribunal.

13. Even otherwise, the contentions urged by the petitioner are without any merit. It is argued that the application filed by the first respondent before the Regional Transport Authority is only for conversion of a route from town service into mofussil service and there is no application for grant of a new permit. It is contended that the modification in the prayer consequent on the endorsement made before the appellate tribunal does not fall within the scope of the petition filed before the Regional Transport Authority. It is submitted that the averments found in the application before the first authority do not support the prayer in the modified form. There is no substance in this contention. It is seen that in paragraph 2 of the application and column 13 of Form PVA attached to the application, it is stated that the vehicle is at present plying on the route Srivilliputhur to Puthur as town service and it is sought to be extended from Srivilliputhur to Sivakasi a distance of 20 Kms., by reducing 10 singles from Rajapalayam to Dhalavoipuram and 6 singles from Dhalavoipuram to Puthur to serve the public. The tribunal has rightly found that the averments in the application are sufficient to support the modified prayer.

14. The next contention is that under Sec.80(3) of the Act, there cannot be an application for inclusion of a new route or alteration of a route in the case of a stage carriage permit. According to learned counsel, with reference to a stage carriage permit, there can be only an application to vary the conditions by increasing the number of trips above the specified maximum or by the variation, extension or curtailment of the route or routes or the areas specified in the permit. It is necessary to extract the section in order to appreciate the contention. Sec.80 in so far as it is relevant, is as follows:

"80.(1) An application for a permit of any kind may be made at any time.

(a) A Regional Transport Authority shall not ordinarily refuse to grant an application for permit of any kind made at any time under this Act:

Provided that the Regional Transport Authority may summarily refuse the application if the grant of any permit in accordance with the application would have the effect of increasing the number of stage carriages as fixed and specified in a notification in the Official Gazette under clause (a) of sub-sec.(3) of Sec.71 or of contract carriages as fixed and specified in a notification in the Official Gazette under Clause (a) of sub-sec.(3) of Sec.74;

Provided further that where a Regional Transport Authority refuses an application for the grant of a permit of any kind under this Act, it shall give to the applicant in writing its reasons for the refusal of the same and an opportunity of being heard in the matter.

(3) An application to vary the conditions of any permit, other than a temporary permit, by the inclusion of a new route or routes or a new area or by altering the route or routes or area covered by it, or in the case of a stage carriage permit by increasing the number of trips above the specified maximum or by the variation, extension or curtailment of the route or routes or the area specified in the permit shall be treated as an application for the grant of a new permit:

Provided that it shall not be necessary so to treat an application made by the holder of stage carriage permit who provides the only service on any route to increase the frequency of the service so provided without any increase in the number of vehicles:

15. It is argued that the first part of sub-sec.(3) of Sec.80 of the Act which applies to any permit, other than a temporary permit is a general provision and the second part of the Sub-section, which applies to stage carriage permit, is a special provision and the rule that 'special will prevail over general' will apply. Reliance is placed on the judgment of the Supreme Court in J.K. Cotton Spinning and Weaving Mills Company Ltd. v. State of U.P. and others, A.I.R. 1961 S.C. 1170. The following passage is cited:

"(9) There will be complete harmony however if we hold instead that Clause 5(a) will apply in all other cases of proposed dismissal or discharge except where an inquiry is pending within the meaning of Clause 23. We reach the same result by applying another well known rule of construction that general provisions yield to special provisions. The learned Attorney-General seemed to suggest that while this rule of construction is applicable to resolve the conflict between the general provision in one Act and the special provision in another Act, the rule cannot apply in resolving a conflict between general and special provisions in the same legislative instrument. This suggestion does not find support in either principle or authority. The rule that general provisions should yield to specific provisions is not an arbitrary principle made by lawyers and judges but springs from the common understanding of men and women that when the same person gives two directions one covering a large number of matters in general and another to only some of them his intention is that these latter directions should prevail as regards these while as regards all the rest the earlier direction should have effect. In Pretty v. Solly, (1859) 53 E.R. 1032, quoted in Craies on Statute Law at p.206, 6th Edition) Romilly, M.R., mentioned the rule thus: "The rule is that whenever there is a particular enactment and a general enactment in the same statute and the latter, taken in its most comprehensive sense, would overrule the former, the particular enactment must be operative, and the general enactment must be taken to affect only the other parts of the statute to which it may properly apply.

The rule has been applied as between different provisions of the same statute in numerous cases some of which only need be mentioned: De Winton v. Brecon, (1858) 28 L.J.Ch. 598, Churchill v. Crease, (1889) 135 U.S. 255 and Carroll v. Greenwich Insurance Company, (1905) 199 U.S. 401."

16. It is, therefore, contended that the first part of the section under which variation of conditions of any permit be inclusion of new route or routes etc., will not apply in the case of a stage carriage permit with reference to which a special provision is made under the second part of the section. I do not agree with this contention. The language of the sub-section is very significant. It can be analysed as follows:

An application to vary the conditions can be made,

(1) by inclusion of a new route or routes or a new area;

or

(2) by altering the route or routes or areas covered by it;

or

(3) by increasing the number of trips above the specified maximum;

or

(4) by variation, extension or curtailment of the route or routes or the area specified.

As regards the four alternatives set out above, all of them will apply to a stage carriage permit. Alternatives 1 and 2 will have application to permits other than stage carriage permit. No doubt, the fourth alternative may apply to some extent to contract carriage permit; but generally such permits are issued for a Stage or throughout the country. The Parliament has deliberately used the expression 'or' or a conjunctive and not as a disjunctive. Hence, there is no scope for contending that the sub-section contains a special rule for stage carriage permits and a general rule for all the permits, with the result the special will prevail over the general. Even assuming that the provision for a stage carriage permit is a special rule, unless there is a repugnancy between the general rule and the special rule, there is no question of the special overruling the general. If both can stand together, then the rule that 'special rule excludes general' cannot be invoked.

17. However, the matter is not res integra. The question has been considered by this Court and another High Courts earlier with reference to corresponding provisions under the old Motor Vehicles Act of 1939. Sec.57(8) of the old Act was on similar terms. Under the Central Act, sub-sec.(8) of Sec.57 read as follows:

"(8). An application to vary the conditions of any permit other than a temporary permit, by the inclusion of a new route or routes or a new area or, in the case of a stage carriage permit, by increasing the number of trips above the specified maximum or by altering the route covered by it or in the case of a contract carriage permit or a public carrier's permit, by increasing the number of vehicles covered by the permit, shall be treated as an application for the grant of a new permit;

Provided that it shall not be necessary so to treat an application made by the holder of a stage carriage permit who provides the only service on any route or in any area to increase the frequency of the service so provided, without any increase in the number of vehicles."

18. By the Motor Vehicles (Madras Amendment) Act (III of 1964), sub-sec.(8) of Sec.57 of the old Act was amended by the words "or by the variation, extension or curtailment of the route or routes or the area specified in the permit", after the words "by the inclusion of a new route or routes or a new area". It is worth noting that the provision for application for variation, extension or curtailment was with reference to any permit other than a temporary permit under the old Act as amended by the Madras Act. In the latter part of the section in which reference was made to stage carriage permit, the provision was for an application for variation by increasing the number of trips above the specified maximum or by altering the route covered by it. It is to be noted that by the same Amendment Act III of 1964, Sec.48 of the Central Act of 1939 was also amended. Sub-sec.(2) of Sec.48 was omitted and in sub-sec.(3), Clause (i) was renumbered as clause (i-a) and the following clause was inserted as clause (i):

"that the stage carriage or stage carriages shall be used only on a specified route or routes or in a specified area,"

Sub-clause (a) of clause (xxi) of Sec.48 was substituted with the following clause:

"(a) vary, extend or curtail the route or routes or the area specified in the permit;"

(The remaining part of Sub-clause (a) of Clause (xxi) is not extracted as it is unnecessary for this case.) Thus, when the legislature amended Sec.48, Sec.57 was also amended consequently. The expression used in Sub-clause (a) of Clause (xxi) is 'vary, extend or curtail', while the expression used in sub-sec.(8) of Sec.57 is 'variation, extension or curtailment'. Thus, it is seen that the legislature thought fit to incorporate the provisions of Sub-clause (a) of Clause (xxi) of sub-sec.(3) of Sec.48 in Sec.57 as it had made the route as a condition of the permit under sub-sec.(3) of Sec.48. The reason for such amendment was obviously the opinion expressed by the majority of a Full Bench of this Court in Natesa Mudaliar v. Thanapal Bus Service, A.I.R. 1964 Mad. 136. Ramachandra Iyer, C.J., and Jagadisan, J. who formed the majority, took the view that the route was not a condition of a permit, as it did not fall under Sec.48(3) of the Act as it stood.

19. After referring to Sec.57(8) of the old Act, it was observed as follows:

"This is only a procedural provision and is practically a substitute of the old Rule 208(a), which we have already extracted above. This sub-section consists of three parts and provides what application should be treated as an application for the grant of a new permit. The first category comprises applications to vary the conditions of any permit other than a temporary permit by the inclusion of a new route or routes in a new area. The second group comprises applications in regard to stage carriage permit for increasing the number of services above the specified maximum. The third class comprises application in the case of a contract carriage permit or a public carriage permit for increasing the number of vehicles covered by the permit. The first category uses the expression 'any permit'. Necessarily even a stage carriage permit would fall within its ambit. But if the route is not a condition of the permit relating to a stage carriage then obviously that group should have regard only to permits in regard to other kinds of transport vehicles like contract carriage or public carrier. It would not be proper to assume that because a provision is made for treating an application to vary the condition of any permit by including a new route what is not prescribed as a condition of permit should be attributed to have that character. As we have said, this is not a substantive provision enacting the conditions of a stage carriage permit, but is only a rule of procedure which obliges the transport authority to treat certain applications as if they are applications for a grant of a new permit. We are therefore unable to agree with any of the contentions urged on behalf of the first respondent."

It was to overrule the view taken by the majority, the amendment was brought in by the State legislature. Later, Sec.48 of the Central Act was similarly amended by Central Act 56 of 1969 with effect from 2.3.1970 by omitting sub-sec.(2) and introducing clause (i) in sub-sec.(3) and renumbering the old clause (i) as clause (i-a) as was done by the State legislature.

20. It is worth referring to the view expressed by Ramamurti, J. in his dissenting judgment in that case, on the interpretation of Sec.57(8) of the Act, which is as follows:

"(43) If I may say so, this clause is unambiguous, explicit, and very clear and does not admit scope for any argument or difficulty in the rules of interpretation. The word "any" is of general import and excludes limitation or qualification and is "all inclusive". "the words used negative qualification and affirm generality." Vide Per Fry, L.J. Duck v. Bates, (1884)13 Q.B.D. 843 at p. 851. In construing statutes the word "any" is equivalent to and has force of "every" and "all". I see absolutely nothing in the context of the sub-section to control or restrict the generality that is connoted by the deliberate use of the expression "any". On the other hand, such context as is manifested in Sec.57(8) leads to the same inference. The controlling context "excepting a temporary permit" shows that the legislature is full aware of the implications of the import of the word "any" and exempts only a temporary permit and no other. It is impossible to brush aside or slur over the three component parts of Sec.57(8): the first part deals with all the vehicles, the second part deals with a stage carriage permit with regard to the increase of the number or vehicles and the third part deals with the increase in the number of vehicles of a contract carriage or a public carrier. The proviso to the section further emphasises the same view and its importance should not be overlooked.

(44) I am wholly unable to countenance any argument involving an assumption that there is any looseness or inaccuracy in the language employed in Sec.57(8). I have no doubt in my mind that the legislature has used the words "any permit" in the opening words of sub-sec.(8) deliberately, with a view to take in all vehicles without any distinction and that whenever the legislature wants to make a distinction and restrict the scope, it has taken particular care to do so by employing necessary, precise, apt, language. If I may say so, I cannot even visualise what clearer language the legislature could have employed to manifest its legislative intent. There is no justification whatsoever for reading the words "any permit" as "any permit other than a stage carriage permit", as contended by learned counsel for the petitioner, especially when the legislature designedly excepts a temporary permit only."

21. With respect, I agree with the reasoning of the learned Judge and apply it here in interpreting Sec.80 sub-sec.(3) of the Act.

22. Though there is no discussion on the question, the same view is expressed by Veeraswami, J. in Swami Motor Transport (P) Ltd. v. Raman and Raman (P) Ltd., (1965)1 M.L.J. 594, in the following words:

"Sec.57(8) enjoins that an application to vary a condition of a stage carriage permit by inclusion of a new route should be treated as an application for the grant of a new permit. The effect of this is that an application should be disposed of by complying with the procedure for the grant of such carriage permits."

23. The question was raised specifically before a Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court in Narayana Reddy v. Secretary Regional Transport Authority, Cuddappah and another, (1960)2 An.W.R. 91, and it was held that the first part of Sec.57(8) of the Act would apply to stage carriage permits also. The relevant passage reads thus:

"Sri Babul Reddy invites us to hold that the first part of Sec.57(8) applies only to contract carriage permits or public carriers' permits and is inapplicable to stage carriage permits and that it is only the clause which deals with "increasing the number of services above the specified maximum" that governs the stage carriage permits. We think this argument is unsubstantial. The first part of Sec.57(8) is general in its terms and governs not only contract carriages or public carriers but stage carriages also. It should be remembered that Chapter IV is headed "Control of Transport Vehicles" which includes stage carriages. If really the intendment of the section was that the first part of it should be confined only to contract carriages and public carriers, it would have been made specific by restricting its scope only to the two types of carriages. In our opinion, this sub-section enables us to solve the problem before us without much difficulty."

24. It is, therefore, clear that the first part of the section will also apply to all permits including stage carriage permit and the only exclusion is a temporary permit. There is no warrant for applying the maxim generalis specialibus non derogant.

25. Learned counsel for the petitioner contends that under Sec.80(3) of the Act an application to vary the conditions of any permit shall be treated as an application for the grant of a new permit and if the first respondent's application is treated as one for grant of a new permit, it will not be entitled to the permit, as the first respondent is not an individual. Reliance is placed on the proviso to Sec.71(1) of the Act. the said sub-section reads thus:

"A Regional Transport Authority shall, while considering an application for a stage carriage permit, have regard to the objects of this Act: Provided that such permit for a route of fifty kilometers or less shall be granted only to an individual or a State Transport undertaking."

According to learned counsel the first respondent being a private limited company, is neither an individual nor a State transport undertaking and is, therefore, not entitled to grant of a new permit. Learned counsel for the first respondent submits that the contention was not raised before the Tribunal and the petitioner should not be permitted to raise it here. It is further argued that even otherwise, there is no merit in the contention. It is pointed out that the fiction introduced in the last part of sub-sec.(3) of Sec.80 of the Act is for a limited purpose and the effect thereof is to make the procedure prescribed in Secs.80(1) and (2) to be applicable to the application. In other words it is contended that by treating the application as one for grant of a new permit, the provisions of sub-secs.(1) and (2) of Sec.80 of the Act are alone applicable to the same and orders should be passed on the basis of the said provisions.

26. My attention is drawn to the judgments of the Supreme Court in M/s. Shiv Chand Amolak Chand v. The Regional Transport Authority and another, A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 9: (1983) 4 S.C.C. 433; 1984 Lab.L.J. 1: (1984) 1 Comp.L.J. 214, and M. Duraiswami v. Sri Murugan Bus Service, A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 1980;

(1986) 2 S.C.J. 56. In both the cases, the provisions of Sec.57(8) of the old Act were considered. Referring to the fiction introduced by sub-sec.(3), the Court observed in the former case as follows:

"There can, therefore, be no doubt that if an application for varying the condition of a permit by extension of the route specified in the permit were equated wholly with an application for grant of a new permit and the permit for the extended route were to be regarded as a new permit, the procedure prescribed in Sec.47 sub-sec.(3) would have to be followed and the number of stage carriages for which permits may be granted on the extended route would have to be determined before the application could be entertained by the Regional Transport Authority. But we do not think that the prescription in sub-sec.(8) of Sec.57 that an application for varying the condition of a permit by extension of the route shall be treated as an application for grant of a new permit has effect of equating such an application with an application for grant of a new permit for all purposes so as to attract the applicability of sub-sec.(3) of Sec.47. Sec.57 deals with the procedure in applying for and granting permits; and sub-secs.(3) to (7) lay down the procedure which must be followed in considering and deciding, inter alia, an application for grant of a stage carriage permit. Sub-sec.(8) follows upon sub-secs.(3) to (7) and is part of the same section which has a definite object and scheme of providing the procedure for considering and granting an application and, therefore, when it provides that an application to vary the conditions of a permit by the inclusion of new route or routes or new area or by increasing the number of trips above the specified maximum or by altering the route covered by it shall be treated as an application for grant of a new stage carriage permit it is obviously intended to incorporate and make applicable the procedure set out in the preceding sub-secs.(3) to (7) to such an application. The context in which sub-sec.(8) occurs and its juxtaposition with sub-secs.(3) to (7) in Sec.57 clearly indicate that what is sought to be made applicable to an application referred to in sub-sec.(8) by treating it as an application for grant of a new permit, is the procedure set out in sub-secs.(3) to (7) of Sec.57 and nothing more. The requirement spelt out in sub-sec.(3) of Sec.47 that the number of stage carriages for which permits may be granted on any particular route must be first determined before an application for grant of a stage carriage permit can be entertained by the Regional Transport Authority under Sec.48, is obviously not a part of the procedure for considering an application for grant of a permit; it is a condition precedent before an application for grant of a permit can be considered and granted. This condition precedent cannot be said to have been incorporated by reference under sub-sec.(8) of Sec.57. An application to vary the conditions of a permit as set out in sub-sec.(8) of Sec.57 is undoubtedly to be treated as an application for grant of a new permit, but that is only for the purpose of applying the procedure set out in sub-secs.(3) to (7) of that section. It is not an application for a new permit and if it is granted, the permit for the extended route does not become a new permit in the hands of the applicant."

27. In the latter case, the above passage was quoted and the position in law was reiterated. Hence, the contention that the provisions of Sec.71(1) of the Act are attracted to the application of the first respondent is untenable.

28. The next contention is that the provisions of Rule 3(e) of the Tamil Nadu Motor Vehicles Rules are violated by the grant of permit to the first respondent. The said rule defines "City and Town Service" as "a service plying in a city or a Municipal Town or any built up place notified in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette as "City" or "Town" for this purpose by the Transport Authority concerned with the prior concurrence of the State Transport Authority. No route shall lie entirely outside, but at least one terminus of it shall be within the limits of municipal town or a city or any built up place notified for the purpose. The aggregate distance of a "town" or "city service" route lying partly within and partly outside the limits of a municipal town or city or any built up place, notified for the purpose shall not exceed 30 kilometres."

29. The contention is that the distance between Srivilliputhur and Puthur is 28.6 Kms. and the distance between Srivilliputhur and Sivakasi is 20 Kms. and the aggregate being 48.6 Kms. exceeds the limit of 30 Kms. fixed in Rule 3(e). Hence, permission to operate between Srivilliputhur and Sivakasi offends the rule. There is no merit in this contention too. The rule refers only to the aggregate distance of 'a' town service or city service route. If a permit covers two routes, each of them shall not exceed 30 Kms. There can be no dispute that a permit can cover more than one route. Sec.70(1)(a) and Sec.72(2)(i) of the Act use the expression "route or routes". Hence, aggregate distance referred to the Rule 3(e) must be computed with reference to each route. Moreover, in this case another permit has been issued to the first respondent to run a town service between Srivilliputhur and Sivakasi. Rule 3(e) does not refer to the aggregate of the distance covered by two permits and hence there is no violation of the rule in this case.

30. The facts referred to by the tribunal show that the order has been made in the best interests of the travelling public. Hence, there is no justification for interfering with the same. The writ petition fails and suffers a dismissal with costs. Counsel's fee Rs.1,000.

14th October, 1992

M/s.Ponds (India) Ltd.

...Appellant

v.

Collector of Central Excise, Madras

...Respondent.

(A) Precedents - Decisions of Customs, Excise and Gold (Control) Appellate Tribunal - Binding nature of.

(B) Central Excise and Salt Act (I of 1944), Sec.2(f) - Central Excise Tariff Act (1985), Chapter Notes of Schedule - Central Excise Rules, Rules 57-A, 57-D, 57-F - Plastic Granules known as LDPE, HDPE and PVC compound used in the manufacture of plastic jars etc., used as containers for Excisable goods - Whether packaging materials and inputs -

Said granules if entitled to benefit of MODVAT.

The applicant, a manufacturer of cosmetics sought permission of the Assistant Collector of Central Excise for taking the MODVAT benefit on certain raw materials or plastic granules known as LDPE, HDPE and PVC compound used in the manufacture of plastic jars etc. used as containers for the Excisable goods, shampoo, talcum powder and cream manufactured by it. The Assistant Collector held that the applicant was not eligible to avoid the MODVAT credit on those raw materials under Rule 57-A of the Central Excise Rules and that consequently it could not seek permission to operate under Rule 57 (F-2) thereof. The Assistant Collector also found that Rule 57-D(2) also had no application. The Order was upheld by the Collector of Central Excise. The Customs, Excise and Gold (Control) Appellate Tribunal also upheld the decisions. An application for reference under Sec.35-G(1) of the Central Excise and Salt Act was also dismissed. Thereupon, the applicant filed an application before the High Court for a reference. On the orders of court four questions were referred. The petitioner and the respondent relied upon decisions of the tribunals. Held: The reasoning found in the decisions of the tribunals could have at best only persuasive effect before the High Court. [Para 8]

The learned counsel for the applicant submits that once the abovesaid plastic granules could be and are used as packaging materials for making the abovesaid containers, they would also come under the term 'packaging materials'. There is force in this submission. The net result is that the abovesaid plastic granules are inputs within the meaning of the said term in Rule 57-A. Thus, the abovesaid plastic granules which were utilised for manufacturing the abovesaid containers for packing the abovesaid excisable goods like shampoo, etc., and for making them marketable, would be component parts for the abovesaid goods which are the end products. [Paras 12 and 15]

In the main part of Rule 57-A also the expression used in "goods used in or in relation to the manufacture of the said final products" (hereinafter referred to as 'inputs'). Under Sec.2(f) of the Act, the term 'manufacture' would also include any process which is specified in relation to any goods in the section or chapter notes of the Schedule to the Central Excise Tariff Act, 1985 as amounting to manufacture. It has also been mentioned earlier that Chapter Note No.4 of Chapter 33 of the abovesaid Schedule also states that adoption of any treatment to render the products marketable to the consumer shall be construed as manufacture. Therefore, in the main part of Rule 57-A also, the term 'goods used in or in relation to the manufacture of the said final products' would cover the above referred to plastic granules also.

It cannot also be said that because the abovesaid containers are exempted from duty, the duty paid on the abovesaid granules which go to make up those containers cannot get reimbursement under the MODVAT scheme. Once those granules are held to be 'inputs' the abovesaid Rule 57-D(2) also will come to the aid of the applicant to claim MODVAT benefit in respect of them. Rule 57-D(2) says that the credit of specified duty allowed in respect of any inputs shall not be denied on the ground that any intermediate products have come into existence during the course of 'manufacture' of the final product and that such intermediate products are for the time being exempt from the whole of the duty of excise; leviable thereon. Here again, for the term 'manufacture' the abovesaid Sec.2(f) definition read with the abovesaid Chapter Note No.4 to Chapter 33 would apply and so, the abovesaid containers could be taken as the abovesaid 'intermediate products' which have come into existence 'during the course of manufacture of the final product'. In such a case the requirement mentioned in the proviso to Rule 57-D(2) will stand satisfied since the abovesaid containers, the intermediate products, are admittedly 'used within the factory of production in the manufacture of a final product' and specified as inputs or final product under the Notification issued under Rule 57-A. This apart, it cannot also be said that there is no cascading effect if the value of the containers which are exempt from duty are actually charged to duty subsequently when the said containers are used to pack the final products and are actually get integrated in the said final products. The purpose for which the exemption was granted to those containers would also be nullified if their value is to be taxed subsequently when they are used to pack the abovesaid Cream etc.

 Case referred to the High Court by the Customs, Excise and Gold (Control) Appellate Tribunal, South Regional Bench at Madras, dated 15.10.1987 in Order No. 731 of 1987 in Excise Appeal No. E.271/87/MAS, and as per the directions of this Court in Order dated 22.11.1989 in R.C.P. No. 20 of 1989, and refer the following questions in exercise of the power conferred under Sec. 35-G of the Central Excise and Salt Act, 1944.

1. Is it correct in law for the tribunal to hold that if the duty paid on LDPE, HDPE, PVC compound etc., is not allowed MODVAT credit as inputs for cosmetic and toilet preparations, in facts and circumstances of the case, there will be no cascading effect merely because the plastic containers made out of them are exempted from duty?

2. Is it correct in law for the tribunal to hold that intermediate products are necessarily those which have to undergo further processing in the factory of production for further use in the manufacture of the final product when the word 'intermediate' only means, coming between two things as regards time, place or order?

3. Is the tribunal correct in law in holding that the manufacture of plastic containers is not an intermediate stage for completion of the manufacture and clearance of cosmetic and toilet preparations particularly with reference to Sec. 2(f) of the Central Excise and Salt Act, 1944, read with Chapter Note No. 4 of Chapter 33 of the Schedule to the Central Excise Tariff Act, 1985?

4. Is the tribunal correct in law in not taking into consideration the expression used in Rule 57-A, viz. duty paid on the 'goods used in or in relation to the manufacture of the said final products' as an integral part thereof and thus holding that the raw materials for the containers are not eligible for MODVAT benefit?

Against Order in Appeal No. 12 of 1987 (M) dated 29.1.1987 on the file of the Collector of Central Excise (Appeals), 121, Nungambakkam High Road, Madras-34, against No. V/14F/30/5/86 VC, dated 18.7.1986, on the file of the Assistant Collector of Central Excise V Division, Madras.

K. Parasaran, Senior Counsel, for Vijaynarayanan and R. Parthiban, for Applicant.

K. Jayachandran, Additional Central Government Standing Counsel, for Respondent.

The Order of the Court was made by Abdul Hadi, J.: Pursuant to the Order of this Court under Sec. 35-G(3) of the Central Excise and Salt Act, 1944 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'), dated 22.11.1989 in R.C.P. No. 20 of 1989, directing the Customs-Excise and Gold (Control) Appellate Tribunal, Southern Regional Bench at Madras, to refer four questions of law specified below, to this Court for its opinion, the said tribunal has referred the same and thus this R.C.No.1 of 1990 is before us. The said four questions arise out of the said tribunal's order dated 15.10.1987 in Excise Appeal No.271 of 1987 (MAS) filed by the appellant therein, Pond's (India) Ltd., (the applicant before us).

2. The said questions relate to the scheme known as MODVAT. MODVAT is short form of Modified Value Added Tax. This scheme enables the manufacturers, whose manufactured products (termed as "final products") suffer excise duty under the Act, to obtain instant and complete reimbursement of specified duty paid on the goods used in or in relation to the manufacture of the said products. (These goods are referred to as "inputs"). In other words, the charge of excise duty on the above said final products is only on the value added to the said inputs, which had already suffered duty. This scheme was introduced on 1.3.1986 by inserting Rule 57-A to Rule 57-N under the new section or heading "A.A. credit of duty paid on excisable goods used as inputs" to The Central Excise Rules, 1944. It is a modification or improvement of the pre-existing pro forma credit scheme. Hence it is known as Modified Value Added Tax or MODVAT shortly. The object of the scheme is to eliminate the cascading effect on the excise duty levied on the final products, or, in other words, to avoid payment of duty on earlier duties paid.

3. The applicant herein is a manufacturer of cosmetics. It sought permission of the Assistant Collector of Central Excise, Madras-5 Division for taking the abovesaid MODVAT benefit on certain raw materials or plastic granules, known as LDPE, HDPE and PVC compound, used in the manufacture of plastic jars etc., used as containers for the excisable goods, shampoo, talcum powder and cream manufactured by it. Admittedly those plastic jars, etc., used as containers are exempted from excise duty. But the abovesaid raw materials, which went to make up those containers suffered excise duty. Further, admittedly, the applicant did not manufacture the said containers in its own factory, using the abovesaid raw materials, but instead purchased those raw materials and sent them to processors for the manufacture of the said containers and after the said manufacture, brought the containers to its factory and used them in packing its abovesaid excisable final products viz., shampoo, cream, talcum powder, etc.

4. The Assistant Collector by his order dated 18.7.1986, has held that the applicant is not eligible to avoid the said MODVAT credit on those raw materials under the abovesaid Rule 57-A and that consequently it cannot also seek permission to operate under Rule 57-F(2) thereof. The Assistant Collector has also found that Rule 57-D(2) thereof also has no application. The said order of the Assistant Collector was also concurrently upheld by the Collector of Central Excise (Appeals), Madras, by his order dated 29.1.1987 in the first appeal filed by the applicant and by the abovesaid tribunal in the abovesaid second appeal filed by it, viz., Excise Appeal No.271 of 1987 (MAS). Subsequently, the applicant filed the reference application under Sec.35-G(1) of the Act to the tribunal. But that was also dismissed by an order 10.1.1989, holding that there was no question of law arising out of the abovesaid tribunal's order dated 15.10.1987. Then application filed in R.C.P.No.20 of 1989 in this Court under Sec.35-G(3) of the Act resulted in the above order dated 22.11.1989. Pursuant to the said order, four questions have been referred to us. Those questions are:

"1. Is it correct in law for the tribunal to hold that if the duty paid on LDPE, HDPE and PVC compound, etc., is not allowed MODVAT credit as inputs for cosmetic and toilet preparations, in the facts and circumstances of the case, there will be no cascading effect merely because the plastic containers made out of them are exempted from duty?

2. Is it correct in law for the tribunal to hold that intermediate products are necessarily those which have to undergo further processing in the factory of production for further use in the manufacture of the final product when the word 'intermediate' only means 'coming between two things as regards time, place or order'?

3. Is the tribunal correct in law in holding that the manufacture of plastic containers is not an intermediate stage for completion of the manufacture and clearance of cosmetic and toilet preparations particularly with reference to Sec.2(f) of the Central Excise and Salt Act, 1944, read with Note No.4 of Chapter 33 of the Schedule to the Central Excise Tariff Act, 1985?

4. Is the tribunal correct in law in not taking into consideration the expression used in Rule 57-A viz., duty paid on the 'goods used in or in relation to the manufacture of the said final products' as an integral part thereof and thus holding that the raw materials for the containers are not eligible for MODVAT benefit?

5. The relevant portions of the abovesaid Rule 57-A are as follows:-

"Applicability: (1) The provisions of this Section shall apply to such finished excisable goods (hereinafter referred to as the "final products"), as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify in this behalf for the purpose of allowing credit of any duty of excise or the additional duty under Sec.3 of the Customs Tariff Act, 1975 (51 of 1975) as may be specified in the said notification (hereinafter referred to as the "specified duty") paid on the goods used in or in relation to the manufacture of the said final products (hereinafter referred to as the "inputs") and for utilising the credit so allowed towards payment of duty of excise leviable on the final products, whether under the Act or under any other Act, as may be specified in the said notification, subject to the provisions of this section and the conditions and restrictions that may be specified in the notification.....

Explanation: For the purpose of this rule, "inputs" includes-

(a) inputs which are manufactured and used within the factory of production in or in relation to, the manufacture of final products, and
(b) paints and packaging materials, but does not include-

(i)

(ii) packaging materials in respect of which any exemption to the extent of the duty of excise payable on the value of the packaging materials is being availed of for packaging any final products;

(iii) packaging materials the cost of which is not included or had not been included during the proceeding financial year in the assessable value of the final products under Sec.4 of the Act;

(iv)

(v) plywood for tea chests;"

The above referred notification under Rule 57-A has also been issued by the Central Government and admittedly the above referred to final products manufactured by the applicant and the above referred to raw materials used in the manufacture of the abovesaid containers respectively, come under Chapters 33 and 39 of the Schedule to the Central Excise Tariff Act, 1985 (Central Act 5 of 1986) as per the said notification. It is needless to say that as per the charging section viz., Sec.3 of the Act, excise duty is leviable on excisable goods at the rate set forth in the schedule to the above referred to Central Excise Tariff Act, 1985. Here it is also necessary to note the definition of the term "manufacture" referred to by the learned Counsel for the applicant. The relevant portions of the said definition under Sec.2(f) of the Act are as follows:

"manufacture" includes any process,

(i)

(ii) which is specified in relation to any goods in the section or Chapter notes of the Schedule to the Central Excise Tariff Act, 1985 as amounting to manufacture."

One of the above referred to Chapter Notes, viz., Chapter Note No.4 to Chapter 33 runs as follows:

"4. In relation to products of heading Nos.33.03, 33.04 and 33.05, conversion of power into tablets, labelling or relabelling of containers intended for consumers or repacking from bulk packs to retain packs or the adoption of any other treatment render the products marketable to the consumer, shall be construed as manufacture."

There is no dispute that the above referred to excisable goods of the assessee come under the above referred to headings.

The above referred to Rule 57-D(2) runs as follows:

"(2) Credit of specified duty allowed in respect of any inputs shall not be denied or varied on the ground that any intermediate products have come into existence during the course of manufacture of the final product and that such intermediate products are for the time being exempt from the whole of the duty of excise leviable thereon or chargeable to nil rate of duty:

Provided that such intermediate products are-
(a) used within the factory of production in the manufacture of a final product (other than those cleared either to a unit in a Free Trade Zone or to a hundred per cent Export-Oriented Unit) on which the duty of excise is leviable whether in whole or in part; and (b) specified as inputs or as final products under a notification issued under Rule 57-A".

Rule 57-F prescribes the manner of utilisation of the inputs and the credit allowed in respect of duty paid thereon and inter alia provides for the removal of the abovesaid inputs from the factory with the permission of the Collector of Central Excise, as if they have been manufactured in the said factory.

6. The learned Senior Counsel Mr.K.Parasaran mainly makes the following submissions:

The tribunal erred in holding that the abovesaid "plastic granules" are not "inputs" within the meaning of that term in the above referred to Rule 57-A. Further, the expression "in relation to" used in the main part of Rule 57-A is of widest amplitude. The tribunal should have also given a liberal interpretation to the abovesaid term "inputs". Further, if two interpretations are possible, the interpretation in favour of the assessee should have been adopted. The learned Senior Counsel also relies on several decisions (some of which are also judgments of different Benches of the Customs, Excise and Gold (Control) Appellate Tribunal), which will be referred to in the course of the discussion.

7. On the other hand, Mr.Jayachandran, learned Additional Central Government Standing Counsel reiterates the reasonings found in the orders of the first two authorities below and the tribunal and submits that the above said plastic granules are neither "inputs" under the abovesaid Rule 57-A, nor "intermediate products" under Rule 57-D(2) and that the claim of the applicant cannot be accepted since the abovesaid containers are exempted from duty. He also submits that the relevant circular issued by the Board in interpreting the relevant rules should be given due weight. He also cites several decisions (some of which are also decisions given by the different Benches of the abovesaid tribunal), which will also be considered during the course of the discussion.

8. We have carefully considered the rival submissions and the authorities cited. Though both the sides rely on tribunal decisions also, it is rightly agreed by both of them that the reasoning found in those decisions could have at best only persuasive effect before us.

9. The main question to be considered is whether the abovesaid plastic granules could be taken as "inputs" within the meaning of the term in Rule 57-A, more particularly in the above referred to explanation therein. The said explanation, inter alia, says "inputs" includes packaging materials. But, the said term does not include, inter alia, those packaging materials, in respect of which any exemption to the extent of the duty of excise payable on the value of packaging materials is being availed for packaging any final products. So far as the term "packaging materials", in Rasoi Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1990) 49 E.L.T. 522, (Tribunal), the East Regional Bench, Calcutta) observed as follows while dealing with the question whether the MODVAT benefit could be given in respect of tin plates used for making metal containers, which were used for packing the manufactured excisable goods, viz., vegetable products:

"In our opinion, the question for determination turns on the expression packaging materials which are included in the scope of the term "inputs" in the Explanation to Rule 57-A. The term "packaging" is described in "Readers Digest Universal Dictionary" as material used for packaging'. Packaging material which is the crucial expression is thus different from package, just as, say, dress material is different from dress. Just as dress is made from dress material, package is made from packaging material. The specific exclusion in the Explanation to Rule 57-A of packaging materials in respect of which any exemption to the extent of 'duty payable' on the value of such packaging materials is availed of and of packaging materials the costs of which is not included in the assessable value of the final product under Sec.4 of the Central Excises and Salt Act, however tend to point to the possibility of the expression packaging material being used refer to packages themselves. But we cannot go beyond the normal meaning of the term. Thus, packaging material is different from package or container. Further, the specific exclusion of the item "plywood for tea chests" is also a pointer in this regard. Wood is not package by itself but a packaging material to make tea-chests. Because of its specific exclusion it stands excluded from the scope of MODVAT benefit available to packaging material. There is no such exclusion affecting tin plates. Their uses are similar. Both are used to make packages or containers for packaging excisable goods. Since tin plates tin sheets are used for making metal containers in which vegetable product is packed they are packaging materials, which are eligible inputs which are sued in relation to the manufacture of vegetable products."

Thus observing, the said tribunal has held that MODVAT benefit is available in the abovesaid case.

10. This view has also been followed by the Western Regional Bench of the tribunal at Bombay in F.D.C. Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1991)55 E.L.T. 601, (Tribunal) while dealing with the question whether the MODVAT benefit could be given to printed aluminium foils used to make sachets (containers) for packing the excisable goods, viz., medicaments. In the said decision it observed thus:

"The term 'packaging materials' has a wider connotation and meaning. This is also evident from the fact that even plywood for tea chests are recognised as packaging materials but are sought to be specifically excluded, while including the other packaging materials. Hence what is required to be looked into is, whether the material received could be known to have its normal use as packaging materials and is also established to be used as packaging materials, which are permitted under Rule 57-A. If the intention was only to permit ready to use containers such as boxes or bottles, then the term used would have been 'package or container'. In the absence of any such restrictive meaning provided, the term 'packaging material' has to be interpreted as such and cannot be interpreted in the restricted manner.

11. We are in agreement with the abovesaid view expressed in Rasoi Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1990)49 E.L.T. 522, (Eastern Regional Bench of the Tribunal) and F.D.C. Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1991)55 E.L.T. 601, (Western Regional Bench of the Tribunal) (supra). We may also observe that given the abovesaid meaning for the term "packaging materials", the above referred to plastic granules will not also come under Sub-clause (ii) of clause (b) in the above referred to explanation under Rule 57-A, since admittedly those plastic granules are not packaging materials in respect of which any exemption is being availed of for packaging any final product.

12. No doubt in the above referred to F.D.C. Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1991)55 E.L.T. 601, (Tribunal), the decision of the South Regional Bench, which is under review in the present case (and which also has been reported in Ponds India Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1988)38 E.L.T. 351, has been distinguished thus:

"In any case, we are of the view that the test that should be applied is, whether the material is identifiable as a packaging material and its normal usage is for packing purposes and it has been brought only for the packaging purposes. If this test is satisfied, neither the Rule 57-A could be said to deny the benefit nor the Rule 57-F (2) could be refused in such cases."

A similar distinction was also sought to be made by the same Western Regional Bench of the tribunal in Parle Products (P) Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1992)57 E.L.T. 152 (Tribunal). The learned Senior Counsel for the applicant submits that this distinction sought to be made out by the said Bench of the tribunal in F.D.C. Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1991)55 E.L.T. 601, is not correct since, once the abovesaid plastic granules could be and are used as packaging materials for making the abovesaid containers, they would also come under the term 'packaging materials'. We see force in this submission. The net result is that the abovesaid plastic granules are inputs within the meaning of the said term in Rule 57-A.

13. That apart, we find that the view expressed by the Supreme Court in Collector of Central Excise v. Easteno Paper Industries Ltd., (1989)43 E.L.T. 201 (S.C.), also would lead to confusion the MODVAT benefit should be given in the present case. That case before the Supreme Court related to the pre-existing proforma credit scheme under Rule 56-A and the question there was whether the said proforma credit could be given to certain paper which was used by the assessee for wrapping the excisable goods, which was also certain other kind of paper. In that context, the Supreme Court has held that the said credit could be given to such wrapping paper and observed as follows:

"As the Act does not define goods, the legislature must be taken to have used that word in its ordinary dictionary meaning. The dictionary meaning of the expression is that to become 'goods' it must be something which can ordinarily come to the market to be bought and sold and is known to the market as such. The tribunal found, and there was material of the tribunal to do so, that the market in which articles in question were sold were paper packed and wrapped in paper. Therefore, anything that enters into and forms part of that process must be deemed to be raw material or component part of the end product and must be deemed to have been used in completion or manufacture of the end product. This Court in the case of Empire Industries Ltd. and others v. Union of India, and others, (1985) 20 E.L.T. 179; (1985) 3 S.C.C. 314, has explained the concept of 'process' in Excise Law. In view of the principle laid down therein and other relevant decisions, processes incidental or ancillary to wrapping are to be included in the process of manufacture, manufacture in the sense of bringing the goods into existence as these are known in the market is not complete until these are wrapped in wrapping paper. In J.K. Cotton Spinning and Weaving Mills Company Ltd. v. Sales Tax Officer, (1965) 16 S.T.C. 563 (S.C.), this Court, while construing the expression 'in the manufacture or processing of goods for sale' in the context of Sales Tax Law, though the concept is different under the Excise Law, has held that manufacture of goods should normally encompass the entire process carried on by the dealer of converting raw materials into finished goods. Where any particular process, this Court further emphasised, is so integrally connected with the ultimate production of goods that, but for that process, manufacture or processing of goods would be commercially inexpedient, articles required in that process, would fall within the expression 'in the manufacture of goods'.....

To be able to be marked or to be marketable, it appears to us, in the light of facts in the appeals, that it was an essential requirement to be goods, to be wrapped in paper. Anything required to make the goods marketable, must form part of the manufacture and any raw material or any materials used for the same would be component part for the end product. In our opinion, the tribunal was right in the view it took. There is no ground to interfere in these appeals."

14. The learned Senior Counsel for the applicant emphasises that in the present case also, the excisable goods, cream, talcum powder etc., cannot be marketed without the abovesaid containers. In this context, he also relies on the decision in State of Tamil Nadu v. V.V. Vaniaperumal and

Company, (1990) 76 S.T.C. 203 (F.B.), which has held that when oil is sold in tin containers, what was sold was a "tin of oil". Though this case related to sales tax, we think, we can draw inspiration from the following observation made therein and apply the reasoning adopted there to the present case also:

"As we said above only tin of oil is sold. There is no intention for sale or purchase of tin. The intention is to purchase of oil which of course is in tin. Therefore, whatever is the price paid, it must be taken to be the price of the oil. May be if more oil is sold and delivered in a container brought by the purchaser the price may be lesser than the oil sold in tin container, but nevertheless, when oil is sold in tin, the price that is paid is the price of the oil. Therefore, total turnover of the price has to be taxed and there is no question of taxing separately for the price of oil and price of tin at different rates."

15. In this connection, the learned counsel also relies on Punjab Distilling Industries v. Income-Tax Commissioner, A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 346. It is no doubt an income-tax case and the facts are that the assessee therein sold liquor in bottles and the sale price included certain sum as price for bottles also and a further sum was also collected by the buyer as security deposit. The Supreme Court held in that context that the receipt by the assessee-seller of the security deposit was also revenue receipt since sale was liquor with the bottle and that hence the security deposit was only part of the price paid. In this connection, the Supreme Court observed thus:

"It is clear to us that the trade consisted of sale of bottled liquor and the consideration for the sale was constituted by several amounts respectively called, the price of the liquor, the price of the bottles and the security deposit. Unless all these sums were paid the appellant would not have sold the liquor. So the amount which was called security deposit was actually a part of the consideration for the sale and therefore part of the price of what was sold."

Therefore, the learned Senior Counsel submits that the abovesaid plastic granules, which were utilised for manufacturing the abovesaid containers for packing the abovesaid excisable goods like shampoo etc., and for making them marketable, would be component parts for the abovesaid goods which are the end products. We see force in this submission also in view of the abovesaid observations in the Supreme Court decision and the Full Bench decision of this Court.

16. In the main part of Rule 57-A also the expression used in "goods" used in or in relation to the manufacture of the said final products" (hereinafter referred to as 'inputs') (emphasis supplied). The said Senior Counsel is also right in his submission that wide connotation should be given to the above words "in relation to" (Vide M/s. Doypack Systems (P) Ltd. v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 782.

17. We may also point out that in Collector of Central Excise v. Balasapur Industries Ltd. (1989) 43 E.L.T. 804 (S.C.), the Supreme Court also follows the above Collector of Central Excise v. Eastern Paper Industries Ltd., (1989) 43 E.L.T. 201 (S.C.), (of course (1989) 43 E.L.T. 804 (S.C.), arose in a different set of facts and context.

18. We have already pointed out that under Sec.2(f) of the Act, the term 'manufacture' would also include any process which is specified in relation to any goods in the section or chapter notes of the Schedule to the Central Excise Tariff Act, 1985 as amounting to manufacture. We have also mentioned earlier that Chapter Note No.4 of Chapter 33 of the abovesaid Schedule also states that adoption of any treatment to render the products marketable to the consumer shall be construed as manufacture. Therefore, in the main part of Rule 57-A also, the term 'goods used in or in relation to the manufacture of the said final products' (hereinafter referred to as the "inputs") would cover the above referred to plastic granules also.

19. Further, it must be noted that the abovesaid explanation to Rule 57-A contains only an inclusive definition of the term "inputs". In this connection, the learned Senior Counsel also relies on the following observation in State of Bombay v. Hospital Mazdoor Sabha, A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 610:

"It is obvious that the words used in an inclusive definition denote extension and cannot be treated as restricted in any sense. Where we are dealing with an inclusive definition, it would be inappropriate to put a restrictive interpretation upon terms of wider denotation."

20. It cannot also be said that, because the abovesaid containers are exempted from duty, the duty paid on the abovesaid granules, which go to make up those containers cannot get reimbursement under the MODVAT scheme. Once those granules are held to be 'inputs' the abovesaid Rule 57-D(2) also will come to the aid of the applicant to claim MODVAT benefit in respect of them. Rule 57-D(2) says that credit of specified duty allowed in respect of any inputs shall not be denied on the ground that any intermediate products have come into existence during the course of manufacture of the final product and that such intermediate products are for the time being exempt from the whole of the duty of excise leviable thereon. Here again, for the term 'manufacture' the abovesaid Sec.2(f) definition read with the abovesaid Chapter Note No.4 to Chapter 33 would apply and so, the abovesaid containers could be taken as the abovesaid 'intermediate products' which have come into existence 'during the course of manufacture of the final product'. In such a case the requirement mentioned in the proviso to Rule 57-D(2) will stand satisfied since the abovesaid containers, the intermediate products, are admittedly 'used within the factory of production in the manufacture of a final product' and specified as inputs or final product under the Notification issued under Rule 57-A.

21. This apart, it cannot also be said that there is no cascading effect if the value of the containers which are exempt from duty are actually charged to duty subsequently when the said containers are used to pack the final products (cream, etc.) and are actually get integrated in the said final products. The purpose for which the exemption was granted to those containers would also be nullified if their value is to be taxed subsequently when they are used to pack the abovesaid cream etc.

"In the explanation to Rule 57-A relating to MODVAT credit which is what is claimed by the appellants, the term-input has been given an inclusive coverage whereby packaging materials are included. The inputs in question are polythene granules. These are not packing materials, as such. Using them, bags which are packaging materials are manufactured. The bags represent the final stage of manufacture as far as they are concerned. They do not constitute intermediate products for the detergent powder. It has been contended by the appellants that the term-intermediate product has not been defined in the Central Excise Rules. The term can only mean the products obtained from the raw materials in the course of manufacture of the final product. Here the final product is detergent product and it is not manufactured from either polythene granules or plastic bags which are made therefrom to enable the latter to be considered as the intermediate products for detergent powder."

Here in the abovesaid Kusum Products Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1990)48 E.L.T. 50 (Tribunal), the tribunal has not borne in mind the actual meaning of the words "packaging materials" and went wrong in saying that polythene granules were instead held by the tribunal in the above case as packaging materials. We are of the view, as indicated above that those bags are only packages or containers and cannot be strictly called "packaging materials. Further, the tribunal erred in saying that those bags do not constitute intermediate products for the detergent powder. As already indicated in view of Sec.2(f) of the Act and the abovesaid Chapter Note No.4, to Chapter 33, those bags would be "intermediate products" (for the abovesaid detergent powder) spoken to in Rule 57-D(2).

23. Likewise, the tribunal in Shivaji Works Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1990)50 E.L.T. 50 (Tribunal) and Mysore Kirloskar Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1990)50 E.L.T. 175 (Tribunal), which were relied on by the Additional Central Government Standing Counsel, cannot be said to be correct in holding that sand moulds prepared using certain chemicals were not intermediate products, coming into existence during the course of manufacture of the final product, iron and steel on the ground that the said sand moulds were independently manufactured. Here again, Sec.2(f) definition read with the abovesaid Chapter Note No.4 was not considered.

24. The learned Additional Central Government Standing Counsel also made an attempt to rely on Rule 57-C. But Rule 57-C only says that no credit of the specified duty paid on the inputs used in the manufacture of a final product shall be allowed if the final product is exempt from the whole of the duty excisable thereon. But, in the present case, the abovesaid containers are not final products and so, Rule 57-C cannot have any application.

25. Further, it is settled law that even if two views are possible, the view favourable to the assessee is to be followed (Vide Collector of Central Excise Bombay v. M/s. Parle Exports (P) Ltd., A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 644; (1988)38 E.L.T. 741 (S.C.)). No doubt, the learned Additional Central Government Standing Counsel relies on the same decision to contend that the interpretation given by the Board should be given weight. In this connection, he also relies on Collector of Central Excise, Guntur v. Andhra Sugar Ltd., (1988)38 E.L.T. 564 (S.C.), to contend that contemporaneous exposition by the Board should be accepted. What was observed in Collector of Central Excise Bombay v. M/s. Parle Exports (P) Ltd., A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 644; (1988)38 E.L.T. 741 (S.C.), is as follows:

"The principle is well-settled that when two views of a notification are possible, it should be construed in favour of the subject as notification is part of a fiscal enactment. But in this connection, it is well to remember the observations of the Judicial Committee in Coroline M. Armytage v. Fredrick Wilkinson, (1878)3 A.C. 355 at 370, that it is only, however in the event of there being a real difficulty in ascertaining the meaning of a particular enactment that the question of strictness or of liberality of construction arises."

But, in the present case, we do not think that there is any real difficulty in interpreting Rule 57-A. No doubt, the Supreme Court in the above decision also observed thus:

"It is a well-settled principle of interpretation that courts in construing a statute or notification will give much weight to the interpretation put up on it at the time of enactment or issue, and since by those who have to construe, execute and apply the said enactments."

However, it is obvious that any interpretation put by Board's circulars cannot be conclusive. In fact in Orient Paper Mills v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 48, cited by the learned Senior Counsel for the applicant, the Supreme Court has held that the directions issued by the Central Board of Revenue cannot be binding on Courts or Quasi Judicial Tribunals. In fact in that decision, the Supreme Court quotes the following earlier observation in Rajagopala Naidu v. State Transport Appellate Tribunal, A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 1573: -

"If the exercise of discretion conferred on a quasi judicial tribunal is controlled by any such direction, that forges fetters on the exercise of quasi judicial authority and the presence of such fetters would make the exercise of such authority completely inconsistent with the well-accepted notion of judicial process."

In the present case, one of the Board's clarification was as follows:

"Rule 57-A allows MODVAT credit for 'packaging materials' and not on raw materials for making such packaging materials. Packaging materials are ready to use articles such as containers, boxes, cartons, bottles etc. Therefore MODVAT credit will be admissible for the duty paid on such ready to use packaging materials but not on the raw materials such as plastic granules, steel sheets/strips etc.) used for making packaging materials. Raw materials like plastic granules or steel sheets/strips are general purpose articles which can be put to various uses, one of which is making of packaging materials. These raw materials by themselves are not recognisable as packaging materials."

As already stated, we are unable to agree with this interpretation. We have already pointed out what actually is meant by packaging materials. They only refer to the raw materials which go to make up the abovesaid containers. So, we hold that the abovesaid clarification given by the Board is not correct.

26. The learned Additional Central Government Standing Counsel also relies on Mettur Chemicals and Industrial Corporation Ltd. v. Collector of Central Excise, (1991) 52 E.L.T. 592 (Tribunal). But the facts therein are different and the decision may have no application to the present facts.

27. In the light of the above discussion, our answers to the above referred to four questions are in the negative and in favour of the applicant. Accordingly, we answer this reference. In the circumstances, we make an order as to costs.

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.47 - Motor Vehicles Act (IV of 1939), Sec.110-C(2) - Tamil Nadu Motor Vehicles Rules, Rule 18 - Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal, if can review its judgment.

The Supreme Court has, categorically, held in Bhagwathi Devi v. M/s.I.S.Goel, 1983 A.C.J. 123, that the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal is a Civil Court. Further, the Supreme Court as well as this Court has applied the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code not expressly mentioned either in the Act or in the Rules framed thereunder. Following that trend and as observed by a Division Bench of this Court in the decision reported in S.V.R.Natarajan Chettiar v. State of Madras, I.L.R. 1960 Mad. 449, it should be held that the tribunal so long as it exercises judicial functions should be held to possess power to review its judgment where due cause is shown. Petition under Art.227 of the Constitution of India praying the High Court to revise the order of District Court, Kanyakumari at Nagercoil, dated 9.7.1990 and made in I.A.No.127 of 1990 in MCOP S.R.No. 1899 of 1989,

Mrs.Bhagirathi Narayanan, for Petitioner.

V.K.Rajagopal for Respondent No.1.

The Court made the following

ORDER: This revision petition is filed under Art.227 of the Constitution of India challenging an order of the tribunal below allowing I.A.127 of 1990 a petition for reviewing an order already passed on 31.1.1990 in I.A.No.435 of 1989 in S.R.No.1899 of 1989.

2. Brief facts are the following:

In a motor accident that took place on 23.12.1986 minor John Bright, the first respondent herein was permanently disabled. Unfortunately the father and guardian of the minor did not take timely steps to file a petition for compensation under Sec.110-A of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939, but filed the same after a delay of 737 days with a petition to condone that delay. That petition namely I.A.No.435 of 1989 was dismissed. Aggrieved by that the minor represented by the father and guardian has filed I.A.No.127 of 1990 purporting to invoke the provisions of O.47, Rule 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

3. The court below overruling the objections of the petitioner herein entertained the review application and allowed the same. Hence the present revision petition.

4. At the outset it is to be pointed out that there is nothing to suggest from the original application or from the original records that I.A.No.127 of 1990 was filed before the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal and dealt with as such. However, the counter filed by the petitioner herein as second respondent in the said I.A. proceeds as if the application was filed before the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal (District Court Kanyakumari at Nagercoil). It proceed on the basis that the application was disposed of by the claims tribunal though the cause title shows as if it was disposed of by the District Court.

5. Mrs.Bhagirathi Narayanan, learned counsel appearing for the petitioner raised two important contentions before me. The first contention was that the tribunal has no inherent power to review an earlier order passed by it. The second contention was even assuming that the tribunal has power to review its order the order under revision cannot be sustained as no reason is given in the order. Learned counsel placed reliance on two judgments of the Supreme Court one judgment of this court and another judgment of Bombay High Court. They are P.N.Thakersli v. Pradyumen Singhji, A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1273, Col.Avtar Singh v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 2041; (1981)1 S.C.R. 162. V.Dhandayuthapani v. S.P.Krishnamurthi, A.I.R. 1988 Mad. 78 and M/s.National Hotel v. Rukaiyabai, A.I.R. 1985 Bom. 403.

6. Mr.V.K.Rajagopal learned counsel appearing for the first respondent submitted that the tribunal has power to review its order and though the review order does not contain any reason having regard to the fact that the minor's career has been seriously affected and that the minor is not in a position to look after himself as a result of the accident this Court may not be pleased to interfere with the order under revision. In support of his contention that the tribunal has power to review its earlier order he cited the decision in State of Haryana v. Smt.Darshana Devi, A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 855; 1979 A.C.J. 205 and also the decision in Bhagwathi Devi and others v. M/s.I.S.Goel and others, 1983 A.C.J. 123.

7. I have considered the rival submissions.

8. Before going into the actual question namely whether the tribunal has power to review it is relevant to note down the provisions relating to 'procedure and powers of claims tribunals' Sec.110-C of the Motor Vehicles Act 1939 reads as follows:

"110-C: Procedure and powers of claims tribunals: (1) In holding any inquiry under Sec.110-B the claims tribunal may subject to any rules that may be made in this behalf follow such summary procedure as it thinks fit.

(2) The claims tribunal shall have all the powers of a Civil Court for the purpose of taking evidence on oath and of enforcing the attendance of witnesses and of compelling the discovery and production of documents and material objects and for other purposes as may be prescribed; and the claims tribunal shall be deemed to be a civil court for all the purposes of Sec.195 and Chapter XXVI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974).

(2-A) Where in the course of any inquiry the claims tribunal is satisfied that--

(i) there is collusion between the person making the claim and the person against whom the claim is made, or

(ii) the person against whom the claim is made has failed to contest the claim, it may for reasons to be recorded by it in writing, direct that the insurer who may be liable in respect of such claim, shall be impleaded as a party to the proceeding and the insurer so impleaded shall thereupon have the right to contest the claim on all or any of the grounds that are available to the person against whom the claim has been made.

(3) Subject to any rules that may be made in this behalf, the claims tribunal may, for the purpose of adjudicating upon any claim for compensation choose one or more persons possessing special knowledge of any matter relevant to the inquiry to assist it in holding the inquiry."

The relevant rule framed in this regard by the Tamil Nadu Government is rule No.18 which reads as follows:

"18. Code of Civil Procedure to apply in certain cases...

The following provisions of the First Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, shall so far as may be apply to proceedings before the claims tribunal namely O.5, Rules 9 to 13 and 15 to 30 O.9, O.13, Rules 3 to 10; O.16, Rules 1 to 21; O.17 and O.23, Rules 1 to 3."

9. The contention of Mrs. Bhagirathi Narayanan was that neither Sec.110-C (2) nor Rule 18 refers to O.47, C.P.C. to enable the tribunal to invoke the power of review. Therefore according to the learned counsel the tribunal has no jurisdiction to review its earlier order as it has otherwise no inherent jurisdiction.

10. On the first blush the above argument is not only attractive but appeals for acceptance. However, it requires a detailed discussion.

11. In P.N. Thakersh v. Pradyumen Singhji, A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1273, the Supreme Court has held as follows:

"The first question that we have to consider is whether Mr. Mankodi had competence to quash the order made by the Saurashtra Government on October 22, 1956. It must be remembered that Mr. Mankodi was functioning as the delegate of the State Government. The order passed by Mr. Mankodi in law amounted to a review of the order made by Saurashtra Government. It is well settled that the power to review is not an inherent power. It must be conferred by law either specifically or by necessary implication. No provisions in the act was brought to our notice from which it could be gathered that the Government had power to review its own order. If the Government had no power to review its own order it is obvious that its delegate could not have reviewed its order....."

The above ruling of the Supreme Court was applied by a Division Bench of this court in the case reported in V. Dhandayuthapani v. S.P. Krishnamurthi, A.I.R. 1988 Mad. 78. Again the ruling of the Supreme Court was applied in the case relied on by the learned counsel for the petitioner namely M/s. National Hotel v. Rukaiyabai, A.I.R. 1985 Bom. 403.

12. As against this it has to be found out whether the above ruling of the Supreme Court applied by this Court and the Bombay High Court as noticed above can be applied to the facts of this case.

13. In State of Haryana v. Smt. Darshana Devi, A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 855; 1979 A.C.J. 205, the Supreme Court while finding fault with the State of Haryana for filing a Special Leave Petition against the judgment of the Punjab and Haryana High Court granting leave to file a petition for compensation as indigent person under O.33, C.P.C. observed as follows:

".....The court must give the benefit of doubt against levy of a price to enter the temple of justice until one day the whole issue of the validity of profit making through sale of civil justice disguised as court-fee is fully reviewed by this Court. Before parting with this point we just express our poignant feeling that no State, it seems, has as yet framed rules to give effect to the benignant provision of legal aid to the power in O.33, Rule 9-A, Civil Procedure Code, although several years have passed since the enactment parliament is stultified and the people are frustrated. Even after a law has been enacted for the benefit of the poor the State does not bring into force by wilful default in fulfilling the condition sine qua non. It is a public duty of each great branch of Government to obey the rule of law and uphold the tryst with the Constitution by making rules to effectuate legislation meant to help the poor." Even though O.33, C.P.C. is not expressly mentioned either in the Motor Vehicles Act or in the rules framed thereunder by the respective states in the aforesaid Supreme Court Judgment the learned judges have upheld the leave granted under O.33, C.P.C. to file the application as indigent person.

14. Again the Supreme court in Bhagwathi Devi v. M/s.I.S.Goel, 1983 A.C.J. 123, held as follows:

"In view of the observations of this Court in State of Haryana v. Smt.Darshna Devi, 1979 A.C.J. 205; A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 855, we are of the view that the Motor Accident Claims Tribunal constituted under the Motor Vehicles Act is a civil court for the purpose of Sec.25 of the Code of the Civil Procedure. We are satisfied that the cases before us are fit cases for being transferred from the file of the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal, Moradabad to the file of the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal, Delhi. The transfer petitions are accordingly allowed and compensation application Nos.3 to 15 of 1982 pending before the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal, Moradabad are transferred to the file of the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal, Delhi."

Here again though Sec.25 of the Code of Civil Procedure was not referred to either in the Motor Vehicles Act or in the Rules framed thereunder the application of that section was justified by the Supreme Court.

15. Applying the principle laid down by the Supreme Court in Bhagwathi Devi v. M/s.I.S.Goel, 1983 A.C.J. 123, Srinivasan, J., in Kanniammal and others v. P.Narayanan and others, 1988 T.L.N.J. 310, has held as follows:

"Thus the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal having been held to be a civil court for the purpose of Sec.25, Code of Civil Procedure is certainly a court subordinate to the High Court for the purpose of Sec.24, Code of Civil Procedure.

xxx xxx xxx

According to learned counsel it is only those courts which are specifically referred to in Sec.3 Code of Civil Procedure are subordinate to High Court and not any other statutory tribunal which may be equated to civil court for certain purposes. Sec.110(c)(2) of the Motor Vehicles Act is to the effect that the tribunal shall have all the powers which civil courts have for taking evidence for enforcing the attendance of witness for discovery for production of documents and the like. It is also stated that the claim tribunal shall be deemed to be a civil court for the purpose of Sec.195 and Chapter 35, C.I.P.C., 1898 (Act 5 of 1898). In view of the decision of the Supreme Court and the provisions of Sec.110(c)(2) of the Motor Vehicles Act it is clear that the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal is a civil court for certain purposes. As it is held to be a civil Court for the purpose of Sec.25, Code of Civil Procedure it is necessarily a court subordinate to the High Court for the purpose of Sec.24, Code of Civil Procedure because it is a court of a grade inferior to that of a District Court....."

16. A Division Bench of this Court in S.V.R.Natarajan Chettiar v. State of Madras, I.L.R. 1960 Mad. 449, on the question whether the tribunal constituted under the Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1948, has got power to review its judgment held as follows:

"It is argued that this decision of the tribunal was without jurisdiction that the consent of the appellants could not confer jurisdiction upon the tribunal and that we must set aside the subsequent order illegally passed in the present appeal. The argument appears to us to be quite unsustainable upon two broad grounds. Firstly, whatever view we may take of the technical position whether a quasi judicial tribunal would or would not possess rights of review under the Code of Civil Procedure the proposition certainly seems maintainable that in order to render justice all such tribunals so long as they exercise judicial functions should be held to possess inherent powers to review their judgments where due cause is shown. Our attention has been drawn to a decision briefly reported in Balakrishnayya v. State of Andhra, where Balakrishna Aiyar, J. held under somewhat similar circumstances that the Inam Settlement Officer had no jurisdiction to reopen an enquiry made under Sec.9 of Act XXVI of 1948 at the question of the ryots. We do not think that it is necessary to dilate upon this aspect for the learned Judge was dealing with the case of a Settlement Officer making some kind of an administrative enquiry though under the act. In the present case we are concerned with a quasi-judicial tribunal giving a finding in the presence of the parties whether a particular village did or did not fall within the ambit of the relevant provision. As we have already stressed there can be no doubt that an inherent power to review should be presumed in all such cases, as it cannot be just and expedient that such tribunals rendering judicial decisions should be unable to rectify an error apparent on the face of the record or to exercise powers of review for similar adequate causes."

17. In New India Assurance Company Ltd. v. Minque Lourence Corriea, 1986 A.C.J. 646, a learned single Judge of the Bombay High Court on the question of power to review by Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal held as follows:

"On a careful consideration of the above authorities I am of the opinion that the decision of the Supreme Court in Northern India Caterers' case, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 674, is not of any help for the purpose of determining as to whether or not the power of review has to be expressly conferred. In fact the said authority deals with the problem as to when powers of review are to be exercised. However, the authority in P.N.Thakershi v. Pradyumen Singhji, A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1273, is more to the point. Their Lordships had made it clear that the power of review can be said to have been conferred in an authority or court if there is an express provision therefor or such power has to be read by necessary implication. Now applying these observations to the case before me I am bound to hold that powers of review have been vested in the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal. In fact Sec.3-A empowers the State Government to make rules for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of Secs.110 to 110-E of the Act and in particular to make rules enabling the claims tribunal to exercise the powers vested in a civil court. In exercise of such powers the Government of Goa, Daman and Diu has enacted the Goa, Daman and Diu Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal Rules 1966. Rule 6 specifically provides that the claims tribunal may exercise all the powers of a civil court save in so far as the same are not inconsistent with the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 and Rules framed thereunder. Rule 6 vests in the claims tribunal all the powers of a civil court which are not inconsistent with the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act and the rules framed thereunder. The power of review is by no stretch of imagination inconsistent with the provisions of the act and the rules framed thereunder. Thus it has to be held that the act read with the rules by necessary implication vests the power of review in the claims tribunal."

Though that judgment was in the light of the rules made in that State under Sec.111-A of the Motor Vehicles Act the point to be noticed is that there was no express provision either in the Act or rules framed thereunder.

18. We have now seen that the Supreme Court has categorically held that the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal is a civil court. Further the Supreme Court as well as this court had applied the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code not expressly mentioned either in the Act or in the Rules framed thereunder. Following that trend, and as observed by a Division Bench of this Court in the decision reported in S.V.R.Natarajan Chettiar v. State of Madras, I.L.R. 1960 Mad. 449, it should be held that the tribunal so long as it exercises judicial functions should be held to possess power to review its judgment where due cause is shown. In view of the later Supreme Court judgments holding that the tribunal is a civil court, I do not think that the ratio laid down by the Supreme Court in P.N.Thakershi v. Pradyumen Singhji, A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1273, can be pressed into service. In the light of the foregoing I am inclined to hold that the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal has jurisdiction to review its earlier order where due cause is shown.

19. Now coming to the second question whether the order is sustainable in the absence of any reason given therefor, in support of her contention that the order under revision cannot be sustained, the learned counsel for the petitioner cited a judgment of the Supreme Court in Col.Aviar Singh Skkhow v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 2041: (1981)1 S.C.R. 168, wherein the Supreme Court has observed as follows:

"A review is not a routine procedure. An earlier order cannot be reviewed unless the court is satisfied that material error manifest on the face of the order undermines its soundness or results in miscarriage of justice. A review of a judgment is a serious step and resort to it is proper only where a glaring omission or patent mistake or like grave error has crept in earlier by judicial fallibility....."

No doubt the above judgment supports the contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner. However, in the facts of the present case I find that equity is not in favour of the petitioner. Considering that I expected the petitioner to compromise the matter and for that purpose the matter was adjourned. However the learned counsel for the petitioner expressed her inability to persuade the petitioner to compromise the matter. In this connection, the exercise of the jurisdiction under Art.227 of the Constitution of India being discretionary I would like to quote and apply an observation of Ismail, J. as he then was while considering the scope of Sec.115 of the Code of Civil Procedure in Chennichi alias Parikkal v. Srinivasan Chettiar, (1970)1 M.L.J. 234, which reads as follows:

"The revisional jurisdiction of the court is intended to secure and subserve ends of justice and not to deny or defeat it if interference in a particular case will result in hardship or injustice to a party the High Court will be justified in refusing to interfere in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction, even if the order is found to be one without jurisdiction."

The above passage has been approved and applied by a Division Bench of this Court in S.N.Kuba v. P.P.L.Vaithyanathan, 1988 T.L.N.J. 1, I am inclined to apply the above ratio to the facts of this case and declined to exercise my discretionary jurisdiction in favour of the petitioner. Accordingly the civil revision petition fails and the same is dismissed. No costs.

Amsath Ansari Jawahar and another....Appellants

(A) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.41, Rule 22 - Preliminary decree for partition - Defendant filing appeal against decree - Plaintiff preferring cross-objection after a delay of over 6 years - Memorandum of cross-objections whether can be dismissed on ground of delay - Period of limitation for cross-objections.

(B) Letters Patent (Madras), Clause 15 - Single Judge of High Court dismissing cross-objections on the ground of limitation - Appeal against - If maintainable.

Rule 22, O.41, C.P.C. has clearly envisaged a cross-objection not only when a respondent in the appeal can take by way of appeal a matter to the court where a part of the decree has gone against him, but also in a case where the decree is entirely in his favour but a certain finding is, according to him, erroneous or has gone against him. A cross-objection is treated at par with the appeal and heard along with the appeal if the appeal is not dismissed for any reason of default or withdrawn by the appellant. When, however, the appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default, the objection so filed is treated as an appeal by the respondent and heard, independently. The provision in Rule 22 of O.41, however, has given a right to the respondent to approach the court for adjudication of any issue that has been decided against him or any part of the decree that has gone against him within a period of one month from the date of service on him or his pleader of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal or within such time as the appellate court may see fit to allow. It has not affected the court's power to enter into any issue that has been decided against the respondent and in favour of the appellant or to interfere with that part of the decree which has been in favour of the appellant and has gone against the respondent. The period of limitation for cross-objection is different as found in Rule 22, O.41, C.P.C. from the period of limitation for appeal against a decree. It starts running from the day of the service of notice on the day fixed for hearing the appeal. The period of 30 days under Rule 22 is not a fixed period in the sense that unless sufficient cause is shown in terms of Sec.5 of the Limitation Act, the court cannot accept a cross-objection beyond 30 days of the service of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal. The words 'or within such further time as the appellate court may see fit to allow' in sub-rule (1) of Rule 22 of O.41 of the Code are indicative of the discretion of the court in appropriate cases to give further time to a respondent than the period of one month from the date of service of notice of appeal for filing the cross-objection. As to when and how the appellate court can think fit to allow further time, however, is a question that can be answered only by saying that it shall be a decision taken on the facts of each case.

There can be no dispute that the appeal is maintainable against the judgment of the learned single Judge dismissing the cross-objection on the ground of limitation.

Appeals under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the order of Srinivasan, J., dated 20.1.1992 and made in the exercise of the Appellate Jurisdiction of the High Court in C.M.P. Nos. 16659, 12830, 12829 and 12828 of 1991 respectively in Appeal No. 148 of 1984 (O.S. No. 316 of 1980 dated 24.9.1983 on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Madurai).

M. Velusami, for Appellants.

K. Vaitheswaran, for Respondent No. 1.

S. V. Jayaraman, for Respondent Nos. 4 to 6.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.:- The petition to condone delay of several years in filing a memo of cross-objection has been dismissed by a learned single Judge of this Court. He has accordingly dismissed the memo of cross-objection. He has also dismissed a petition for adding proposed parties as respondents 6 to 10 in the appeal A.S. No. 148 of 1984 which is filed against the decree of the Court of the III Additional Subordinate Judge, Madurai (in O.S. No. 316 of 1980). He has also rejected the application for interim injunction against the 1st respondent (1st defendant) in the suit and the proposed respondents. These appeals have been filed against the order common to all these petitions. The plaintiff/appellant filed the original suit for partition of certain properties between the plaintiff and the defendants in the suit. While the suit was pending it appears that Land Acquisition proceedings started with respect to item No. 7 of 'C' Schedule properties in the suit. It was contended before the trial court on behalf of the defendants that there can be no division of a property which has been subjected to the land acquisition proceedings. The trial court decreed the suit for partition in respect of other properties, but excluded item No. 7 of 'C' schedule properties on the ground that it had been subjected to land acquisition proceedings. The first defendant, aggrieved by the decree for partition in respect of the joint estate has preferred appeal A.S. No. 148 of 1984. It appears however that the Land Acquisition Proceedings in respect of item No. 7 of the 'C' schedule property were later withdrawn. The appellants herein also learnt however that the first defendant intended to dispose of the said item No. 7 of 'C' schedule properties taking advantage of the fact that it was excluded from partition decree by the trial Court. The plaintiff/respondent moved this court with an application for injunction against the 1st defendant and the proposed transferees and also preferred cross-objection to the appeal of the 1st defendant/appellant in A.S. No. 148 of 1984, with a petition for condonation of delay. The delay has been inordinate extending to a period of 6 years and 79 days. Learned single Judge has rejected the petition for condonation of delay holding that the delay is entirely due to the negligence on the part of the appellant/plaintiff herein. In his words:

"When the decree of the court below has negatived the claim of the petitioners for partition of item No. 7 of 'C' schedule as acquisition proceedings were pending, it is the duty of the petitioners to verify whether the judgment was based on proper reasoning. The petitioners would have certainly found out if the reasons given by the court below were erroneous and would have taken steps to prefer a regular appeal or cross-objections in time. The delay is entirely due to the negligence on the part of the petitioners. I do not find any justification to condone the delay."

He has as a consequence rejected the cross-objection as well as the petitions for injunction.

2. A suit for partition until preliminary decree stage is a suit for determination of the extent of shares of the parties and extends to all such properties which may be found in the common hotch-pot of the joint family of the parties. It is for that reason that it is said that in a suit for partition the plaintiff is in the position of a defendant and the defendant is in the position of a plaintiff. Only because there has been a land acquisition proceeding, it is difficult to conceive any impediment in making a declaration as to the extent of shares between the parties in the property that was subjected to acquisition under the Land Acquisition Act. When a property is subjected to land acquisition and there is a dispute as to who is the owner of the property or there is a dispute as to the extent of the rights and interests of various persons in such a property, for grant of compensation, Secs. 18 and 30 of the Land Acquisition Act take care of such disputes. Item 7 of 'C' schedule could have been continued as a joint estate for the purposes of preliminary decree in the suit, as there was no abatement of the suit in respect of the said item of the property, merely because there was a land acquisition proceeding. But if it was contended, no prejudice was caused to either party by such exclusion for claims, for, compensation or apportionment thereof could be made by each co-owner of the property under Sec. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act or in the event of a dispute as to the interest or extent thereof under Sec. 30 of the said Act. If no cross-objection was filed thus for the reason that item No. 7 of 'C' Schedule property had been excluded from the joint estate of the parties although the court decreed the suit of the plaintiff for partition of the joint estate, by the plaintiff, no serious blame for that can be put upon the plaintiff/appellant.

3. O. 41 of the Code of Civil Procedure which takes care of the proceedings in appeal has made a specific provision under Rule 22 thereof that:

"Any respondent, though he may not have appealed from any part of the decree, may not only support any decree but may also state that the finding against him in the court below in respect of any issue ought to have been in his favour, and may also take any cross-objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed such objection in the appellate court within one month from the date of service on him or his pleader of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal, or within such further time as the appellate court may see fit to allow."

The rule has got an explanation which reads as follows:

"A respondent aggrieved by a finding of the court in the judgment on which the decree appealed against is based may, under this rule, file cross-objection in respect of the decree in so far as it is based on that finding, notwithstanding that by reason of the decision of the court on any other finding which is sufficient for the decision of the suit, the decree, is, wholly or in part, in favour of that respondent."

The rule also indicates the form of objection and provisions applicable to the same and says:

"Where, in any case in which any respondent has under this rule filed a memorandum of objection, the original appeal is withdrawn or is dismissed for default, the objection so filed may nevertheless be heard and determined after such notice to the other parties as the court thinks fit."

This rule has clearly envisaged a cross-objection not only when a respondent in the appeal can take by way of appeal a matter to the court whether a part of the decree has gone against him, but also in a case where the decree is entirely in his favour, but a certain finding is, according to him, erroneous or has gone against him. A cross-objection is treated at par with the appeal and heard along with the appeal if the appeal is not dismissed for any reason of default or withdrawn by the appellant. When however the appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default, the objection so filed is treated as an appeal by the respondent and heard independently. The provision in Rule 22 of O. 41 however has given a right to the respondent to approach the court for adjudication of any issue that has been decided against him or any part of the decree that has gone against him within a period of one month from the date of service on him or his pleader of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal or within such further time as the appellate court may see fit to allow. It has not affected the court's power to enter into any issue that has been decided against the respondent and in favour of the appellant or to interfere with that part of the decree which has been in favour of the appellant and has gone against the respondent. The appellate court's power is spelt out in Rule 33 in this behalf in these words:

"The appellate court shall have power to pass any decree and make any order which ought to have been passed or made and to pass or make such further or other decree or order as the case may require, and this power may be exercised by the Court notwithstanding that the appeal is as to part only of the decree and may be exercised in favour of all or any of the respondents or parties, although such respondents or parties may not have filed any appeal or objection and may, where there have been decrees in cross-suits or where two or more decrees are passed in one suit, be exercised in respect of all or any of the decrees, although an appeal may not have been filed against such decrees.

Provided that the appellate court shall not make any order under Sec.35-A, in pursuance of any objection on which the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has omitted or refused to make such order."

When we, however, advert to the facts of this case we find no reason to limit the filing of the cross-objection within the period of limitation for appeal against the decree. The period of limitation for cross-objection is different as found in Rule 22, O.41, C.P.C. from the period of limitation for appeal against a decree. It starts running from the day of the service of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal. The period of 30 days under Rule 22 is not a fixed period in the sense that unless sufficient cause is shown in terms of Sec.5 of the Limitation Act, the Court cannot accept a cross-objection filed beyond 30 days of the service of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal. The words 'or within such further time as the Appellate Court may see fit to allow' in Sub-rule (1) of Rule 22, O.41 of the Code are indicative of the discretion of the Court in appropriate cases to give further time to a respondent than the period of one month from the date of service of notice of appeal for filing the cross-objection. As to when and how the appellate court can see it fit to allow further time, however, is a question that can be answered only by saying that it shall be decision taken by the appellate court bearing and depending on facts of each case. We are in the instant case constrained to observe that there is absolutely nothing in the impugned order to show as to when the plaintiff was served with the notice of appeal and when the period of one month from the date of service of notice expired. We have not been able to understand how the cross-objection limitation could be based on the understanding of the plaintiff/respondent of the decree of the appellate court negating his claim for partition of item No.7 of 'C' schedule. Cross-objection's delay cannot be mixed up with any party respondent not filing a regular appeal. It has to be decided independently and viewed independently.

4. It is a case in which we have to take notice of the conduct of the first defendant/respondent herein who took the stand before the trial court that since land acquisition proceedings had started in respect of item 7 of 'C' schedule properties, the same should be excluded from partition and on this representation of the first defendant/respondent herein, the trial court excluded item 7 of 'C' schedule property from partition decree. He has known that the plaintiff/appellant had included the suit property in the hotchpot and sought partition. He could not, as the law permitted the appellant to do so, deny to the appellant the right to approach proper authorities under the Land Acquisition Act for his share of compensation or for determination of his interest in the land acquired in accordance with law. He could not similarly deny to the appellant the right to get a declaration and accordingly a partition of item 7 of 'C' schedule properties in the suit. He, it appears, however, took advantage of the withdrawal of acquisition proceedings and release of item 7 of 'C' schedule properties from the land acquisition and proposed to sell and it appears has sold it to the proposed respondents for consideration. He has, to say the least, not acted bona fide and has given to the appellant a fait accompli of transfer of item 7 of 'C' schedule to the proposed respondents. We ask ourselves: "Can this be not a ground to see it fit to allow further time to the appellant to file cross-objection in the appeal A.S.No.148 of 1984?"

5. The learned single Judge has passed a composite order. He has dismissed the application of the appellant to add proposed respondents. This Court has in Ramaswami Chettiar v. Kanniappa Mudaliar, 60 M.L.J. 237, Selvam Mudaliar v. Raju Mudaliar, (1962) 2 M.L.J. 657 and A.B. Manavala Chettiar v. T.V. Selvarajan and others, 1991 T.L.N.J. 166, has taken the view that no appeal under clause 15 of the Letters Patent lies against an order dismissing the application for addition of parties under O.1, Rule 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure or an order to add a party. We have in B.G. Lingam v. Mrs. Statesenko Larissa, O.S.A. Nos. 8 and 25 of 1987, judgment dated 19.11.1992, gone into this aspect of the law, and observed on the basis of some of the principles of law stated by the Supreme Court in its judgments, like Sha Babulal Khimji v. Jayaben, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 1786; (1981) 4 S.C.C. 8 and Jugal Kishore Paliwal v. Satjit Singh, (1984) 1 S.C.C. 358, that it may not in all situations be correct to hold that no appeal shall lie against an order either refusing to add or to add a party/defendant in a suit. This we have observed in view of the law that concept of a judgment as defined by the Code of Civil Procedure is rather narrow. There can be three kinds of judgments, a final judgment, a preliminary judgment and intermediary or interlocutory judgment, while there can be no manner of doubt that appeal shall lie against the first two kinds of judgments, in case of an intermediary or interlocutory judgment it will always be necessary to see whether it vitally affects a valuable right of the defendant, whether it is a judgment of moment and whether otherwise it is an appealable judgment. We have also observed that when an order granting leave to amend the plaint by introducing a new cause of action in certain circumstances is an appealable order/judgment, there is no reason to say that an order to add a party is not an appealable order, because we have seen in that case in some detail that here is always a consequential amendment of the plaint to an order to add a party-defendant. In that case we have also found that no exception can be taken to the Court suo motu ordering addition of a party.

6. In the instant case, however we are not required to decide whether an appeal against the order dismissing the application to add the parties is maintainable. There can be no dispute that the appeal is maintainable against the judgment of the learned single Judge dismissing the cross-objection on the ground of limitation. Sitting in appeal, we have the same discretion to decide whether a certain person is a necessary party or not.

7. On the facts of this case, we would have decided to remit the case to the learned single Judge for a decision as to whether this is a fit case for the exercise of discretion for extending time for filing the cross-objections; but we do not intend to do so for the reason that even if there is no cross-objection the appellate court has got the power to go into that part of the judgment of the trial court wherein it has decided to exclude item 7 of 'C'-schedule property from partition, that being an issue decided by the trial court in the suit, whether in the final judgment or at any inter-locutory stage is a ground that may be available to a party in the appeal and exercising appellate power, we have every reason to believe it shall act in the interest of justice and shall take notice of all relevant aspect of the case, so that nothing unjust occurs and no person is denied his due in accordance with law. The appellant herein shall for the reason the dismissal of the cross-objection not suffer any injury except that in case the first defendant would withdraw his appeal, the court shall have no appeal before it to decide, but had the cross-objection been there, he would have asked for its disposal in accordance with law, even after the dismissal of the appeal for default or withdrawal. We propose accordingly to leave the matter at the ultimate discretion of the appellate court at the hearing of the appeal to decide how it shall determine the controversy between the parties and how shall it finally administer justice, exercising its power under Rule 33, O.41, Code of Civil Procedure. We however think it necessary to order that the development in the suit are such that the transferees from the 1st defendant are necessary for effective and final adjudication of the controversy between the parties. They have to be added in the appeal, and accordingly they have been heard by us through their counsel.

8. In the result, all the appeals are disposed of with the direction as above. The appeal A.S.No. 148 of 1984 shall be taken up in the presence of proposed respondents, namely, - D. Thanabackiam, K.M. Madasami, R. Rajeswari, S. Subramanian and B. Murugeswari, the transferees from the 1st defendant. No costs.

C.R.P.No.1096 of 1992 3rd September, 1992

A. Radhakrishnan ...Petitioner
v.

Auvadai Ammal and another ...Respondents.

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O. 6, Rule 17 - Suit for permanent injunction restraining defendants from interfering with his possession - Defendants claiming that they were in possession of suit properties - Plaintiff therefore filing petition to amend the plaint praying for declaration that he is absolute owner of the suit property or in the alternative for a direction to defendants to deliver vacant possession of suit properties - Amendment held must be allowed.

The petitioner originally filed a suit for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with his peaceful possession of the suit properties and for costs. The defendants stated in the written statement that they were in possession of the suit properties. Therefore, the plaintiff filed an application for amendment seeking two new prayers, (i) for a declaration that the plaintiff was the absolute owner of the suit property, and (ii) for a direction to the defendants to deliver vacant possession of the plaint properties failing which to direct the Officer of the trial Court to put the plaintiff in vacant possession of the suit properties. The trial Court dismissed the application holding that the amendment would change the nature of the suit. In revision,

Held: The plaintiff has stated all the facts with regard to his title and also his possession and by way of the amendment, he seeks to introduce a new prayer based on the pleadings already brought by him in the plaint. Applying the ratio in the decision in A.K. Gupta and Sons Ltd. v. Damodar Valley Corporation, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 96, the plaintiff is entitled to have the plaint amended and the contention of the learned counsel for the respondents that the plaintiff is introducing a new cause of action or a new case cannot be countenanced. Even after the closing of the evidence, the plaint was allowed to be amended in the judgment reported in Gopi Pillai v. Dr. Swamy, 93 L.W. 317. Therefore, the defendants will not be prejudiced in allowing this amendment and in the circumstances, the order of the lower court refusing to amend the plaint is not in accordance with law.

Petition under Sec. 115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the order of the City Civil Court (XVIII Assistant Judge), Madras, dated 25.2.1992 and made in I.A.No.19921 of 1991 in O.S.No.9306 of 1989.

T.V. Ramanujam, for Petitioner.

D. Nellaiappan, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The civil revision petition is taken up today for final disposal by consent of parties. This revision is filed against the order made in an application for amendment of plaint in LA.No.19921 of 1991 in O.S.No.9306 of 1989 on the file of the learned XVII Assistant City Civil Judge, Madras, dismissing the application filed under O.6, Rule 17 and Sec.151, C.P.C. The original plaint is for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants, their agents, servants and men or every one claiming under them or acting on their behalf from in any way interfering with the plaintiff's peaceful possession and enjoyment of the suit properties, more fully described in the Schedules A, B and C in the plaint and for costs. In this application for amendment the plaintiff seeks to introduce certain facts which are detailed by him in his application and the plaintiff also seeks to introduce two new prayers (i) for a declaration that the plaintiff is the absolute owner of the suit property more fully described in the schedule A, B and C, and (ii) for a direction to the defendants to deliver vacant possession of the plaint, A, B and C Schedule properties to the plaintiff within the time to be fixed by the trial court failing which to direct the officer of the trial court to put the plaintiff in vacant possession of the abovesaid schedule properties. The second prayer for delivery of vacant possession is an alternative one. The alternative prayer has been taken up by the plaintiff possibly on the ground that the defendants have stated in the written statement that they are in possession of the suit properties. The trial court dismissed the application for amendment on the ground that the proposed amendment will change the nature of the suit.

2. In this revision Mr.T.V.Ramanujam, learned counsel for the petitioner contended that the proposed two prayers are only in the nature of additional reliefs on the pleadings already made in the plaint. In the original plaint, there is a pleading that the plaintiff is the owner of the suit properties. In para 6 of the plaint, the plaintiff has stated that he is in lawful possession and enjoyment of the suit properties as full owner thereof and he is exercising all the acts of ownership. Further, the plaintiff has stated that he has got patta in his name and that in pursuance of the sanctioned plan granted by the Corporation of Madras, he has put up construction in the suit properties in his capacity as full owner thereof. In the cause of action paragraph, the plaintiff has stated that he had purchased the suit properties on 17.7.1985 and that he has been put in possession thereof in pursuance of the sale deed and from which date the plaintiff has been exercising all acts of ownership over the suit properties. In paragraph 8 of the plaint, the plaintiff has stated that for the past one week, the defendants are making attempts to trespass upon the suit properties with the help of rowdy elements and that the plaintiff has protested against the same. Therefore, Mr. T.V.Ramanujam, learned counsel for the petitioner argued that there is no charge of cause of action nor any new suit has been introduced by way of this amendment. According to him, the order of the lower court refusing amendment is illegal. In support of his contention, he relied upon the judgment reported in Narayanan Chettiar v. Rathinasabapathy Ayyar and others, 29 M.L.J. 464 (D.B.). The Division Bench has observed as follows:

"Where the plaint as originally presented asked merely for a declaration that a decree obtained by the plaintiff against the defendants' father was binding on them but subsequently a prayer was allowed to be added by way of amendment of the plaint seeking for a direction to the defendants to pay the amount of the decree."

While narrating the facts of the case, the Division Bench stated as follows:

"On 21.8.1901, the plaintiff obtained a decree on a promissory note against defendants' father in O.S.No.295 of 1901. During the pendency of the execution proceedings defendant's father died. Plaintiff sought to execute the decree against the defendants but was unable to realise the amount from them. On 7.8.1907 plaintiff instituted the suit which is the subject of the present second appeal. The suit as originally framed was for a declaration that the decree in O.S.No.295 of 1901 was binding on the defendants and that they were liable to pay the decree debt to the extent of the ancestral property in their possession. The defendants contended inter alia that the plaintiff should have asked for further relief in the suit viz., the recovery of the decree amount from the defendants. On 24.2.1908 the plaintiff applied for leave to amend the plaint and the District Munsif passed an order allowing the amendment. The plaint was accordingly amended and a prayer for the recovery of the decree amount from the defendants was inserted on 15.7.1908. The District Judge on appeal, held that, though the suit was instituted within 6 years from the decree in O.S.No.295 of 1901, the amendment asked for a new and distinct relief, viz., the recovery of the decree amount from the family property of the defendants and that to allow the amendment after the period of limitation would be to deprive the defendants of a defence open to them at law, consequently he refused to allow the amendment and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. Against this, the plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court." ".....The lower courts have held that the suit was barred because at the date of the amendment the decree was more than 6 years old and a suit such as the present suit came after the amendment, would have been barred, had it been instituted at the date of the amendment. In our opinion the lower courts have misunderstood the law applicable to the facts before them. The plaintiff did not seek to plead any new facts when he applied for leave to amend the plaint. All he desired to do was to be allowed to ask for a fresh relief on the facts already pleaded."

3. In the present case, the plaintiff has already pleaded that he is the owner of the suit property and that he is in possession of the same and he has originally filed the suit for a bare injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with the possession of the plaintiff. By way of this amendment, he seeks to introduce the prayer for a declaration of title and also for recovery of possession of the suit properties, in case the court finds that the defendants are in possession of the suit property as pleaded by him in the written statement.

4. In Firm Srinivas Ram Kumar v. Mahabir Prasad and others, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 177, the Supreme Court has observed as follows:

"A plaintiff may rely upon different rights alternatively and there is nothing in the C.P.C. to prevent a party from making two or more inconsistent sets of allegations and claiming relief thereunder in the alternative. Ordinarily, the court cannot grant relief to the plaintiff on a case for which there was no foundation in the pleadings and which the other side was not called upon or has an opportunity to meet. But, when the alternative case, which the plaintiff could have made, was not only admitted by the defendant in his written statement but was expressly put forward as an answer to the claim which the plaintiff made in the suit, there would be nothing improper in giving the plaintiff a decree upon the case which the defendant himself makes. A demand of the plaintiff based on the defendant's own plea cannot possibly be regarded with surprise by the latter and no question of adducing evidence on these facts would arise when they were expressly admitted by the defendant in his pleadings. In such circumstances, when no injustice can possibly result to the defendant it may not be proper to drive the plaintiff to a separate suit.

Thus, where in a suit for specific performance of a contract, in part performance of which the plaintiff alleges to have paid the defendant some money, the defendant denies the contract and pleads that the money was taken by him as a loan, the court can pass a decree for recovery of the loan in favour of the plaintiff on his failure to prove the contract even though the plaintiff had failed to plead and claim relief on this alternative case."

5. In support of the contention of the plaintiff, Mr.T.V.Ramanujam, learned counsel, relied upon the judgment reported in A.K. Gupta & Sons Ltd. v. Damodar Valley Corporation, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 96: (1967)1 S.C.J. 223, wherein the Supreme Court has observed as follows:

"In the matter of allowing amendment of pleading the general rule is that a party is not allowed by amendment to set up a new case or a new cause of action particularly when a suit on the new cause of action is barred. Where, however, the amendment does not constitute the addition of a new cause of action or raise a different case, but amounts merely to a different or additional approach to the same facts to amendment is to be allowed even after expiry of the statutory period of limitation."

The Supreme Court has also observed as under:

"The principal reasons that have led to the rule last mentioned are, first, that the object of Court and Rules of procedure is to decide the rights of the parties and not to punish them for their mistakes (Cropper v. Smith, (1884) 26 Ch.D. 700 (710-711)), and secondly, that a party is strictly not entitled to rely on the statute of limitation when what is sought to be brought in by the amendment can be said in substance to be already in the pleading sought to be amended (Kisandas Rupchand v. Rachappa Vithoba, (1909) I.L.R. 33 Bom. 644 at 651, approved in Pirgonda Hongonda Patil v. Kalgonda Shidgonda, A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 363; 1957 S.C.J. 392; 1957 S.C.R. 657; 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 314.

The expression "cause of action". In the present context does not mean "every fact which is material to be proved to entitle the plaintiff to succeed" as was said in Cooke v. Gill, (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 107 (116), in a different context, for if it were so, no material fact could ever be amended or added and, of course, no one would want to change or add an immaterial allegation by amendment. That expression for the present purpose only means, a new claim made on a new basis constituted by new facts. Such a view was taken in Robinson v. Union Property Corporation Ltd., (1962) 2 All E.R. 24 and it seems to us to be the only possible view to take. Any other view would make the rule futile. The words "new case" have been understood to mean "new set of ideas" Dornan v. J.W. Ellis and Company Ltd., (1962) 1 All E.R. 303. This also seems to us to be a reasonable view to take. No amendment will be allowed to introduce a new set of ideas to the prejudice of any right acquired by any party by lapse of time 2.

6. In M/s. Ganesh Trading Company v. Moji Ram, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 98, the Supreme Court has observed as follows:

"Procedural law is intended to facilitate and not to obstruct the course of substantive justice. Provisions relating to pleadings in civil cases are meant to give to each side intimation of the case of the other so that it may be met, to enable courts to determine what is really at issue between parties, and to prevent deviations from the course which litigation on particular causes of action must take.

O.6, Rule 2, C.P.C. says:

Every pleading shall contain, and contain only a statement in a concise form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence, as the case may be, but not the evidence by which they are to be proved, and shall, when necessary, be divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively. Dates, sums and numbers shall be expressed in figures."

O.6, Rule 4 indicates cases in which particulars of its pleading must be set out by a party. And O.6, Rule 6 requires only such conditions precedent to the distinctly specified in a pleading as a party wants to put in issue. O.6, Rule 5 provides for such "further and better statement of the nature of the claim or defence or further and better particulars of any matter stated in any pleading....." as the court may order, and "upon such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as may be just." O.6, Rule 7 contains a prohibition against departure of proof from the pleadings. After some provisions relating to special cases and circumstances and for signing, verification and striking out of pleadings, comes O.6, Rule 17 which reads as follows:

The court may at any stage of the proceedings allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and on such terms as may be just, and all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties."

It is clear from the foregoing summary of the main rules of pleadings that provisions for the amendment of pleadings, subject to such terms as to costs and giving of all parties concerned necessary opportunities to meet exact situations resulting from amendment, are intended for promoting the ends of justice and not for defeating them. Even if a party if its counsel is inefficient in setting out its case initially the shortcoming can certainly be removed, generally by appropriate steps taken by a party which must no doubt pay costs for the inconvenience or expense caused to the other side from its omissions. The error is not incapable of being rectified so long as remedial steps do not unjustifiably injure rights accrued.

It is true that, if a plaintiff seeks to alter the cause of action itself and to introduce indirectly, through an amendment of his pleadings, an entirely new or inconsistent cause of action, amounting virtually to the substitution of a new plaint or a new cause of action in place of what was originally there, the court will refuse to permit it if it amounts to depriving the party, against which a suit is pending, of any right which may have accrued in its favour due to lapse of time. But, mere failure to set out even an essential fact does not, by itself, constitute a new cause of action. A cause of action is constituted by the whole bundle of essential facts which the plaintiff must prove before he can succeed in his suit. It must be antecedent to the institution of the suit, if any essential fact is lacking from averments in the plaint the cause of action will be defective. In that case, an attempt to supply the omission has been and could some time be viewed as equivalent to as introduction of a new cause of action which, cured of its shortcomings, has really become a good cause of action. This, however, is not the only possible interpretation to be put on every defective state of pleadings. Defective pleadings are generally curable if the cause of action sought to be brought out was not ab initio completely absent. Even very defective pleadings may be permitted to be cured, so as to constitute a cause of action where there was none, provided necessary conditions, such as payment of either any additional court-fees, which may be payable, or, of costs of the other side are complied with. It is only if lapse of time has barred the remedy on a newly constituted cause of action that the Courts should, ordinarily, refuse prayers for amendment of pleadings."

7. In Gopi Pillai v. Dr. Swamy, 93 L.W. 317, Sathiaddev, J. (as he then was) has held that in a suit for permanent injunction, amendment of plaint praying alternative prayer of recovery of possession, being filed after examination and after closing the evidence cannot be allowed. This judgment has been overruled by the Supreme Court in Gopi Pillai v. Dr. Swamy (1990) 1 L.W. 363, wherein it has been observed as under:

"The amendment has been sought for at rather early stage, i.e., before the trial was over and it neither alters the nature of the suit nor it works any serious injustice to the defendant who would certainly be entitled to file an additional written statement in order to rebut the allegations made in the amended plaint."

8. Mr. D. Nellaippan, learned counsel for the respondent relied upon the judgment reported in "Seeni Nadar and three others v. Thangamuthu and two others, (1990) T.N.L.J. 335, wherein Srinivasan, J. has held that a party shall not be allowed to set up a new case or new cause of action in between original plaint and the amendment sought for. The learned Judge has therefore upheld the order of the lower court refusing amendment. In that case, the suit was filed by the petitioners for bare injunction in the plaint and it was stated that the petitioners had purchased the properties on 6.8.1985 and since then they were in exclusive possession thereof. Apart from the allegation that the first defendant with a view to grab the suit properties along with the second defendant attempted to encroach the suit properties and cut the trees standing thereon from 17.5.1986, no other details were mentioned. The prayer in the suit was only for grant of injunction on the footing that the parties were in possession.

9. In the application for impleading parties to the suit, it is stated in the affidavit filed in support of the application that the petitioners entered into an agreement of sale on 17.5.1974 with the prior owner and paid the entire sale consideration and that possession was handed over to the petitioner on 17.5.1974 itself. This new case put forward in the affidavit is directly contrary to the case put forward in the original plaint that the petitioners were in possession since the date of sale on 6.3.1986. The affidavit proceeded to state that some other persons claimed to have obtained patta and the sale patta had been fraudulently obtained. It was alleged that the persons who claimed to have obtained patta had no right, title or interest in the suit properties and some officers belonging to the community of the defendants were working in the Revenue and Survey Department in Srivaikundam Taluk and with their help and at the instigation of the defendants patta had been fraudulently issued. It was further alleged that at the time of Commissioner's visit, the persons, who were sought to be impleaded as parties, were noted by the Commissioner to be in possession and therefore it was necessary to implead them as parties. But an allegation was made that those persons were never in possession of the property. At the same time, the application for amendment of the plaint was also made, the prayer is the application for amendment is to introduce certain paragraphs in the plaint and amend the prayer as one for declaration of exclusive title to the plaint property, for mandatory injunction directing the removal of the superstructure erected by the defendants and for injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with plaintiff's possession.

10. Thus it is seen that the case that is sought to be introduced by the amendment and by addition of parties is entirely different from the one that was put forward in the plaint initially filed. It is not only a case but it is also based on a different cause of action which is a new one and it would certainly change the entire character and nature of the suit.

11. The court below has rightly dismissed the application taking the view that the remedy of the plaintiffs would be to file separate suit and not to amend the plaint in the present suit. In these revision petitions, learned counsel for the petitioners contends that the court below is in error in refusing to allow the amendment and implead the parties.

12. Learned counsel for the petitioners placed reliance on the judgment of the court in P.K.Thimayya v. Krishnamma Naidu, 89 L.W. 604 and that case will have no bearing on the present case. Learned Counsel for the petitioners referred to a judgment of the Ganpat Singh v. Sher Bahadur Singh, A.I.R. 1978 All. 66. That judgment will not apply to the facts of the present case. Learned counsel for the petitioners relied on the decision in A.I.R. 1976 Karn. 89. The facts of that case were entirely different and the dictum will have no bearing on the present case. Learned counsel for the petitioners relied on the ruling of the Supreme Court in Gopi Pillai v. Dr.Swamy (1990) 1 L.W. 363. That decision has no bearing on the present case.

13. The petition is governed by the ruling of the Supreme Court in A.K.Gupta & Sons Ltd. v. Damodar Valley Corporation, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 96: (1967) 1 S.C.J. 223, Court holding that in the matter of allowing amendment of pleading the general rule is that a party is not allowed by amendment to set up a new case of a new cause of action particularly when a suit on the new cause of action is barred. It had also pointed out that where the amendment does not constitute the addition of a new cause of action or raise a different case, but it would only be a different or additional approach to the same facts, the amendment should be allowed even after the expiry of the statutory period of limitation. Applying this ruling laid down by the Supreme Court to the facts of the present case, it is seen that a new cause of action is introduced and entirely a different case is being brought in by the proposed amendment as well as addition of parties, I had already pointed out the inconsistency between the original pleading and the pleading that is sought to be introduced by the present proceedings. In these circumstances, if the dictum of the Supreme Court in A.K.Gupta & Sons Ltd. v. Damodar Valley Corporation, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 96: (1967) 1 S.C.J. 223, is applied to the facts of this case, the petitioners are not entitled to reliefs prayed for by them. Hence, the court below is right in dismissing the applications."

14. In the present case, the plaintiff has stated all the facts with regard to his title and also his possession and by way of this amendment, he seeks to introduce a new prayer based on the pleadings already brought by him in the plaint. Applying the ratio in the afore mentioned decision, the plaintiff is entitled to have the plaint amended and the contention of the learned counsel for the respondent that the plaintiff is trying to introduce a new cause of action or a new case cannot be countenanced. Even after the closing of the evidence, the plaint was allowed to be amended in the judgment reported in Gopi Pillai v. Dr.Swamy, 93 L.W. 317.

15. Therefore, the defendant will not be prejudiced in allowing this amendment and in the circumstances, the order of the lower court refusing to amend the plaint is not in accordance with law. Under the said circumstances, the order of the lower court is set aside and the civil revision petition is allowed without costs.

...Appellant

v.

The Tindivanam Co-operative Urban Bank Ltd.

...Respondent.

Constitution of India (1950), Art.311(2) - (After the Forty-second amendment) - Domestic enquiry - Delinquent not supplied with copy of enquiry report along with second show cause notice proposing punishment issued by disciplinary authority - Final order passed - Legality.

It is the settled position of law that where the disciplinary authority and the enquiring authority are different authorities and when the enquiry officer sends a report of the enquiry proceedings to the disciplinary authority, the delinquent is entitled to a copy of the report of the enquiry officer and the failure on the part of the disciplinary authority to send a copy of the report of the enquiry officer to the delinquent along with the second show cause notice proposing the punishment would amount to violation of the principles of natural justice and will render the final order illegal. [Para.7]

Union of India v. Mohd. Ramzan Khan, A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 471. [Para 7]

Appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the Order of S.Ramalingam, J. dated 30.8.1988 and made in the exercise of the Special Original Jurisdiction of the High Court in W.P.No.960 of 1982 presented under Art.226 of the Constitution of India to issue a writ of certiorarified mandamus, calling for the records from the first respondent relating to his orders dated 12.3.1977 and the records from the 2nd respondent relating to his appellate orders in T.S.E Case No.37 of 1979, dated 14.7.1981 quash both orders and to direct the first respondent to reinstate the petitioner as clerk with effect from 26.2.1976 with all monetary and service benefits deeming as if the petitioner continued in service without any blemish.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Somasundaram, J.:- This writ appeal has been filed against the order in W.P.No.960 of 1982 dismissing the writ petition praying for the issue of a writ of certiorarified mandamus to quash the order of the first respondent dated 12.3.1977 as confirmed by the order of the 2nd respondent in T.S.E. Case No.37 of 1979 dated 14.7.1981 and to direct the first respondent to reinstate the appellant as a clerk with effect from 26.2.1976 with all monetary and service benefits.

2. The appellant was a clerk in the first respondent Co-operative Urban Bank. On 28.2.1976 a memo of charge listing out 8 charges was served on the appellant and she was called upon to offer her explanations within 7 days. On 6.5.1976, the appellant submitted her reply. The Special Officer of the first respondent bank appointed an advocate as enquiry officer to conduct the domestic enquiry against the appellant. The enquiry officer issued notice to the appellant to appear for the enquiry on three occasions viz., 2.8.1976, 26.11.1976 and 7.12.1976. The appellant did not appear on any of these three occasions. Hence, the enquiry officer conducted the enquiry and examined all the witnesses who were available to depose in support of the charges framed against the appellant and gave his report on 31.1.1977 to the disciplinary authority, the first respondent herein, holding that all the charges framed against the appellant were proved. Thereafter, the second show-cause notice proposing the punishment of dismissal from service was issued to the appellant on 5.2.1977 by the first respondent calling upon her to submit her reply to the proposed punishment. The appellant submitted her reply to the second show-cause notice on 15.2.1977. The Special Officer of the first respondent bank passed orders on 12.3.1977 terminating the services of the appellant, stating that the explanation offered by her was not convincing. As against the order dated 12.3.1977, the appellant preferred an appeal to the 2nd respondent. Before the 2nd respondent the appellant as well as the first respondent bank let in oral and documentary evidence. On a consideration of the evidence that was tendered, the second respondent by his order dated 14.7.1981 upheld the order of termination dated 12.3.1977 passed by the first respondent. As against the said order of the 2nd respondent dated 14.7.1981, the appellant filed W.P.No.960 of 1982.

3. Before the learned single Judge, the following contentions were urged on behalf of the appellant:

“(A) Along with the charge memo the appellant was not furnished with the list of documents and list of witnesses relied on in support of the charges and the failure to furnish the list of documents and the list of witnesses will vitiate the entire proceedings.

(B) The appellant should have been furnished with the copies of the statements of witnesses recorded earlier to enable her to effectively cross examine the witnesses at the time of enquiry and the failure on the part of the first respondent to furnish the copies of the statement of the witnesses would also vitiate the entire disciplinary proceedings.

(C) The wording of the charges itself would indicate that there is preconceived conclusion arrived at even at the time of framing of the charges and therefore, the domestic enquiry conducted against the appellant was not fair and proper.

(D) The enquiry officer after completing the enquiry submitted a report of his enquiry proceedings to the disciplinary authority and the disciplinary authority failed to furnish a copy of the report of the enquiry officer to the appellant and the failure on the part of the disciplinary authority to supply a copy of the report of the enquiry officer would vitiate the enquiry since it is in violation of the principles of natural justice.

(E) During the period from 26.3.1976 to 12.3.1977 the appellant was not paid the subsistence allowance and the failure to pay the subsistence allowance to the appellant has prejudicated the defence of the appellant.

(F) The proceedings initiated against the appellant are mala fide and initiated at the instance of the Special Officer of the bank who had a personal animosity against the appellant.

(G) The punishment imposed against the appellant is disproportionate to the gravity of the alleged misconduct."

4. The learned single Judge did not accept any one of the contentions put forth on behalf of the appellant and consequently dismissed the writ petition. This writ appeal is directed against the order of the learned single Judge.

5. Before us, Mr.P.K.Rajagopal, the learned counsel for the appellant confined his submissions only to the following two points:

"(1) Admittedly the report of the enquiry officer holding that the charges framed against the appellant have been proved was not supplied to the appellant in spite of specific demand made by her for a copy of the enquiry report and the failure on the part of the disciplinary authority to furnish the copy of the report to the enquiry officer along with the second show-cause notice proposing punishment to be imposed on the appellant, will vitiate the entire proceedings and will render the orders challenged in the writ petition invalid.

(2) The appellant was not paid any subsistence allowance during the period from 26.2.1976 to 12.3.1977 and such non-payment of the subsistence allowance to the appellant for the period mentioned above will render the disciplinary proceedings invalid."

6. As far as the first contention of the learned counsel appearing for the appellant is concerned, the Special Officer of the first respondent bank has appointed an enquiry officer for the purpose of conducting the domestic enquiry into the charges framed against the appellant and the enquiry officer after completing the domestic enquiry submitted his report to the disciplinary authority stating that the charges framed against the appellant have been proved. Thereafter the 1st respondent sent a second show-cause notice dated 5.2.1977 to the appellant asking her to show-cause why she should not be removed from service of the bank. Admittedly the report of the enquiry officer sent to the disciplinary authority holding that the charges framed against the appellant have been proved was not supplied to the appellant along with the second show-cause notice dated 5.2.1977. Ex.A-5 is the reply dated 15.2.1977 sent by the appellant to the provisional conclusion about the punishment to be imposed. The appellant also sent another letter marked as Ex.A-6 in this case to the Special Officer of the first respondent bank requesting him to furnish a copy of the report of the enquiry officer. Ex.A-7 is the letter sent by the Special Officer, to the appellant declining to furnish the copy of the enquiry report on administrative reasons. The Special Officer of the first respondent bank has not stated what are the administrative reasons which disabled the first respondent bank from furnishing the copy of the report of the enquiry officer to the appellant.

7. It is the settled position of law that where the disciplinary authority and the enquiring authority are different authorities and when the enquiry officer sends a report of the enquiry proceedings to the disciplinary authority, the delinquent is entitled to a copy of the report of the enquiry officer and the failure on the part of the disciplinary authority to send a copy of the report of the enquiry officer to the delinquent along with the second show-cause notice proposing the punishment would amount to violation of the principles of natural justice and will render the final order illegal. In Union of India v. Mohd. Ramzan Khan, A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 471, the Supreme Court had occasion to deal with the question whether with the alteration of the provisions of Art.311(2) under the Forty Second Amendment of the Constitution doing away with the opportunity of showing cause against the proposed punishment, the delinquent has lost his right to be entitled to a copy of the report of enquiry in the disciplinary proceedings. The Supreme Court answering the question in negative has held as follows:

"Deletion of the second opportunity from the scheme of Art.311(2) of the Constitution has nothing to do with providing of a copy of the report to the delinquent in the matter of making his representation. Even though the second stage of the inquiry in Art.311(2) has been abolished by amendment, the delinquent is still entitled to represent against the conclusion of the Inquiry Officer holding that the charges or some of the charges are established and holding the delinquent guilty of such charges. For doing away with the effect of the enquiry report or to meet the recommendations of the Inquiry Officer in the matter of imposition of punishment, furnishing a copy of the report becomes necessary and to have the proceeding completed by using some material behind the back of the delinquent is a position not countenanced by fair procedure. While by law application of natural justice could be totally ruled out or truncated, nothing has been done here which could be taken as keeping natural justice out of the proceedings and the series of pronouncements of this Court making rules of natural justice applicable to such an inquiry are not affected by the 42nd amendment. We, therefore, come to the conclusion that supply of a copy of the inquiry report along with the recommendations, if any, in the matter of proposed punishment to be inflicted would be within the rules of natural justice and the delinquent would, therefore, be entitled to the supply of a copy thereof. The Forty-second Amendment has not brought about any change in this position."

The Supreme Court further observed as follows:

"We make it clear that wherever there has been an Inquiry Officer and he has furnished a report to the disciplinary authority at the conclusion of the inquiry holding the delinquent guilty of all or any of the charges with proposal for any particular punishment or not, the delinquent is entitled to a copy of such report and will also be entitled to make a representation against, it, if he so desires, and non-furnishing of the report would amount to violation of rules of natural justice and make the final order liable to challenge hereafter."

8. In the present case, admittedly the disciplinary authority has not supplied a copy of the report of the enquiry officer to the appellant inspite of specific demand made by the appellant for the copy of the report of enquiry officer. Therefore, in view of the settled position of law on this aspect, we have to hold that the failure on the part of the first respondent to furnish a copy of the report of the enquiry officer to the appellant along with the second show-cause notice, would amount to violation of the principles of natural justice which would render the final order of the 1st respondent dated 12.3.1977 as confirmed by the order of the second respondent dated 14.7.1981 invalid and therefore they are liable to be quashed. The appellant is entitled to succeed in this appeal on this ground alone. In these circumstances, we are unable to agree with the reason given by the learned single Judge in para 5 of his order in the writ petition, for not accepting the contention advanced on behalf of the appellant that the failure on the part of the first respondent to furnish the appellant with a copy of the report of the enquiry officer would vitiate the entire disciplinary proceedings.

9. As we are accepting the first contention of the learned counsel for the appellant and that the appellant is entitled to succeed on that ground alone as pointed out earlier it is not necessary to deal with the second contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that the non-payment of subsistence allowance to the appellant during the period from 26.2.1976 to 12.3.1977 would vitiate the disciplinary proceedings.

10. In view of the above discussion of ours we are obliged to interfere with the order of the learned single Judge in this writ appeal. Consequently, the writ appeal is allowed, the order of the learned single Judge is set aside and the W.P.No.960 of 1982 shall stand allowed. No costs.

...Petitioner

v.

Government of Tamil Nadu and others

...Respondents.

(A) Education - Admission - Applications for - Not in order or bereft of particulars - Effect.

(B) Education - Admission cannot be granted contrary to rules and regulations and against conditions of admission as noted in the prospectus.

The petitioner who belongs to a Backward Class and is a handicapped person appeared for the entrance examination for the B.L. evening course for the academic year 1992-93. He applied for the course under the handicapped quota. According to newspaper reports, he was selected against the quota. But he did not receive any intimation card. He contacted the Principal of the Law College, Madras, but did not get any response. He filed a petition for the issue of a writ of mandamus directing the respondents to admit the petitioner in the B.L. evening course. The respondent contended that another candidate who had secured more marks than the petitioner in the Entrance Examination was selected under the category of scheduled tribe, that later as he informed that he belonged only to a Backward Class and was handicapped and that therefore he might have to be selected in the place of the petitioner as he had got more marks.

Held: It is well-settled that in cases of admission, the applications have to be rejected if they are not in order or bereft of particulars. When a candidate sends an application form with incorrect particulars, the result always will be that the application has to be rejected summarily. [Para 9]

The petitioner should not suffer because of the action of the respondent authorities who have erred in discharging their duties as per the norms prescribed for admission. The respondent cannot take shelter stating that a candidate who described himself as belonging to a scheduled tribe now wants to get an allotment in the backward community-handicapped quota stating that he belongs to backward community. If the admission is granted contrary to the Rules and Regulations meaning thereby against the conditions of admission as noted in the prospectus, the respondents cannot take such a stand before this Court and try to explain why the petitioner has not been admitted into the B.L. course even though he was selected. Hence, the respondents are directed to admit the petitioner into the B.L. three year evening degree course. [Para 9]

K.S.Gnanasambandam, for Petitioner.

M.M.Sundaresh, Government Advocate, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: By consent of both parties, the main writ petition itself is taken up for final disposal, when the miscellaneous petition came up for hearing.

2. The petitioner has come up to this Court praying to issue a writ of mandamus directing the respondents herein to admit the petitioner in the B.L. evening course at Dr.Ambedkar Government Law College, Madras.

3. The facts leading to the filing of the writ petition are as follows:

The petitioner applied for B.L. Evening course for the academic year 1992-93 and appeared for the entrance examination. The petitioner belongs to Hindu Vaniyar community which is a backward class and he seems to be a handicapped candidate and as such he applied for the B.L. course under the handicapped quota wherein certain seats have been reserved for handicapped candidates. As per the entrance examination results published in the newspapers dated 7.8.1992, the petitioner seems to have been selected against the handicapped quota. When the petitioner did not receive the intimation card, he met the third respondent herein on 18.8.1992 complaining that he did not receive the intimation card. It seems the third respondent has not explained as to why the petitioner did not receive any such communication. The petitioner alleges in the affidavit that apart from securing good marks in the entrance examination he is entitled for the allotment of seats against the quota for physically handicapped persons. The petitioner also states that even though his entrance examination number found a place in the selected list he was not given admission in the Law College, Madras so far. At this stage, the petitioner has come up before this Court, with the prayer stated supra.

4. I ordered notice to respondents.

5. Learned Government Advocate appears with instructions. On instructions, the learned Government Advocate states that two candidates from backward class were provisionally selected to the 3 year evening course in Dr. Ambedkar Government Law College, Madras; that the petitioner is one among them, with marks 43.65 and the other candidate is one Dhanasekaran with 47.62 marks. On instructions, the learned Government Advocate states that the petitioner could not get admission for certain reasons. One Mr. M.R. Mani, a candidate for admission to three year (Evening) course in Dr. Ambedkar Government Law College, Madras applied for admission for 1992-93 under scheduled tribe category indicating the relevant code numbers in his application and in the coding sheet; that he has secured 45.25 marks in the entrance examination and was selected in the main list under scheduled tribe category. On instructions, the learned Government Advocate states that at the time of despatching selection intimation to the said M.R. Mani, it was found that he had not submitted his community certificate along with the application and that he was called upon by the Principal, the third respondent therein to produce the community certificate. The learned Government Advocate, on instructions also states that by letter dated 18.8.1992, the said M.R. Mani informed the principal, the third respondent herein that he is a physically handicapped candidate, that he belongs to backward class that he does not belong to scheduled tribe community, that he has committed a mistake in his application by mentioning that he belonged to scheduled tribe community and that he requested to admit him in the three year B.L. (Evening) Degree Course against the seats reserved for backward class-physically handicapped candidates. It seems that when the matter is under consideration of the department, the respondents herein, the petitioner has come up to this Court, as mentioned above.

6. Learned Government Advocate, on instructions states that in case the department decides to concede the request of the said M.R. Mani, to be considered as a backward class-physically handicapped quota, he may have to be selected in the place of the petitioner herein since the said M.R. Mani has got higher marks than the petitioner in the same category and that in such an event, the petitioner herein cannot be selected also.

7. I have considered the arguments on both sides.

8. The question to be decided in this writ petition is whether the petitioner has to be given a seat for which he was selected as published in the newspapers or the petitioner has to fall out because of the other candidate who comes later stating that he belongs to backward community and that he had mistakenly noted in the application that he belongs to scheduled tribe candidate.

9. It is well-settled that in cases of admission, the applications have to be rejected if they are not in order or bereft of particulars. The peculiarity in this case is that the candidate who has described himself as belonging to scheduled tribe has got admission in that category and when it was found that he did not belong to scheduled tribe category, he comes with a request to treat him in the backward class-handicapped quota. I do not see anything wrong in that request. But that request, if conceded, will effect the petitioner's admission into Law College. The petitioner has correctly filled up the application form stating that he belongs to backward class and he is also a handicapped candidate. As such, he had been provisionally selected in that category. The sudden confusion has been created because of the respondents, who have not verified the applications and community certificates at the first instance i.e., even before issuing the Hall tickets to appear for the entrance examination. If it had been done so earlier i.e., either before issuing hall-tickets to appear for the entrance examination or before the publication of the entrance test, this kind of confusion would not have occurred. Only after the publication of the list of admission, the said M.R. Mani made a request to change over from one community to another Community quota and wants to snatch away the seat from the petitioner herein. It is true that the said M.R. Mani has got more marks than the petitioner herein. It is also true that merit alone has to be considered in selecting the candidates for admission. But considering the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case on hand, I am of the view that the petitioner should not suffer for the inaction on the part of the authorities in the sense that they have not verified the application forms and the community certificates before the publication of results. In my view, the candidates like that of the petitioner should not be penalised for the fault of the authorities. It is true that there is only one seat left vacant. But I am of the view that the petitioner should not be denied that seat because another student comes with a new story that he belongs to backward class-handicapped category who had not followed the instructions shown in the application form in consonance with the prospectus issued for B.L. degree three years evening course. When a candidate sends an application form with incorrect particulars, the result always will be that the application has to be rejected summarily. That apart, the student, M.R.Mani, who now claims to belong to backward class-handicapped, has not sent the relevant community certificate with the application form. I do not understand how the respondent authorities entertained such an application even at the first instance, without valid verification of the community of the candidate. That apart, it is disheartening to note that the authorities, placed in the position as they are to admit students, have discharged their duty in a slipshod manner and have sent the intimation cards without verifying the particulars and comparing the certificate with the application form submitted by the candidates. This situation has arisen because of the indifference and negligent attitude of the respondent authorities concerned when scrutinising the applications of various candidates for admission before the publication of results. The petitioner before me had a legitimate expectation to get admission into the course when his register number is found in the selection list published in the newspapers and as such I am of the view that the petitioner should not suffer because of the action of the respondent authorities, who have erred in discharging their duties as per the norms prescribed for admission. I do not think the respondents can take shelter stating that a candidate who described himself as belonging to scheduled tribe now wants to get an allotment in the backward community-handicapped quota stating that he belongs to backward community. If the admission is granted contrary to the Rules and Regulations meaning thereby, against the conditions of admission as noted in the prospectus, I do not think that the respondents can take such a stand before this Court and try to explain as to why the petitioner has not been admitted into the B.L. course even though he was selected. Such sort of behaviour on the part of respondent authorities is bound to generate a sense of resentment and frustration in the minds of the unfortunate young students. The respondents have got a duty to act fairly and objectively while making the selection for admission into courses like the B.L. three years (evening) degree course. As such, the authorities who have selected the petitioner and the other candidate by ignoring the rules and regulations for admission, cannot be allowed to contend now that only one candidate can be accommodated in the backward class handicapped quota. In view of that, I am fully satisfied, taking into consideration the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case that this is a case where the petitioner has got to be admitted into B.L. three years evening degree course, taking into account that he is a candidate belonging to backward class and also that he is a handicapped candidate suffering from 'Polio Meningitis' and the impairment is 60%. If necessary it is open to the respondents to get an increase of one more seat to the handicapped quota-backward class and admit the petitioner into B.L. three year evening degree course. This Court is not concerned with what decision the respondents are going to take with regard to another candidate i.e., the said M.R.Mani. This writ petition is allowed and the respondents are directed to receive the fees and admit the petitioner into the B.L. three year evening degree course, on production of a copy of this order. No costs.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present: Abdul Hadi, J.

S.A.No.464 of 1982 and C.M.P.No.15259 of 1992
16th November, 1992.

Rajammal (died) and others ...Appellants
v.

The Idol of Sri Thanthonneeswaraswami by its hereditary trustee K.Appathurai ...Respondent.

(B) Tamil Nadu City Tenants' Protection Act (III of 1922), Sec.9 - Right to purchase vacant site - Claim for - Separate written application, if necessary.

(C) Tamil Nadu City Tenants' Protection Act (III of 1922), Secs.9 and 9-A - Tenant filing application for receiving additional written statement and supporting affidavit denying title of landlord - Additional written statement not received by Court - Tenant, whether could be said to have denied title of landlord - Denial of title of landlord after filing of suit for eviction - Tenant if disentitled to benefits of Act.

The respondent filed a suit, by its hereditary trustee for the possession of the suit land after removal of the superstructure put up therein by the appellant and for a sum of Rs.144. The defendant-appellant claimed the benefits of the Tamil Nadu City Tenants' Protection Act in the written statement and did not file any separate application for it. The appellant also denied the title of the landlord to the suit site in an application for acceptance of additional written statement and the supporting affidavit. But the additional written statement was not received. The trial Court held that the appellant was not entitled to the benefits of the Act as he did not establish that the tenancy began prior to 1955. On appeal, the lower appellate court set aside the decree and judgment of the trial court and directed the appellant to deliver possession of the suit land after removing the superstructure. The lower appellate court did not deal with the question whether the appellant was entitled to the benefits of the Act. The appellant preferred an appeal. The respondent contended that as the appellant did not file a separate application under Sec.9 of the Act, he was not entitled to claim the benefits of the section and that he was not entitled to purchase the site as he had denied the title of the landlord. The appellant on the other contended that the denial of title was only in application for receipt of additional written statement which should not be taken and subsequent to the filing of the suit.

Held: The trial Court was in error in assuming that only to tenancies prior to 1955, the Act applies. In view of the amendment to Sec.1(3) of the Act by the Amendment Act of 1979 which came into force from 3.3.1980, the Act will be applicable even to a tenancy which came into being prior to the said amendment. There is also no dispute and that the abovesaid tenancy came into being prior to 3.3.1980.

The decisions in the Mouna Mutt Kuttalai Estate v. Andiappan, 82 L.W. 77 (S.N.) and Raghava Naicker v. Abdul Hussain Hazarally and Co., 1936 M.W.N. 1096, holding that a separate written application under Sec.9 of the Act was not necessary lay down the correct law.

It cannot be contended that what is contained in the additional written statement and the supporting affidavit to the application should not be taken note of in deciding the suit. The said additional written statement, though was not actually received, in view of the dismissal of the application for its reception, yet the affidavit filed in support of the said application cannot be said to be not a part of the record in the suit. There in a sworn statement, the defendant has stated that she has denied the title of the plaintiff to the suit site and if she is not allowed to file the said additional written statement she would be put to great loss. So from the said affidavit itself, it is clear that the defendant has denied the title of the landlord/plaintiff.

The principle on which Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Arunachala Udayar, (1990)1 L.W. 46, held that the denial of title would disentitle the defendant to get the benefits of the Act would equally apply to a case where denial of title is subsequent to the commencement of the suit.

JUDGMENT: The defendant is the appellant. She having died pending this second appeal, her legal representatives have been brought on record as appellants 2 and 3. The respondent, the idol of Sri Thanthoneeswarasami by its hereditary trustee, K.Appathurai, filed the suit O.S.No.430 of 1978 on the file of the District Munsif of Tiruchirappalli for possession of the suit land after removal of the superstructure put up therein by the defendant and for a sum of Rs.144. The suit was dismissed so far as the possession relief is concerned, but decreed only with reference to the abovesaid money claim for Rs.144, which was claimed as arrears of rent at the rate of Rs.4 per month, that is for three years, till date of the plaint, viz., 27.3.1978. The case of the plaintiff is that suit house (with land) was leased out to the defendant while the case of the defendant is that only suit vacant site was leased out and the defendant put up the superstructure therein.

2. The defendant mainly claimed benefits under the Tamil Nadu City Tenants' Protection Act, 1921 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'). The trial Court after holding that the lease was only of the site and that the superstructure was that of the defendant, held that the defendant was not entitled to the benefits of the Act on the ground that the defendant did not establish that the tenancy began prior to 1955. But it held that the defendant's possession was protected in view of the decision in S.Palanivelu v. K.Varadammal, (1978)1 M.L.J. 212. On that reasoning, the possession relief was negated by the trial Court. Further, in the appeal filed by the plaintiff in A.S.No.95 of 1981, on the file of the lower appellate court, the lower appellate court set aside the judgment and decree of the trial Court and allowed the appeal, directing the defendant to deliver possession of the suit land after removing the abovesaid superstructure on the land. The lower appellate court did not deal with the question of the abovesaid arrears at all. The lower appellate court did not also deal with the question whether the defendant was entitled to the benefits of the Act, but only held that as a leasee, the defendant was bound to deliver possession of the suit site, after removing the superstructure.

3. Aggrieved by the said decision of the lower appellate court, the defendant has preferred the abovesaid second appeal. It may also be stated that the plaintiff did not prefer any appeal or cross-objection regarding the abovesaid arrears of rent.

4. After the arguments were over in this appeal and just before the judgment was reserved, the appellant filed C.M.P.No.15259 of 1992 to receive two documents, one dated 18.9.1979 and another dated 21.11.1979, as additional evidence in this appeal. But, this petition is absolutely without any merit, because the proposed documents are of the year, 1979, one of them being an order passed by the Additional Collector, Tiruchirappalli on 18.9.1979 and the other a memo dated 21.11.1979 of the Tahsildar. They could have easily filed them even while the suit was pending, since the suit was disposed of only on 19.3.1982. Not even in the first appeal they were filed with a petition seeking reception of them. The affidavit in support of the present petition also does not say anything as to why these documents were not filed in any of the courts below. Therefore, there is no justification for receiving these documents under O.41, Rule 27, C.P.C. Hence, this application is dismissed in limine.

5. Even at the outset, I may state that the above referred to S.Palanivelu v. K.Varadammal, (1978)1 M.L.J. 212, which appears to be based on Sec.51 of the Transfer of Property Act will have no application to the present case since even the defendant admits that she is only the lessee. The initial dispute was no doubt whether the lease was of the site only or of the site with the building thereon. The Courts below have concurrently held that the lease is of the site only. So, the argument of both the counsel in this second appeal proceeded only on the basis that the lease was of the site only. Further, I should also state that the trial court was also in error in assuming that only to tenancies prior to 1955, the Act applies. In view of the amendment to Sec.1(3) of the Act by the amendment Act of 1979, which came into force from 3.3.1980, the Act will be applicable even to a tenancy which came into being prior to the said amendment. There is also no dispute that the abovesaid tenancy came into being prior to 3.3.1980. 6. So, the only main argument that is addressed before me by the learned counsel for the appellant is that the trial Court erred in concluding that the defendant is not entitled to the benefits of the Act and that the lower appellate court erred in holding that the defendant is bound to deliver possession of the suit site, without deciding the abovesaid question whether the defendant is entitled to the benefits of the Act. According to the said learned counsel, the defendant is entitled to purchase the suit site as per Sec.9 of the Act and she cannot be evicted from the suit site. No doubt, the defendant has not filed any separate application under the said Sec.9 for the purchase of the suit land. But, according to the learned counsel, in view of the following averment in the written statement, the said written statement itself should be treated as the application under the said Sec.9:

"The property leased was only a vacant site. The defendant's husband took the vacant site on lease and put up superstructure at his own cost..... The defendant's husband became a tenant of the suit vacant site 40 years back..... The defendant has been paying the Municipal tax for number of years. This defendant after the death of her husband is the owner of the superstructure and has been in possession and enjoyment of the same for a long period of over 40 years. Thus, the defendant is entitled to the benefits of the City Tenants' Protection Act. The plaintiff has only to sell the suit site to this defendant according to the market value as per the provisions of the City Tenants' Protection Act."

In this connection, the learned counsel relied on the decision in Mouna Mutt Kuttalai Estate v. Andiappan, 82 L.W. 77 (S.N.). Dealing with the question whether a separate written application is necessary under the abovesaid Sec.9 for claiming right to purchase given thereunder, Ramaprasada

Rao, J. (as he then was) observed in the abovesaid decision as follows:

"It need not be in writing. There is no form prescribed for it. It, therefore, follows, that if the tenant brings to the notice of the Court, within the prescribed time, that he intends making a request to gain the statutory benefit, it is sufficient compliance of the content of Sec.9. An unreserved lodging of the request for the grant of the benefits and protection under the Act through the written statement in a suit in ejectment filed by the landlord, is enough to satisfy the requirements of law. It would be too technical a view to take, as to insist upon a written formal application to project a statutory right, when no such mandate is there under the Act and when otherwise, the intentment of the law can be satisfied by making a request in an acceptable manner and bringing the matter to the notice of the court."

In this decision, an earlier decision in Raghava Naicker v. Abdul Hussain Hazarally and Co., 1936 M.W.N. 1096, has also been relied on. The learned counsel seeks to further point out from the following notes recorded in the notes paper of the trial Court that the written statement has been filed within the abovesaid one month's time:

"F.hearing: 8.6.78.

Defendant absent. Summons affixed. Fresh summons through post by 30.6.78.

30.6.78: Not returned. Thiru N.C.Vellaya files vakalath for defendant. Written statement by 14.7.78.

14.7.78: Written statement time extended till 28.7.78. (Friday).

28.7.78: Written statement filed."

7. On the other hand, the learned counsel for the respondent-plaintiff contends that the abovesaid decisions cited require reconsideration and that the defendant having not filed a separate application under Sec.9 of the Act, cannot claim benefits of the Act.

8. So far as the abovesaid decisions, I think they lay down the correct law and I do not think that any reconsideration is necessary. However, the other question is, whether the abovesaid written statement, if that is to be treated as an application under Sec.9, has been filed within the abovesaid one month's time prescribed under Sec.9. From the abovesaid notes paper it is not known when actually, service was effected and the defendant received the suit summons. No doubt, the order on 8.6.1978 was "fresh summons through post by 30.6.78". The note made on 30.6.1978 only states "Not returned. Thiru N.C.Vellaya files vakalath for defendant..." Thus, though on 30.6.1978, vakalath was filed for the defendant, it is not known from the abovesaid note, when actually the defendant received the suit summons. It cannot be taken, as contended by the learned counsel for the appellants, that service was effected on 30.6.1978 only. The direction was no doubt to serve the summons "by 30.6.78". But, from that alone, it cannot be concluded that the service was effected only on 30.6.1978. No doubt, if the service was effected on 30.6.1978 filing of written statement on 28.7.1978 will be within time, it being within the one month period prescribed under Sec.9 of the Act. But, if the service was effected prior to 27.6.1978, then, the "application" contained in the written statement will be out of time. So, unless the learned counsel for the appellant is able to establish before me that the written statement was filed within the prescribed one month's period, I cannot hold that the application under the abovesaid section has been filed within time. Therefore, I cannot hold that the defendant is entitled to purchase the suit land as per Sec.9 of the Act.

9. This apart, the learned counsel for the respondent submits that the defendant has denied the title of the plaintiff and hence also disentitled to the benefits of the Act. For this he relies on Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Arunachala Udayar, (1990)1 L.W. 46 (D.B.). So far as the factum of denial of title, it is not there in the written statement or in the evidence recorded. But the learned counsel for the respondent points out the following passage from the trial court's judgment:

"In order to deprive defendant of any benefits under City Tenants' Protection Act, counsel for plaintiff pointed out that defendant had preferred to deny even the title of plaintiff. It is true that if a tenant denied the title of a landlord in the site then the former will not be entitled to the benefits of City Tenants' Protection Act. But in this case no such denial is able to be found on the available records. It is only in the dismissed petition to receive the reply statement defendant had so averred."

So according, to the learned counsel for the respondent, the trial court itself finds that there was such a denial of title by the defendant in some document filed into Court by the defendant. The said document was actually petition to receive additional written statement, which was sought to be filed by the defendant and not a petition to receive the reply statement as stated in the abovesaid passage of the trial court. The learned counsel for the respondent also produced before me a copy which was served on the respondent of the said additional written statement and of the supporting affidavit to the application for reception of it. In the abovesaid additional written statement it is stated thus:

"The plaintiff has no title to the suit site itself. Government is the owner. On this ground as well the suit has got to be dismissed."

In the supporting affidavit also it has been stated thus:

"I have to deny the title of the plaintiff also the suit site....If I am not allowed to file additional statement, I will be put to great loss."

10. On the other hand, the learned counsel for the appellant argues that what is found in the abovesaid additional written statement or the supporting affidavit thereof cannot be taken note of in deciding the suit, particularly when there is no such denial of title either in the written statement filed or in the deposition given by the defendant. According to the said counsel, what has been said in any interlocutory application cannot be taken note of in the trial of the suit. The said counsel also argues that the abovesaid Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Arunachala Udayar, (1990)1 L.W. 46, cannot be applied to the present case since that decision related to a case where the denial of title was prior to the filing of the suit. On the other hand, the learned counsel for the respondents draws my attention to the decision in M. Subbarao v. P.V.K. Krishna Rao, A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 2187, which was relied on in Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Chakravarthi, (1992)2 M.L.J. 83, by this Court, to contend that even if the denial is subsequent to the suit, that is, in the course of the proceedings, the tenant will not be entitled to the benefits of the Act.

11. I have given due consideration to the abovesaid submissions. First of all, I am unable to accept the proposition of the learned counsel for the appellants that what is contained in the abovesaid additional written statement and the supporting affidavit to the application should not be taken note of in deciding the suit. The said additional written statement, though was not actually received in view of the dismissal of the application for its reception, as stated by the trial court, yet the affidavit filed in support of the said application, cannot be said to be not a part of the record in the suit. There in a sworn statement, the defendant has stated that she has denied the title of the plaintiff to the suit site and if she is not allowed to file the said additional written statement, she would be put to great loss. So, from the said affidavit itself it is clear that the defendant, has denied the title of the landlord-plaintiff.

12. The other contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that the abovesaid decision in Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Arunachala Udayar, (1990)1 L.W. 46, is not applicable to the present case, also does not appeal to me. Maybe in the abovesaid decision, the denial of title was prior to the suit. But, I am of the view that the principle, on which the abovesaid ruling was given in the abovesaid case would apply even to a case where the denial of title is subsequent to the commencement of the suit. Further, the question that was referred to the abovesaid Division Bench, which decided the abovesaid case is only in general terms, viz. "Whether a tenant in respect of a vacant site, who denies title of the landlord, is entitled to the benefits of the Madras City Tenants Protection Act." To the said question, the answer of the Division Bench was in the negative and the Division Bench finally concluded as follows:

"Consequently, we hold that the benefits under the Act can be given only to certain class of tenants who claim right under a tenancy agreement and not to the persons who claim to be the owners of the properties or set up title in others."

13. The principle under which the said decision was given is stated as follows:

"The Act in question is intended to give protection against the eviction of tenants, who have constructed buildings on others' land so long as they pay rent for their lands. Therefore, the basic requirement for invoking the provisions of the Act is that ownership and tenancy rights must vest in different persons. Once a person claims ownership in himself, the question of tenancy does not arise for consideration. We have already referred to the definition of tenant under Sec.2(4) of the Act, wherein it is specifically mentioned that the benefit would accrue only to a tenant whose tenancy agreement is determined. A cumulative effect of the provisions would lead to the inference that protection is available only to the statutory tenants whose possession is protected under the provisions of a statute. We are unable to find any provision in the Act to consider the tenant who has denied the title as a statutory tenant. We have come to the conclusion from the preamble and the definition of "tenant" found in the Act that the benefit is intended to be given only to certain class of tenants who claim right under a tenancy agreement and not to the persons who claim to be owners or set up title on others. In this connection, it is unnecessary to enter into discussion about the provisions contained in Sec.111(g) of the Transfer of Property Act."

The same principle would apply even to a case where the tenant denies title subsequent to the filing of the suit. No doubt, the learned counsel for the appellant originally also sought to be build up an argument based on Sec.111(g) of the Transfer of Property Act, but subsequently gave it up on the footing that it has no bearing. It is also so mentioned in the abovesaid Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Arunachala Udayar, (1990)1 L.W. 46.

14. Further, the other decision cited by the learned counsel for the respondent also expressly lays down that even if the denial is in the course of the proceedings, the tenant who makes such a denial will be disentitled to the benefits of the Act. That decision is the above quoted Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Chakravarthi, (1992)2 M.L.J. 83 and the relevant observation therein is as follows:

"In the present case, the denial of title was even prior to the institution of the suit in the reply notice issued by the tenant. Even if the denial is made in the course of the proceedings for eviction, it is held by the Supreme Court recently that such a denial would be a ground for eviction. (vide: Subbarao v. Krishna Rao, A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 2187).

This case is also under the City Tenants' Protection Act, though the above referred to Supreme Court decision relied on therein relates to Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act. The argument of the learned counsel for the appellants in this connection is two fold. One is, what has been held under the Rent Control Act, where denial of title is one ground for eviction, cannot be applied to the present situation under the City Tenants Protection Act, and consequently according to him, the abovesaid observation of the learned Judge, who decided the abovesaid Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Chakravarthi, (1992)2 M.L.J. 83, is only obiter because his observation relating to a case where the denial is after the suit, did not relate to the facts of the case in hand before him. Anyway without going into this question any further, in view of my earlier reasoning I hold that the principle on which Bhargavakula Nainargal Sangam v. Arunachala Udayar, (1990)1 L.W. 46, held that the denial of title would disentitle the defendant to get the benefits of the Act, would equally apply to a case where denial of title is after the suit also.

15. Thus, so far as the abovesaid main argument of the learned counsel for the appellant I hold that the defendant has no right to purchase the suit land under Sec.9 of the Act. No doubt, the lower appellate court erred in not considering the abovesaid question whether the defendant is entitled to the benefits of the Act. Yet, instead of remanding back to the lower appellate court, as pleaded by the learned counsel for the appellants, in view of the fact that the second appeal itself has been pending in this Court for about ten years and in view of the fact that there is no necessity to call for any fresh factual finding, but there is sufficient evidence to pronounce judgment on that question I have myself decided the said question as stated above. Sec.103, C.P.C., also enables me to do so.

16. The learned counsel for the appellants argues that the defendant is entitled to a notice of three months before the institution of the suit, as provided under Sec.11 of the Act, which admittedly has not been given for terminating the tenancy. But, this argument also cannot be accepted because, I have already held that he is not entitled to any benefits under the Act, which would also include the benefits which accrued to her in view of the abovesaid Sec.11. Further, this notice-question having not been raised in the written statement, the said conduct would amount to waiver of notice (vide: Balasubramania Iyer v. S.P.Muthu Kumaraswamy Devasthanam, (1983)1 M.L.J. 280 and Sri Kothandaramaswamy Devasthanam by its Fir Person and E.O., Chingleput v. Gopal Naidu and another, (1992)2 L.W. 363.) The net result is the suit for possession has been rightly dismissed by the lower appellate court.

17. But the learned counsel for the appellants states that the appellants should be given atleast compensation for the superstructure. But even the benefits under the said Sec.3, they cannot claim, in view of my abovesaid decision. Under the Transfer of Property Act, the tenant cannot claim as of right, that when the landlord takes possession of the land, he should pay compensation for the superstructure put up by the tenant; the tenant can only remove the superstructure. No doubt, under the general law, the landlord alone has got option either to pay compensation for the superstructure and take the superstructure along with the land, or to take the land alone. In the latter case, the tenant has only to remove the superstructure if he so desires. Therefore, there is nothing wrong in the decree that has been given by the lower appellate court. However, opportunity should be given to the appellants to remove the superstructure by themselves. Accordingly I grant a month's time for the appellants to remove the superstructure themselves. If within that time they do not remove the superstructure, the respondent-plaintiff could execute the decree and take possession of the land along with the superstructure. It has also so held in Duraiswami Mudaliar v. Ramaswami Chettiar, 92 L.W. 144 and Ramrup Rai v. Gheodhari Kuer, A.I.R. 1980 Pat. 197 and also my own judgment in S.A.Azizullah and another v. Sakthivelu and others, C.R.P.No.173 of 1992, dated 16.10.1992.

18. In the result, subject to the above grant of one month's time for the appellants to remove the superstructure themselves, the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Disciplinary proceedings - Misconduct of number of workmen - Evidence with regard to, identical - Different punishments, if can be meted out to different workmen.

It is settled position of law that when the evidence with regard to the misconduct of a number of workmen is identical, the employer must give rational or reasonable explanation for awarding different punishments to the different workmen on the same evidence. In other words, if different workmen are similarly placed with regard to the nature of evidence let in against them by the management in the domestic enquiry and if the workmen are covered by the same set of facts and circumstances, the employer cannot single out a particular workman for discriminatory treatment while awarding punishment. If some of the workers are arbitrarily weeded out for discriminatory and more severe treatment than those who were similarly situated, the courts will not hesitate to frown upon such discriminatory treatment.

Appeals under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the Order of Venkataswami, J., dated 20.12.1988 and made in the exercise of the Special Original Jurisdiction of the High Court in W.P.No.7344 of 1982 presented under Art.226 of the Constitution of India to issue a writ of certiorari calling for the records and papers connected with the award of the Presiding Officer II, Additional Labour Court, Madras, the 1st respondent herein passed in I.D.No.379 of 1979, dated 17.12.1981 and published in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette, dated 9.6.1982 in supplement of Part II, Sec.2 and to quash the aforesaid award of the 1st respondent in so far as it negated the claim of the petitioner for reinstatement in service.

M.R.Narayanaswamy, Senior Counsel, for T.S.Gopalan, P.Ibrahim Kalifullah and S.Ravindran, for Appellant.

A.L.Somayaji, for K.S.Janakiraman and K.K.Ramesh, for Respondent No.2.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Somasundaram, J.:- These writ appeals arise out of the Order of Venkataswami, J. made in W.P.No.7344 of 1982. W.A.No.202 of 1989 has been filed by the Management, 2nd respondent in W.P.No.7344 of 1982 against the order of the learned single Judge, allowing the Writ Petition and setting aside the order of dismissal passed against the workman, the petitioner in W.P.No.7344 of 1982. W.A.No.662 of 1989 has been filed by the workman, the petitioner in W.P.No.7344 of 1982 against the portion of order in W.P.No.7344 of 1982, imposing the punishment of withholding of 2 annual increments with cumulative effect. For the sake of convenience, the parties are referred to in this judgment as per their nomenclature in W.P.No.7344 of 1982.

2. The petitioner while working as Kalasi in the second respondent corporation (hereinafter called 'the Corporation'), was charge sheeted for certain misconduct. The charge sheet served on the petitioner reads as follows:

"On 25.10.1975 you were assisting Shri V.Radhakrishnan Tank Truck Driver, who was entrusted with 16 K.L. of ATF in our Corporation tank truck No.TMY 89 to be delivered to Meenambakkam AFS vide Challan No.42272, dated 25.10.1975.

At Meenambakkam after decanting 8 K.L. of ATF from compartment No.F1 & M2, the balance quantity of 8 KL in compartments No.M3 and M4 was despatched to Tambaram AFS at about 11 a.m. vide their stock transfer challan No.34929 with 8 KL of ATF and all the four valves and the manifold caps were duly sealed before the truck was released from Meenambakkam, AFS.

At about 12.00 p.m. of the same day the above truck was found parked near Pallavaram Municipal office by Station Manager of Meenambakkam AFS Shri N.N.Chopra and Shri Balakrishnan, Shift Superintendent. On examination of the truck it was discovered that the seals of the decanting valves of compartments M3 and M4 and the manifold caps were broken and that the manifold cap was loose and product was dripping from the manifold. A funnel which was apparently used for removing the product was also found in the chassis of the truck. On checking the dips it was found that the dip of the compartment No.3 was approximately 6 mm short. It was later ascertained by physical measurement that the loss of product from this compartment was approximately 40 litres.

Under the above circumstances, it is evident that you have with the connivance of the tank truck driver Shri V.Radhakrishnan removed unauthorisedly about 40 litres of ATF and disposed of the said quantity clandestinely.

In view of the above facts you have allegedly committed the following acts of misconduct.

1. Negligence or neglect of duty, and
2. Theft, dishonesty and misappropriation in connection with Corporation's property.

You are hereby required to submit your written explanation within seven days of the receipt of this charge-sheet. Any representation that you may make in your written explanation in this connection will be taken into consideration by the competent authority before it decides to hold. In case the competent authority decides to hold an enquiry against you, the enquiry committee, date, time of enquiry etc., will be intimated to you later.

In case your written explanation found satisfactory and acceptable to us, the enquiry against you in the matter shall not be held and you shall be informed accordingly. Otherwise the enquiry committee shall hold the enquiry against you in the matter as stated above.

Please acknowledge receipt on the duplicate copy."

On the same facts, one V.Radhakrishnan, tank truck driver, was also charge-sheeted and the acts of misconduct alleged against the said driver Radhakrishnan read as follows:

1. Negligence or neglect of duty.
2. Theft, dishonesty and misappropriation in connection with the Corporation's property; and
3. Act subversive of discipline."

With regard to the charges framed against the petitioner and the driver Radhakrishnan, a common domestic enquiry was conducted and after examining the witnesses and after perusing the documents filed during the course of enquiry, the enquiry committee came to the conclusion that there was no collusion or connivance between the petitioner and the driver Radhakrishnan to commit theft and steal and dispose of 2nd respondent-Corporation's property. The enquiry committee also found that the truck driver Radhakrishnan was guilty of negligence only and not guilty of any act of theft, dishonesty or misappropriation in connection with the Corporation's property and consequently it found him guilty of the act subversive of discipline. The enquiry committee found that the petitioner is guilty of theft, dishonesty and misappropriation in connection with the Corporation's property. The disciplinary authority of the Corporation accepted the findings of the enquiry committee and dismissed the petitioner from service and so far as the truck driver Radhakrishnan was concerned, the disciplinary authority withheld three annual increments with cumulative effect. Aggrieved by the order of dismissal, the petitioner raised an Industrial dispute and the same was referred under Sec.10(1)(c) of the Industrial Disputes Act to the Labour Court. The Labour Court, by its award dated 17.12.1981, held that the non-employment of the petitioner was justified and that he was not entitled to any relief. As against the award of the Labour Court dated 17.12.1981, the petitioner filed W.P.No.7344 of 1982 to issue a writ of certiorari to quash the award of the Labour Court dated 17.12.1981.

3. Before the learned single Judge it was inter alia contended on behalf of the petitioner that the whole enquiry was vitiated by reason of the violation of principles of natural justice inasmuch as a pre-planned differential treatment was meted out to the driver Radhakrishnan on the one hand and the petitioner on the other, though the charges and the statement of facts and the evidence let in before the enquiry committee are common to both the petitioner and the driver Radhakrishnan. It was further contended before the learned single Judge the failure to refer the past conduct of the petitioner in the show-cause notice and at the same time placing reliance on the past conduct without affording an opportunity to the petitioner will vitiate the entire proceedings. It was also urged before the learned single Judge that the punishment awarded to the petitioner was disproportionate to the gravity of the charge and contrary to the spirit of Sec.11-A of the Industrial Disputes Act. On the basis of the materials available on record, the learned single Judge came to the conclusion that on the same set of facts and circumstances, the petitioner alone was chosen for discriminatory treatment by awarding the punishment of dismissal, whereas the driver was given the benefit of doubt and awarded lesser punishment and therefore, the order of the disciplinary authority as confirmed by the Labour Court dismissing the petitioner from service suffers from the vice of arbitrariness and is violative of Art.14 of the Constitution of India. The learned Single Judge further found that the charge framed against the petitioner relating to theft, dishonesty and misappropriation of the Corporation property has not been proved and that the findings rendered by the enquiry committee and the Labour Court with regard to the said charge of theft, dishonesty and misappropriation are not based on acceptable legal evidence. Consequently, the learned single Judge allowed the writ petition and set aside the order of the disciplinary authority as confirmed by the Labour Court, dismissing the petitioner from service. However, the learned single Judge confirmed the findings given by the enquiry committee and the Labour Court on the charge regarding negligence or neglect of duty and directed that the petitioner could be awarded the punishment of withholding of two annual increments with cumulative effect. Aggrieved by the order of the learned single Judge the second respondent Corporation has filed W.A.No.202 of 1989. Not satisfied with the order of the learned single Judge imposing the punishment of withholding of two annual increments with cumulative effect, the petitioner has filed W.A.No.662 of 1989.

4. Mr.M.R.Narayanasamy, the learned Senior Counsel appearing for the appellant in W.A.No.202 of 1989 contended in the first place that there is no discrimination in this case in the matter of awarding punishment against the petitioner on the one hand and the driver Radhakrishnan on the other hand. The learned Counsel further contended that on the facts and circumstances of the case and on the basis of the evidence available on record the disciplinary authority and the Labour Court rightly awarded different punishments to the petitioner and to the driver Radhakrishnan. In support of his contention, the learned counsel for the second respondent Corporation, the appellant in W.A.No.202 of 1989, relied on the decisions in Workman of the Motor Industries Company Ltd. v. Management of Motor Industries Company Ltd. and another, A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 1280: (1969)19 F.L.R. 375, Bimbadhar v. Orissa State, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 469: (1956)2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 13: 1956 S.C.J. 441: 1956 Crl.L.J. 831, Brathi v. State of Punjab, A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 318: 1991 Crl.L.J. 402: (1991)1 S.C.C. 519.

On the other hand, Mr.A.L.Somayaji, the learned counsel for the petitioner would submit that the driver Radhakrishnan was entrusted with not only the vehicle, but also the contents namely 16 KL of ATF for delivery at Meenambakkam AFS and the petitioner was directed to assist the said Radhakrishnan in the process of delivering the said 16 KL of ATF in the manner directed by the management; that the petitioner was visited with two charges whereas the driver Radhakrishnan was visited with identical charges with an additional one; that though the evidence let in by the management against the petitioner and the driver is common, the disciplinary authority imposed punishment of dismissal on the petitioner whereas the lesser punishment of stoppage of increments for three years with cumulative effect was imposed on the driver and the above facts and circumstances go to show that the petitioner was singled out of discriminatory treatment.

5. Let us first examine the position of law on this aspect before going to the factual details. It is settled position of law that when the evidence with regard to the misconduct of a number of workmen is identical, the employer must give rational or reasonable explanation for awarding different punishments to the different workmen on the same evidence. In other words, if different workmen are similarly placed with regard to the nature of evidence let in against them by the management in the domestic enquiry and if the workmen are covered by the same set of facts and circumstances, the employer cannot single out a particular workman for discriminatory treatment while awarding punishment. If some of the workers are arbitrarily weeded out for discriminatory and more severe treatment than those who were similarly situated, the Courts will not hesitate to frown upon such discriminatory treatment. In Sengara Singh and others v. State of Punjab and others, (1984) 1 L.L.J. 161, the State of Punjab initiated disciplinary action and dismissed about 1, 100 members of Police force for participation in police agitation. Criminal prosecution was launched against large members of agitators. Subsequently, the Government reinstated 1, 000 dismissed members of the police force in their original post and withdrew the criminal cases. There was no allegation in that case that the police constables who are not reinstated were leaders or indulged in more violent activities. The aggrieved police constables who were dismissed, but not reinstated to their original post filed writ petitions before the Punjab High Court. The Punjab High Court dismissed the writ petitions. Thereafter, the aggrieved police constables filed appeal before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court while allowing the appeal of the dismissed police constables held that there is no iota of evidence which would distinguish the case of the appellants from those who were originally dismissed, but subsequently reinstated in their original post. The Supreme Court further pointed out that the appellants have been arbitrarily weeded out for the discriminatory and more severe treatment than those who were similarly situated. In the above decision, the Supreme Court has further held as follows:

“What then should be done? The appellants have been accused of participating in a procession taken out by the members of the police force for ventilating their grievances about their service conditions. May be that still having not reached the state of tolerance for formation of associations amongst police personnel, the demonstrators may be looked upon with disfavour. But approaching the matter from this angle, all the 1,100 dismissed members of the police force were guilty of same extent and degree as the present appellants. Now if the indiscipline of a large number of personnel amongst dismissed personnel could be condoned or overlooked and after withdrawing the criminal cases against them, they could be reinstated, we see no justification in treating the present appellants differently without pointing out how they were guilty of more serious misconduct or the degree of indiscipline in their case was higher than compared to those who were reinstated. Respondents failed to explain to the court the distinguishing features and, therefore, we are satisfied in putting all of them in same bracket. On that conclusion the treatment meted to the present appellants suffers from the vice of arbitrariness and Art.14 forbids any arbitrary action which would tantamount to denial of equality as guaranteed by Art.14 of the Constitution. The court must accordingly interpose and quash the discriminatory action.”

6. Coming to the facts of the present case, it is not in dispute that the driver Radhakrishnan was in charge of the vehicle and its contents. The entrustment of particular quantity viz., 16 KL of ATF to the driver is also admitted. The petitioner was only a helper, who was to assist the driver in several ways, in discharge of his duty. In the domestic enquiry conducted by the enquiry committee, the evidence let in by the management is common against both the driver and the petitioner. The evidence of P.W.1 Shri C.Kallappa is that when he questioned the driver Radhakrishnan, he told him that he heard a sound on the rear and stopped the vehicle and found the rear wheel punctured and the driver instructed the helper to jack up the wheel and remove the punctured wheel and went for tea. The driver also told P.W.1 that when he came back he found that the seals of compartment No.M-3 and B4 and the manifold seals were broken. Shri Balakrishnan and Shri V.N.Chopra who were examined as witnesses on behalf of the management also gave evidence to the same effect. On the basis of the evidence on record, the enquiry committee recorded the following finding:

“It has been demonstrated before us very clearly that there was no puncture at all and the starter was alright. This alibi was taken by the driver and the helper only to justify their action of stopping the vehicle on the road. It may be mentioned that stopping the vehicle on the road is not authorised by ICC."

The records show that the enquiry committee conducted enquiry on the charges framed against the petitioner and the driver Radhakrishnan on 25.3.1976, 26.3.1976, 17.4.1976, 19.4.1976 and 7.5.1976. The materials available on record shows that after all the witnesses on the side of the management were examined, the driver Radhakrishnan gave a further reply to the charge sheet on 7.5.1976 and the relevant of the further reply dated 7.5.1976 reads thus:

"On 25.10.1975 after delivering 8 KL of ATF at Meenambakkam AFS, I carried the balance 8 KL to Tambaram AFS in my TT TMY 89. When I was driving towards Tambaram, I was feeling giddy and hence I stopped the vehicle near Pallavaram Municipal Office for taking some tea and rest.

After some time, after taking tea, when I came to the TT I was surprised to see the seals of the valves were broken and oil was leaking. There was a funnel on the chassis which made me feel worried, because I did not carry any funnel in the T.T. When I questioned the helper, he was very rash to me and meanwhile the S.M., and the Shift Superintendent. of Meenambakkam AFS also came. They questioned both of us about the broken seal, oil leak and presence of a funnel.

I was very much scared. I feared to tell that I stopped the vehicle for taking tea and went to take tea. Hence I told them that the tyre was weak or punctured.

Actually there was no tyre puncture or self starter repair. The helper of truck was involved in a case previously. My fear was that I would be implicated in this case."

The enquiry committee accepted the case of the driver set up by him in his further reply dated 7.5.1976 and found that the driver was not guilty on the charge of theft, dishonesty and misappropriation in connection with the Corporation property. The enquiry committee is not at all justified in accepting the case of the driver set up by him at a belated stage in his further reply dated 7.5.1976, as it runs counter to the evidence of the witnesses examined on behalf of the Management and his own earlier version. Therefore, we have no hesitation in holding that no reliance can be placed on the further reply submitted by the driver on 7.5.1976. If the statement of the driver dated 7.5.1976 is excluded, the evidence let in by the management with regard to the charges framed against the driver and the petitioner is common and identical. Therefore, the driver and the petitioner are similarly placed so far as the evidence let in by the management is concerned. If on the basis of the evidence let in by the management before the enquiry committee, the driver cannot be found guilty of the charge of theft, equally, on the same evidence the petitioner also cannot be found guilty on the charge of theft. Further, on the basis of the materials available on record, the Labour Court in para 36 of the award has found that it cannot totally agree with the finding of the enquiry committee that the driver was not in collusion with the helper in indulging in activity of dishonesty and misappropriation with regard to the Corporation property. The Labour Court, having disagreed with the finding of the enquiry committee on the question of collusion between the driver and the petitioner, is not justified in approving the benefit of doubt being given to the driver by the enquiry committee with regard to the charge of theft framed against him. We must also add that the enquiry committee and the Labour Court completely overlooked the fact that the vehicle and its contents were entrusted to the driver and that the driver was responsible for the safe custody of the vehicle and its contents. As rightly pointed out by the learned single Judge, the enquiry committee and the Labour Court have not given cogent reasons for accepting in toto the case of the driver even though he has given varying versions at different stages. The Labour Court took the view that the past record of the service of the petitioner warrants the accord of a different treatment to the petitioner on the question of punishment. As rightly pointed out by the learned single Judge, the Labour Court has really misread the evidence available on record with regard to the past record of service of the petitioner. The materials on record go to show that the petitioner had been charged on an earlier occasion for gross neglect of duty and act subversive of discipline. In the said proceeding initiated against the petitioner on an earlier occasion, it was ultimately found that there was no loss of property, but he was found guilty only of an act subversive of discipline. As pointed out by the learned single Judge, a reading of the order of the Labour Court seems to suggest that it proceeded on the basis that on the earlier occasion the petitioner was found guilty of an offence relating to theft, dishonesty and misappropriation. Therefore, the conclusion reached by the Labour Court that there was no differential treatment to similarly situated persons is not correct, particularly when the Labour Court has not accepted the finding of the enquiry committee on the issue of collusion of the driver with the petitioner concerning the charge of theft, dishonesty and misappropriation. A perusal of the report of the enquiry committee shows that it has not given any reason in support of its finding that the driver was entitled to the benefit of doubt on the charge of theft. In the above circumstances, it has to be held that there is no valid reason as to why the driver was let off with a lighter punishment and the petitioner was dismissed from service. Therefore, the learned single Judge rightly found that on the same set of facts and circumstances, the petitioner alone was chosen for discriminatory treatment and the order dismissing the petitioner from service suffers from the vice of arbitrariness and is violative of Art.14 of the Constitution of India. In these circumstances, we have no hesitation in rejecting the first contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that there is no discrimination in the matter of awarding punishment of dismissal from service against the petitioner and the lesser punishment of dismissal from service against the petitioner and the lesser punishment of withholding the increments against the driver Radhakrishnan. The decisions relied on by the learned counsel for the appellant in W.A.No.202 of 1989 are not helpful to the appellant because the above decisions are clearly distinguishable on facts.

7. The second contention of the learned senior Counsel Mr.M.R.Narayanasamy is that the learned single Judge is not correct in coming to the conclusion that there was no acceptable legal evidence to support the finding of the enquiry committee and the labour court that the petitioner is guilty of theft, dishonesty and misappropriation in connection with the Corporation property. The learned counsel contended that the report of the enquiry committee shows that there is legal evidence against the petitioner. The learned counsel further submitted that even if the finding with regard to the charge of theft is set aside, the punishment of dismissal from service awarded to the petitioner can be sustained on the basis of the finding on the other charge viz., the charge of negligence or neglect of duty. In support of this contention, the learned counsel relied on the decision in Pyare Lal Sharma v. Managing Director, J.K. Industries Ltd., A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1854. We are unable to accept the above contention of the learned counsel for the appellant. In Central Bank of India Ltd., New Delhi v. Prakash Chand Jain, (1969) 2 L.L.J. 277, the Supreme Court has enumerated two circumstances under which the findings of the enquiry officer against the workman can be interfered with, in the following terms:

"Thus, there are two cases where the findings of a domestic tribunal like the enquiry officer dealing with disciplinary proceedings against a workman can be interfered with, and these two are cases in which the findings are not based on legal evidence or are such as no reasonable person could have arrived at on the basis of the material before the tribunal. In each of these cases, the findings are treated as perverse."

In A.V.Krishnamoorthy v. Government of Tamil Nadu and others, (1985) 1 L.L.J. 46, a Division Bench of this Court while holding that any conclusion which may be reached by the domestic tribunal must be on the basis of acceptable evidence has observed as follows:

"It is well settled that disciplinary proceedings before a Departmental Tribunal are quasi-judicial in character and any conclusion to be reached by such tribunal must be on the basis of acceptable evidence. Such evidence must have some degree of definiteness. It is true that the enquiry held by the Departmental Tribunal is not governed by the strict and technical rules of evidence. But, if the departmental tribunal has rendered a finding based on no acceptable evidence, that could be regarded as an error of law to be corrected by a writ of certiorari. Suspicion, inference, assumption and presumption cannot take place of proof by means of acceptable evidence in disciplinary proceedings before a departmental tribunal."

8. In the light of the above position of law, let us now examine whether the findings of the enquiry committee as confirmed by the Labour Court is supported by acceptable legal evidence in this case. There is evidence in this case that there is a shortage of 40 litres of AFT. The question is who is responsible for this shortage of 40 litres of AFT. The only evidence available in this case is that one of the witnesses of the management saw some persons suspiciously moving near the stationary lorry with tins and cans. Except this, no one was examined and there is absolutely no evidence to connect the petitioner with the charge of theft, dishonesty and misappropriation of the Corporation property. In these circumstances, the learned single Judge rightly held that the findings of the enquiry committee as confirmed by the Labour Court that the petitioner is guilty of theft, dishonesty and misappropriation of corporation property, are not based on any acceptable evidence. Once it is held that the findings of the enquiry committee and the Labour Court that the petitioner is guilty of theft, dishonesty and misappropriation are not based on acceptable evidence, the order of the disciplinary authority as confirmed by the Labour Court dismissing the petitioner from service, is liable to be set aside. We are unable to accept the other contention of the learned Senior Counsel Mr. M. R. Narayanasamy that the order of the disciplinary authority as confirmed by the Labour Court dismissing the petitioner from service can be sustained on the finding on the other charge namely that the petitioner is guilty of negligence or neglect of duty, because the disciplinary authority imposed only the punishment of withholding of three annual increments with cumulative effect on the driver for an identical charge. Therefore, the learned single Judge rightly set aside the order of the disciplinary authority as confirmed by the Labour Court dismissing the petitioner from service. However, the learned single Judge confirmed the finding of the disciplinary authority and the Labour Court that the petitioner is guilty of other charge viz., negligence or neglect of duty and imposed the punishment of withholding of 2 annual increments with cumulative effect. In view of the above discussion of ours, we see no infirmity in the order of the learned single Judge warranting interference in W.A.No.202 of 1989.

9. Now let us consider whether there is any merit in the other W.A.No.662 of 1989 filed by the petitioner against the order of the learned single Judge so far as it is against him viz., the imposition of the punishment of withholding of 2 annual increments with cumulative effect. There is ample evidence in this case both oral and documentary which go to show that the petitioner is guilty of negligence and neglect of duty. The disciplinary authority, the Labour Court, and the learned single Judge on the basis of the evidence available on record rightly held that the petitioner is guilty of negligence and neglect of duty. On the basis of the above findings, the learned single Judge rightly imposed the punishment of withholding of two annual increments with cumulative effect. As a matter of fact, on the basis of the same evidence, the driver was also found guilty of negligence and neglect of duty and he was also awarded similar punishment of withholding of three annual increments with cumulative effect. Therefore, we do not see any merit in W.A.No.662 of 1989 also.

10. In the result, both the writ appeals are liable to be dismissed and accordingly they are dismissed. No costs.

Motor Vehicles Act (IV of 1939), Sec.110-A - Death in motor accident - Compensation for parents of deceased minor child - Assessment of - Factors to be considered.

The paramount consideration of the claims tribunal must be to protect the interest of the claimants so that the amount awarded to them by way of compensation serves the purpose and object of recompensing them for the loss occasioned by the tragedy of the accident. As a general rule, parents are entitled to recover the present cash value of the prospective service of the deceased minor child. In addition, they may receive compensation for loss of pecuniary benefits reasonably to be expected after the child attains majority. How he would have turned out in life later is at best a guess. But there is a reasonable probability of the child becoming a successful man in life if he had been a bright boy in the school and his parents could afford him a good education. The thing to be valued is not merely the prospect of length of life, but the prospect of a predominantly happy life of the deceased. This, undoubtedly would vary from case to case, depending upon the family environment, members of the family, health and age of the victim, his outlook in life, the interest which his parents were taking to show whether the victim would have a predominantly happy life or life of misery or a life of despondence or an insipid life. Even though it depends upon very many uncertain factors, the tribunal has to take an overall picture and form its estimate, though to some extent, it must be based upon speculation. A just and fair calculation of compensation would be what the beneficiaries would have received from the deceased as support for their maintenance had the deceased lived and earned. Keeping in view our social norms parents do have a legitimate expectation of financial support from their children, particularly in their old age when their children are gainfully employed. But the extent of such monetary assistance must, of course, depend upon the circumstances of the parents and the deceased child and also upon other surrounding circumstances. And it is well-established that there can be no exact uniform rule for measuring the value of the human-life and the measure of damage cannot be arrived at by precise mathematical calculations. It is also equally well-established that in assessing damages, the court must exclude all considerations of matters which rest in speculation or fancy though conjecture to some extent is inevitable.

K.S.Narasimhan, for Appellant.

A.Sivaji, for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Thangamani, J.:- On 22.2.1984 at about 11.00 a.m. Subburaj the eldest son of the claimants was proceeding on his bicycle along Sathur-Kovilpatti main road. When he was nearing Ezhayiram Farm diverse road the lorry bearing Registration No.M.E.P.2338 came from the opposite direction and knocked down the boy. As a result of the injury sustained in the accident Subburaj died instantaneously. The parents of the deceased Subburaj filed M.C.O.P.No.86 of 1984 on the file of the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal (Subordinate Judge) at Srivilliputhur claiming a compensation of Rs.85,000 from the owner of the vehicle and the Insurance Company alleging that the accident was due to the rash and negligent driving of the lorry. The Insurance Company contested the claim on the ground that the accident took place only because the boy suddenly took a right turn and that in any event they were liable to pay Rs.15,000 the no-fault liability alone. After enquiry the tribunal awarded Rs.50,000 with interest at 6% per annum from the date of petition as compensation. Aggrieved by the said award while the Insurance Company has preferred this civil miscellaneous appeal, the claimants have come forward with this cross objection.

2. The owner of the lorry involved in the accident remained ex parte before the tribunal.

3. P.W.2 Subba Naicker speaks about the accident. It is his version that while he was grazing cattle near south of branch road, deceased Subburaj was coming in his cycle keeping to the left side of the main road. The lorry came from the south at a great speed and dashed against him. Ex.P-8 is the copy of the F.I.R. given by him in Sathur Police Station regarding the incident. In this he has narrated in detail how the accident took place. This F.I.R. prepared within 15 minutes of the accident amply corroborates the version of P.W.2 Subba Naicker. Besides we find from Ex.P-4 that in the Criminal Court the driver of the lorry has voluntarily pleaded guilty. This conduct on the part of the driver also goes in support of the contention of the claimants that the accident was only due to the rash and negligent driving of the lorry. And the tribunal has rightly fastened the liability to pay compensation on the appellant herein.

4. The main controversy in this appeal relates to quantum of the compensation award. While the Insurance Company pleads that the sum of Rs.50,000 awarded is not based on any settled legal principles, in the cross objections the claimants extend that they are entitled to the full amount of Rs.85,000 asked for in the application. We find from the claim petition that the parents of the deceased were aged 60 and 45 respectively at the time of the accident. In the application the age of the deceased is given as 14. The first claimant Sankarappa Naicker states in his evidence that his son was studying in the 10th Standard in A.V.S. High School at the time of his death. Ex.P-1 the extract from the Register of admissions and withdrawals discloses that deceased Subburaj joined the school in 1979-80 and he was studying in the 10th Standard when the accident took place. His date of birth is given as 12.7.1969 which indicates that he was nearly 1 1/2 years old on the crucial date. Ex.P-2 is the certificate given by the Head Master of the School on 20.3.1984 stating that the deceased was an obedient and intelligent student. The tribunal has taken the view on the basis of this certificate that the boy had a bright future. However, taking into account that he would not have spent his entire future earnings on the claimants and that subsequent to his marriage his contribution to the parents would be reduced, the sum of Rs.50,000 has been awarded. In this connection it may be borne in mind that the claimants have not filed the mark sheets of the deceased boy to assess how far he was good in his studies. In the absence of any evidence on this aspect we cannot hold with certainty that the boy would have come up very well later in his life. Besides there is also no evidence on the resources of the family. It is seen from the petition that the first claimant was a retired Police Constable aged about 60. The second claimant was only a housewife aged about 45. There is no indication in the claim petition that the parents had the necessary wherewithal to educate the boy upto the maximum extent possible. P.W.1 Sankarappa Naicker the first claimant describes himself as a coolie. His evidence is conspicuously silent about his capacity to educate the boy. He admits in cross-examination that he owns only an extent of one acre and 70 cents of dry land depending upon rain. He does not speak anything about his earnings. While so, we are not in a position to assess how far the deceased would have come up in life.

5. The paramount consideration of the claims tribunal must be to protect the interest of the claimants so that the amount awarded to them by way of compensation serves the purpose and object of compensating them for the loss occasioned by the tragedy of the accident. As a general rule, parents are entitled to recover the present cash value of the prospective service of the deceased minor child. In addition, they may receive compensation for loss of pecuniary benefits reasonably to be expected after the child attains majority. How he would have turned out in life later is at best a guess. But there is a reasonable probability of the child becoming a successful man in life if he had been a bright boy in the school and his parents could afford him a good education. The thing to be valued is not merely the prospect of length of life, but the prospect of a predominantly happy life of the deceased. This undoubtedly would vary from case to case, depending upon the family environment, members of the family, health and age of the victim, his outlook in life, the interest which his parents were taking in the boy and the totality of circumstances tending to show whether the victim would have a predominantly happy life or life of misery or a life of despondence or an insipid life. Even though it depends upon very many uncertain factors, the tribunal has to take an overall picture and form its estimate, though to some extent, it must be based upon speculation. A just and fair calculation of compensation would be what the beneficiaries would have received from the deceased as support for their maintenance had the deceased lived and earned.

6. In Kuncharamu v. Kerala State Road Transport Corporation, 1987 A.C.J. 1017, the deceased was studying in the S.S.L.C. class. According to the petitioners, the deceased was very intelligent, smart and healthy. They claimed Rs.50,500 as compensation. Held: To sustain a claim of compensation under Sec.110-A of the Motor Vehicles Act, it is not necessary that the deceased was actually earning money. Parents always reasonably expect to be supported in their old age by their children. The possibility of the deceased becoming successful in life cannot be ruled out. As the parents of the deceased could have reasonably expected pecuniary benefits when the deceased had completed his education and started a career or avocation and as their expectations were shattered as under due to the unfortunate accident they can very well claim compensation from those persons who were responsible for it. Merely on the ground that the deceased was not actually earning any amount at the time of death, compensation claimed by the parents cannot be legally denied. And the Kerala High Court in this awarded a compensation of Rs.27,000.

7. In Parvathi Ammal v. Pallavan Transport Corporation, 1984 A.C.J. 342, the deceased was 18 years and he was a student in the B.A. Class at the time of his death. The mother of the deceased claimed that the father of the deceased was an established film producer and distributor and so the deceased would have had the advantage of the wisdom and experience of his father, and therefore, he would have entered the cine field and earned several lakhs of rupees. Her case was that the deceased was expected to have a predominantly happy life but for the untimely death brought about by the accident, and that having regard to the above circumstances the sum of Rs.2,50,000 claimed by her was a reasonable compensation for the death of her son. A Division Bench of this Court held that it is not necessary that the deceased should have been actually earning money or contributing to the support of the claimant at the time of his death. But in order to succeed, the claimant must necessarily show that he has lost a reasonable probability of pecuniary advantage. However, having regard to the fact that the deceased was studying in B.A. degree course in the College, there is every possibility of his taking up some employment or of his entering a business after the completion of his course, and so some amount has to be awarded towards the loss of pecuniary advantage as part of his earnings would have gone to the benefit of the claimant. Though the parents of the deceased expected him to enter the film business, the deceased might have had his own plans. But it is not possible to predict that the deceased would have entered the film business and would have earned lakhs of rupees by utilising the wisdom and experience of his father. There was a reasonable probability that his parents could have afforded him a good education and a good footing in a business. And having regard to the fact that the deceased would in all probability marry at the age of 25, the benefit of the earnings of the deceased would have gone to the appellant subsequently only upto a period of 7 years i.e., till the deceased would have married. Subsequently to the marriage, he will have a family of his own to maintain, and therefore, the benefit that will go to the mother out of his earnings would considerably be reduced. Taking all these facts into consideration, the Division Bench enhanced the compensation from Rs.17,000 to Rs.30,000.

8. Relying on the citations referred to above the learned counsel for the appellant Insurance Company argued that the sum of Rs.50,000 awarded by the Tribunal was on the high side. Whereas the learned counsel for the respondents 1 and 2 claimants cited the decision of a single Judge of Punjab and Haryana High Court in United India Insurance Company v. Gurdev Singh, 1990 A.C.J. 946 and pleaded for raising the compensation amount to the sum of Rs.85,000 asked for. In that case the deceased was 16 years old student and the compensation awarded was Rs.50,000. The learned counsel for the claimants contended that the facts therein are similar to those of the present case and hence it cannot be said the sum Rs.50,000 awarded by the tribunal herein is excessive. But it is seen that both the parents of the deceased in the case cited are teachers and it is, therefore, reasonable to assume that they would both have been interested to ensure good education for their son and what is more, they were also capable for providing him the necessary facilities for it. So we do not think that the amount awarded therein is any guide for our present purpose.

9. Keeping in view our social norms, parents do have a legitimate expectation of financial support from their children, particularly in their old age when their children are gainfully employed. But the extent of such monetary assistance must, of course, depend upon the circumstances of the parents and the deceased child and also upon other surrounding circumstances. And it is well established that there can be no exact uniform rule for measuring the value of the human life and the measure of damage cannot be arrived at by precise mathematical calculations. It is also equally well established that in assessing damages, the court must exclude all considerations of matters which rest in speculation or fancy through conjecture to some extent is inevitable. Taking all the facts present into consideration in this case we are inclined to hold that a sum of Rs.37,000 would be a just one.

10. In the result, the award is modified and the Insurance Company is directed to pay Rs.37,000 with interest at 12 per cent per annum from the date of petition till the date of realisation as compensation. The parties are directed to bear their own costs throughout. The civil miscellaneous appeal and cross objections are ordered accordingly.

B.S. ---- Appeal and cross objections ordered.

Arbitration Act (X of 1940), Sec.20 - Limitation Act (XXXVI of 1963) Schedule I, Art.137 - Clause in arbitration agreement stipulating a period of limitation - Suit under Sec.20 filed beyond that time, if barred - Limitation for applications under Sec.20.

Held:- Since there is no limitation, separately created for any application under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act, it is only Art.137 of the Limitation Act which prescribes a period of three years, when the right to apply accrues, is attracted as held by the Supreme Court in Kerala State Electricity Board, Trivandrum v. T.P.K.K. Amson and Besom, Kerala, A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 282. There can be no doubt any further as to this. [Para 2]

In order to be a valid claim for reference under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act, it is necessary that there should be an arbitration agreement and secondly differences must arise to which the agreement in question applied and thirdly that must be within time as stipulated in Sec.20 of the Act. It is indeed a mistake to mix up the two aspects and it will be necessary on the facts of each case to see whether the application in Court under Sec.20 is beyond the time limit prescribed under Art.137 of the Limitation Act or not. Appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the order of Venkataswami, J., dated 3.7.1984 and made in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court in C.S.No.489 of 1982 on the file of this Court.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.:- A learned single Judge of this Court has held that since a clause in the arbitration agreement contemplated a period of limitation of one year, the plaintiff's appellant's suit under Sec.20 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940 was filed beyond time. We record, however, before we state the facts that the impugned judgment cannot be sustained for the reason of the authoritative pronouncement of the Supreme Court of India in the case of Kerala State Electricity Board, Trivandrum v. T.P.K.K. Amson and Besom, Kerala, A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 282 and another authoritative pronouncement of the Supreme Court in the case of Union of India v. M/s. L.K. Ahuja & Company, A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1172. Facts which are not in dispute are that the appellant herein was appointed by the respondent Corporation to transport foodgrains, fertilizers, etc. from Madras Port to Air Field (vacant space of their storage) at Sholavaram for a period of three months from 6.4.1976. After furnishing the required security deposit, the appellant carried on and completed the work of transport of foodgrains and fertilizers, as stated above. It appears, however, that after the completion of work the appellant furnished a detailed statement to the respondent on 9.7.1976. The respondent issued a cheque for Rs.7,517.09 purported to be in full and final settlement of the claims of the plaintiff/appellant on 25.8.1977. The respondent while issuing the cheque deducted Rs.17,482.91 from the security deposit of Rs.25,000 of the appellant towards transit dues and transit loss. On 27.8.1977 the appellant wrote to the respondent that any deduction from the security deposit was unwarranted and requested for reconsideration and refund of the said amount. The appellant issued a lawyer's notice on 10.10.1977 in which besides requesting refund of the full security deposit the appellant also alleged that it had incurred a loss to the tune of Rs.74,760 on account of the alleged detention of the lorries at the Air Strip during nights on several days without being unloaded and demanded the respondent to compensate the loss. The respondent replied to the above on 2.11.1977 repudiating all claims of the appellant. On 8.4.1980 the appellant issued a letter demanding appointment of an arbitrator under Clause 19 of the terms and conditions of the agreement. It followed the said letter by reminders on 11.6.1980, 7.7.1980, 6.8.1980 and 19.12.1980. The only reply to all these, however, came from the Joint Manager in the Office of the respondent on 25.2.1981 stating that the request for appointment of an arbitrator could not be considered. The appellant then came to the Court and filed the suit, C.S.No.489 of (AA) under Sec.20 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940.

2. Learned single Judge has considered the question of limitation after quoting the proviso to Clause 19 of the agreement and thereafter saying "Now, it is for consideration whether there is justifiable reason for invoking Sec.37(4) of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940" and then quoting Sec.37(4) to finally say:

"A reading of Sub-sec.(4) of Sec.37 of the Act clearly envisages that the terms of the agreement including the term relating to limitation for referring the dispute to Arbitration, will prevail subject to the condition that the party aggrieved in appropriate cases, can invoke the benefit of Sub-sec.(4) of Sec.37 of the Act. In the present case, the defendant, at any rate has clearly negated the claim of the plaintiff by a letter dated 25.8.1977. Again, the defendant denied its liability on 2.11.1977. Strictly speaking, the plaintiff should have asked for a reference to the Arbitrator within one year from 5.7.1976 or at least within one year from 2.11.1977. However, the plaintiff, for reason best known to itself, has called upon the Managing Director of the Food Corporation of India to appoint an Arbitrator under Clause XIX of the Contract by a letter dated 8.4.1980. It is clear from the dates given above, that the request for appointment of an Arbitrator under Clause XIX of the Contract is hopelessly barred by limitation. In para 10 of the pleadings which has been set out above in full, except vaguely claiming that the applicant is entitled to claim the benefits of Sec.37(4) of the Act, it has not been satisfactorily explained as to how and why the appellants should be given the benefit of Sec.37(4) of the Act. In addition to claiming the benefit of Sec.37(4), the applicant has also stated that the request for arbitration has been made within three years from 25.8.1977 and therefore, the plaintiff was well within time in its claim for referring the dispute to an Arbitrator. It is not clear under what provision of law this period of three years is claimed. As noticed above, the terms of the agreement including the term for fixing the time for referring the dispute to an Arbitrator will prevail among the parties and therefore, the claim of the plaintiff that it is entitled to demand for an arbitration within three years from 25.8.1977 is not sustainable. As pointed out already, no evidence, oral or documentary, has been let in support of the claim. This is an additional factor against the plaintiff."

He has proceeded further, after referring to a judgment of the Supreme Court in Sterling General Insurance Company Ltd. v. Plinters Airways (P) Ltd., A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 415, to say as follows:

"Even applying the principles set down by the Supreme Court in the said case, I do not consider that the plaintiff has made out a case for invoking the benefits of Sec.37(4) of the Act. As pointed out above, there are no clear averments in the affidavit to explain the long delay in demanding the defendant to refer the dispute to an Arbitrator and further more, no evidence oral or documentary in support of the claim has been let in. Taking all these factors into consideration, I am inclined to think that the suit is liable to be dismissed on the ground of limitation."

There has been some doubts, on account of certain judgments of the courts including a judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Wazirchand Mahajan v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 990, and another judgment of the Supreme Court in Mohd. Usman Military Contractor, Jhansi v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 474, on the question how to determine in a proceeding under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act any issue of limitation as to arbitration, which has been finally settled by the Supreme Court in the case of Kerala State Electricity Board, Trivandrum v. T.P.K.K. Amson & Besom, Kerala, A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 282 and reiterated by the Supreme Court in the case of Union of India v. M/s. L.K. Ahuja & Company, A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1172, that there is no relation between the limitation for a proceeding under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act and the limitation for the arbitration by appointment of an arbitrator in accordance with an arbitration agreement, that Art.137 would apply to any petition or application filed under any Act to a civil court, that the words 'any other application' under Art.137 cannot be read on the principle of ejusdem generis to be applications under the Civil Procedure Code other than those mentioned in Part I of the third division, and that all that is required in order to be entitled to ask for a reference under Sec.20, there must be an entitlement to money and a difference or dispute in respect of the same. It will be entirely wrong to mix up the two aspects, namely, whether there was any valid claim for reference under Sec.20 and, secondly, whether the claim to be adjudicated by the arbitrator, was barred by lapse of time. The second is a matter which the arbitrator would decide unless, however, if on admitted facts a claim is found at the time of making an order under Sec.20 to be barred by limitation. To quote the words of the Supreme Court in this behalf in the case of Union of India v. M/s. L.K. Ahuja & Company, A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1172:

"In view of the well settled principles we are of the view that it will be entirely wrong to mix up the two aspects, namely, whether there was any valid claim for reference under Sec.20 of the Act, and secondly, whether the claim to be adjudicated by the arbitrator, was barred by lapse of time. The second is a matter which the arbitrator would decide unless, however, if on admitted facts a claim is found at the time of making an order under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act, to be barred by limitation. In order to be entitled to ask for a reference under Sec.20 of the Act, there must be an entitlement to money and a difference or dispute in respect of the same. It is true that on completion of the work, right to get payment would normally arise and it is also true that on settlement of the final bill, the right to get further payment gets weakened but the claim subsists and whether it does subsist, is a matter which is arbitrable."

Since there is no limitation, separately created for any application under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act, it is only Art.137 of the Limitation Act which prescribes a period of three years, when the right to apply accrues, is attracted as held by the Supreme Court, there can be no doubt any further as to this.

3. As we have already noticed, there are two aspects: (1) Whether the claim made in the arbitration is barred by limitation? and (2) whether the claim made by an application under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act is barred by limitation. In order to be a valid claim for reference under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act, it is necessary that there should be an arbitration agreement and secondly differences must arise to which the agreement in question applied and thirdly that must be within time as stipulated in Sec.20 of the Act. It is indeed a mistake to mix up the two aspects and it will be necessary on the facts of each case to see whether the application in court under Sec.20 is beyond the time limit prescribed under Art.137 of the Limitation Act or not. Learned single Judge has not adverted to this aspect of the law at all. The facts are so mixed up that it is not possible for us, without a further opportunity afforded to the parties, to show how for the purpose of Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act an application is sought to be maintained and whether the application is within the time stipulated for the said purpose. Since we have already noticed that if on admitted facts a claim is found, at the time of making an order under Sec.20 of the Arbitration Act, to be barred by Limitation, the Court may decline to refer the case to the arbitrator, we are inclined to observe that it will be necessary on such facts as are available to decide afresh whether the proviso aforementioned of the arbitration clause in the agreement in fact could be applied as the rule of limitation in the instant dispute between the parties. The proviso has taken care of saying that the demand for arbitration should be made within one year of the date of termination or completion (expiry of the period) of the contract. That will mean, when the work was completed, that is to say 5.7.1976 in the instant case, or, when the payment was made in full and final settlement by the respondent on 25.8.1977. There is a possibility, however, to think that there can be no commencement of any dispute for arbitration between the parties on 5.7.1976, or, even until 25.8.1977, that is until the deduction of Rs.17,482.90 from the security deposit of the appellant, there was no dispute between the parties and this 25.8.1977 dispute matured only by repudiation of the claims of the appellant by the respondent on 2.11.1977. Will it then be possible to say that termination or completion of the contract will stand extended until payment in full and final settlement was made by the respondent on 2.11.1977? If the answer to this is in the negative, it is obvious the proviso shall not be available for the purposes of limitation to either party. If that will go as the special rule of limitation between the parties, the only rule of limitation that will be available will again be as one found in Art.137 of the Limitation Act read with Sec.37 of the Arbitration Act. Since we are of the opinion that a serious error of law has been committed on account of the mixing up of the two aspects of the case, as indicated above, and since we have reasons not to enter into these two aspects ourselves separately, we are inclined to interfere with the impugned judgment and remit the case for rehearing and disposal in accordance with law. 4. In the result, the appeal is allowed, the impugned judgment is set aside and the case is remitted to the learned single Judge for rehearing and disposal in accordance with law. No costs.

(A) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960, as amended by Act XXIII of 1973), Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) - Premises in occupation of more than one tenant - Landlord requiring building for own occupation - One single petition for eviction against all the tenants, if maintainable.

In V.K.S.Raghavan v. K.B.Dayavathi, 100 L.W. 303, this Court while considering the petition for eviction filed under Sec.14(1)(b) of the Act held that one common petition against all the tenants is sufficient and separate petitions against each one of the tenants need not be filed. It remains to be seen that eviction of a part or portion of the building can be asked under Sec.14(1)(b) of the Act as in the case of filing a petition for eviction with regard to a portion of the building under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Therefore, the principle adumbrated in the abovesaid decision in V.K.S.Raghavan v. K.B.Dayavathi, 100 L.W. 303, will also be applicable to the facts of the case. Hence one petition can be filed against all the tenants if the entire building is required under Sec.10(3)(iii) of the Act. A similar view was taken by this Court while considering the petition filed under Sec.10(3)(c) of the Act in T.K.Krishnamurthy v. M/s. Jagat Textiles, 94 L.W. 160. In the present case also, the landlords required the entire premises under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Therefore, one petition for eviction against all the tenants under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act is maintainable and no separate petition against each one of the tenants need be filed.

(B) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960, as amended by Act XXIII of 1973), Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) Proviso (d) - Applicability - Lease agreement providing that if tenant committed default in payment of rent for consecutive period of two months, petition for eviction can be filed - Petition for eviction on such ground during subsistence of lease agreement if barred by the proviso.

The proviso (d) to Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act prohibits filing a petition for eviction under this Sub-section before the expiry of the lease period if such lease agreement is in existence between the landlord and the tenant. In the present case, even according to the lease deed, if the tenant commits default in payment of rent for a consecutive period of two months, then petition for eviction can be filed. Therefore, the said proviso will not be applicable to the facts of this case.

(C) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960, as amended by Act XXIII of 1973), Sec.10(2)(i), 11(4) - Petition for eviction filed under Sec.10(2)(i) on ground of wilful default in payment of rent pending - Further arrears of rent after filing petition - Landlord, if can file another petition under Sec.10(2)(i) or should only resort to proceedings under Sec.11(4).

Sec.11(4) is intended to prevent defaulters from continuing in possession of the property taking advantage of the pendency of an application without at the same time performing their own part of the obligations. The disability imposed by the Section attaches only to the tenant. A proceeding under Sec.11(4) of the Act is intended to accelerate the long drawn proceedings under the Act. Therefore, if the landlord chooses to file another petition for eviction on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent, for the subsequent period when an earlier petition on the same ground is pending, he can do so and there is no impediment for the same. There is no express prohibition in the Act preventing the landlord from filing a second petition for eviction on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent while the earlier petition on the same ground is pending. Therefore, in view of the decision of the Full Bench of this Court in K.Perumal Chettiar v. Muthusami, (1962)2 M.L.J. 218 (F.B.), the present eviction petition filed by the landlord herein under Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act is maintainable. [Para 26] Cases referred to:

Petitions under Sec.25 of the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act amended by Act 23 of 1973, praying the High Court to revise the Orders of the Court of Small Causes (VIII Judge) Madras dated 24.7.1989 and 19.11.1990 and made in R.C.A.Nos.405 of 1988, 639, 647 and 648 of 1987 (R.C.O.P.Nos. 3354 of 1985 and 3406 of 1984, respectively, Court of Small Causes, Madras). etc.

R.Krishnamoorthy, Senior Counsel, for

R.Sundararajan, Paul Bright Singh, P.Haridass and Miss K.Bhanumathi, for Petitioners.

R.Sundaravaradan, Senior Counsel, for M.Kumarasamy, for Respondents.

The Court delivered the following

ORDER: The tenants are the petitioners in all these revisions. The first respondent is the husband of the second respondent. The respondents are the owners of the premises bearing door No.290, Bharathi Salai, Pycrofts Road, Triplicane, Madras-5. The petition for eviction was filed against all these tenants on the ground of owner's occupation under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act 18 of 1960 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'). In so far as the tenants in C.R.P.Nos.2729 and 395 of 1991 are concerned, the eviction petitions were also filed on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent under Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act. The petitioners in C.R.P.Nos.2729 of 1989 and 395 of 1991 are the joint tenants under the respondents herein for the entire premises except three shops in the front portion of the ground floor on a monthly rent of Rs.1,000. The petitioner in C.R.P.No.429 of 1991 is in occupation of one shop in the front portion of the ground floor on a monthly rent of Rs.300. The petitioner in C.R.P.No.1130 of 1991 is in occupation of one shop in the ground floor on a monthly rent of Rs.175.

2. In so far as the petition for eviction filed under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act is concerned, the landlord filed one single petition against all the tenants. The case of the landlords is as under:

The respondents herein purchased the petition premises under a sale deed dated 30.4.1984. Soon after the execution of the sale deed, this fact was intimated to the tenants by the present landlords as well as by the prior owners. Some of the tenants attorned their tenancy in favour of the present landlords. The landlords are carrying on medical shop business at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, Madras-5, which is a rented building. They are now under the threat of eviction since their landlord filed a petition for eviction against them on the ground of additional accommodation. The first respondent herein is a chemist in Simpson & Co., and he has got wide experience in dealing with medicines. The landlords wanted to carry on their business in medicines in a big way, in the entire petition premises consisting of only ground and the first floor. The landlords are not in occupation of any other non-residential building of their own in the city of Madras. The landlords sent notices to the tenants on 24.8.1984 calling upon them to quit and deliver vacant possession of the petition premises. The petitioners in C.R.P.No.2729 of 1989 evaded the service of notice. Some of the tenants sent their replies on 6.9.1984 and on 14.9.1984 expressing their refusal to vacate the premises.

3. The case of the tenants is as under:

The petition for eviction is not maintainable since the business at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane is being carried on by Hindu undivided family, in which the first respondent is the kartha. The landlords are not carrying on any business of their own individually. There are four different portions let out separately to four different tenants. Each portion is a building and therefore the landlord cannot file a single petition for eviction for his own occupation against all the tenants. The landlords failed to prove their bona fide in requiring the petition premises under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act in the case of each one of the tenants. The landlords are now carrying on their business at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, in a portion admeasuring about 100 sq.ft. The petition premises on the whole admeasuring about 4,000 sq.ft. Hence, the entire petition premises may not be necessary for the landlords to carry on their small medical shop. The first petitioner in the eviction petition is employed in Simpson & Co. It is not known whether he is carrying on his business in medicines. It was therefore submitted that there is no bona fide on the part of the landlords in requiring the petition premises under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act.

4. Mariappan examined himself as P.W.1. Jacob Ramaniah, S.Shanmugham, K.Sureshkumar and Arjun Hariram were examined as respondents' witnesses. The landlord filed 19 documents. The tenants filed five documents. Considering the facts arising in these cases, the rent controller came to the conclusion that the landlords established their bona fide in requiring the petition premises under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Accordingly eviction was ordered against all the tenants. Aggrieved, the tenants preferred appeals before the Rent Control Appellate Authority. Before the rent control Appellate Authority, the landlord filed 39 additional documents and the tenants filed four additional documents. One Nageswararao was examined as additional witness on the side of the tenants. P.W.1 also gave additional oral evidence.

Considering the facts arising in these cases, the rent control appellate authority confirmed the order of eviction passed by the Rent Controller against all the tenants. Aggrieved, the tenants are in revision before this Court.

5. The learned Senior Counsel Mr. R.Krishnamoorthy, appearing for the petitioners in C.R.P.No.2729 of 1989 submitted as under:

The authorities below failed to consider that the single petition filed against all the tenants is not maintainable, in law and contrary to the ratio of the decision of this Court in Smt. Chandravalli Bai Purshothandass v. Poonamchand Mittal, (1976) 1 M.L.J. 89, recognising a part of the building, as a unit by itself under the Act. A single petition for one requirement against different tenants occupying different units is not maintainable. The petition was filed by the individuals and the business was carried on by the Hindu undivided family and that P.W.1 is an employee in Simpson and Co., and therefore his evidence ought to have been rejected. The business alleged to have been carried on in a rented premises by the landlords is a small medical shop in an area of about 100 sq. feet and therefore the requirement of the landlords requiring the different units under the occupation of different tenants totally of an extent of 4,000 sq.ft. is patently mala fide especially in the absence of any claim for expansion of business or any evidence relating thereto. There is a lease deed executed between the prior landlord and the tenants for a period of 5 years and before the expiry of the said five years period, the petition for eviction under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act cannot be filed. The authorities below failed to consider the sufficiency of the occupation as required by the landlords for the purpose of carrying on his small medical shop. The bona fide requirement in the case of each of the tenant was not considered separately. Application for additional document was allowed without giving any opportunity to explain those documents. No opportunity was given to cross-examine Mariappan after his additional oral evidence. There is inconsistency in the evidence of P.W.1. The report of the Commissioner ought not to have been relied on. The Commissioner was not examined to prove his report. The premises No.47, Nagappa Iyer Street, Madras-5 was converted into non-residential premises in the ground-floor as can be seen from Ex.P-58 series. Exs.P-20 to P-58 are not proved and they are also not relevant documents. It was, therefore, pleaded that the order of eviction may be set aside.

6. The learned counsel Mr. Haridoss and Miss Bhanumathy appearing for the other tenants in their revisions while adopting the arguments advanced by the learned senior counsel Mr. R. Krishnamoorthy, highlighted certain special features arising in their individual cases.

7. The learned senior Counsel Mr. R. Sundaravaradhan, appearing for the respondents/landlords submitted as under:

The first respondent is a Chemist. He was working in Simpson and Company as Chemist and he is now retired. They are doing their medical shop business at No. 274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, which is a rented premises. Since the landlord of the said premises required the same for his occupation, the respondents herein filed the present petition for eviction against the tenants. No doubt, the landlords are doing their medical shop business in a rented premises, which admeasures approximately about 100 sq. ft. The petition premises is consisting of the ground floor and the first floor. The plinth area of the petition premises would be about 3,000 sq. ft. The landlords now wanted to shift their medical shop business from the rented premises and they desired to conduct their medical business in a big way in the petition premises. Therefore, it is not correct on the part of the tenants to suggest that since the landlords are now doing their business in a smaller place and hence their requirement of the petition premises, which is larger in size is not bona fide. Since the landlords required the entire premises bona fide one single petition is sufficient for seeking eviction against all the tenants. In a petition for eviction under Sec. 10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act, what is necessary to prove is the bona fide requirement of the landlord. In the present case, the landlords established their bona fide in requiring the entire petition premises under Sec. 10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Therefore, it is not correct on the part of the tenants to state that the bona fide requirement was not established in the case of each tenant. The petition premises was purchased for the purpose of doing their business. In clause (4) of the lease deed executed between the tenants and the prior owner of the premises, it is stated that if the tenant committed wilful default in payment of rent, for the two consecutive months, then the landlord is entitled to ask for eviction. In the present case, the tenants in C.R.P. Nos. 395 of 1991 and 2729 of 1989 committed wilful default in payment of rent. Therefore, when the forfeiture clause begins to operate, it is open to the landlords to file a petition for eviction on any one of the grounds available to them. Therefore, the proviso (d) to Sec. 10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act is not applicable to the facts of this case. 8. After the respondents examined their additional witnesses and filed their additional documents, P.W. 1 was examined and his additional documents were also filed. Therefore, it cannot be said that no opportunity was given to the respondents to rebut the evidence produced by the landlords. It is not open to the tenants to suggest whether the accommodation sought for is sufficient or suitable to the business of the landlords. It is submitted that both the authorities below came to the concurrent conclusion that the requirement of the landlords is bona fide under Sec. 10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Hence, no interference is called for.

9. I have heard the rival submissions.

10. The petitioners in the eviction petition are husband and wife. They purchased the petition premises at No. 290, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, Madras-5, under a sale deed dated 30.4.1984. According to the landlords, they are carrying on their medical shop business at No. 274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, Madras-5, which is a rented building. The landlords are now under threat of eviction. Hence they required the petition premises bona fide under Sec. 10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. The first petitioner in the eviction petition is a Pharmacist. He was working as Pharmacist in Simpson and Company. The landlords filed a petition for eviction against five tenants and the sixth respondent is the sub-tenant under the fifth tenant. According to the petitioners, herein the landlords cannot file one single petition for eviction against all the tenants, since the portion under the occupation of each tenant is a separate building as contemplated under the Act. Therefore, according to the tenants, the landlords ought to have filed separate petitions for eviction against each of the individual tenant. The fact remains that the landlords required the entire petition premises for the purpose of running their own medical shop, which they are carrying on in a rented premises. Since the landlords are requiring the entire petition premises for the purpose of carrying on their own business, the authorities below came to the conclusion that one single petition for eviction against all the tenants under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act is maintainable. In the decision reported in V.K.S.Raghavan v. K.B.Dayavathi, 100 L.W. 303, this Court while considering the petition for eviction filed under Sec.14(1)(b) of the Act held that one common petition against all the tenants in the petition premises is sufficient and separate petitions against each one of the tenants need not be filed. The learned counsel for the tenants pointed out that the abovesaid decision was rendered while considering a petition filed under Sec.14(1)(b) of the Act and hence that decision will not be applicable to the present case, where the petition was filed under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. It remains to be seen that eviction of a part or portion of the building can be asked under Sec.14(1)(b) of the Act as in the case of filing a petition for eviction with regard to a portion of the building under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Therefore, the principle adumbrated in the abovesaid decision in V.K.S.Raghavan v. K.B.Dayavathi, 100 L.W. 303, will also be applicable to the facts of this case. Hence one petition can be filed against all the tenants if the entire building is required under Sec.10(3)(iii) of the Act. A similar view was taken by this Court while considering the petition filed under Sec.10(3)(c) of the Act in T.K.Krishnamurthy v. M/s.Jagat Textiles, 94 L.W. 160. In the present case also, the landlords required the entire premises under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Therefore, one petition for eviction against all the tenants under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act is maintainable and no separate petition against each one of the tenants need be filed.

11. The learned counsel for the tenants contended that the medical shop business which is being carried on at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, Madras-5, is a joint family business and the petitioners herein does not require the petition premises for the joint family business, but they require the petition premises for their own individual business. Hence, the present petition filed by the landlords is not maintainable. The authorities below pointed out that the owner of the premises at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane Madras-5, filed petition for eviction against the landlords herein. Ex.P-1 is the copy of the order passed by the Rent Controller in H.R.C.O.P.No.3819 of 1983. This would go to show that the first respondent herein is having a Pharmacist certificate and the licence to conduct the medical shop at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane Madras-5, Exs. P-2 to P-9 would go to show that the medical shop in premises at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, Madras-5 was a proprietary concern of the first respondent herein. Therefore, the contention of the tenants that the medical shop business conducted at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, was joint family business cannot be accepted. The tenants contended that there was a lease agreement between the tenants in C.R.P.No.395 of 1991 and the prior owner of the petition premises one Mr.R.Shanmugham dated 24.5.1980, which was marked as Ex.R-3. According to Clause (4) in the rental agreement dated 24.5.1980, if the tenant committed wilful default in payment of rent, for a consecutive period of two months then, it is open to the landlords to file a petition for eviction on any of the available grounds. In the present case, it was stated that the petitioners in C.R.P.No.395 of 1991 committed wilful default in payment of rent for more than two months and therefore the landlords filed a petition for eviction and the eviction was also ordered by the authorities below and the revision is pending before the Court. There is no such lease deed between the prior landlord and the other tenants. The proviso (d) to Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act prohibits filing a petition for eviction under this sub-section, before the expiry of the lease period if such lease agreement is in existence between the landlord and the tenant. In the present case, even according to the lease deed, if the tenant commits default in payment of rent for a consecutive period of two months, then petition for eviction can be filed. Therefore, the said proviso will not be applicable to the facts of this case. Hence, the eviction petition under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) is maintainable in so far as the tenant in C.R.P.No.395 of 1991 is concerned. The tenants contended that the landlords are conducting their medical shop business in a place admeasuring about 100 sq.ft. and if they required any portion for carrying on their own business in the petition premises, they can ask for eviction with regard to a part of the building. Hence the requirement of the entire petition premises is not justifiable. Further, the requirement of the entire building which stands in an area of 4,000 sq.ft. will be excessive for their use and therefore, the requirement of the landlords of the petition premises is not bona fide. It remains to be seen that the first respondent herein is a Pharmacist. He is conducting a medical shop under the name and style of 'Shobana Medicals' at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, Madras-5. He wanted to conduct the said business in a big way in the petition premises. The petition premises is stated to be consisting of ground floor and the first floor, and the total plinth area according to the landlords would be about 3,000 sq.ft. Hence, according to the landlords for the purpose of conducting their business in a big way, the entire petition premises would be sufficient for them. Ex.P-55 is the certified copy of the order passed in H.R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984. According to Ex.P-55, eviction was ordered against the respondent in C.R.P.No.429 of 1991. The landlords filed Exs.P-20 to P-54 as additional documents. A perusal of those documents would go to show that Mariappan vacated the rented premises in which he was carrying on his medical shop business and at present he is conducting his shop at No.39, Parthasarathy Naidu Street, Triplicane, Madras-5. Mariappan is residing at No.47, Nagappa Iyer Street. A Commissioner was appointed to find out the nature of this building. According to the Commissioner's report, the premises at No.47, Nagappa Iyer Street is a residential building. Exs.P-20 to P-22 would go to show that at No.39, Parthasarathy Naidu Street, Triplicane, Madras-5, Shobana Medical stores is being conducted. It is stated that it is a rented building. But this was neither accepted nor denied by the tenants. According to Ex.P-23 relating to the medical shop, the turnover is Rs.5,55,434. Exs.P-23 to P-25 are Balance Sheets. Ex.P-26 balance sheet which relates to the medical shop at Parthasarathy Naidu Street which shows a turnover of Rs.3,00,000 till 31.3.1990. So also, Ex.P-27 balance sheet shows the turnover is more than Rs.3,00,000. Exs.P-29 to P-33 relates to the medical shop at No.39, Parthasarathy Naidu Street, Triplicane. Ex.P-34 is the ledger for the year 1986-87. Ex.P-35 is the day-book for the year 1986-87. Ex.P-36 is the day-book for the year 1988-89. So also, Exs.P-37 to P-41 are all ledgers from the year 1987-88 to 1989-90. Ex.P-54 is the copy of the order rendered by the Supreme Court dated 16.3.1988. Exs.P-44 to P-55 would go to show that the landlords after vacating the premises at No.274, Bharathi Salai, Triplicane, conducted their medical shop business at No.37, Parthasarathy Naidu

Street, Triplicane, Madras-5. This is also a rented building. One Nageswara Rao was examined as an additional witness on the side of the tenants. His evidence also would go to show that the landlords are conducting their business in a rented premises. The documents filed by the landlords would go to show that their business is going on expanding and their turnover is also steeply increasing. Therefore, there is justification on the part of the respondents herein in requiring the entire petition premises for the purpose of carrying on their own business. Therefore, it cannot be said that the plinth area of the petition premises is over and above their requirement.

12. Considering all these aspects, the authorities below came to the conclusion that the business of the landlords is expanding and therefore the requirement of the entire petition premises is bona fide. Further, it is not for the tenants to suggest that the petition premises is not suitable or insufficient or more than sufficient for the purpose of conducting their (landlords) business. Before the Rent Control Appellate Authority both the tenants as well as the landlords filed additional documents and adduced additional oral evidence. Therefore at this stage, it is not fair to contend that adequate opportunity was not given by the Appellate Authority either to cross-examine the witness or to prove the additional documents. Both the courts below on considering the facts and the evidence adduced both oral and documentary concurrently came to the conclusion that the landlords established their bona fide in requiring the petition premises under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. In view of the said facts, I am unable to interfere with the order of eviction passed under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. On a careful consideration of the facts arising in these cases, I am also of the opinion that the landlords established their bona fide in requiring the petition premises under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Hence, I am unable to interfere with the order of eviction passed by the authorities below under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act in respect of all the tenants. Accordingly, the order of eviction passed under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act against all the tenants stands sustained. Accordingly, the revisions are dismissed.

13. C.R.P.No.2729 of 1989 relates to the order passed under Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act in R.C.O.P.No.3354 of 1985. The petitioners herein are joint tenants under the respondents herein in respect of the petition premises, except three shops in the front portion. The tenants are paying a monthly rent of Rs.1,000. The building is non-residential. According to the landlords the tenants are chronic defaulters in payment of rent. The landlords purchased the petition premises under a sale-deed dated 30.4.1984. The landlords requested the tenants to attorn the tenancy and pay the rent with effect from 1.5.1984. The tenants agreed to pay the rent. Even then, the rent for two months was not paid. Again another notice was issued calling upon the tenants to pay the arrears of rent. The tenants evaded the notice. Hence, R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 was filed for eviction under Sec.10(2)(1) of the Act. In the said petition, the tenants filed vakalath, but no arrears of rent was paid. Since the counter was not filed, an ex parte order was passed in the petition, and that order was set aside on payment of costs on 11.1.1985. Subsequently, on 23.1.1986, the tenants paid a sum of Rs.2,000 towards rent for May and June, 1984. Again, they paid a sum of Rs.2,000 on 30.3.1985. Subsequently they did not pay any rent. In R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1985 the default is from May to August, 1984. In the present petition the default is from September, 1984 onwards and not for the period mentioned in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984. Therefore, according to the landlords, the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent in the present petition from September, 1984 onwards.

14. In the counter filed by the tenants, they submitted as under:

They did not commit wilful default in payment of rent as alleged by the landlords. They admit that they are the tenants in respect of the petition premises on a monthly rent of Rs.1,000 under the present landlords. It is not correct to state that they evaded the notice sent by the landlords. It is not correct to state that the rent for the months of May and June, 1984 was not paid. The tenants came in as tenants under the prior owner of the petition premises. At the time of inception of the tenancy they paid an advance of Rs.10,000 to the prior owner. According to the agreement out of the monthly rent of Rs.1,000 payable Rs.200 is to be adjusted towards the advance amount. Hence, the tenants were asked to pay only Rs.800 per month. Accordingly they used to pay only Rs.800 per month till the advance amount is wiped out.

The tenants tendered the rent as usual after deducting Rs.200 from the monthly rent of Rs.1,000 but the same was refused by the landlords. The landlords are fully aware of the fact that a sum of Rs.10,000 was paid by way of advance to the prior owner. The tenants have paid several amounts both in court and outside the court. Only on account of refusal of the landlords to receive the sum of Rs.800 towards rent, the arrears accrued. Therefore, according to the tenants they never committed wilful default in payment of rents as alleged.

15. Mariappan examined himself as P.W.1. Raghavendra Rao was examined as R.W.1. Exs.P-1 to P-7 were filed on the side of the landlords. The tenants did not file any document. Considering the facts arising in this case, the Rent Controller came to the conclusion that the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent for the petition period. Accordingly eviction was ordered. On appeal, the Rent Control Appellate Authority confirmed the order of eviction passed by the Rent Controller and dismissed the appeal. Aggrieved, the tenants are in revision before this Court.

16. The learned senior counsel Mr. R.Krishnamoorthy appearing for the tenants/petitioners herein submitted as under:

The authorities below failed to understand the scope of Sec.10(2)(1) of the Act. The tenants have paid a sum of Rs.10,000 as advance at the time of inception of the tenancy to the prior landlord. This was proved by examining the prior landlord in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984. The Rent Control Appellate Authority erred in dismissing the application filed for sending the records in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984. There was a lease deed between the tenants and the prior landlord dated 24.5.1980 for a period of five years with an option to renew the same for another five years. Therefore, the petition for eviction cannot be filed at this stage. When the earlier petition R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 was pending, the landlords have no right to file another petition R.C.O.P.No.3354 of 1985 as laid down by the Division Bench of this Court reported in Duragai Ammal v. R.T.Mani, (1989) 1 L.W. 155. During the subsistence of the lease period, the landlords cannot file a petition for eviction as per the decision of the Supreme Court in Modern Hotel, Gudur represented by M.N.Narayanan v. K.Radhakrishnaiah, A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1510; (1989) 2 S.C.C. 686. The earlier petition filed by the landlords for wilful default in payment of rent in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 was dismissed by the Rent Controller, the landlords have filed R.C.A.No.207 of 1989, the appellate authority refused to hear both the appeals together. All the records have been filed by the tenants in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 and therefore necessary records could not be produced in the present case before the Rent Controller. The receipt dated 22.5.1980 evidencing the payment of Rs.10,000 was filed as Ex.R-9 in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984. The landlords did not inform the tenants about the purchase of the petition premises. Shanmugham was examined as a witness, who confirmed the payment of Rs.10,000 by way of advance. When the first petition for eviction is pending, if there is any subsequent default in payment of rent, the landlords can file a petition under Sec.11(4) of the Act. Instead of that, a second petition for eviction under Sec.10(2)(1) of the Act is not possible. Therefore, H.R.C.O.P.No.3354 of 1984 is liable to be dismissed in limine, since the tenants did not commit wilful default in payment of rent as alleged by the landlords. Therefore, the eviction order passed by the authorities below are not sustainable.

17. The learned senior counsel Mr.Sundaravaradan, appearing for the landlords submitted as under:

The petition premises was purchased by the landlords on 30.4.1984. The fact that the landlords purchased the petition premises was informed to the tenants directly, and in spite of that the tenants refused to pay the rent from 1.5.1984 onwards. The tenants in fact agreed to pay the rent to the present landlords. The landlords sent a notice on 24.8.1984. The tenants wilfully evaded this notice. On 24.9.1984, the landlords filed R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 against the tenants for eviction on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent for May, June, July and August, 1984. On the same date, H.R.C.O.P.No.3406 of 1984 was also filed against all the tenants under Sec.10(3)(a)(iii) of the Act. Both the petitions were posted for hearing on 31.10.1984. Though, the counsel for the tenants took time for vakalath, no payment of arrears was made. Since the arrears of rent was not paid and the counter was also not filed. In R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 the tenants were set ex parte. The tenants filed M.P.No.11 of 1984 for setting aside the ex parte order and the ex parte order was set aside on payment of costs on 11.1.1985.

After taking several adjournments, the tenants paid a sum of Rs.2,000 towards rent for May and June, 1984. Thereafter, the tenants paid another Rs.2,000 on 30.3.1985 being the rent for July and August, 1984. Thereafter they never paid any amount towards arrears of rent. Therefore, the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent from May to August, 1984. For this arrears of rent R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 was filed since even after filing the first petition, the tenants had committed wilful default in payment of rent. Hence, the present petition was filed for eviction under Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act, since the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent from September, 1984 till the end of September, 1985. During the pendency of the evidence petition filed on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent, if the tenants refused to pay the rent, or again committed wilful default in payment of rent, it is open to the landlords to file another petition under Sec.10(2)(1) of the Act. It is not always necessary that the landlords should resort in a matter like this to proceedings under Sec.11(4) of the Act. There is no evidence on record to show that the tenants paid a sum of Rs.10,000 to the prior landlord as advance. In the rental agreement between the tenants and the prior landlord, there was no mention about the payment of Rs.10,000 and the mode of adjustments as pleaded by them. Even if a sum of Rs.200 is adjustable towards advance, the advance would have been wiped out much earlier. There is no request or demand made by the tenants to adjust the alleged advance. While rendering the decision in K.Appa Rao v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras, (1962)2 M.L.J. 280 (D.B.), the Full Bench decision of this Court on this point in Durgai Ammal v. R.T.Mani, (1989)1 M.L.J. 155, was not brought to the notice of the Division Bench. It was, therefore, pleaded that both the authorities below were correct in coming to the conclusion that the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent for the petition period. Since the conclusions arrived at by both the authorities below are concurrent, no interference is called for.

18. The tenants filed C.M.P.No.3148 of 1992 in C.R.P.No.2729 of 1989 to receive the copy of the order passed in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 as additional document in this revision. The landlords filed a counter opposing this petition.

19. I have heard the rival submissions.

20. The fact remains that the landlords filed a petition for eviction under Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act. The fact that the petitioners herein are tenants in respect of petition premises under the respondents herein is not denied. The rent is stated to be Rs.1,000 per month. This fact was also not denied. The tenants were in occupation of the petition premises even prior to the purchase of the premises by the present landlords. The respondents herein purchased the petition premises on 30.4.1984. According to the landlords, the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent from September, 1984 till September, 1985. The landlords have already filed a petition for eviction on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent against the tenants herein in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984. In that petition, the period of default is from May to August, 1984. During the pendency of R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984, the present R.C.O.P.No.3354 of 1985 was filed. According to the landlords, they intimated the fact about the purchase of the petition premises to the tenants, and they have also issued a notice calling upon them to pay the arrears of rent. But according to the landlords, that the service of notice was evaded by the tenants. Therefore, according to the landlords, the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent for the petition period and thereby rendering themselves liable to be evicted. According to the tenants they did not commit wilful default in payment of rent as alleged by the landlords. According to the tenants at the time of inception of the tenancy they have paid a sum of Rs.10,000 by way of advance to the prior landlord Shanmugham. There was also an agreement between the prior landlord and the tenants to adjust Rs.200 out of the rent payable every month. Therefore, according to them, they have got to pay Rs.800 per month and not Rs.1,000 per month. The tenants tendered the rent at the rate of Rs.800 per month but the landlords refused to receive the same. Hence, there is no wilful default in payment of rent.

21. Thiru Mariappan examined himself as P.W.1 and filed Exs.P-1 to Ex.P-7. On the side of the tenants they did not come to the witness box but examined one Ragavendra Rao as D.W.1. No document was filed. The landlords purchased the petition premises on 30.4.1984. On 30.5.1985 they sent a notice Ex.P-1 to the tenants. This was received by the tenants as evidenced by Ex.P-2 acknowledgment. In the said notice, it is clearly stated that the monthly rent is Rs.1,000. In order to prove that the tenants have already paid a sum of Rs.10,000 by way of advance to the prior landlord and there was an agreement between them, to adjust the said advance from the rent payable every month, no document was filed. In Ex.R-3 (exhibit in previous matter) the rental agreement, between the prior landlord and the tenants, there is no mention about the payment of Rs.10,000 by way of advance as alleged by the tenants. According to Ex.P-4, dated 23.1.1985, the tenants paid a sum of Rs.2,000 in court. According to Exs.P-6 and P-7, a sum of Rs.2,000 was paid on 21.3.1984 and another sum of Rs.800 was paid on 10.10.1984 by way of pay order. This was not accepted by the landlords. According to the landlords, they returned this pay order, because when the rent is Rs.1,000 per month, the tenants have no business to send Rs.800 per month. Therefore it was returned. On 3.5.1985, 9.12.1985 the tenants paid Rs.2,000 and Rs.4,000 respectively. According to the landlords, the rent is due for a period of thirteen months from September, 1984 till September, 1985. The petition was filed on 17.10.1985. The tenants paid Rs.2,000 and Rs.4,000 totalling Rs.6,000. The arrears of rent for thirteen months comes to Rs.13,000. Therefore there is still arrears of rent payable by the tenants.

22. There is no particulars as to what is the date on which this Rs.10,000 was paid to the prior landlord. Assuming if this amount of Rs.10,000 is to be adjusted at the rate of Rs.200 per month from the date of lease deed, viz., 24.5.1980, the said amount of Rs.10,000 would have been wiped out by 24.7.1984. On September, 1984, there was nothing left in the said amount of Rs.10,000 yet to be adjusted. Even though no document was filed in the present proceedings by the tenants before the authorities below to show that they have paid a sum of Rs.10,000 by way of advance to the prior landlord, the tenants now sought to file by way of additional evidence, the order passed in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 dated 25.11.1988 in C.M.P.No.3148 of 1992. The landlords/respondents herein filed a counter opposing this application. The parties herein are parties in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984. In that proceedings, it was the case of the tenants that they have paid Rs.10,000 by way of advance to the prior landlord. Therefore, this fact was known to the landlords. No prejudice will be caused if this document is permitted to be filed as an additional document. Further, it is an order of court and a public document. Therefore, the certified copy of the order in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 is permitted to be filed as an additional document and the same is marked as Ex.R-1. Accordingly C.M.P.No.3148 of 1992 stands allowed.

23. According to the facts arising in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984, the petitioners herein came as tenants under Shanmugham on 24.5.1980 as per the lease deed dated 24.5.1980. It is stated that two days prior to the date on 22.5.1980, the tenants herein paid Rs.10,000 as advance to the said R.Shanmugham and he also issued a receipt for having received that amount from the tenants. That was filed as Ex.R-9 in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1988. the landlords herein contended in the said R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 that the said receipt Ex.R-9 is not a true document. Further it is not known as to why the tenants did not say in the counter filed in the present proceedings that a sum of Rs.10,000 was paid to R.Shanmugham two days prior to execution of the lease agreement dated 24.5.1980. Further more that receipt is not now before this Court for verification. Ex.R.9 in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 appears to be a collusive document. If the document was a true, the existence of which would have been disclosed in the present proceedings. There was no explanation by the tenants herein as to why the existence of the said receipt Ex.R-9 was not disclosed in the present proceedings. Further, it is not the case of the tenants herein that in Ex.R-9 it was stated that the said sum of Rs.10,000 will be adjusted by way of Rs.200 per month from the rent. At least the tenants could have examined the said Shanmugham as a witness in the present proceedings. That was also not done in this case. Again, the order passed in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984 is under appeal/revision. Therefore, I consider that even by producing the order copy in R.C.O.P.No.3405 of 1984, the tenants were unable to establish that they have paid Rs.10,000 by way of advance to the prior landlord. Even assuming that Ex.R-9 is a genuine document and Rs.10,000 was paid as an advance two days prior to 24.7.1980, the advance amount would have been wiped out by July, 1984 itself. Therefore, in September, 1984 there was no advance amount remaining to be adjusted. In view of all these facts, I hold that the tenants were unable to establish that they have paid an advance of Rs.10,000 to the prior landlord and that was to be adjusted by way of Rs.200 per month out of the rent payable. Therefore, admittedly there is arrears of rent payable by the tenants for the petition period and hence the tenants are liable to be evicted under Sec.10(2)(1) of the Act.

24. Another ground raised in this revision was that when the first petition for eviction under Sec.10(2)(i) is pending, another petition under Sec.10(2)(1) cannot be filed and if there is any arrears of rent even after filing of the first petition, the landlords should resort to the proceedings under Sec.11(4) of the Act, and not to file another petition for eviction under Sec.10(2)(1) of the Act for the default in payment of rent for the subsequent period. To support this proposition, the learned senior counsel for the tenants relied upon a decision of the Division Bench of this Court reported in Durgai Ammal v. R.T.Mani, (1989)1 L.W. 155. On the other hand, the learned counsel appearing for the landlords pointed out that two petitions under Sec.10(2)(1) are possible for two different periods and it is not necessary for the landlords to resort to the proceedings under Sec.11(4) of the Act when the tenant committed wilful default in payment of rent after the first petition was filed. To support this proposition, the learned counsel relied upon a Full Bench decision of this Court reported in K.Perumal Chettiar v. V.Muthusami, (1962)2 M.L.J. 218 (F.B.). It remains to be seen that before the Division Bench which rendered the decision in Durgai Ammal v. R.T.Mani, (1989)1 L.W. 155, the decision of the Full Bench of this Court on this point was not brought to its notice. 25. In Durgai Ammal v. R.T.Mani, (1989)1 L.W. 155, while delivering a separate but concurrent judgment, His Lordship Justice Bellie while considering Sec.11(4) of the Act held that:

"36. Therefore if during the rent control proceedings, the tenant does not pay rent, the landlord can file an application in that respect before the Controller and the Controller on his satisfaction will terminate the proceedings and direct the tenant to put the landlord in possession of premises. Thus in the Act a special machinery has been provided to deal with non-payment of rent by the tenant during pendency of the rent control proceedings. The landlord in disregard of or by-passing this provision cannot institute a fresh proceeding on the ground of non-payment of rent. This apart, even as per the petition itself during the proceedings the tenant was paying rent in lump sum some time even once in 12 months and the landlord has received them. Therefore non-payment of 7 months rent cannot be said to be wilful. It is not the landlord's case that this was not paid in spite of demands. Therefore, the present petition i.e., H.R.C.No.3487 of 1981, as regards the ground of non-payment of rent cannot be sustained. Hence, the findings of the appellate authority that the tenant has committed wilful default and on this ground he is liable to be evicted has to be set aside."

This is a decision rendered by the Division Bench of this Court. But there is another Full Bench decision of this Court rendered in K.Perumal Chettiar v. V.Muthusami, (1962)2 M.L.J. 218 (F.B.), on this aspect wherein while considering the proviso to Sec.7 of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960) the Full Bench held as under:

"Under the Proviso to Sec.10(7) of the present Act (XVIII of 1960) though the language used is not quite clear, a landlord can file an application complaining of default for subsequent months during the pendency of an application on the ground of default in payment of rent for earlier months. The word 'other grounds' in the Proviso must relate to the necessary grounds other than those which form the subject-matter of the previous petition."

It is significant to note that the Full Bench decision of this Court in K.Perumal Chettiar v. V.Muthusami, (1962)2 M.L.J. 218 (F.B.), was not brought to the notice of the Division Bench of this Court, while rendering its decision in Durgai Ammal v. R.T.Mani, (1989)1 L.W. 155.

26. Further, Sec.11(4) is intended to prevent defaulters from continuing in possession of the property taking advantage of the pendency of an application without at the same time performing their own part of the obligations. The disability imposed by this section attaches only to the tenant. A proceeding under Sec.11(4) of the Act is intended to accelerate the long drawn proceedings under the Act. Therefore, if the landlord chooses to file another petition for eviction on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent, for the subsequent period, when an earlier petition on the same ground is pending, he can do so, and there is no impediment for the same. There is no express prohibition in the Act preventing the landlord from filing a second petition for eviction on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent while the earlier petition on the same ground is pending. Therefore, in view of the above cited decision of the Full Bench of this Court, the present eviction petition filed by the landlord herein under Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act is maintainable.

27. Thus on a careful consideration of the facts arising in this case, I am of the view that the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent for the petition period. The explanation offered by the tenants would go to show that the default was committed deliberately. Hence, I consider that the authorities below were correct in coming to the conclusion that the tenants committed wilful default in payment of rent for the petition period. Therefore, I am not inclined to interfere with the order of eviction passed by the authorities below on this ground. Accordingly, this revision is also dismissed.

28. In the result, all the revisions are dismissed. There will be no order as to costs. Time for eviction three months.

M.Rammohan Shanmugham

...Respondent.

Private Trust - Scheme decree - Appointment of trustees - Person applying for a specific post must be considered for appointment to that post only - Scheme decree authorising appointing authority not to rigidly follow the norms - Interpretation violating the interest and objectives of trust ought not to be permitted. Held:- Normally when one applies for a specific post, the consideration for appointment must be only for that post. It is elementary. While so, the respondent is appointed not for what he prayed for but for a different post. This is clearly an error apparent from the face of the record. It is true that clause 5(c) of the scheme decree authorises the court "not to rigidly adhere" to the norms if efficient administration of the trust requires. But the 'rigid' used in the scheme decree only means to state that the appointing authority, viz., the court, ought not to be restricted in a manner against the objects of the Trust. If any interpretation sought to be placed on the word 'rigid' is understood as violating the intent and objectives of the Trust it ought not to be permitted. [Paras 10 & 11]

V. Sridevan, Senior Advocate, for R. Santhanam, for Respondents in both the Petitions.

ORDER: These two revisions can be dealt with together, as both of them arise from the same order dated 9.9.1992 in O.S.No.68 of 1948 as amended in O.S.No.17 of 1960 of the (Scheme Court), Subordinate Judge, Mayiladuthurai. Brief history of the case is as follows:

A.V. Charities, Mayiladuthurai, is a Trust which is governed by a Scheme Decree made in O.S.No.68 of 1948 dated 24.7.1951 on the file of Sub Court, Mayavaram as amended in O.S.No.17 of 1960 on the file of the same court. As per the said Scheme Decree, the Management of the Trust vests in a Board of Trustees consisting of a Chairman and five Trustees to be appointed by the Scheme Court from among the members of the original five families that gave the original endowment. The five families that gave the original endowment are: (1) Anbanathapuram family, (2) Enathimangalam family, (3) Pallavarayapet family, (4) Karugudi family, and (5) Kanganamputhur family.

Every member of the Board appointed by the court is entitled to hold office for a period of five years from the date of his appointment. The Scheme Decree also provides that the appointment of a trustee in any vacancy caused by efflux of time by resignation, removal, death or disqualification shall be filled up by the Scheme Court from among the male members, of the five families having due regard to the representation of the aforesaid five families. Right from the inception the Board of Trustees of the aforesaid Trust has been represented by one member from each one of the aforesaid five families and the sixth member from any one of the said families which vacancy has been termed as 'general vacancy'. Thus, as and when vacancy arose in the office of the Trustee, the same was filled by appointment by the court from among the male members of the respective family. Two vacancies were intimated, by the Manager of the Charities to the Scheme Court in August, 1992. One of the vacancy arose out of the expiry of the period of office of Trusteeship of the first petitioner S. Sukumar belonging to Kanganamputhur family. The second vacancy arose on account of the expiry of the period of office of the respondent who was holding the office under the 'general vacancy'. The Scheme Court issued a notice on 12.8.1992 inviting applications for filling up both the above vacancies. Pursuant to the aforesaid Notification 13 applications were made to the Scheme Court. The petitioners 1 and 2 in C.R.P.No.2692 of 1992 and Thiru Sadayappan petitioner in C.R.P.No.2807 of 1992 belong to the Kanganamputhur family and therefore they claimed appointment to the vacancy of Trusteeship in respect of the said family. The other ten applicants claim in respect of the general vacancy. The Scheme Court has passed an order on 9.9.1992 rejecting the claims of the petitioners and Thiru Sadayappan for appointment to the office of the Trusteeship in respect of the Kanganamputhur family and appointing the respondent herein as a Trustee in the place of the outgoing Trustee belonging to the Kanganamputhur family. By the said order the Scheme Court has also appointed Dr. Chockalingam belonging to one of the families in the general vacancy. Aggrieved by the order of the Scheme Court appointing the respondent as a Trustee in respect of a vacancy caused by the expiry of the term of office belonging to Kanganamputhur family, the petitioners filed the two revisions. According to them the order of the court below is patently illegal, opposed to the provisions of the Scheme Decree besides being opposed to the orders of this Court which have considered the scope of the provisions of the Scheme Decree. The Board of Trustees who comprise of six persons from among the male members of the five families having due regard to the representation of all the five families. According to the petitioners, at present there is no representative from the Kanganamputhur family while there are two representatives for Pallavarayapet family and Enathimangalam family. In terms of the Scheme Decree, only one family can have two representatives, one representing the family earmarked for them and the other in the general vacancy. The appointment of the respondent is thus patently illegal having regard to the fact that his appointment has been made to a Kanganamputhur family's vacancy and in particular having regard to the fact that the petitioners and the other person belonging to the said family are not found to be disqualified to hold the said office.

2. The revision petitions were resisted by the respondent Mr. Rammohan Shanmugham. According to the respondent, the impugned order of the scheme Judge appointing him as one of the Trustees is quite reasonable, and that the Scheme Court has got powers to appoint from among the general vacancies to the vacancy of any particular family. It is submitted that there is no illegality or irregularity in the order of Scheme Court. The Scheme Court has considered all the relevant materials for assessing the entitlement of various claimants to the two vacancies in the Board of Trustees and has ample powers to pass the order under revision.

3. I have heard Mr. R. Krishnamurthy, learned Senior Advocate and Mr. A. S. Venkatachalamurthy for the petitioners and Mr. V. Sridevan, learned Senior Advocate for respondent in both the above revisions. Clause 5(c) of the Scheme Decree which is heavily relied on by both parties runs thus:

"(C) The appointment of a Trustee in any vacancy caused on the Board of Trustees by efflux of time, by resignation or removal or death or disqualification, shall be made by the court, from among male members of the five families as far as possible. It shall be the duty of the Manager provided for, herein, to intimate the occurrence of any vacancy to the court within three weeks of the occurrence and the court shall proceed to call for applications and make appointment to the vacancy having due regard to representation of the five families known as Anbanathapuram, Enathimangalam, Pallavarayapet, Karkudi and Kanganamputhur families. A Trustee should be a major and should not be disqualified under the rules. It is open to the court, not to rigidly adhere to representation of each group, if efficient administration requires "a light departure."

Mr. R. Krishnamoorthy submits as under:

(A) The Scheme Court has committed a grave error in misconstruing the scope and content of Clause 5(C) of the Scheme Decree which has led the said court to come to the conclusion that it is permissible to ignore or bypassing a representation from a family.

(B) The lower court has erred in misconstruing the scope of the words 'not to rigidly adhere to representation of each group' and the words 'from among male members of five families as far as possible'.

(C) The finding of the court below that once a trustee representing a family resigns or dies it is not necessary that another person should be selected only from that family is clearly opposed to the content and scope of the Scheme-Decree. Therefore it is submitted that the order appointing the respondent in relation to a vacancy belonging to Kanganamputhur family is patently illegal and is liable to be set aside.

(D) The lower court has patently erred in appointing the respondent as a Trustee in the vacancy earmarked for Kanganamputhur family when his application itself was only for the general vacancy. In this view alone the order of the lower court is liable to be set aside.

(E) A vacancy arising out of the resignation or death of a Trustee belonging to a particular family can be filled from among the members of any other family only in the event of the fact that the applicant/applicants from that particular family is disqualified under the Scheme.

(F) It is an admitted fact by the respondent that the petitioners are not in any manner disqualified by the Rules to hold the office of Trusteeship. Hence the order ignoring their claim is patently illegal and irregular and liable to be set aside.

(G) The reasoning given by the lower court to reject the claims of the petitioners are perverse since the lower court's order is based on irrelevant and extraneous consideration.

4. Mr. A. S. Venkatachalamurthy has also adopted the arguments of Mr. R. Krishnamurthy and has also submitted specifically that no family should be denied the representation in the Trust Board if they do not suffer any disqualification.

5. Mr.V.Sridevan, learned Senior Advocate appearing for Mr.Rammohan Shanmugham submits as follows:

(A) The scheme decree contemplates six Trustees. It does not say that there should be one representative from each family. On the other hand, it gives the power to the Scheme Court even to select an outsider if the circumstances warrant.

(B) This Court should cautiously exercise its power under Sec.115 of the Code of Civil Procedure even if this Court comes to a different conclusion on the materials available.

(C) It is open to the court to appoint a stranger if there are no fit persons in the families available.

(D) What is paramount is efficient administration and not representation of each group.

(E) Not impleading of the necessary parties is fatal to the case in C.R.P. Dr.E.S.Chockalingam, who was made respondent 2 in C.R.P.No.2807 of 1992 was given up with some ulterior motive and mala fide intention, when such non-joinder makes it impossible to deal equitably and sufficiently with the matter in controversy between the parties in revision.

(F) The High Court cannot while exercising its jurisdiction under Sec.115 correct errors of fact however gross they may be or even errors of law. It can only do so when the said errors have relation to the jurisdiction of the court to try the dispute itself.

(G) The decision of the lower court on all questions of law and fact and not touching its jurisdiction is final and however erroneous such a decision may be, it is not revisable under Sec.115 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

6. Mr.V.Sridevan in support of his legal submissions cited a number of decisions which deal with scope of Sec.115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Mr.R.Krishnamoorthy cited the decision reported in Ajantha Transports (P) Ltd. v. T.V.K. Transports, (1975) 2 S.C.J. 320: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 123, which also deals with the scope of Sec.115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It says that the High Court can interfere on two contingencies viz., (a) grant of relief on totally irrelevant grounds, and (b) relevant grounds are unjustifiably ignored. Thus he submits that this Court can interfere in revision if both the above grounds are satisfied.

7. As I propose to dispose of the two revisions on a shorter ground, I feel it wholly unnecessary for me to deal with the extensive arguments of both the parties or the citations cited by them

8. C.R.P.No.2692 of 1992 is filed challenging the appointment of M.Rammohan Shanmugham, whereas C.R.P.No.2807 of 1992 is filed initially against the appointment of Dr.E.S.Chockalingam and Mr.Rammohan Shanmugham. It will thus be seen the appointment of Rammohan Shanmugham is challenged in both the civil revision petitions, whereas the appointment of Dr.E.S.Chockalingam challenged in C.R.P.No.2807 of 1992 is later given up. Thus parties challenging in both the civil revision petitions are aggrieved that the appointment of Rammohan Shanmugham is bad.

9. I feel that the giving up of challenge against the appointment of Dr.E.S.Chockalingam in C.R.P. No.2807 of 1992 raises some misgiving and suspicion, if the same is caused due to some manoeuvring after the civil revision petition has been filed in this Court. It is unnecessary for me at this stage to probe further into the matter in the nature of the order which I am passing in these revisions.

10. There is no dispute whatever among the parties to the civil revision petitions that all of them are well qualified to become members of the Board of Trustees. Hence the only question is whether the appointments actually made suffer or vitiated by any error of jurisdiction apparent from the records as contended by Mr.R.Krishnamoorthy, learned Senior Advocate and Mr. A.S.Venkatachalamurthy learned counsel for the petitioners. It is seen from the application of the respondent M.Rammohan Shanmugham that he has applied only for a general vacancy. It is seen from the publication made in the newspaper that the respondent Rammohan Shanmugham has applied only for the general vacancy. Normally when one applies for a specific post, the consideration for appointment must be only for that post. It is elementary. While so, he is appointed not for what he prayed for but for a different post. This is clearly an error apparent from the face of the record. The revision petitioners have specifically taken up this grounds as vitiating the order. I also do not see from the order of the lower court what prompted the learned Judge to make up such a deviation. Only he says that there is no need for rigid compliance in the matter of appointment of trustees to the Board which however in the context in which the words are used cannot be interpreted to mean what the lower court believes it means.

11. In my opinion the words 'rigid' used in the Scheme Decree means to state that the appointing authority, viz., the court, ought not to be restricted in a manner against the objects of the Trust. If any interpretation sought to be placed on the word 'rigid' is understood as violating the intent and objectives of the Trust, I believe it ought not to be permitted. In my view, the lower court has erred in misconstruing the scope of the words found in clause 5(c). Viewing thus, it will be seen that an appointment of a person to a post for which he did not apply is clearly against the Scheme but also against the very wish of the applicant himself. The lower court has erred in finding that once a trustee representing a family resigns or dies it is not necessary that another person should be selected only from that family. The said finding in my view is opposed to the scope of the Scheme decree and therefore the order appointing the respondents in relation to a vacancy belonging to Kanganamputhur's family is patently wrong. This reasoning alone is sufficient for me to allow both the revisions and set aside the order of appointments of both Mr. Rammohan Shanmugham and Dr. E.S. Chockalingam. But I do not propose to state anything that might effect the chances of any one of the parties to this litigation getting affected by any opinion expressed by me in this regard in this order. Hence, I refrain from evaluating in any manner the credentials of any of the parties in any manner. The fact that there has been an error committed by the lower court in the matter of appointment is sufficient by itself to allow both the civil revision petitions. Such view of mine is also fortified by a tint of suspicion I was forced to take in the conduct of the challenge against Dr. E.S. Chockalingam (R-2 in C.R.P.No.2807 of 1992) at the beginning and change of stand later being given up. Ground Nos.8 and 10 in C.R.P.No.2807 of 1992 filed by Mr. Sadayappan will strengthen my suspicion. Ground Nos.8 and 10 in C.R.P.No.2807 of 1992 is reproduced herein for the sake of convenience:

Ground No.8: The other reasons given by the court below is that the petitioner may not find time to discharge his duties as a trustee. But at the same time the lower court has appointed another trustee by name Dr. E.S. Chockalingam who is a Doctor.

Ground No.10: The other reasons given by the lower court for not appointing the petitioner as a trustee and instead appointing the respondents in that place are erroneous and unacceptable particularly in view of the fact the earlier decision of this Hon'ble Court.

Even in this regard it is only a suspicion. I must be clearly understood as having no bias against or in favour of the said party.

12. In this light I feel it is wholly unnecessary for me to deal with the arguments advanced by Mr. R. Krishnamoorthy, Mr. A.S. Venkatachalamurthy, learned counsel appearing for the petitioners and Mr. V. Sridevan, learned counsel appearing for the respondent relating to the merits of the respective causes or to the citations made in support of their arguments since I am remitting the matter to the lower court for being dealt with afresh in view of the error I have noticed as vitiating the order passed by the lower court. I also further feel that the matter after remand should be dealt with by a Sub Judge different from the one who dealt with the matter and pass the order in accordance with law. Thus I direct the learned Subordinate Judge of Nagapattinam to dispose of this matter within four weeks positively from the date of receipt of a copy of this order from this Court on merits and in accordance with law. The said court will give due notice to the parties. It is always better to direct a different mind to deal with the matter afresh on the controversies raised by parties.

13. In the result, the order of the lower court dated 9.9.1992 appointing Mr. Rammohan Shanmugham and Dr. E.S. Chockalingam as Trustees are set aside. C.R.P. Nos. 2692 and 2807 of 1992 are allowed. No costs.

14. Mr. E.S. Ganapathy, who is the Chairman of the A.V.C. College Education Committee, is permitted to draw cheques from the bank account for the purpose of disbursing the salary to the staff members of the College and also to incur necessary expenditures in that regard, till the disposal of the matter by the Sub Court, Nagapattinam. This is purely an interim arrangement till the disposal of the matter by the Sub Court, Nagapattinam. The Scheme Court shall not fill up the vacancies which has arisen for educational agency till the disposal of the matter by the said court.

Hindu Succession Act (XXX of 1956), Sec.14 - Scope and applicability - Widow executing sale deed before coming into force of Act but continuing to be in possession - Section if applies.

For Sec.14 to operate, the Hindu woman concerned should have been legally possessed of the property in question on the date when Hindu Succession Act came into force. It has also been held by the Supreme Court in Mangal Singh v. Rattno, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1786, that the expression "possessed by" in Sec.14(1) is not intended to apply to a case of mere possession without title. Further in Meenakshisundaram v. Srinivasaga Reddiar, (1971) 1 M.L.J. 44 (D.B.), it has been held that where widow had parted with title to the property by executing a sale deed before the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act, but continued to be in possession of the same, she must be taken to have been in wrongful possession or at any rate, to be in possession without rightful basis or title therefor and that to such a case, Sec.14(1) will have no application. The Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT:- The 2nd defendant is the appellant in this second appeal against the concurrent decree given by the courts below, declaring the title of the plaintiff 1st respondent to the suit property and granting consequential injunction. Pending appeal, the appellant died and his legal representatives were brought on record as appellants 2 to 8 likewise. The 2nd respondent also died and his legal representatives were brought on records as respondents 3 to 6.

2. The suit property is a vacant site of about 5 cents. It originally belonged to Velayutham Chettiar and Subramania Chettiar was his son through the first wife and the 1st defendant who is the 2nd respondent herein and the 2nd defendant-appellant are the sons of the said Velayutham Chettiar through his second wife. In the family partition Ex.A-11, dated 28.8.1920 the suit property was allotted to the said Subramanian Chettiar. On his death in about 1927, Subramania Chettiar's wife Velayi Ammal enjoyed the said property. There are three daughters to the said Subramania Chettiar and Velayi Ammal. After the death of Subramania Chettiar, the said Velayi Ammal and her three daughters sold away the suit property under Ex.B-24, dated 9.10.1939 to one Ponnusami Muthiraian. There was also a rectification deed Ex.B-25, dated 24.10.1939, making some rectification relating to the description of the property found in Ex.B-24. The first defendant filed O.S.No.45 of 1943 against the Velayi Ammal and the abovesaid Ponnusami Muthiraian, the vendee under Ex.B-24 for a declaration of his title to the suit property and the property just north of it, described as ABHE property in that suit. Apart from the said declaration, possession was also sought for in the said suit. The said suit ended in a compromise and as per the compromise, the 1st defendant who was the plaintiff in the suit got a decree only in respect of the said property ABHE, which lay just north of the suit property. The said decree in the said suit is Ex.A-2, dated 17.7.1944. However, on 4.9.1944, the same 1st defendant herein filed another suit O.S.No.506 of 1944 against the same Ponnusami Muthiraian and Velayi Ammal and also against all the three daughters of Velayi Ammal (one of whom in Nacharammal, who is P.W.2 in this suit). This suit is for a declaration that the abovesaid Ex.B-24 and Ex.B-25 deeds are not binding on the 1st defendant in this suit and other reversioners of the abovesaid deceased Subramania Chettiar. The said suit was decreed as prayed for as borne out by Ex.A-8, dated 24.1.1947. The abovesaid Velayi Ammal died in 1959.

3. Now according to the plaintiff, after the death of Velayi Ammal, her abovesaid three daughters enjoyed the suit property and sold it to the plaintiff under Ex.A-3, dated 11.4.1977 and the plaintiff is in possession of the same by putting up a thatched house in it, but, the defendants are obstructing his

4. The 1st defendant remained ex parte.

5. The defence of the 2nd defendant is Velayi Ammal was not enjoying the suit property till her life time and under Ex.B-24 Ponnusami Muthiraian alone was in possession; Velayi Ammal was not entitled to any legal possession on the date of Hindu Succession Act of 1956. Therefore, on her death, her daughters have not inherited the same. The defendants alone are entitled to the suit property as reversioners to late Subramanian Chettiar. After Ex.A-8 decree, Ponnusami Muthiraian had handed over possession of the suit property to the defendants. The defendants have partitioned the suit property in the year 1960 in two equal parts and are in possession of their respective shares.

6. Both the Courts have held that the limited estate enjoyed by Velayi Ammal enlarged into an absolute estate by virtue of Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act and that hence when Velayi Ammal died, her abovesaid three daughters inherited the suit property from her and consequently Ex.A-3 sale deed in favour of the plaintiff was valid.

7. The learned counsel for the appellants no doubt initially contended that there was no plea regarding the application of Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act, resulting in enlargement of Velayi Ammal's interest in the suit property into an absolute interest. But, I find that there is plea that Velayi Ammal enjoyed the suit property till her life time and thereafter, the suit property was inherited by her daughters. This shows that there is plea that she had absolute interest in the suit property, on her death. (There is evidence to show that she died in 1959). However, there is no explicit plea in the plaint regarding the applicability of Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act. But, in the written statement there is a specific plea as follows:

"The said Velayi Ammal was not possessed of the suit property nor she was entitled to any legal possession on the date of Hindu Succession Act of 1956. Therefore on her death, her daughters have not inherited the same."

This shows that the claim under Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act has been repudiated by the defendants. Further, I find from the judgment of the Courts below that both the parties proceeded in the trial that the said question regarding the applicability of Sec.14 is a question to be decided in the suit. Therefore, I do not think that it can be said that Sec.14 cannot be invoked by the plaintiff in this proceedings simply on the ground of imperfection in the actual plea raised by the plaintiff.

8. Then, it has to be seen whether Velayi Ammal's interest actually enlarged into an absolute interest in the suit property pursuant to the abovesaid Sec.14. In this connection, the learned counsel for the appellants argues that since Subramania Chettiar died in 1927 itself, even prior to the commencement of the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937, and since Velayi Ammal had also sold away the suit property under Ex.B-24, she cannot be said to be legally possessed of the suit property in 1956 when the Hindu Succession Act came into force and that, therefore, there is no scope for application of Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act. This submission has to be accepted; first of all, since Subramania Chettiar died in 1927, Velayi Ammal did not get the widow's estate spoken to in the above said Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937. Further as per Ex.B-24, she had sold away her interest in the suit property and it cannot also be said that by Ex.A-8 decree, the sale under Ex.B-24 has actually been set aside. What actually has been held in Ex.A-8 decree is that Ex.B-24 sale is not binding on the reversioners, who are the defendants 1 and 2. But obviously, that does not mean that Ex.B-24 does not bind Velayi Ammal. In other words, Velayi Ammal is bound by Ex.B-24. Then the question is when she had parted away her interest in 1939 itself under Ex.B-24, can she claim the benefit of Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act, when it came into force in 1956? No doubt, the learned counsel for the 1st respondent-plaintiff seeks to rely on Ex.A-2 - decree and contends that by virtue of the said decree, the 1st defendant, who was the plaintiff in that suit recognised the title of Velayi Ammal and the abovesaid Ponnusami Muthiraian who were defendants in that suit, over the suit property. But, this submission of the learned counsel for the 1st respondent has no force since, immediately after the decree in O.S.No.45 of 1943, dated 17.7.1944, the 1st defendant filed the abovesaid suit O.S.No.506 of 1944 on 4.9.1944 and obtained the decree that Ex.B-24 and Ex.B-25 sale deeds would not bind himself and the other reversioners to Subramania Chettiar. Therefore, I am of the view that Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act will not have any operation in the present case and that, therefore, her abovesaid daughters could not have inherited the suit property and that, therefore, their alleged sale of the suit property under Ex.A-3 in favour of the plaintiff is not valid.

9. For Sec.14 to operate, the Hindu woman concerned should have been legally possessed of the property in question on the date when Hindu Succession Act came into force. It has also been held by the Supreme Court in Mangal Singh v. Rattno, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1786, that the expression "possessed by" in Sec.14(1) is not intended to apply to a case of mere possession without title. Further in Meenakshisundaram v. Srinivasaga Reddiar, (1971) 1 M.L.J. 44 (D.B.), it has been held that where a widow had parted with title to the property by executing a sale deed before the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act, but continued to be in possession of the same, she must be taken to have been in wrongful possession or at any rate, to be in possession without rightful basis or title therefore and that to such a case, Sec.14(1) will have no application. In the present case also, Velayi Ammal had already sold the property under Ex.B-24 and Ex.B-25 and she cannot be held to be legally possessed of the suit property on the date of the commencement of the Hindu Succession Act.

10. No doubt, the learned counsel for the 1st respondent-plaintiff relies on the boundary recital in Ex.A-12 partition deed dated 10.5.1960, saying about Velayi Ammal's life interest. The said Counsel also points out the observation of the lower appellate Court based on Ex.A-12 stating that from the said document, it is clear that the property continued to be in the possession and enjoyment of Velayi Ammal. But, I do not think that from the abovesaid recital, the possession of the suit property be Velayi Ammal in 1960 is admitted by the defendants. That apart, even assuming that there is such an admission, Velayi Ammal's possession cannot be considered as legal possession as contemplated in Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act since she already sold away her interest long back in 1939 under Ex.B-24, and Ex.B-24. For the same reason, Exs.A-10, A-5, A-6 and A-7 voters' list, which are dated 1970 and thereafter, will be of no use to the plaintiff.

11. Therefore, the courts below have erred in holding that Sec.14 of the Hindu Succession Act applies in the present case. Therefore, the abovesaid daughters, the vendors of the plaintiff, had no title when they executed Ex.A-3 in favour of the plaintiff. Therefore, the plaintiff's suit has to be dismissed and this second appeal has to be allowed.

12. Accordingly, the judgments and decrees of the Courts below are set aside and the suit is dismissed and this second appeal is allowed. However, in the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.1, Rules 1, 9, 13 and O.2, Rule 7 - Objection as to misjoinder of parties or cause of action - Objection not taken before settlement of issues - Effect.

A reading of the abovesaid provisions would make it clear that in the absence of any plea in the written statement on the misjoinder of parties and misjoinder of cause of action the trial court was not within its limits in framing issues on this aspect of its own accord and non-suiting the plaintiffs on the ground of misjoinder of parties. On the failure of the appellant to raise any objection regarding misjoinder of parties and cause of action before settlement of issues, the objection must be deemed to have been waived. [Para 7]

JUDGMENT:- The respondents are the plaintiffs in the trial court. They instituted O.S.No.464 of 1977 of the file of the District Munsif of Periyakulam for a declaration that the respondents 1 to 7 are entitled to suit items 1 to 7 respectively and that the 8th respondent has right in suit item No. 8 on the basis of an Othi and for consequential permanent injunction. Respondents 1 to 5 claimed title relying on the settlement deeds Exs. A-10, A-13, A-1, A-6 and A-3 respectively dated 25.5.1967 executed by the appellant/defendant. The 6th and 7th respondents based their claims on Ex. A-15, dated 5.7.1971 and Ex. A-19, dated 25.11.1967 the sale agreements respectively executed by the appellant. The 8th respondent as P.W.8 deposed that he was in possession of the 8th item as per an oral Othi entered into between himself and the appellant. The trial court though found title in favour of respondents 1 to 5 took the view that possession did not remain with them in respect of the respective suit items on the date of suit. It also found that respondents 6, 7 and 8 had no right in respect of items 6 to 8 and these respondents failed to prove that they were in possession on the date of suit. While the judgment was delivered on 7.11.1979, on the previous day 6.11.1979 two additional issues were framed suo moto on misjoinder of parties and maintainability of the suit. The parties were not put on notice regarding framing of the Additional issues and argument was also not heard on this aspect. After discussion the trial court took the view that there was misjoinder of parties and the suit as framed was not maintainable in law. Accordingly it dismissed the suit with costs.

2. The present respondents/plaintiffs took up the matter in appeal before the Principal Sub-Judge, Dindigul, in A.S.No.160 of 1979 on his file. The lower appellate court held that it had no reason to differ from the findings of the learned District Munsif, the plaintiffs 6 to 8 have not established their possession of items 6 to 8 of the suit properties. The findings of the learned District Munsif, regarding title to suit items 1 to 5 in favour of present respondents 1 to 5 were not challenged before the lower appellate court and they were upheld. The lower appellate court however, took the view that respondents 1 to 5 were in enjoyment of suit items 1 to 5 on the date of plaint. Accordingly it reversed the judgment and decree of the trial court on this aspect and decreed the suit in favour of present respondents 1 to 5 granting declaration and injunction in respect of the said items. It dismissed the appeal by present respondents 6 to 8 in respect of suit items 6 to 8. The learned Principal Sub Judge also held that the respondents/plaintiffs are entitled to file a single suit against the appellant and that even assuming that there were misjoinder of parties, the decree could not be reversed or substantially varied in appeal under Sec.99 of the Code of Civil Procedure. While this second appeal has been preferred by the defendant in the suit against the said findings, the plaintiffs have come forward with cross objection against the non-suiting of plaintiffs 6 to 8.

3. Both the courts below have found as a matter of fact that title to the suit items 1 to 5 vested with present respondents 1 to 5 respectively and this has become final. The first respondent herein relied on Exs. A-11 and A-12 kist receipts for faslis 1385 and 1386 to prove his possession on the date of suit. While the second respondent pressed into service Ex. A-14 kist receipt for fasli 1385, the third respondent relied on Exs. A-33 and A-34 kist receipts for faslis 1386 and 1387 to prove their enjoyment. The fourth respondent has paid kist under Exs. A-7 to A-9 for faslis 1387, 1386 and 1385. The fifth respondent has paid kist under Exs. A-4, A-5 and A-35 for faslis 1387, 1386 and 1385. And the evidence of P.W.9 Village Munsif discloses that these kist receipts relate to the suit items. The appellant also as D.W.3 conceded that the kist receipt produced by the respondents/plaintiffs are in respect of suit properties. Further the settlement deeds executed by the appellant herein in favour of the respondents recite that the donees were put in possession of the respective properties on that date. Instead there is no document on the side of the appellant to prove his actual enjoyment of the properties subsequent to the settlement deeds. So the lower appellate court has rightly held that respondents 1 to 5 were in possession of their respective items on the date of plaint.

4. Admittedly plaintiffs 6 and 7 did not get any sale deeds executed in their favour pursuant to the alleged sale agreements Ex. A-15 dated 5.7.1971 and Ex. A-19 dated 25.11.1967 respectively. The claim of the 8th plaintiff was based only on an oral Othi and so both the Courts below have rightly negatived their title to the suit items 6 to 8. The conclusion of the trial court on this aspect was not challenged even before the lower appellate court. Evidently there is no merit in their cross-objections.

5. The substantial questions of law framed in this second appeal are as under:

1. Whether the suit as framed for declaration of title and a consequential injunction in respect of different items of properties by different persons on different causes of action who have no common interest in the suit property is maintainable?
2. Whether the suit is bad for misjoinder of parties?
3. Whether the first appellate court can invoke Sec.99, C.P.C., in a suit in which the trial court has considered and found that the suit is bad for non-joinder of parties?
6. The learned counsel for the appellant assailed the granting of decree by the learned Sub-Judge in favour of respondents 1 to 5 in respect of suit items 1 to 5 respectively mainly on the ground that a single suit for all the reliefs claimed does not lie. He submitted that the subject matters and parties in this action are completely different from one another and all the remedies asked for could not be combined in one suit. The lower appellate court ought to have held that the suit as framed is not maintainable and it is bad for misjoinder of parties. Respondents 1 to 5 have claimed their title over the first five items of the suit properties by virtue of the five settlement deeds Exs.A-1, A-3, A-6, A-10 and A-13, dated 25.5.1967 respectively. The 6th and 7th respondents based their reliefs on the strength of sale agreements Ex.A-15, dated 5.7.1971 and Ex.A-19, dated 25.11.1967. The 8th respondent claimed right pursuant to an oral Othi. So different reliefs in respect of different properties by virtue of different transactions which took place on different dates are claimed by the respondents. The respondents have not instituted the suit for bare injunction. They have asked for declaration of title. So the origin of cause of action is execution of the settlement deeds. There is nothing in common as far as the respondents are concerned. In the absence of any common factor among them, they could not have joined in instituting one suit. The learned counsel for the appellant also raised an additional plea during his arguments in this second appeal that the suit is bad for misjoinder of cause of action.
7. However, as it has been rightly contended by the learned counsel for the respondents, there are no averments in the written statement regarding the misjoinder of parties and cause of action. When the issues were settled on 6.7.1978, no issue was framed on misjoinder of parties. But on 6.11.1979 the trial court framed an additional issue on misjoinder of parties and the judgment was pronounced on 7.11.1979. After arguments were over, the additional issues were framed suo moto by the trial court. The respondents/plaintiffs were not put on notice of the framing of these issues. The judgment of the trial court does not indicate that any arguments were advanced by the parties on this aspect. O.1, Rule 1, C.P.C. reads that "all persons may be joined in one suit as plaintiffs in whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, where if such persons brought separate suits, any common question of law or fact would arise". But under O.1, Rule 9, C.P.C., "no suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or non-joinder of parties, and the court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it: Provided that nothing in this rule shall apply to non-joinder of a necessary party". Under O.1, Rule 13, C.P.C., "all objections on the ground of non-joinder or misjoinder of parties shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and, in all cases where issue are settled, at or before such settlement, unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived". Under O.2, Rule 7, C.P.C. "all objections on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity, and, in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement, unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived". A reading of the above said provisions would make it clear that in the absence of any plea in the written statement on the misjoinder of parties and misjoinder of cause of action, the trial court was not within its limits in framing issues on this aspect of its own accord and non-suiting the plaintiffs on the ground of misjoinder of parties. On the failure of the appellant to raise any objection regarding misjoinder of parties and cause of action before settlement of issues, the objection must be deemed to have been waived. In Srinivasan v. Subramaniam, (1965)2

M.L.J. 502, a single Judge of this Court refused to permit the revision petitioner to succeed on a plea of misjoinder of cause of action, which he had not chosen to put forward at any earliest stage of that proceeding. In Sethu Madhavarao v. Food Corporation of India, A.I.R. 1985 Guj. 27. Held that the provisions of O.1, Rule 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure are mandatory. They provide that if such objection was not taken, it shall be deemed to have been waived. They must be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and they must be taken in all cases where issues were settled at or before such settlement, unless the ground of objection has arisen subsequently thereto. The lower appellate court has also held that even assuming that there is misjoinder of plaintiffs, the decree cannot be reversed or substantially varied in appeal if it does not affect the merit of the case under Sec.99 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This section lays down that no decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall any case be remanded in appeal on account of any misjoinder or non-joinder of parties or causes of action or any error, defect or irregularity in any proceedings in the suit, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the court. It is the argument of the learned counsel for the appellant that the first appellate court could not have invoked this Sec.99, C.P.C., in a suit in which the trial court had found that it was bad for misjoinder of parties. But, it does not appear that there is any substance in this claim. In any event in view of the provisions of O.1, Rule 13 which I have already extracted, there is no necessity to invoke Sec.99 of the C.P.C.

8. In the result, the second appeal and cross objections are dismissed and in the circumstances without costs.

B.S. ---- Appeal and cross-objections dismissed.

Dharmaraja Vellalar ...Petitioner
v.

Ramachandra Vellalar and others ...Respondents.

(A) Stamp Act (II of 1899), Sec.2(15) and Sch.I, Art.45 - Final decree for partition passed by Civil Court not engrossed on proper non-judicial stamp paper - Effect.

(B) Stamp Act (II of 1899), Sch.I, Art.45 - Final decree for partition passed - First defendant, one of the sharers applying for copy of decree - Copy application returned for furnishing general stamp papers - Value of general stamp papers not mentioned - Stamp papers not furnished within time specified - Copy application if can be struck off.

The plaintiff filed a suit for partition and separate possession of the suit properties. Thereafter an application was filed by him for passing a final decree and accordingly a final decree was passed on 24.1.1979. The 1st defendant (petitioner) applied for a certified copy of decretal order (C.P.No.575 of 1979) for appeal to the High Court. He was called upon to submit general stamps within a week. As the stamps were not submitted the copy application was struck off on 7.3.1979. He filed an application for restoring the copy application. It was dismissed. Hence the revision. Held:- There can be no doubt that a final decree for partition passed by a Civil Court is an instrument of partition as defined in Clause (15) of Sec.2 of the Stamp Act. It follows that such a decree can only be engrossed on stamp papers of sufficient value. As held in Satyanandam v. Namayya, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 307, a final decree for partition has no existence as a decree until it is engrossed on a proper non-judicial stamp paper and till that is done, the suit will be considered as pending.

The plaintiff is liable to furnish non-judicial stamp papers for his share and the first defendant/petitioner herein also has to furnish non-judicial stamp papers for his share since the final decree is treated as a partition deed under Sec.2(15) of the Indian

Stamp Act. The first defendant is not liable to pay the entire non-judicial stamp papers. But the lower court has called for general stamps to be supplied for drafting the decree from the first defendant himself as per its order dated 28.2.1979 made in C.P.No.515 of 1979. This order itself appears to be wrong on the face of the records when the first defendant himself is not liable to pay the entire stamp duty. Further, the quantum of general stamps to be paid by the first defendant was also not mentioned in the return in C.P.No.515 of 1979. As already held till the decree is drafted on a stamp paper, the suit is deemed to be pending. In the circumstances, the order of the lower court made on 7.3.1979 in C.P.No.515 of 1979 appears to be wrong on the face of the records since the lower court should have called for general stamps even from the plaintiff for his share when the first defendant himself is not liable to pay the entire stamp duty. The plaintiff himself had supplied the entire stamp papers only in 1986. The first defendant/petitioner herein has not paid the court fee also as required under Sec.37(3) of the Tamil Nadu Court-Fees Act and as he is also not eligible for getting a decree in the partition suit. With all these irregularities the lower court need not have struck off the copy application on 7.3.1979, but it should have directed the first defendant/petitioner to pay court fees towards his share first. In the absence of the stamp papers being furnished by the plaintiff himself for his half share the lower court should not have called for general stamps from the first defendant himself and after collecting general stamp from the plaintiff also, it should have directed the first defendant to produce general stamps for his share. Admittedly, the plaintiff had not furnished the general stamps on 28.2.1979 or on 7.3.1979 when C.P.No.515 of 1979 was struck off. The first defendant should not have been directed to furnish general stamps for drafting the decree. This would unnecessarily saddle the first defendant/petitioner with liability of furnishing the entire stamp papers. The order of the lower court is wrong on the face of the records and the general maxim is that no party should suffer at the instance of the court and by applying this doctrine, the order of the lower court striking off the copy application is wrong. The copy application is deemed to be pending in law since the order striking off on 7.3.1979 does not exist at all as that order is null and void. [Para 20]

ORDER:- Civil Revision Petition No.42 of 1990 arises against the order made in E.P.No.6 of 1988 in O.S.No.5 of 1960 on the file of the learned Subordinate Judge, Pattukottai. The first defendant/first judgment-debtor, is the petitioner in the civil revision petition and the plaintiff/decreed holder is the respondent. A preliminary decree against the first defendant/petitioner was passed on 8.2.1965 and the final decree was passed on 24.1.1979. In this E.P., the respondent has claimed a sum of Rs.1,16,315.55. The E.P. is filed under O.21, Rules 54, 66 and 72 and under Sec.151 C.P.C. for realisation of the said amount by order of attachment and sale of the property of the first defendant mentioned in the E.P. The execution is resisted by the first defendant by filing a counter contending inter alia that the plaintiff/decreed holder is not entitled to claim his share in the execution petition. The preliminary decree is to the following effect:

"That the plaintiff be and hereby entitled to recover 1/2 share in the outstandings of Rs.52,000 in the E. Schedule. So, any claim contrary to that which is provided for in the preliminary decree cannot be countenanced."

Further, the petitioner herein has submitted that he has preferred an appeal to this Court against the final decree and that the matter is pending in this Court. The execution petition, according to him is therefore premature. The lower court negating the contention of the petitioner herein, allowed the execution petition to be proceeded with further. The lower court in its order has observed that even if the counsel fee has been exaggerated in the execution petition, it could be reduced later on after the properties were sold and the sale proceeds were collected. The lower court also has observed that there is no evidence to show that an appeal has been filed in this Court as against the final decree and that there is no stay also from this Court. With this observation, the lower court allowed the execution petition.

2. In this C.R.P.No.42 of 1990, the petitioner has contended that the decree-holder had admitted in the lower court that he has been in exclusive possession and enjoyment of 24 acres of land. The other contention raised by the petitioner herein, is that the parties are separately in possession and enjoyment of the properties and that they should be allowed to retain those properties.

3. C.R.P.No.610 of 1990 arises against the order made in E.P.No.14 of 1989 in O.S.No.5 of 1960 on the file of the learned Subordinate Judge, Pattukottai. The E.P. was filed by the plaintiff/decreed holder respondent herein under O.21, Rule 35, C.P.C. for delivery of possession of the properties mentioned in the execution petition. This E.P. was resisted by the first defendant/judgment debtor, the petitioner herein by filing a counter to the E.P. contending inter alia that the decree-holder/respondent herein is not entitled to delivery of possession of the properties on the ground that the execution is laid mainly basing on the commissioner's report for which the petitioner herein has filed his objections. The petitioner further contended that the decree-holder himself filed an application for amendment of decree and that without getting any orders on the same, he has filed an execution petition for delivery of possession. The contentions are not relevant for the disposal of the civil revision petition.

4. The lower court has observed in the order that whatever objections the first defendant has got to say against this execution, he could make such objections before the Amin at the time of delivery. In this way, the lower court has repelled the contentions of the first defendant and allowed the execution application for delivery of possession.

5. C.R.P.No.1038 of 1991 arises against the order made in I.A.No.136 of 1991 in I.A.No.303 of 1971 in O.S.No.5 of 1960 in the file of the Subordinate Judge, Thanjavur. The first defendant in O.S.No.5 of 1960 is the petitioner herein and the plaintiff is the respondent. The first defendant filed an application I.A.No.136 of 1991 before the lower court for setting aside the order dated 7.3.1979 striking off the copy petition (C.P.No.515 of 1979) and to restore it and to pass further orders on the same. In the affidavit filed by him in support of I.A.No.136 of 1991, the petitioner contended as follows:- The suit O.S.No.51 of 1960 was filed by the first respondent for partition and separate possession of the suit properties, a preliminary decree was passed. Thereafter, an application I.A.No.303 of 1971 was filed by the respondent herein for passing a final decree and accordingly a final decree was passed on 24.1.1979 by the learned Principal Subordinate Judge, Thanjavur. After passing the final decree, the petitioner herein had applied for a certified copy of decretal order in I.A.No.303 of 1971 for appeal to this Court in the copy application C.P.No.515 of 1979, dated 24.1.1979. Even though final decree was passed on 24.1.1979, it was not drafted till February, 1987 by the office because general stamps were not submitted to the office. So, the copy application was struck off on 7.3.1979. The petitioner was under the bona fide impression that his counsel would have taken steps for complying with C.P.No.515 of 1979. Since the date of filing of the copy application, the petitioner had not received any communication from his counsel with regard to copy application. The petitioner was suffering from acute jaundice and he was bed-ridden at that time and so, he was unable to pursue the matter for further proceedings. The petitioner was mentally upset also at that time. Due to the abovesaid reasons, the petitioner could not meet his counsel personally and instruct him. Everything happened due to the communication gap from his counsel also due to his ailment. Since the copy application was not represented in time, there was a delay in representation. The petitioner received a communication from his counsel at Madras that his appeal could not be numbered for want of decretal order passed in I.A.No.303 of 1971, dated 24.1.1979. After receiving the communication, the petitioner presented an application I.A.No.136 of 1991 for restoring the copy application which was struck off on 7.3.1979. The delay in representation is not wilful, but bona fide. The petitioner seeks for condoning the delay in setting aside the order dated 24.1.1979 made in C.P.No.515 of 1975.

6. The petition I.A.No.136 of 1991 was presented on 4.3.1991 in the lower court. It appears from the order that no notice was given to the plaintiff/respondent. The order dismissing I.A.No.136 of 1991 was passed on 8.3.1991. The order is in Tamil and the true translation is as follows:

"On 8.3.1991 arguments were heard. It is prayed to condone the delay for the reasons stated in the affidavit. The order striking off the copy application cannot be set aside by allowing this application. With the result, the application is dismissed."

As against this order made in I.A.No.136 of 1991, C.R.P.No.1038 of 1991 is filed.

7. In the civil revision petition, the petitioner has submitted that if the order striking off the copy application is not set aside and the petitioner is not permitted to comply with the copy application and obtain a certified copy of the decree in the final decree application, the petitioner would lose his right of appeal which would result in irreparable loss and injury to him. The next contention is that no prejudice would be caused to the respondent if the order striking off the copy application is set aside and copy application is restored to file. According to him, the lower court failed to consider the fact that there is sufficient reason for the delay and the dismissal of the petition on the ground that there is no sufficient reasons for the delay, is not correct.

8. Mr.K.T.Palpandian, learned counsel appearing for the petitioner in all the C.R.Ps. contended that the lower court ought not to have rejected the copy application on the ground that general stamps were not furnished within the time mentioned by it. I have called for the records from the lower court and perused them.

9. The admitted facts are that the preliminary decree was passed on 8.2.1965 and that a first appeal in A.S.No.339 of 1965 was filed against the preliminary decree in this Court and this Court disposed of the first appeal by judgment dated 13.7.1972. As against the same S.C.O.P.No.107 of 1973 was filed before the Supreme Court of India and it was dismissed on 22.3.1974. Thereafter, the plaintiff filed I.A.No.303 of 1971 for passing a final decree and final decree was passed on 24.1.1979. In the meantime, the first defendant filed A.S.S.R.No.36045 of 1979 as against the attachment made in the final decree application I.A.No.303 of 1971 with C.M.P.No.13718 of 1988 for condoning the delay in representation of the appeal and the said C.M.P. for condoning the delay of 1365 days in representing the first appeal was dismissed on 25.10.1989 by a Division Bench of this Court. Another appeal A.S.S.R.No.39885 of 1989 was filed by the petitioner against the decree made in I.A.No.303 of 1971 with C.M.P.Nos.3850 and 3851 of 1990 for condoning the delay of 3854 days and the appeal is pending.

10. In C.R.P.No.1038 of 1991, the points for consideration are whether there is sufficient cause for condoning the delay in filing the application I.A.No.136 of 1991 seeking to set aside the order dated 7.3.1979 and to restore the said C.P.No.515 of 1979 and for passing further orders on the same. The reason given by the petitioner/first defendant in his affidavit is that he was under the bona fide impression that his counsel who appeared on behalf of him, would have taken steps to comply with C.P.No.515 of 1979, dated 24.1.1979. The other reason is that he was suffering from acute jaundice during the pendency of copy application and that he was bed-ridden. The third ground is that there is communication gap between himself and his counsel with regard to copy application filed on 24.1.1979. These are the main grounds stated in his application for condoning the delay in setting aside the order made in C.P.No.515 of 1979, dated 7.3.1979. The lower court has dismissed this application on the ground that the application already dismissed need not be set aside on the ground stated in the affidavit and therefore, the lower court did not accept the case of the petitioner.

11. Mr.Palpandian, learned counsel appearing for the petitioner pointed out the Rule 129 of Civil Rules of Practice. The copy application C.P.No.515 of 1979 was presented on 24.1.1979 for a decretal order made in I.A.No.303 of 1971, dated 24.1.1979. This was returned on 28.2.1979 by the court with an endorsement "general stamps to be given for drafting the decree". Time was granted by seven days for compliance. Then on 7.3.1979, the lower court passed an order "C.P. not taken back" and so the order striking off was made on that day.

12. Chapter VII of the Civil Rules of Practice deals with issuance of certified copies. Rule 127 of the rules reads as follows:

"Rule 127: Application for certified copy: (1) When a person is entitled to obtain a copy of a proceeding or document filed in, or in the custody of the court, he may present an application therefor to the Superintendent of Copyists or where there is no such officer, to the Chief Ministerial Officer in person or by his pleader or the latter's authorised gumasta between the hours of 11.30 a.m. and 3 p.m. If the proceeding or document has been sent to another court, the application may, at the option of the applicant, be forwarded to the said court for compliance or be returned to him, for presentation to the said court.

(2) Copies of proceedings of High Court: Application for copy of a plaint, written statement, memorandum of appeal, Judgment, decree or other proceeding of, or in the custody of the High Court, may be made by any party to such proceeding to the court of first instance, or the lower appellate court and shall be transmitted by the said court to the High Court for disposal. The copy, if granted shall be transmitted by the High Court to the former court, and on payment of the prescribed fees, shall be delivered to the applicant. No copy of any proceeding of the High Court shall be granted by a subordinate court. An application by a person not a party to the proceeding shall be made directly to the High Court."

Rule 128 of the Rules gives the Form of application and it reads as follows:

"Rule 128: Form of application: The application shall be in Form No.51 and shall set out the name of the applicant and his position in the suit or proceeding and a description of the document of which a copy is required, and an application which is to be in proper form shall be returned for amendment."

Rule 129 of the Rules is the relevant rule for the

"Rule 129: Notice as to stamp papers: Everyday between the hours of 3 and 5 P.M. a list showing the applications in which the records have been received and number of stamp papers required shall be prepared and affixed to the court's notice board. Such list shall remain suspended for three days, or, if the last day is a holiday, till the next court day. If the required stamp papers have not been deposited by 3.00 P.M. on the fourth day counting from that on which the list was suspended or, if the fourth day is a holiday, then on the next court day, the application shall be struck off. Between hours 3 and 5 p.m. on each of the intermediate days, the applications upon which the requisite deposits have been made shall be struck off the list. The procedure above prescribed shall apply also to calls for additional stamp papers when the number first supplied has been found to be insufficient.

Provided that when the additional stamp papers called for are not deposited, but the stamp papers originally deposited are sufficient for the preparation of complete copies of one or more documents applied for the application shall be struck off only as regards the documents which cannot be prepared by reason of the insufficiency of the stamp papers supplied; but it shall be complied with by delivery of such of the completed copies as can be prepared on the stamp papers supplied, the decision of the superintendent as to the documents to be selected for copying being final:

Provided further that it shall be open to the parties, after obtaining the previous order of the Chief Ministerial Officer of the court or such other person as the court may appoint for the purpose, to furnish white fullscap paper of durable quality with the requisite court-fee stamps affixed on each sheet in the place of the stamp papers called for and the rules applicable to the preparation of copies stamp papers shall apply to the copies so prepared."

13. Mr.K.T.Palpandian, learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that the final decree was passed in I.A.No.303 of 1971 on 24.1.1979. It was returned on 28.2.1979 for supply of general stamp papers for providing the decree by granting seven days time for the said purpose. The copy application was not taken back and so it was struck off on 7.3.1979. Copy stamps for engrossing final decree was filed on eight occasions for the value of Rs.200, Rs.200, Rs.200, Rs.200, Rs.75, Rs.1,000, Rs.50 and Rs.200 and the first copy stamp given for the value of Rs.200 was dated 20.11.1984 and the last copy stamp furnished was dated 5.2.1986 for the value of Rs.200 totalling to Rs.2,125. The final decree was drawn on 24.2.1987 after the plaintiff had deposited the remaining stamp papers.

14. O.20, Rule 6-A runs, as follows:

"6-A Last paragraph of judgment to indicate in precise terms the relief granted:

(1) The last paragraph of the judgment shall state in precise terms the relief which has been granted by such judgment.

(2) Every endeavour shall be made to ensure that the decree is drawn up as expeditiously as possible, and in any case, within fifteen days from the date on which the judgment is pronounced; but where the decree is not drawn up within the time aforesaid, the court shall if requested so to do by a party desirous of appealing against the decree, certify that the decree has not been drawn up and indicate in the certificate the reasons for the delay, and there upon,

(a) an appeal may be preferred against the decree and in such a case the last paragraph of the judgment shall, for the purpose of Rule 1 of O.41, be treated as the decree; and

(b) so long as the decree is not drawn up, the last paragraph of the judgment shall be deemed to be the decree for the purpose of execution and the party interested shall be entitled to apply for a copy of that paragraph only without being required to apply for a copy of the whole of the judgment; but as soon as a decree is drawn up, the last paragraph of the judgment shall cease to have the effect of a decree for the purpose of execution or for any other purpose; Provided that, where an application is made for obtaining a copy of only the last paragraph of the judgment, such copy shall indicate the name and address of all the parties to the suit."

The plaintiff has submitted the remaining stamp papers only on 5.2.1986. Thereafter only, final decree was drafted on 24.3.1987.

15. Learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that unless non-judicial stamp paper is produced and duly engrossed on those papers, there is no decree at all and that the lower court should not have struck off the copy application C.P.No.515 of 1979 on 7.3.1979. This is a partition suit and therefore, the final decree in the partition suit passed by the Civil Court is an instrument as defined in Clause (15) of Sec.2 of the Indian Stamp Act and as such the decree can only be engrossed on stamp papers of sufficient value. In support of his contention, he relied on the judgment reported in The Board of Revenue, Madras v. Moideen Rowther, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 635: I.L.R. 1956 Mad 132: A.I.R. 1956 Mad.207: 1955 M.W.N. 990 (F.B.). In the above judgment, the Full Bench of this Court observed as follows:

"A final decree for partition passed by a civil court is undoubtedly an instrument of partition as defined in Clause (15) of Sec.2 of the Indian Stamp Act (II of 1899). Such a decree can only be engrossed on stamp papers of sufficient value. If the parties fail to furnish the requisite stamps, the court has no power to draw up the decree for partition. The court also has no power to draw the decree on unstamped paper or on stamp paper of insufficient value, and cannot impound under Sec.33 of the Stamp Act the decree so drawn up. The court cannot itself draw up an invalid document and then take action consequent on its invalidity.

There is no provision in the Stamp Act which enables a court to adopt the procedure indicated in Rule 12(3) of Chapter 3 of Part II of the Civil Rules of Practice. Sec.122 of the Code of Civil Procedure will not cover such a rule. In the absence of an express statutory provision to that effect, a court cannot make a party liable to stamp duty and penalty for omission to furnish stamp papers to enable the courts to draw up a valid decree for partition. Rule 12, Sub-rule (3) of the Civil Rules of Practice is ultra vires."

Learned Judges in the above decision followed the judgment of this Court reported in Kovanti v. Imbichi Koya, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 454, wherein it is held as follows:

".....it may be open to the parties to approach the court which passed the decree and to request the court to pass a final decree after supplying the necessary stamp papers at any time, because as pointed out in Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Bejoy Chand Mahatap, (1904) I.L.R. 32 Cal. 483, the suit must be deemed to be pending. Be that as it may, the question which falls for our decision on this reference is whether the court itself can bring into existence an unstamped decree and then proceed to impound it. In our opinion, it is too much of a strain on the language of Sec.33(1) of the Act to say that the decree which the court draws up and signs is produced or comes before it in performance of its functions. It is equally inappropriate to speak of such an instrument as appearing to the Judge to be not duly stamped. The Judge knew even when he drew up the document that it was not duly stamped."

The Full Bench further held that on the failure of parties to furnish requisite stamps, learned Subordinate Judge in that case had no power to draw up the decree for partition. This judgment was also later on followed in Y.Laxmi Prasannam v. Y.Narasayya, A.I.R. 1975 A.P. 91. It is observed in the said judgment as follows:

"It is now well settled that a final decree for partition has no existence as a decree until it is engrossed on a proper non-judicial stamp paper, and till that it is done, the suit will be considered as pending."

16. In the present partition-suit, the plaintiff was given a decree and the petitioner/first defendant was also given some portion towards his share in the decree. In the plaint, the plaintiff claimed half share in plaint A, B, C, E and F and also one fourth share in plaint D schedule properties and other properties to be found as joint family properties on taking account. The plaintiff also wanted appointment of a Commissioner to take account of all the joint family outstanding and other incomes of the family properties and also to divide the plaintiff's share in the suit properties by metes and bounds and allow the plaintiff's share in his favour. The plaintiff paid court fee for his half share of Rs.1,37,639.50. The plaintiff paid court fee for the relief of partition under Sec.37(2)(ii) and also under Sec.35(1) of the Tamil Nadu Court Fees Act. The total court fee paid by him is Rs.207.50. The suit was decreed on 8.2.1965 and a preliminary decree was passed on that date. The relevant portion of the judgment of the trial court is as follows:

"Issue No. 7: To sum up, I find that the plaintiff will be entitled to partition and separate possession of his half share of the properties described in the A schedule and B schedule except items 15 and 22 of B schedule and the house property mentioned as item 2 in the plaint B Schedule. In the rest of the items, he will be entitled to a partition and separate possession of his half share. The plaintiff will not be entitled to the property described in plaint C. schedule. So far as D schedule properties are concerned, there is no dispute. It will be divided in accordance with the shares as indicated in the plaint. The Commissioner will divide the properties having regard to the objections put forward by the 5th defendant as regards the correctness of the survey number and also the extent available. So far as the schedule properties are concerned, the plaintiff will be entitled to a half share in a total sum of Rs.52,700 and the 1st defendant who is in possession of the entire joint family assets and who has collected a portion of them will be liable to account for his share. So far as the jewels claimed in the E schedule is concerned, the plaintiff has failed to prove that they belonged to the joint family and they are available for partition. The plaintiff therefore is not entitled to any share in the jewels sovereigns and silvers. So far as the F schedule properties are concerned, the evidence on the side of the plaintiff is very meagre. The evidence shows that Alagappa and Chinnappa have been living separately having separate mess on account of disagreement among womenfolk. It is hardly possible to believe that they would be having any manure carts or plough bulls or granaries, etc. Further, the plaintiff has not established that any of the items mentioned in F. schedule are joint family moveables or when they were purchased or by whom and how they are enjoyed. So, I do not think that any of the items can be held to be items available for division. So far as G schedule properties are concerned, there is no dispute about the existence of the trees or the right of the plaintiff, the 1st defendant and other pangalis to divide the same. So, there will be a division of the trees as prayed for.

In the result, preliminary decree for partition and separate possession of the plaintiff's half share in the manner indicated above, is passed. The 1st defendant will be entitled to his share in the properties in the possession of defendants 4 and 15. A commissioner will be appointed to divide the properties by metes and bounds. The 1st defendant will be liable to account for the outstandings as referred to in the judgment. The suit will stand adjourned sine die. The costs of this suit will come out of the estate."

17. The first defendant has filed a separate statement on 7.12.1959 in the suit and additional written statement also later on. Defendants 2 and 3 have also filled a written statement. The 4th defendant has filed a written statement and also an additional written statement. The 5th defendant filed a written statement and also an additional written statement. Defendants 6 to 8 and 9 and 10 have filed a written statement. The 11th defendant has filed a written statement. Defendants 12 and 13 have not filed any written statement. The 14th defendant has filed a written statement. The 15th defendant has also filed a written statement. The first defendant is the petitioner in the civil revision petition and he was granted a decree in a final decree application No.303 of 1991 for certain shares in some of the properties. The first defendant claimed shares also in his written statement. But it appears from the records that the first defendant has not paid any court-fee for his share. Sec.37 of the Tamil Nadu Court-Fee Act deals with the Court-fees payable in a suit for partition and it reads as follows:

"37. Partition suits: (1) In a suit for partition and separate possession of a share of joint family property or of property owned, jointly or in common, by a plaintiff who has been excluded from possession of such property, fee shall be computed on the market value of the plaintiff's share.

(2) In a suit for partition and separate possession of joint family property or property owned, jointly or in common by a plaintiff who is in joint possession of such property, fee shall be paid at the following rates:

When the plaint is presented to—

(i) A District Munsif's Court .. Rupees thirty
(ii) the City Civil Court, Rupees thirty if the value of Madras or a Sub-Court plaintiffs' share is Rs.5,000 District Court: or less;

Rupees one hundred if the value is above Rs.5,000 but below Rs.10,000 and Rupees two hundred if the value is Rs.10,000 and above.

(iii) the High Court: Rupees three hundred.

(3) Where, in a suit falling under Sub-sec.(1) or

Sub-sec.(2), a defendant claims partition and separate possession of his share of the property, fee shall be payable on his written statement computed on half the market value of his share or at half the rates specified in Sub-sec.(2), according as such defendant has been excluded from possession or is in joint possession."

The first defendant has not paid the court-fee for his share. If court fee is not paid, he is not entitled to a decree at all.

18. Mr.M.V.Venkateseshan, learned counsel for the respondent contended that the petitioner herein could have filed an appeal with a certified copy of the judgment and with a certificate of the trial court in the suit embodying the last paragraph of the judgment as provided under O.20, Rule 6-A, C.P.C. This O.20, Rule 6-A, C.P.C. is a newly inserted provision. The Select Committee felt that it should be made obligatory on the part of the court to draw up the decree within fifteen days from the date on which the judgment is pronounced. In case it is not possible to draw up the decree within the period so fixed, the court, on a request by a party desirous of appealing against the decree, should be required to certify that the decree has not been drawn up and also to indicate in the certificate the reasons for the delay. An appeal might be referred on filing a copy of the last paragraph of the judgment, but as soon as the decree is drawn up the last paragraph of the judgment should cease to have the effect of a decree.

19. Mr.Venkateseshan, learned counsel for the respondent contended that the petitioner could have filed an appeal with a certificate as required under O.20, Rule 6-A, C.P.C. and the petitioner now wants to restore C.P.No.515 of 1979 which was struck off earlier, to enable him to get a certified copy of the decree now, after a long lapse of time and to file it in the appeal now pending before this Court. I am afraid, that the Parliament when inserting Rule 6-A of O.20, C.P.C. was not apprised of the fact that a partition decree is different from a decree of ordinary nature since the partition decree can be drafted only on non-judicial stamp papers to the value of the largest share claimed by the parties under Art.45 of the Indian Stamp Act. There can be no doubt that a final decree for partition passed by a Civil Court is an instrument of partition as defined in Clause 15 of Sec.2 of the Stamp Act. It follows that such a decree can only be engrossed on stamp papers of sufficient value. It was held in Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Bejoy Chand Mahatapa, (1904) I.L.R. 32 Cal. 483, that a decree for partition to be operative must be engrossed on stamp paper, as required by the Stamp Act, and, until the Judge signs the decree so engrossed, it cannot be said that the suit has terminated. In Satyanandam v. Namayya, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 307. The above decision was followed by a Division Bench of this Court. The learned Judges in that case observed:

"It is well stated that a final decree for partition has no existence as a decree until it is engrossed on the proper non-judicial stamp paper; till that is done, the suit is pending."

I do not think that the Parliament while introducing Rule 6-A in O.20, C.P.C. has contemplated such a situation. Sec.2(15) of the Indian Stamps Act reads as follows:

"(15) Instrument of Partition: "Instrument of partition, means any instrument whereby co-owners of any property divide or agree to divide such property in severalty and includes also a final order for effecting a partition passed by any Revenue Authority or any Civil Court and an award by an arbitrator directing a partition."

Art.45 in Schedule I of the Indian Stamps Act deals with the duty payable for partition deed and instrument of partition includes final decree in a partition suit passed by a Civil Court as found under Sec.2(15) of the Indian Stamp Act. As held in the decision Satyanandam v. Namayya, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 307, a final decree for partition has no existence as a decree until it is engrossed on a proper non-judicial stamp paper, and till that is done, the suit will be considered as pending. In the decision Venkatappa v. Venkatappa, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 650; I.L.R. 1944 Mad. 266, it is held that before a decree for partition could be executed, the holder must pay the stamp duty required by Art.45 of the Act and have the decree drawn up on non-judicial stamp paper. In The Chief Controlling Revenue Authority v. Moideen Rowther, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 635; I.L.R. 1956 Mad 132; A.I.R. 1956 Mad.207; 1955 M.W.N. 990 (F.B.), it is held that if the parties choose to take the risk and do not furnish stamp papers, the court has no power to draw up a decree on unstamped paper and sign it. Therefore, till the final decree is engrossed on proper non-judicial stamp paper, the final decree for partition has no existence at all and till that is done, the suit shall be considered pending. Therefore, in view of the decision in Satyanandam v. Namayya, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 307, there is no final decree at all in existence. In this case, I do not find that the first defendant has paid court-fee at all as required under Sec.37(3) of the Court-Fees Act for his share.

20. Non-judicial Stamp papers were finally supplied on 5.2.1986 and the final decree was drafted on 24.2.1987. The copy application C.P.No.515 of 1979 was presented on 24.1.1979. It was returned on 28.2.1979 by granting seven days time for furnishing general stamp papers for drafting final decree. The C.P. was not taken back and so it was struck off on 7.3.1979. The lower court directed the first defendant to furnish general stamp papers for drafting the decree. The lower court has not mentioned the value of the general stamps to be supplied by him. The plaintiff is liable to furnish non-judicial stamp papers for his share and the first defendant/petitioner herein also has to furnish non-judicial stamp papers for his share since the final decree is treated as a partition deed under Sec.2(15) of the Indian Stamps Act. The first defendant is not liable to pay the entire non-judicial stamp papers. But the lower court has called for general stamps to be supplied for drafting the decree from the first defendant himself as per its order dated 28.2.1979 made in C.P.No.515 of 1979. This order itself appears to be wrong on the face of the records when the first defendant himself is not liable to pay the entire stamp duty. Further, the quantum of general stamps to be paid by the first defendant was also not mentioned in the return in C.P.No.515 of 1979. In view of the decisions referred to above, till the decree is drafted on a stamp paper, the suit is deemed to be pending. In the circumstances, the order of the lower court made on 7.3.1979 in C.P.No.515 of 1979 appears to be wrong on the face of the records since the lower court should have called for general stamps even from the plaintiff for his share when the first defendant himself is not liable to pay the entire stamp duty. The plaintiff himself had supplied the entire stamp papers only in 1986. The first defendant/petitioner herein has not paid the court fee also as required under Sec.37(3) of the Tamil Nadu Court-Fees Act and so he is also not eligible for getting a decree in the partition suit. With all these irregularities the lower court need not have struck off the copy application on 7.3.1979; but it should have directed the first defendant/petitioner to pay court fees towards his share first. In the absence of the stamp papers being furnished by the plaintiff himself for his half share, the lower court should not have called for general stamps from the first defendant himself and after collecting general stamps from the plaintiff also, it should have directed the first defendant to produce general stamps for his share. Admittedly, the plaintiff had not furnished the general stamps on 28.2.1979 or on 7.3.1979 when C.P.No.515 of 1979 was struck off. The first defendant should not have been directed to furnish general stamps for drafting the decree. This would unnecessarily saddle the first defendant/petitioner with liability of furnishing the entire stamp papers. The order of the lower court is wrong on the face of the records and the general maxim is that no party should suffer at the instance of the court and by applying this doctrine, the order of the lower court striking off the copy application is wrong. Bearing the above facts in mind, I find that the copy application is deemed to be pending in law since the order striking off on 7.3.1979 does not exist at all as that order is null and void.

21. In addition to that, I find that by mistake of the court in striking off the copy application much injustice appears to have been done to the first defendant. The lower court need not have struck off the copy application C.P.No.515 of 1979 by granting seven days time only for compliance of furnishing general stamps and the lower court should have kept that application pending till the plaintiff also furnished general stamp for drafting the decree. Admittedly, the plaintiff has furnished the general stamps only on 5.2.1986 lastly.

22. In the result, I find that there is just and sufficient cause for condoning the delay in filing the application for restoring C.P.No.515 of 1979. In the circumstances, the order of the lower court is not correct and proper and accordingly, I set aside the order of the lower court refusing to restore C.P.No.515 of 1979 and I restore the copy application C.P.No.515 of 1979 to file. C.R.P.No.1038 of 1991 is allowed. The lower court is directed to furnish certified copy of the final decree after collecting the required non-judicial stamp papers from him or, if the plaintiff has already furnished the entire non-judicial stamp papers, then direct the first defendant to pay the value of the non-judicial stamp papers for his share to the plaintiff, or if the plaintiff refuses to receive the value, then direct the first defendant to deposit the value of the non-judicial stamp papers to the share of the first defendant into the lower court and issue certified copy of the decree within a period of two months from now.

23. With regard to C.R.P.Nos.42 of 1990 and 610 of 1990, I do not interfere with the orders passed by the lower court and therefore, C.R.P.Nos.42 of 1990 and 610 of 1990 are dismissed. There is no order as to costs in all the three C.R.Ps.

These petitions having been posted this day for being mentioned in the presence of the aforesaid Advocates, the court made the following Order: This matter having been listed today for being mentioned and on hearing both sides, the following order is made:

24. Mr.K.T.Palpandian, learned senior counsel appearing for the petitioners in all the civil revision petitions submits that there may be stay of execution proceedings in the suit for a period of four months to enable the petitioner to obtain a certified copy of the decree in the suit and also to seek further remedies. He also submits that in order to show his bona fide his client will deposit a sum of Rs.25,000 towards the decree debt.

25. Learned counsel for the respondents in all the three civil revision petitions objects to the prayer of the petitioner. His contention is that the stay granted by this Court on earlier occasion was vacated and the civil revision petition itself was dismissed. That order was passed possibly in a civil revision petition filed against execution.

26. In this matter, since the copy application was restored in order to enable the party to seek his remedy open to him in law, it is just and necessary that there should be stay so that the party aggrieved with the judgment of the lower court will seek further remedy open to him in law. In the circumstances, there will be stay of execution of decree for a period of three months and in the meantime, the petitioner is directed to deposit a sum of Rs.25,000 before the expiry of three months from now.

27. Learned counsel for the respondents seeks for stay of the operation of the order made in C.R.P.No.1038 of 1991 so as to enable him to file an appeal. His prayer is refused.

28. The office will despatch copy of the orders made on 8.12.1992 and today (9.12.1992) to the lower court along with the records received from the lower court within a period of two weeks from now.

B.S. — Petitions ordered accordingly.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present:- Bellie, J.

A.S.No.699 of 1982 with Cross objections

16th December, 1992.

Rajammal and another ...Appellants

v.

Sellani Ammal ...Respondent.

(A) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), Sec.11 - Res judicata - Suit for declaration that will concerning suit properties and other properties invalid and for maintenance of plaintiff if will was found valid - Compromised and decree passed - No issue framed in suit regarding the nature of the suit properties - Decree if operates as res judicata in subsequent suit for declaration of title of plaintiff to suit property, recovery of the same and for mesne profits.

The suit properties originally belonged to one 'K' was endowed them by a deed dated 29.1.1984 for performance of Pooja, Neivedyam and other ubhayam to Lord Nataraja at Chidambaram. He nominated one 'V' to be the trustee of the properties to manage the same and do the pooja, etc., and also provided for management of the properties after 'V'. The trustee or his heirs would have no power to alienate the properties. V was in possession of the properties and managing them. After his death his brother's son 'K' took the management. He was alleged to have executed a Will Ex.A-3, dated 17.4.1950 giving the trusteeship to the first defendant; and died on 19.4.1950. The plaintiff, the widow of 'K' filed a suit for enhanced maintenance against the 1st defendant from out of her husband's estate. As the defendants 2 and 3 who are the legal representatives of the first defendant did not deliver possession of the properties the plaintiff filed a suit for a decree declaring plaintiff's entitlement to the suit properties and directing the defendants to put the plaintiff in possession of the suit properties and directing them to pay mesne profits and costs. The defendants contested the suit contending inter alia that there was a compromise entered into between the plaintiff and the 1st defendant in O.S.No.52 of 1953 and that the present suit was barred by the principles of res judicata.

Held: The suit O.S.No.52 of 1953 has been filed by the plaintiff to declare the entire Will Ex.A-3 as invalid and if the Will is found to be valid, for maintenance of the plaintiff at the rate of Rs.17 per month. There is no issue framed in that suit as regards the nature of the present suit properties i.e., whether they are endowed to charity or belonged absolutely to the first defendant. In that suit ultimately the parties compromised and in terms of the compromise, a decree was passed. Therefore, the decree passed in that suit cannot operate as res judicata against the present suit.

(B) Will - Construction - Nature of bequest made - Whether given absolutely or endowed to the deity for performance of Kattalai.

The document does not speak about any surplus income. From the reading of the document it would appear that the executant of the document intended that the income from the properties must be utilised for the purpose of the said poojas. Therefore the court is of the view that under the document the properties have been endowed to the deity for the purpose of performing the kattalais managing 'V' and his family members as trustees and giving possession of the properties to them.

T.R.Rajagopalan, for Appellant.

R.Srinivasan, for Respondent.

The Court made the following

JUDGMENT:- The defendants 2 and 3 against whom the suit for declaring the plaintiff's entitlement to the suit property, for recovery of the same from them, and for mesne profits was decreed are the appellants. The plaintiff Sellani Ammal filed a suit alleging as follows:

The suit properties of wet lands of an extent of 6.61 acres described in the B Schedule of the plaint originally belonged to one Krishna Rao who by a deed dated 29.1.1984 endowed the properties for performance of pooja, neivedyam and other ubhayam to Lord Nataraja at Chidambaram. He also appointed Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar to be the trustee of the properties to manage the same and do the said poojas etc., As per the deed, after the said trustee, his sons and grand-sons are to manage the properties and do the poojas etc. The trustee or his heirs will not have any power to alienate the properties. Accordingly, Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar acting as trustee was in possession of the properties and he was doing poojas etc. After the death of Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar, his brother's son Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar took the management of the properties and he was also doing poojas etc. The plaintiff is the widow of the said Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar. It appears that he executed a Will on 17.4.1950 (Ex.A-3) giving the trusteeship right to the first defendant (who is now dead) and died on 19.4.1950. Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar had no right to do so. He has no such power under the deed Ex.A-1 executed by Krishna Rao. The deed itself specifies as to who should be the successive trustee after Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar. Therefore the Will is incompetent in so far as it relates to the trusteeship of the endowment. The plaintiff being the next of kin and only heir is entitled to the trusteeship. Therefore, the defendants 2 and 3 who are in possession of the properties have to surrender it to the plaintiff. She came to know about the existence of the trust regarding the suit properties only in 1973, and it was then she filed an amendment petition in a suit filed by her in O.S.No.596 of 1972 for enhanced maintenance against the first defendant from out of her husband's estate. In spite of several requests the defendants never tried to deliver possession to her and therefore the suit. The plaintiff has prayed for a decree declaring the plaintiff's entitlement to the suit properties as per the terms of the trust deed dated 29.1.1894 (Ex.A-1) and consequently directing the defendants to put the plaintiff in possession of the properties and further directing the defendants to pay mesne profits till date of delivery of possession and for costs.

2. The defendants 2 and 3 contested the suit contending, inter alia, that the plaintiff has no locus standi to file the suit, She has no right to be the trustee for the suit properties. Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar was competent to execute the Will (Ex.A-3), dated 17.4.1950 in respect of the suit properties. Under the Will Natarajan alias Dhanarethina Dikshidhar, the first defendant got absolute right to the suit properties. There was a compromise entered into between the plaintiff and Natarajan in O.S.No.52 of 1953 and as per the compromise decree, the said Natarajan got absolute right to the suit properties and as provided in that decree Natarajan alias Dhanarethina Dikshidhar had been maintaining the plaintiff. The present suit is barred by the principles of res judicata. As provided in the Will executed by Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar the first defendant has been doing the poojas, etc., in the temple and after his death, the defendants 2 and 3 doing poojas, etc., On these contentions, the defendants 2 and 3 prayed for dismissal of the suit.

3. The trial court on considering the oral and documentary evidence held that the deed Ex.A-1 executed by Krishna Rao on 29.1.1894 is an endowment deed under which Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar was trustee only and the suit properties have not been given to him absolutely. It further held that the Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar had no right to execute a will in respect of the suit properties and therefore the Will Ex.A-3, dated 17.4.1950 in so far as it relates to the suit properties is incompetent. It further held that the suit is not barred by the principles of res judicata in view of the decree in O.S.No.52 of 1953 as contended by the defendants. He then held that the suit is not barred by limitation. On these findings, the trial court decreed the suit declaring the plaintiff's entitlement to have separate possession of the suit properties. It further decreed that the plaintiff is entitled to future mesne profits, but it left it to be decided by a separate proceeding. The trial court decreed the suit in the above terms, but without costs. Aggrieved, the defendants 2 and 3 have come up with the present appeal. The plaintiff filed cross objections regarding disallowance of costs.

4. The points that arise for consideration in the second appeal are:

(1) Whether Ex.A-1, dated 29.1.1894 executed by Krishna Rao in favour of Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar is an endowment, or under it the suit properties have been given to Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar as his absolute properties?

(2) Whether the Will Ex.A-3, dated 17.4.1950 executed by Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar is valid in so far as the suit properties are concerned?

(3) Whether the suit is barred by res judicata in view of the judgment and decree in O.S.No.52 of 1953?

(4) Whether the suit is barred by limitation?

5. In Ex.A-1 deed, dated 29.1.1894 it is clearly mentioned that for the purpose of doing poojas, neivedyam and other ubayams etc., to Lord Nataraja at Chidambaram, the land of an extent of 6.61 acres is given to Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar. It is provided in the document that the said Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar and his descendants must be performing the said pooja, neivedyam and other ubayams and they have no right whatsoever the mortgage, lease or sell the properties. The document does not speak about any surplus income.

From the reading of the document it would appear that the executant of the document intended that the income from the properties must be utilised for the purpose of the said poojas etc., (Kattalais). It does not say that Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar or his descendants can take any surplus income for their use. The plaintiff had filed the suit O.S.No.52 of 1953 for declaration that a will executed by Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar is invalid and in the written statement filed by the present first defendant in that suit it has been clearly stated to the effect that the entire income from the suit properties must be spent for performances of the Kattalais. From these it is manifest that the predominant purpose of the document is to endow the properties for performing Kattalais. Of course, it is mentioned in the document that the properties are gifted to the family of Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar, but considering all the recitals in the document it appears what the executant meant was to give possession of the properties to the family. This is apparent from the subsequent recitals that Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar will not have any power to in any way mortgage or dispose of the property. It is therefore clear that under the document Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar will have the right to possess and manage the properties and utilise the income for the performance of Kattalais. This is more apparent from the subsequent document Ex.A-2, dated 20.10.1894 (9 months after Ex.A-1) executed by Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar and his brother in favour of Krishna Rao, as security. They have made it clear that they would perform the kattalai properly and permanently and they would not in any way mortgage or dispose of the properties and if they commit and default in the performance of the kattalai, Krishna Rao can take back the properties. This document appears to have been executed at the instance of Krishna Rao to make it more clear that Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar and his descendants will not have absolute right to the property and they are only trustees for the performance of Kattalai. Ex.A-2 shows the conduct of the Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar and his brothers which makes it beyond doubt that they took possession of the properties as trustees and not as absolute owners. Therefore, in my view under Ex.A-1 the properties have been endowed to the deity for the purpose of performing the kattalais naming Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar and his family members as trustees and giving possession of the properties to them.

6. From the abovesaid findings on point No.1, it follows that Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar has no right to execute a Will in respect of the suit properties. The Will of course is valid as regards the other properties. Therefore, the defendants 2 and 3 cannot claim any right to the suit properties contending that they are the legatees under the Will Ex.A-3, dated 17.4.1950 executed in favour of the first defendant.

7. O.S.No.52 of 1953 has been filed by the plaintiff herein against the first defendant herein for declaration that the will Ex.A-3 executed by Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar in favour of the first defendant is not valid and binding on her and if it is found to be valid, then to grant maintenance to her from and out of the estate of her husband deceased Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar. In that suit, a compromise was entered into as per the compromise the plaintiff would enjoy for her life time item No.2 of the suit properties in that suit, and she will get maintenance at the rate of Rs.17 per month from the first defendant as his heir. It is now argued that this compromise would show that the plaintiff had accepted that the first defendant was entitled to the properties mentioned in Ex.A-3 and therefore utilise the income for the performance of Kattalais. This is more apparent from the subsequent document Ex.A-2, dated 20.10.1894 (9 months after Ex.A-1) executed by Vrishabadwaja Dikshidhar and his brothers in favour of Krishna Rao, as security. She cannot now in this suit say that Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar had no right to bequeath the suit properties to the first defendant and therefore the present suit is barred by the principles of res judicata. That suit O.S.No.52 of 1953 has been filed by the plaintiff to declare the entire Will Ex.A-3 as invalid and if the Will is found to be valid, for maintenance of the plaintiff at the rate of Rs.17 per month. There is no issue framed in that suit as regards the nature of the present suit properties, i.e., whether they are endowed to charity or it belonged absolutely to the first defendant. In that suit, ultimately the parties compromised and in terms of the compromise, a decree was passed. Therefore, the decree passed in that suit cannot operate as res judicata against the present suit.

8. Coming to the question of limitation, the finding of the trial court that the suit is not barred by limitation appears to be quite correct. According to the plaintiff only in 1973 she came to know about the suit properties and then she filed a petition for including these properties in O.S.No.596 of 1972 for enhancement of maintenance. There is nothing to indicate that the plaintiff knew about the suit properties earlier. As the learned trial Judge has rightly stated the plaintiff was married to Kalyanasubramania Dikshidhar while she was about 15 to 16 years old and she lived with him just for 6 or 7 years. Therefore quite possibly she would not have known about the suit properties. As the trial judge has further stated if she has known it, she would have included it in O.S.No.52 of 1953. The case of the first defendant is that in the written statement (Ex.B-6) filed by the first defendant in O.S.No.52 of 1953 it is mentioned about the suit properties and therefore the plaintiff cannot say that she did not know about the suit properties earlier. But the perusal of the said written statement shows that no description of the properties has been given, and what is more, by Krishna Rao in 1894 and rather misleadingly it is just stated that for the performance of kattalai in the temple five khannies of land has been given by a worshipper. Therefore there is no merit in the contention that the plaintiff had knowledge about the suit properties from the said written statement filed in O.S.No.52 of 1953.

9. For the abovesaid reasons, I find no merit in the appeal.

10. In the cross objections filed by the plaintiff, it is argued that no reason has been given for not allowing the costs. While decreeing the suit, the trial judge has stated in the peculiar circumstances of the case, the parties are directed to bear their own costs". Therefore it cannot be said that no reason has been given. The question of awarding costs is a matter of discretion of the court. I do not think there is any compelling circumstances that warrants interference with the judgment of the trial court in disallowing costs. Hence, the cross objection also has no merit.

11. In the result, the appeal is dismissed with costs. The cross objections is dismissed. No costs.

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), Sec.2(12) - Mesne Profits - Suit for partition, separate possession and mesne profits decreed - Decree confirmed on appeals - Plaintiff filing interlocutory applications - Claiming mesne profits - Ordered in part - Appeals against such orders - Maintainable.

Held, that the appeals against orders granting mesne profits in interlocutory application in suit for partition is maintainable. [Para 3]

Appeals against the decrees of the courts of the Subordinate Judge, Tenkasi, dated 30.6.1981 in Appeal Suit Nos.78 and 79 of 1980 preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Tenkasi, I.A.Nos.264 of 1979 and 1443 of 1973 in O.S.No.4 of 1969 respectively.

The Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT:- These two second appeals are by the plaintiff in O.S.No.4 of 1969 on the file of the District Munsif, Tenkasi. In the said suit, the plaintiff got the decree for partition and separate possession of her half share and for 'mesne profits' thereof. The said decree was confirmed in the first appeal A.S.No.177 of 1970 on the file of the Sub Court, Tirunelveli and also by this Court in S.A.No.14 of 1973. Subsequently, the plaintiff filed the present interlocutory applications out of which these second appeals have arisen. In I.A.No.1443 of 1973 the plaintiff claimed mesne profits of Rs.7,037.50 with reference to nine crops, i.e. from Pishanam 1969 to Pishanam 1973. The next I.A.No.264 of 1979 was filed claiming mesne profits of Rs.40,517.30 for 10 crops during the subsequent period, i.e. from Kar 1973 to Kar 1978. The trial court in the former interlocutory application granted a decree only for Rs.4,000. In the latter interlocutory application, the decree by the trial court was only for Rs.2,800. Aggrieved by the said two decrees the plaintiff preferred two appeals A.S.No.78 of 1980 against I.A.No.264 of 1979 and A.S.No.79 of 1980 against I.A.No.1443 of 1973.

2. The lower appellate court heard both the appeals together and held that 'mesne profits' as such cannot be claimed in a suit for partition and on that ground it held that the appeals were not maintainable. However, on the ground that there was no cross-objection by the defendants, the lower appellate court simply dismissed the appeals. Hence, the present two second appeals. S.A.No.685 of 1982 is against A.S.No.78 of 1980 and S.A.No.686 of 1982 is against A.S.No.79 of 1980.

3. The learned counsel for the appellant argues that the dismissal of the first appeals by the lower appellate court is totally erroneous. First of all, he submits that there is a decree for grant of 'mesne profits' confirmed by both the appellate courts. Further, according to him the defendants have not taken any plea that the above said appeals A.S.Nos.78 and 79 of 1980 are not maintainable. He submits that in such a situation, the lower appellate court in dealing with the said appeals against the afore-said interlocutory applications could not have held that no mesne profits could be claimed and the appeals were hence not maintainable. In this respect, the learned counsel for the respondents could not argue anything contra. No doubt, the learned counsel for the appellant even maintains that on the peculiar facts of the present case the profits claimed are only 'mesne profits' and that even assuming the same are not really 'mesne profits', but only loosely worded so, the lower appellate court cannot on that ground reject the said appeals, but, at least treating the said interlocutory applications as one for accounting regarding the profits, should have accordingly decided the said appeals therefrom on merits. He also cited authorities on the said aspect. This submission of the learned counsel for the appellant is correct. I, therefore, hold that the said appeals are maintainable.

4. Therefore, I set aside the judgment and decree of the lower appellate court in A.S.Nos.78 and 79 of 1980 and direct the lower appellate court to rehear the respective appeals, preferably within a short time of three months. The second appeals are allowed. No costs.

(A) Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), Sec.4(1) - Land already being used for a public purpose - If can be acquired for another public purpose.

The court has no hesitation in holding that there cannot be any acquisition for a public purpose when the land is being used for another public purpose. Once it is found that the co-operative society could be regarded as constituted for the benefit of the public and that in general building schemes were to be considered advantageous to the public and that even though the direct and immediate beneficiaries under the scheme might be individuals, it was public purpose or in benefit of the public generally, any interference in the scheme of housing society by another acquisition will constitute interference in a public purpose there can be no public purpose which shall interfere with another public purpose and if there are two public purposes in conflict, one which has proceeded ahead must be allowed to proceed further.

(B) Pleadings - Material facts available - Consequence has to follow if law is applied to such facts - Party not raising the pleadings, whether can be allowed to avail of the ground.

When pleadings are inadequate and material facts are absent, it is proper for any Court not to permit a point either of fact or law to be raised in any proceedings when, however, the material facts are available and on such facts that are not in dispute when law is applied, a consequence has to follow. It will be, in the opinion of the court, unjust in denying to a party availability of such a ground.

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorari of calling for the records of the third respondent herein namely the Special Tahsildar, Land Acquisition, Kodaikanal, Madurai District relating to the notice under Sec.4(1) of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, Central Act 1 of 1984, dated 29.7.1980 under reference G.O.Ms.No.1345, P.W.Irrigation, dated 29th July, 1980 and published in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette dated 27th August, 1980, Gazette Supplement to Part II, Sec.2 at pages 10 and 11 and quash the same.

Mrs.Nalini Chidambaram, Senior Counsel, for M/s.K.Kuppasamy and V.Jeevagan, for Petitioners.

M.Liakat.Ali, Government Advocate, for Respondent.

The Court made the following

ORDER:- Petitioner herein is a member of the Kodaikanal House Building Co-operative Society Limited No.A.1583. She has been given a house site-vide sale document No.505/69 of the Sub Registration Office, Kodaikanal for the purpose of constructing a house therein to spend the last days of her life, by the society, stating inter alia as follows:

"Whereas the 'Member' has applied to the society for a A class house in Kodaikanal House Building Co-operative Society Limited, colony in survey No.1, Kodaikanal urban herein-after referred to as the colony at Kodaikanal and taken one share of the value of Rs.5 (Rupees five only) in the society and deposited the said sum of Rs.5 (Rupees five only) with the society and,

whereas the Government has assigned the site necessary for the construction of houses in the said colony in favour of the society and, whereas the society has, after deducting the extent allotted for common purposes such as road, parks, market, shops, school playground and other public amenities common to all the members of the society, divided the land remaining in the total extent assigned by the Government to the society, into plots and allotted them to members and whereas the member has been allotted the plot bearing No.A-30 in the said colony measuring about 25 cents in extent, and whereas, after taking into account the cost of the land set apart for communal purposes as mentioned above and the cost of all other works which have to be carried out for the benefit of all the members, the cost of site in the said plot No.A-30 has been fixed at Rs.25 per cent and whereas the cost of the plot No. A-30 which comes to Rs.625 has been recovered by the society in cash from the member. The society hereby conveys the said plot No.A-30 by virtue of this sale deed to the member to be enjoyed by him, his legal representatives, and assignees with absolute rights from generation to subject to the conditions mentioned hereunder."

Following the transfer of the land to her, the petitioner entrusted the house construction work to a contractor. In the meanwhile, however, a notification under Sec.4(1) of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 (Central Act 1 of 1894) was issued-vide publication in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette, dated 27th August, 1980, expressing intention to acquire this land for the purpose of establishing a Repeater Station of the Public Works Department, Hydrology Division. This, however, was modified-vide Gazette Notification dated 5.7.1982, saying that the land was needed for the purpose of Staff Quarters of the Employees of the Repeater Station of the Public Works Department, Hydrology Division. Alleging that having come to know of the notification, the petitioner sent her objections to the Tahsildar/Land Acquisition Officer on several dates and that no enquiry of any kind was held under Sec.5-A of the Act by the competent authority, the petitioner moved this court for a writ in the nature of certiorari and for such other or other further orders as the court deemed fit. Petitioner stated in the petition as follows:

"I state that to my best knowledge, there has been no declaration under Sec.6(1) of the Act. Nor is there any publication of the declaration in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette which is mandatory under Sec.6(2) of the said Act. It is only after such declaration the Government can direct the Land Acquisition Officer to take orders for acquisition of my site under Sec.7 and after this issue of Notice under Sec.8(1) and calling for making statement under Sec.10 arises. But, even without declaration under Sec.6, the notices under Secs.9(1) and 10 had been issued to me in the Roc.No.66 of 1980/A, dated 12.9.1983. These notices were objected to by me. In spite of this I have been served with a letter under Sec.12(2) of the said Act in Tahsildar Memo Roc.No.66 of 1980/A, dated 10.11.1983 intimating the amount about Rs.2,200 as compensation awarded for the site and directing to take it in person or by an authorised agent, such fixing of very low compensation for my site is without proper enquiry and is arbitrary and I reserve my right to agitate it in the proper jurisdiction. This apart, such an award is going to be passed under Sec.11 and the possession of the site will be taken under Sec.16 without reference to my civil rights in an arbitrary manner as has been done at every stage."

Mention of the notice under Sec.12 of the Act in the above show that some sort of declaration had already been made followed by proceedings leading to the award under Sec.11 of the Act. Respondents have, in their counter, stated so in these words:

"It is submitted that at the instance of the Executive Engineer (Public Works Department), Hydrology Division, Madurai, acquisition proceedings were initiated for acquisition of an extent of 0.25 acres of land in S.No.1/6-2A1 of Kodaikanal village for construction of quarters for the staff of Repeater station. The Notification under Sec.4(1) of the Land Acquisition Act in respect of the Land measuring 0.25 acre in S.No.1/6-2A1 of Kodaikanal village, Kodaikanal taluk for the construction of staff quarters of Repeater Station was approved in G.O.Ms.No.1345 (Public Works Department) dated 20.7.1980 and published at page No.10 of Tamil Nadu Government Gazette Supplement to part II Sec.2, dated 27th August, 1980. At the time of submission of Notification under Sec.2, dated 27th August, 1980. At the time of submission of Notification under Sec.4(1), the name of the interested person (owner) was noted as President, Kodaikanal House Building Co-operative Society Limited as per Revenue accounts instead of Tmt.Saroja Sethu in the schedule (Form 2A) of 4(1) of the Act. The same was published in the Gazette also. The Government in their letter No.36456 of 1972-81-8, Public Works Department, dated 7.4.1982 ordered to submit an amendment, indicating the name of Tmt.M.S.Saroja Sethu to notification under Sec.4(1) of the Land Acquisition Act. The amendment was published at page 29 of the part II, Sec.1 of Tamil Nadu Government Gazette, dated 23.6.1982. Enquiry under Sec.5-A of the Land Acquisition Act was conducted on 30.8.1982 after observing the usual formalities as laid down under rules. The draft declaration and directions were approved in G.O.Ms.No.1767, Public works Department, dated 19.8.1983 and they were published as extraordinary in Part II, Sec.2 of Tamil Nadu Government Gazette, dated 22.8.1983. The award enquiry was conducted on 3.10.1983 and award passed acquiring 0.25 acre of land in S.No.1/6-2A1 of Kodaikanal village for construction of Staff quarters of Repeater station awarding a compensation of Rs.2,199.40 to the landlady in Award No.1/83, dated 3.10.1983. The land was taken possession on 8.10.1983. The awardee did not attend the award enquiry on 3.10.1983 posted at taluk office, Kodaikanal either personally or through a representative but had sent a letter on 29.9.1983 requesting adjournment for six weeks as the Tamil month Puratasi was inauspicious. The award enquiry was conducted on 3.10.1983 as already fixed. The notice under Sec.12(2) of Land Acquisition Act dated 10.11.1983 was sent to the landlady and it was served on her on 22.11.1983. The possession of the land was handed over to the requisitioning body on 8.10.1983. The awardee did not attend the award enquiry and receive the compensation. Now, the awardee has obtained an interim stay confirmed to taking possession of the land. But, the possession of the land was taken on 8.10.1983 and was handed over to the requisitioning body on 8.12.1983 even before the receipt of the stay order from this Honourable Court."

There has been serious contentions whether any valid enquiry under Sec.5-A had been held, whether procedures prescribed by law have been followed by the respondents in acquiring the land in question and whether on account of the irregularities in the procedure petitioner has suffered any legal injury. But one fact has emerged out of all the controversies between the parties, which relates to the character and purpose of the house site allotted to the petitioner by the society and the nature and character of the society in the eye of the law, which is known as the Land Acquisition Act. 2. Secs.4 and 6 of the Act, which apply to all types of land acquisitions under the Act, make no distinction in the procedure of the acquisition of the land for a public purpose or for a company. Sec.3(0) has defined the expression 'company' to include, 'a co-operative society within the meaning of any law relating to co-operative societies for the time being in force in any State, other than a co-operative society, which falls within the definition of a Corporation owned or controlled by the State, being a society established or administered by Government or being a co-operative society in which not less than fifty one per centum of the paid up share capital is held by the Central Government or by any State Government or Governments, or partly by the Central Government and partly by one or more State Governments. The definition of 'Public purpose' has undergone quite a few amendments and as it stands today, it includes the provisions of land for carrying out any educational, housing, health or slum clearance scheme sponsored by Government or by any authority established by Government for carrying out any such scheme, or, with the prior approval of the appropriate Government, by a local authority or a society registered under the Societies Registration Act, 1860, or under any corresponding law for the time being in force in a State, or a co-operative society within the meaning of any law relating to co-operative societies for the time being in force in any State. As on today, therefore, there cannot be any difficulty in accepting the scheme sponsored by the Kodaikanal House Building Co-operative Society Limited for construction of houses for those who intended to spend their life in Kodaikanal as a public purpose. On the day the notification was issued, however, the 'public purpose' had the following definition,

"the expression 'public purpose' includes the provision of village-sites, in districts in which the appropriate Government shall have declared by notification in the Official Gazette that it is customary for the Government to make such provision."

Even so, when a question arose before a learned single Judge of the Allahabad High Court in Radha Raman v. State of U.P., A.I.R. 1954 All. 700, as to whether acquisition for co-operative housing society will satisfy the definition of a public purpose, the learned Judge stated in his judgment as follows:

"The preamble to the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912, says that the object of the Act is to promote self help among poorer people and according to Sec.4 importance is attached to the promotion of interests of the members of the society. Reference was also made to the bye-laws of the society amongst the objects of which are mentioned requirements of the members of the society and the construction of residential houses or other buildings for the convenience of the members and development of a co-operative colony for the convenience and benefit of the members. On the strength of the preamble to the Co-operative Societies Act and the contents of Sec.4 as well as the contents of bye-law No.3 it is argued that the object of the society is to benefit the members only and not any section of the public at large. Reference was also made to Nicholas on Eminent Domain, Volume 2, pages 517, 518, 520 and 537.

I have considered the argument with care, but I do not think any of these provisions necessarily lead to the conclusion that the acquisition of land for purposes of this Co-operative Society cannot be 'useful to the public'.

The general dearth of residential accommodation in the towns and cities of Uttar Pradesh is very well known, and if a society is found to construct a number of houses and the houses are actually constructed, the construction is likely to ease the situation, as there will be an increase in the total residential accommodation in the town and rents may also possibly go down. This will benefit not only the members of the society but also the resident public of the town. It is true, that the bye-laws of the society as well as the Co-operative Societies Act itself are mainly concerned with the interests of the members of the society. But, if in carrying out those objects a situation is brought out which may also help the other members of the public, the acquisition may, in my opinion be said to be one useful to the public.

Sec.4 of the bye-laws of the society shows that the membership is open to all persons of good character and sound mind, who may be residing or carrying on any trade, business or profession in Pillibhit. Anybody in Pillibhit can, therefore, become a member of the society and have the advantages of being a member. In America Housing Societies constituted for the purpose of clearing slumps have been held to be doing work which is of 'public use'. Slump clearance has been held to be a valid reason for the acquisition of land. The present case cannot be said to be a case of clearance of slumps, but in the conditions prevailing in the towns of this State at present, the construction of more residential houses is, in my opinion, an object which is useful to the resident public of the place."

The Allahabad Judge has only carried what has been more specifically stated by a Bench of this Court in the case of Padayachi v. State of Madras, (1952)2 M.L.J. 298: I.L.R. 1952 Mad. 982: 1952 M.W.N.677: A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 756. That was a case of a society formed and registered under the Madras Co-operative Societies Act, 1932 with the object of enabling its members to construct houses. This society considered that certain block of lands within the municipal limits of the city would serve as suitable building sites and moved the Government for its acquisition. The Government gave its consent to the scheme and issued a notification declaring that the lands were needed for public purpose, to wit, construction of houses and in pursuance of this notification proceeded to acquire lands. That was challenged in the court on the ground that the public as such had no interest in the land or buildings, that neither the public nor even a considerable portion thereof would be benefited by the scheme and in effect the acquisition would amount to taking property of one individual and transferring it to another. The court answered the same by saying that the society could be regarded as constituted for the benefit of the public, that in general building schemes were to be considered as advantageous to the public and that even though the direct and immediate beneficiaries under the scheme might be individuals it was a public purpose as it benefited the public generally. One can have support to the above view from the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Somavanti v. State of Punjab, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 151: (1963)2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 18: (1963)2 An.W.R. (S.C.) 18: (1963)2 S.C.J. 35: (1963)2 S.C.R. 774 and another judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Bai Malimabu v. State of Gujarat, (1978)1 S.C.J. 430: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 515, wherein it is said that construction of staff quarters for the employees of dispensary and other employees working under State Insurance Scheme was a public purpose. The definition, as it has stood before the amendment in the year 1984, after which amendment there can be no doubt that any housing scheme of a co-operative society will be a public purpose was obviously not existed and when courts in India, including this court in the case of Padayachi v. State of Madras, (1952)2 M.L.J. 298: I.L.R. 1952 Mad. 982: 1952 M.W.N.677: A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 756, extended its meaning to include house sites of co-operative societies, it will be only reiterating the consensus, when it is said that the Kodaikanal House Building Co-operative Society Limited's acquisition of land by whatever method, whether by negotiations and purchase from the owners or through the process of the law of acquisition of land was/is a public purpose and the society's allotting a piece of land and thereafter transferring the same to her has been an act in furtherance of the public purpose for which the society existed/exists. In the document of sale, the mention of the fact that the Government has assigned the site necessary for the construction of houses in the said colony in favour of the society and further the words 'the society has, after deducting the extent allotted for common purposes such as roads, parks, market, shops, school, playground and other public amenities common to all the members of the society, divided the land remaining in the total extent assigned by the Government to the society, into plots and allotted them to members' are quite significant. The Government has known the purpose for which it assigned necessary site for the construction of houses to the Kodaikanal House Building Co-operative Society Limited and the society in fulfilment of the purpose created roads, parks, market, shops, schools, playground and other public amenities common to all the members of the society and divided the land remaining in the total extent assigned by the Government to the society into plots and allotted them to members, one such member being the petitioner.

3. A question has thus arisen in the instant case, can any land, allotted, assigned or marked for a public purpose and utilised for such a public purpose, be subjected to acquisition proceedings in the name of any of the public purposes that could/ and be spelled out from the definition or the explanation of the 'public purpose'. A serious objection to the consideration of this aspect of the case, however, has been raised on behalf of the respondents, Learned counsel appearing for them has submitted that no specific plea in this behalf has been raised in the writ petition. Petitioner should not in such a situation be permitted to raise any such ground. When pleadings are inadequate and material facts are absent, it is proper for any Court not to permit a point either of fact or law to be raised in any proceedings. When, however, the material facts are available and on such facts that are not in dispute when law is applied, a consequence has to follow. It will be, in my opinion, unjust to deny to a party availability of such a ground. Learned counsel for the respondents has also urged that the objections, which the petitioner was in a position to raise under Sec.5-A of the Act and failed to raise at that stage, she cannot raise (such objections to the acquisition) for the first time in a writ proceedings. As I have said earlier, if, on admitted facts when law is applied and the consequence has to follow, it will be unjust to deny to a party the benefit of such a legal consequence. It will indeed be extending the same unfair rule of procedure if on the ground that some objection could have been raised under Sec.5-A of the Act but was not raised, a plea of this kind is rejected. In the instant case, however, it is not possible to say that no such objection had been raised by the petitioner at the stage of the enquiry under Sec.5-A of the Act. The petitioner, in one of the representations to the Tahsildar (Land Acquisition Officer concerned), has said,

"Kindly read these objections besides the objections I had sent to you periodically..... It should be noted that the house site is allotted by the Kodaikanal Co-operative Limited, to me as a part of the purpose for which the said house construction society was formed, and hence the said P.W.D. Executive Engineer stated that the above construction is purely public interest and beyond the jurisdiction of the

It should be noted that the site is for me under the scheme of public purpose could not be acquired for another public purpose as per the decision of the High Court and the Supreme Court."

4. Learned counsel for the respondents has raised yet another objection saying that the acquisition proceedings have been completed and possession of the land has already been taken under Sec.16 of the Act by the concerned department of the Government. There may be some truth in it as it seems award was made in the year 1983 itself and there is no reason to think that after making the award the Collector would not have proceeded to take possession. Petitioner, however, has stoutly denied this statement of taking of possession by the respondents and asserted that if respondents had taken possession as they allege they would have exercised possession. They have never exercised possession according to the petitioner and petitioner is still in possession: Dispute as to who is in possession however, I need not determine for it is conceded at the Bar on behalf of the respondents that no act in fulfilment of the purpose for which the impugned notifications have been issued beyond the alleged taking of possession has been done by the respondents and the site is still awaiting any construction.

5. I have given my anxious considerations and I have no hesitation in holding that there cannot be any acquisition of a public purpose when the land is being used for another public purpose. Once it is found that the co-operative society could be regarded as constituted for the benefit of the public and that in general building schemes were to be considered advantageous to the public and that even though the direct and immediate beneficiaries under the schemes might be individuals, it was public purpose as it benefited of the public generally, any interference in the scheme of housing society by another acquisition will constitute interference in a public purpose. There can be no public purpose, which shall interfere with another public purpose and if there are two public purposes in conflict, one which has proceeded ahead must be allowed to proceed further. For the reason, as above, I am satisfied that in the instant acquisition of land for the purpose of Staff Quarters of the Employees of the Repeater Station of the Public Works Department, Hydrology Division has been made without taking notice of the public purpose of the Kodaikanal House Building Co-operative Society Limited, and has accordingly been done without due care and regard to the scheme of the law in the Land Acquisition Act. The acquisition being in the teeth of the law, as I have noticed above, the same has to be annulled.

6. In the result, the writ petition is allowed; the notification in G.O.Ms.No.1345, P.W.Irrigation, dated 19.7.1980 and all consequent proceedings are quashed. The petitioner shall be deemed to be the owner of the land and shall be entitled to utilise the same for the purpose of constructing a house as envisaged in the scheme of The Kodaikanal House Building Co-operative Society Limited. On the facts of this case, there shall be, however, no order as to costs.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present:- Mishra and Padmini Jesudurai, J.

O.S.A.No.208 of 1992 9th September, 1992.

Corporation Bank ...Appellant
v.

M/s.E.W.Stevensors, No.22, Jawaharlal Nehru Road, Calcutta and others ...Respondents.

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.9, Rule 13, Proviso 1 - Ex parte decree passed against more than one defendant - First defendant, principal debtor - Defendants 2 and 3 sureties - First defendant alone applying for setting aside ex parte decree - Decree, if to be set aside against the other defendants also.

It has to depend upon the facts of each case whether to set aside the decree only in so far as the case of the defendant who applied for setting aside the decree is concerned or even in case of other defendants as well and in that the court shall mainly be guided by the principles of equity and good conscience. In the present case, the money decree revealed that the first defendant is the principal debtor and the second and third defendants are the sureties. The effect of setting aside the decree against the first defendant alone will mean that a decree made effective against all the defendants jointly will stand annulled in so far as the principal debtor is concerned but shall bind the sureties and the creditor-decree holder thus shall satisfy the decree. On the facts as above even if the decree has to be set aside at the instance of only one of the defendants, it must be set aside against all of them.

Appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the Order of Pratap Singh, J. dated 13.8.1992 and made in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court in Application No.3669 of 1992, in C.S.No.432 of 1981.

S.Sethuraman, for Appellant.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.:- A learned single Judge of this Court has set aside an ex parte decree against the defendants/respondents in C.S.No.432 of 1981. He has noted the fact that the decree was passed pursuant to an order made ex parte in the case for the reason that the counsel for the defendants fell ill and hence he was not able to attend the hearing on the date fixed in the case. The learned Judge has said; "To substantiate the claim that Mr.N.V. Balasubramanian was ill on 29.6.1992, a certificate given by Dr.Gopal Ramanathan, M.D., FCCP has also been filed. In view of the above, I am clear that sufficient reason is given for setting aside the ex parte decree."

2. O.9, Rule 13, Code of Civil Procedure, stated that in any case in which a decree is passed ex parte against a defendant, he may apply to the Court by which the decree was passed for an order to set it aside; and if he satisfies the court that the summons was not duly served, or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the court would make an order setting aside the decree as against him upon such terms as to costs, payment into court or otherwise as it thinks fit.

3. On facts, as found by the learned single Judge the defendants have not appeared through counsel on account of the sudden illness of the counsel and thus for that reason the defendants were prevented by a sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing. Learned counsel for the appellant, however, has referred to the proviso under O.9, Rule 13, C.P.C., and drawn our attention to the order of the learned single Judge in this behalf wherein it is said that even if a good cause is shown for setting aside the ex parte decree, such order can enure only to the benefit of that defendant who applied for setting aside the ex parte decree. According to the learned counsel, the first defendant alone was represented in the proceeding for setting aside the ex parte decree in the sense that although the application was purported to have been filed on behalf of all defendants only a representative of the first defendant filed the affidavit as to the cause for setting aside the ex parte decree. Learned single Judge has, however, said as follows:

"The learned counsel for the plaintiff would submit that even if it is taken that good cause is shown for setting aside the ex parte decree it can enure only to the benefit of first defendant alone. The learned counsel for the petitioner points out that Mr. N.V. Balasubramaniam was appearing for all the defendants and the prayer in the application is for setting aside the ex parte decree in its entirety passed on 29.6.1992 and acceptable reason has been given for the absence of the defendants' advocate on that date. In view of the above, I am unable to accept the submission made by the learned counsel for the plaintiff/respondent."

The fact being that Mr. Balasubramaniam represented all the respondents (defendants in the suit) and his absence affected the common cause of the respondents and the application for setting aside was filed on behalf of all the respondents, it is not possible merely on the basis of the affidavit having been filed by a representative of the first defendant that the application for setting aside the ex parte decree was only on behalf of the first defendant. Apart from the above, we have seen with the assistance of the learned counsel for the appellant the facts of the case leading to the money decree which revealed that the first defendant is alleged to be the principal debtor and the second and third defendants are the sureties. The effect of setting aside the decree against the first defendant alone will mean that a decree made effective against all the defendants jointly will stand annulled in so far as the principal debtor is concerned but shall bind the sureties and the creditor-decree holder thus shall satisfy the decree.

4. The first proviso to O.9, Rule 13 reads as follows:

"Provided that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such defendant only it may be set aside as against all or any of the other defendants also."

On the facts as above, in our opinion, it has been indeed a case in which even if the decree has to be set aside at the instance of only one of the defendants, it must be set aside against all of them. The law in this behalf has been stated in one of the earliest judgments of this Court in Meenakshi Sundaram Pillai v. Chandrakasa Naicker, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 550: 101 I.C. 98: 1927 M.W.N. 294, in these words:

"Under the proviso to Rule 13, O.9, where a decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against the applying defendant only, it may be set aside as against all or any of the defendants also. It appears to me that the decree in this case is of this indivisible character, because it is for the possession of a house, which itself is indivisible; so that if the share of one of defendants is excluded, delivery will, in effect, be impossible."

This view is expressed in a case under the Code of Civil Procedure, Act VIII of 1859 by this Court in Panji Achan v. Marutha Veera Kavundan, 22 M.L.J. 543, in these words:

"The extent to which the decree must be set aside will depend upon the circumstances of each particular case. On what principle then is the court to act in deciding how far any particular decree is to be set aside? There can I think,

be no doubt that the object of the section is that a more successful applicant should be put in exactly the same position as if no decree had been passed in the suit, and the decree, therefore, must be set aside so far as is necessary, to achieve this object, and no further.

As I read Sec.108, C.P.C., it prima facie means that the decree, so far as it gives any relief to the plaintiff against the defendant who is able to establish that he was prevented from sufficient cause from appearing at the time of hearing, is to be set aside, and not against those defendants in the suit who have no good cause to make for non-appearance or have not chosen to take any action. But it may happen that the decree, from its nature, must, if set aside, necessarily exempt all the defendants from liability as is the case here with respect to so much of the decree as directs the amount in question to be paid out of the Dewaswom property. In such case the scope of Sec.108, C.P.C., as I understand it, is no doubt enlarged, but that is because it cannot be helped; but if one were to go further and to hold that in all cases where there is one cause of action against all the defendants, or where there is a common defence, the court acting under this section has the power to set aside the decree so far as it affects the defendants other than the applicant, it would, in my opinion, be putting too great a strain on the language of the Legislature."

5. Learned counsel for the appellant, however, has placed reliance upon the judgments of a Division of the Bombay High Court in Hiralal v. Sitaram, A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 446, and of a learned single Judge of the same court in Vasant v. Tukaram, A.I.R. 1960 Bom. 485. In the former it is said:

"It may be pointed out that under the old Code, when an application for setting aside an ex parte decree was made by any defendant, the provision was that the Court shall make an order setting aside the decree. The Code was amended and in the amended Code the language used in O.9, Rule 13, is "the court shall make an order setting aside the decree as against him." Therefore, the principle accepted by the Legislature in O.9, Rule 13, is that the ex parte decree shall ordinarily be set aside only against the party who applies to set aside the ex parte decree. I use the word "ordinarily", because there is a proviso to O.9, Rule 13 and the proviso provides that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such defendant only, it may be set aside as against all or any of the other defendant also. It is clear that the proviso emphasises the nature of the decree. What the court has got to consider is whether the decree which it is setting aside at the instance of one defendant is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against that defendant only. Therefore, the infirmity must be in the decree itself.

The obvious illustration would be a partition decree. If one of the defendants applied to set aside a partition decree, the Court could not set aside such decree against that defendant only because it would be impossible to work out a partition decree in the absence of any of the parties. Now, can it be said that in the decree which was passed in this suit, there is anything which makes it impossible for the court or makes it difficult for the court to set it aside as against defendant No.1 only. The decree is only a money decree passed against both defendants Nos.1 and 2. The decree can be worked out and can be executed even though the decree against defendant No.2 stands and is set aside only against defendant No.1. There is nothing in the nature of this money decree which the court has passed which renders it difficult for the court to set aside only guae one of the defendants who are parties to the suit. Mr.Bhabba asked us to consider what would happen after the decree is set aside and the Court dismisses the suit against defendant No.1. In our opinion, that is not a consideration that can weigh with the Court when it considers the proviso to O.9, Rule 13. The right to set aside the ex parte decree is conferred expressly only upon the party who applies to set aside the ex parte decree. As against the parties who have not applied, the plaintiff has obtained a valuable right, he has obtained a decree against those defendants, and that valuable right can only be defeated provided the Court itself finds a difficulty in setting aside the ex parte decree only against the defendant who has applied to do so. But there is no right whatever in the party who has not applied to set aside the ex parte decree to have that decree set aside. Mr.Bhabba's client had the right to apply to set aside ex parte decree. He did not choose to exercise that right; he submitted to the decree. It is not therefore for him to appeal against any injustice that might be caused by reason of the fact that a suit against defendant No.1 may be dismissed on the same cause of action. He himself has no right conferred upon him by the Code. It is only the difficulty that the court might experience which has led the Legislature to enact the proviso.

We are not very much impressed by the argument of inconsistent decrees being on the record of this Court. Take the instance of a decree being passed on an admission. One defendant may admit the claim, the other defendant may not, and it would be open to the court to pass a decree against defendant No.1 on an admission and the court may proceed to try the suit as against defendant No.2. This may happen although the plaint is based on the same cause of action and in respect of the same transaction. If the plaintiff's suit fails against defendant No.2, it may be said that there are inconsistent decrees on the record of the court, because there is a decree against defendant No.1 on an admission and a dismissal of the suit as against defendant No.2, although the transaction was the same and the cause of action was the same. In the illustration I have given, it is a case of a decree being passed against one defendant on an admission. In the present case there is a decree against defendant No.2 by reason of the fact that he did not appear and defend the suit. It may be that a inconsistent decree may be passed in respect of defendant No.1 because he has been given the right by the Code to defend his suit on merits. Such a right has not been given to defendant No.2."

In the latter it is said:

"It is contended by the learned counsel for the applicant that although the lower court held that the order passed by its predecessor was illegal it did not set aside the order because it thought that it had no power to review the order, and that if this Court holds that the order could have been reviewed the original order passed should be set aside. But this Court cannot set aside the order passed unless it agrees with the view taken by the lower court that the original order was contrary to the proviso to O.9, Rule 13, C.P.C.

The lower court thought that the order passed by its predecessor was contrary to law because (i) the decree in question is one and indivisible, (ii) the decree is likely to result in two inconsistent decrees if the decree is not set aside against defendants 2 and 3, and (iii) the decree proceeds on the grounds common to defendants 2 and 3. In addition to these grounds it is also urged by the learned counsel for the applicants that in the interests of justice the whole decree should be reopened and the decree should be set aside against both defendants 2 and 3 and not merely against one of them, namely, defendant No.3 who had applied under O.9, rule 13, to have the ex parte decree set aside. Learned counsel for the applicant has relied on Khagesh Chandra v. Chandra Kanta, A.I.R. 1954 Assam 183 (F.B.), Gopala Chetty v. Subbier, I.L.R. 26 Mad. 604, Bhura Mal v. Har Kishan Das, I.L.R. 24 All. 383, (F.B.), Mohamed Hamidulla v. Tehurenissa Bibi, I.L.R. 25 Cal. 155, Munshi Ram v. Malava Ram, A.I.R. 1917 Lal 194 and Meenakshi Sundaram Pillai v. Chandrakasa Naicker, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 550: 101 I.C. 98: 1927 M.W.N. 294.

6. It is unnecessary to consider the Calcutta case at any great length because that was a decision under the old C.P.C. and the view taken by the Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court was that under Sec.108 of the old Code if a decree was to be set aside the whole decree should be set aside against all the defendants and not against some only of the defendants.

7. The Assam case deals with a different set of circumstances, because in that case the suit had been decreed ex parte against one defendant and dismissed, after contest, against another defendant. It was held by the majority of the Full Bench of the Assam High Court that O.9, Rule 13 and the provisos to it do not confer any jurisdiction upon the Court to reverse a decree dismissing the suit of the plaintiff as against some of the defendants. In the instant case the ex parte decree had been passed against both the defendants 2 and 3 and not in favour of one of them. The case of the Assam High Court has therefore no application to the instant case. But the view has been expressed that if the decree is joint and indivisible or if there is a possibility of conflicting decrees, then the whole decree should be set aside under the proviso to O.9, Rule 13 in Meenakshi Sundaram Pillai v. Chandrakasa Naicker, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 550: 101 I.C. 98: 1927 M.W.N. 294, in a suit filed for delivery of a house and mesne profits against defendants 2 and 3 and defendant No.1 who had purchased the house in execution of a decree against the undivided brother of defendants 2 and 3 these two defendants were ex parte and the plaintiff compromised with the first defendant, with the result that the decree was passed against all the defendants for possession and for mesne profits. The second defendant who had been ex parte, got the decree set aside under O.9, Rule 13. Plaintiff filed petition saying that if the ex parte decree is set aside against the second defendant, it should also be set aside against all the defendants. It was held that the decree was of an indivisible character because it was for the possession of the house which itself was indivisible, and if the share of one of the defendants is excluded, delivery in effect was impossible. The Madras High Court therefore set aside the ex parte decree against all the defendants although the petition to do so had been filed by the plaintiff. This case is an authority for the proposition that the decree was joint and indivisible and if the setting aside of the decree against one of the defendants only would result in an impossibility of execution, then the whole decree should be set aside. In Munshi Ram v. Malava Ram, A.I.R. 1917 Lah. 194, a decree had been passed ex parte against the principal debtor and his surety-after the ex parte decree against the principal debtor was set aside under O.9, Rule 13, it was held that the Judge was in error in setting aside the decree against the principal debtor without setting it aside against the surety.

8. If we look at the wording of the proviso to O.9, Rule 13, it provides that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such defendant only, the decree may be set aside against all or any of the other defendants also. The proviso contemplates cases where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside against one defendant only. Such cases are, for instance, a decree for possession of a house in the joint possession of persons, a partition decree, and a decree for joint possession of property in the joint possession of two or more persons. It is the nature of the decree that is the determining factor and not the reasons behind the decree. Even if the defends of two defendants is common and even if the decree proceeds on a ground common to all the defendants, the ultimate decree should not be set aside against all the defendants unless it is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against one defendant only. Two decrees may be inconsistent in the sense that the grounds given are inconsistent. A decree against two or more defendants may be a decree for a certain amount of money as damages for breach of a contract, and if the decree against one of the defendants is set aside under O.9, Rule 13, and ultimately the suit is dismissed against such a defendant on the ground that he did not commit a breach of contract, then though the grounds may be inconsistent, the original decree is not of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against one defendant only. Generally in the case of a money decree the application of the proviso to O.9, Rule 13, C.P.C. is not attracted. In Hiralal v. Sitaram, A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 446, which was a case of money lent to two defendants carrying on business under a partnership name and in which an ex parte decree passed against defendant. Nos.1 and 2 and in favour of the plaintiff, was set aside against defendant No.1 under O.9, Rule 13, it was held that the application of defendant No.2 for setting aside the ex parte decree against him also under the proviso to O.9, Rule 13, should be rejected because the money decree was not an indivisible decree and the argument of inconsistent decree being possible was rejected. For the application of the proviso to O.9, Rule 13, it is not sufficient that there was possibility of inconsistent decrees, but what is necessary is that the Original decree, which is being set aside at the instance of only one defendant is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against that defendant only, if there is such an infirmity in the original decree, then only action would be taken under the proviso."

6. We do not propose, however, to say whether any of the two Bombay cases go in support of the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant, because we do not notice any departure in the statement of the principles of law by the learned Judges of the Bombay High Court, as found in the two earlier judgments of this Court. It has to depend upon the facts of each case whether to set aside the decree only in so far as the case of the defendant who applied for setting aside the decree is concerned or even in case of other defendants as well and in that the court shall mainly be guided by the principles of equity and good conscience. On the facts of the present case as we have found the learned single Judge has committed no error, there is no merit in the appeal. The appeal is accordingly dismissed.

V.Subramani ...Petitioner
Arumugham ...Respondent.

(A) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), Sec.115 and O.14(2)(a) - Petitioner raising question of pecuniary jurisdiction of court and praying for that issue to be decided first - Petition dismissed - Revision against order, if lies.

It shall be noted that the disposal of the said application did not involve adjudication of any right or obligation of the parties in controversy and that hence the order cannot be treated as 'Case decided' within the meaning of that term in Sec.115, C.P.C. Therefore, the civil revision petition is not maintainable. [Para 3]

(B) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), Sec.115 (as amended by Act CIV of 1976) - Interim order not causing irreparable injury or failure of justice - Revision against, if maintainable.

As per Sec.115, C.P.C., as amended in 1976, if a revision is filed against an interim order, unless irreparable injury or failure of justice is shown, the revision is not maintainable. [Para 5]

(C) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), Sec.115 and O.14, Rule 2 - Petitioner raising question of pecuniary jurisdiction of court on ground that suit is not properly valued - Praying that that issue be decided as a preliminary issue - Application, if maintainable. As per O.14, Rule 2, C.P.C., only when 'the case or any part thereof may be disposed of on an issue of law, the court may try that issue first. But what is contained in the affidavit in support of I.A.No.1263 of 1992 is only that the court has no pecuniary jurisdiction and that hence that question should be decided first. As per the written statement, the said contention is based on the fact that the suit is not properly valued. If that is so, when a proper valuation is made and it is found that the court below has no jurisdiction, but some other court alone has jurisdiction, then the plaint may have only to be returned for presentation to the proper court. In such a situation, the said return, of the plaint cannot be considered as 'disposal' of the case or part spoken to in O.14, Rule 2, C.P.C.

(D) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.14, Rule 2 - Preliminary issue - Mixed question of law and fact - If can be taken as a preliminary issue.

As per O.14, Rule 2, C.P.C., only a question of law, if at all, can be taken up as a preliminary issue. Issue No.5 in the present case relating to jurisdiction involve question of law and fact since, the question raised is that the suit has not been properly valued. The Code confers no jurisdiction upon the court to try a suit on mixed issues of law and fact as preliminary issues. [Para 7]

Cases referred to:

Baldevdas Shivilal v. Filmistan Distributors (India) (P) Ltd., (1970)1 S.C.R. 485: (1970)1 S.C.J. 342: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 406. [Para 3]

Mitsubishi France v. Neyveli Lignite Corporation Limited, (1984)2 M.L.J. 369: A.I.R. 1985 Mad. 300. [Para 7]

S.S.Khanna v. F.J.Dhillon, A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 497. [Para 7]

Petition under Sec.115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the District Munsif, Harur, dated 9.7.1992 and made in I.A.No.1263 of 1992 in O.S.No.406 of 1987.

V.Natarajan, for Petitioner.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The defendant whose I.A.No.1263 of 1992 praying for trying issue No.5 first as preliminary issue in the suit O.S.No.406 of 1987 was dismissed, is the petitioner herein. The said issue no doubt raises the question of pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court below to try the suit on the ground that the suit has been properly valued.

2. The learned counsel for the petitioner argues that the court below has not given reasons for passing the abovesaid order of dismissal and that when the jurisdiction question is involved, O.14, Rule 2(a) is attracted and the court below should have agreed to take up the abovesaid issue as a preliminary issue to be tried before the other issues are tried.

3. But, first of all, it should be noted that the disposal of the said application did not involve any adjudication of any right or obligation of the parties in controversy and that hence the order cannot be treated as "case decided" within the meaning of that term in Sec.115, C.P.C. (Vide: Baldevdas Shivilal and another v. Filmistan Distributors (India) (P) Ltd., (1970)1 S.C.R. 485; (1970)1 S.C.J. 342; A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 406, regarding the meaning of the term "case decided"). Therefore, this civil revision petition is not maintainable at all.

4. That apart, it cannot be said that the court below has not given any reason for passing the abovesaid order. The court below has pointed out that even though the suit was filed in 1987 itself, the present application has been filed only about five years later in 1992. The written statement of the petitioner which was filed in 1988 itself no doubt states in paragraph 13 as follows:

"The suit is not properly valued and the court-fee paid by the plaintiff also not correct. This Court also has no pecuniary jurisdiction to deal with this matter."

If really, the defendant wanted to have the trial of this issue first, he would have come forward with an application to that effect long back as soon as the issues were framed in about 1988. Only after the suit has been listed for trial, the present I.A. has been filed. So, it is clear, only to protract the trial of the suit, the said I.A. has been filed. For this reason, the court below has rightly dismissed the application and it cannot be said that in coming to the abovesaid conclusion on the abovesaid reasoning, the court below has erred in exercise of the jurisdiction. So, since there is no error of jurisdiction as stated above, this civil revision cannot be sustained.

5. Further, as per Sec.115, C.P.C., as amended in 1976, if a revision is filed against an interim order, unless irreparable injury or failure of justice is shown the revision is not maintainable. In the present case, there is no irreparable injury or failure of justice. No such allegation even has been made in the supporting affidavit to the application. Therefore, also this civil revision petition has no merit.

6. Further, as per O.14, Rule 2, C.P.C., only when "the case or any part thereof may be disposed of" on an issue of law, the court may try that issue first. But, what is contained in the affidavit in support of I.A.No.1263 of 1992 is only that the court has no pecuniary jurisdiction and that hence that question should be decided first. As per the written statement, the said contention is based on the fact that the suit is not properly valued. If that is so, when a proper valuation is made and it is found that the court below has no jurisdiction, but some other court alone has jurisdiction, then the plaintiff may have only to be returned for presentation to the said proper court. In such a situation, the said return of the plaint cannot be considered as "disposal" of the case or part of it, spoken to in O.14, Rule 2, C.P.C. Therefore also, on the very allegation in the supporting affidavit, the abovesaid I.A. is not maintainable.

7. Further, as per O.14, Rule 2, C.P.C., only a question of law, if at all can be taken up as a preliminary issue. Issue No.5 in the present case, relating to jurisdiction, involves question of law and fact, since the question raised is that the suit has been not properly valued. In this connection, no doubt the learned counsel for the petitioner relied on the decision in Mitsubishi France v. Neyveli Lignite Corporation Limited, (1984)2 M.L.J. 369; A.I.R. 1985 Mad. 300, contending that the said decision has held that even where mixed questions of law and fact are relatable to an issue raising jurisdiction question, that issue could be tried as preliminary issue. But, I find that the Supreme Court has observed in S.S.Khanna v. F.J.Dhillon, A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 497, while interpreting O.14, Rule 2, C.P.C., as follows:

"The jurisdiction to try issues of law apart from the issues of fact, may be exercised, only where in the opinion of the court the whole suit may be disposed of on the issues of law alone, but the Code confers no jurisdiction upon the court to try a suit on mixed issues of law and fact as preliminary issues. Normally, all the issues in a suit should be tried by the court; not to do so, especially when the decision on issues even of law depends upon the decision of issues of fact, would result in a lop-sided trial of the suit."

So, I am bound by the Supreme Court decision. I am, therefore, quite convinced that this civil revision petition has to be dismissed.

8. In the result, the civil revision petition is not admitted, but dismissed.

B.S. ---- Petition dismissed.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present:- Janarthanam, J.

S.A.No.381 of 1992

3rd July, 1992.

M.Sundaram Servai ...Appellant
v.

Muslim Jamath (Public Wakf), Karaikudi represented by its President, Janab Syed Mohammed and another ...Respondents.

(A) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908) (as amended by Act CIV of 1976), Sec.99 - Suit by President and Secretary of a Wakf - Objection as to frame of suit in second appeal stage - Maintainability.

The technical objection as to the frame of the suit had not been raised by way of a specific pleading in the written statement filed by the defendant. From the factum of such a plea not having been raised, it is rather obvious that such a plea, if raised, would meet with dismissal failure and, therefore, the same is not raised. The non-raising of such a plea denied the opportunity to the plaintiffs to make it appear that the present plaintiffs were the persons in charge of the trust as Muttawalli's by making necessary application for suitable amendment. On the face of Sec.99, C.P.C., such a technical objection as raised by the appellant is of no avail.

[Paras 10 & 12]

(B) Mohammedan Law - Wakf - Concept of - Rights of Mutawalli or Sajjadanishin.

Muslim public wakf is not to be confused with the conception of trust in the ordinary sense of the term. The Privy Council has in Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami Ayyar, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 123, explained that the idea conveyed by the word 'trust' is foreign to the religious conception involved in the word wakf. It has held that the Wakfnama does not transfer property to trustees, that under the Mohammedan Law the moment a Wakf is created, all rights of property pass out of the wakf and vest in God Almighty and that the curator whether called mutawalli or sajjadanishin or by any other name is merely a manager.

T.L.Ram Mohan for K.Jayaraman, for Petitioner. Ms.V.Sumathi, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: The appellant herein was the defendant while the respondents were the plaintiffs in the suit.

2. The plaintiffs filed the suit in O.S.No.332 of 1985 on the file of the District Munsif, Devakottai, praying for the relief of possession with mesne profits, past and future and for costs, contending that the suit property is a public wakf, utilised as a burial ground for Muslims from time immemorial; that Kalanivasal in which the suit property was situate was an inam estate, taken over by the Government, that in the settlement proceedings, this property had been recognised as "mayanam poramboke" resulting in the making of necessary entries therefor in the relevant records; that thereafter, patta had been granted to Muslim Jamath, Karaikudi, that the defendant, having no manner of right whatever encroached over the suit property and put up a shed thereon and had been running a cycle shop, besides a sound service, and that therefore, he is liable to pay mesne profits by way of damages calculated at the rate of Rs.120 per mensem for the three years proceeding suit with future mesne profits at such rate, as may be determined in separate proceedings.

3. The defendant contested the suit inter alia contending that at no point of time, the suit property was used as a burial ground for Muslims; that it was not recognised at any point of time as Muslim mayanam poramboke; that since in the settlement proceedings he was not a party, any decision taken thereon was not binding on him; that the suit property is a poramboke property and as such, the suit is bad for non-joinder of the Government as a necessary party; that in any event, he had prescribed title by adverse possession and that therefore, the suit is liable to be dismissed.

4. Learned District Munsif, on consideration of the materials placed on record, upholding the claims of the plaintiffs, decreed the suit as prayed for with costs, giving two months' time to the defendant for delivery of vacant possession of the suit property to the plaintiffs.

5. The aggrieved defendant filed A.S.No.88 of 1988, on the file of the Subordinate Judge, Devakottai, who in turn, on considering the materials available on record and after hearing learned counsel for the respective parties, dismissed the appeal confirming the judgment and decree of the trial court, making no order as to costs in the appeal.

6. When the matter came up for admission, notice of motion had been issued by this Court on 31.3.1992 returnable by two weeks and the plaintiffs entered appearance through a counsel of their choice.

7. The arguments of learned counsel for the appellant-defendant as well as the respondents-plaintiffs were heard.

8. Learned counsel for the appellant, fully realising the predicament situation in which he had been placed, in the sense of there being no chance of his making any submission as to the concurrent findings recorded by the courts below that the suit property is a 'mayanam poramboke' intended for Muslims and that patta has been issued to Muslim Jamath, Karaikudi, subsequent to the take-over by the Government of the inam estate in Kalanivasal village under the Tamil Nadu Act XXVI of 1963 and there being no perverse appreciation of the materials for reaching such a conclusion, resorted to make a technical objection revolving on the question of the frame of the suit, by stating that the plaintiffs-trust should be represented by all its trustees and the suit filed by the plaintiffs, namely, the President and the Secretary of the Muslim Jamath alone, is not maintainable and though such a plea is raised for the first time, he would submit such a plea is purely a question of law and therefore it is but legitimate for him even to raise such a question during the course of the second appeal.

9. Learned counsel appearing for the respondents-plaintiffs would however repel such a submission by stating that the so-called error or defect in the frame of the suit, even assuming to be correct, but without admitting the same, will not, in the eye of law, have the effect of reversal of the decree passed by the trial court and latterly confirmed by the lower appellate court, so long as the same is not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the court.

10. Admittedly, the technical objection as to the frame of the suit had not been raised by way of a specific pleading in the written statement filed by the defendant. From the factum of such a plea not having been raised, it is rather obvious that such a plea, if raised, would meet with dismal failure and therefore, the same is not raised. The non-raising of such a plea, denied the opportunity to the plaintiffs to make it appear that the present plaintiffs were the persons in charge of the trust as Muttawallis, by making necessary application for suitable amendment. Even otherwise, on the merits of the matter, a concurrent finding had been recorded by both the courts below in favour of the plaintiffs and the action had been initiated before the competent forum having jurisdiction.

11. At this juncture, reference may profitably be made to the sanguine provisions adumbrated under Sec.99 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (as amended by Act 104 of 1976) and it prescribes:

"99. No decree to be reversed or modified for error or irregularity not affecting merits or jurisdiction: No decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall any case be remanded, in appeal on account of any mis-joinder or non-joinder of parties or causes of action or any error, defect or irregularity in any proceedings in the suit, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the court.

Provided that nothing in the section shall apply to non-joinder of a necessary party."

12. Thus, on the face of the aforequoted provisions, such a technical objection, as raised by the appellant, is of no avail, as rightly contended by learned counsel for the respondent.

13. It is also to be borne in mind that Muslim public wakf is not to be confused with the conception of trust in the ordinary sense of the term and that perhaps appear to be the reason for raising such a technical plea in the second appeal. In the epoch-making decision in Vidya Varuthi v. Bahusami Ayyan, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 123, the Privy Council explained that the idea conveyed by the word 'trust' is foreign to the religious conception involved in the word 'Wakf':

"When once it is declared that a particular property is wakf or any such expression is used as implies wakf the right of the wakf is extinguished and the ownership is transferred in the Almighty" says Mr. Ameer Ali in delivering judgment. "The manager of the wakf is the mutawalli, the governor, superintendent or curator. In the case of khankhas the head is called a sajjadanishin. 'But neither the sajjadanishin nor the mutawalli has any right in the property belonging to the wakf, the property is not vested in him, and he is not a trustee in the technical sense. The wakfnama does not transfer property to trustees. Under the Mohammedan Law the moment a wakf is created all rights of property pass out of the wakf and vest in God Almighty. 'The curator, whether called mutawalli or sajjadanishin, or by any other name, is merely a manager.'"

14. In view of what has been stated above, it goes without saying that the second appeal deserves dismissal even at the admission stage and is accordingly dismissed.

The Government of Tamil Nadu by Secretary, Municipal Administration and Water Supply Department, Madras and another ... Respondents.

(A) Madras City Municipal Corporation Act (IV of 1919), Sch.IV as amended by the Rules, Municipal Administration and Water Supply G.O.Ms.No.1178, dated 10.12.1987 - Levy of property tax - In respect of property situate in the City of Madras on and from 1.4.1993 - Whether illegal - Ultra vires of the rule making powers.

(B) Madras City Municipal Corporation Act (IV of 1919), Sec.100 - Schedule IV, Rules found thereunder - Revision of property tax - With effect from 1.4.1993 - Of the property tax in the Madras City - Based on the returns furnished by the owners/occupiers - Calling upon them to file the proforma return - Whether i'legal.

(C) Constitution of India (1950), Arts.14 and 265 - G.O.Ms.No.1178, dated 10.12.1987 relating to levy of property tax - In respect of property situate in the City of Madras - On and from 1.4.1993 - Whether illegal - Ultra vires of the rule making powers - Whether violative of rights guaranteed under the Constitution.

After a careful consideration of the respective submissions of the learned counsel appearing on either side, the court of the view that the apprehension of the petitioners that the proposed revision of the property tax is sought to be made on the basis of the plinth area and not really on the annual value has no basis in law or otherwise. Apart from the candid admissions made by the second respondent in the counter affidavit filed it is by now well settled by catena of decisions of this Court and that of the Apex Court that the rateable value of a building whether tenanted or self occupied is limited by the measure of standard rent arrived at by the Assessing Authority by applying the principles laid down in the Rent Act and cannot exceed the figure of the standard rent so arrived at though in a given case. It may be lower than such standard rent. It has been held and the law as beyond controversy that within the upper limit of the rateable value of the premises so fixed the Assessing Authority would have to determine the reasonable rent by evaluating factors such as site, situation, locality and condition of the premises and the amenities thereon provided. It has been held that annual value cannot exceed the standard rent and even landlord actually receiving higher rent in an individual case matters very little for determination of the annual value for levying and collecting property tax. [Para 15]

There is no dispute that the proforma return, as such has not been prescribed by the State Government or that any specific authorisation of the second respondent is so made to formulate any such form. But the question would be as to whether the absence of such enabling power undermines the efficiency of the form published. The rules contained 1C(1) prescribes the particulars that should be furnished by the owner/occupier and the period within which such form should be filed by those liable. In the light of such prescription made, the fact that a format has been devised by the second respondent for the convenience of an owner/occupier does not militate against its efficiency merely because the format of the return itself has not been so prescribed under rules. The plea on behalf of the petitioners that no time limit or period of limitation as such could have been prescribed under the rules in the absence of specific conferment of power in this regard and the reliance placed upon two decisions of the Apex Court are incorrect and inappropriate. Unlike the ordinary rule making power that was the subject matter of consideration in the decisions of the Apex Court relied upon for the petitioners, the rules in question though made by the State Government are made after two drafts of the same is moved and placed before the Legislature and specifically approved by the State Legislature as required under Sec.347(5) of the Act. That apart, it is a well accepted principle of statutory construction that the rules in the Schedule to the Act are as much part and parcel of the statute itself and the infirmity alleged cannot be said to exist in such cases so as to affect the legality and validity of the notification prescribing the time limit within which the return visualised has to be filed and the relevant particulars are furnished to facilitate a time bound finalisation of the assessment proceedings to ensure the effective collection of the tax due to the second respondent. [Para 16]

The notification also states that if no return was filed within the notified time, the Corporation will suo motu revise the assessment of the property and the owner of the property shall not be entitled to file an appeal against such assessment, as per the act. The legality or otherwise of the provision disabling an assessee who has not filed his return from filing an appeal will be separately dealt with and need not concern the consideration of this stage. A reading of the rule 1-C(1) of Part 1-A would go to show that the return envisaged thereunder is not of the conventional nature as prescribed in the other taxation laws. Apart from the non-prescription of the form as such the rules contemplate a return containing certain details and information which have been stipulated by the rules themselves. Rule 2 provides also that in case of default in the filing of the return within the notified time the preparation of the return by a person authorised by the Commissioner by entering upon and making an inspection of the assessable item. As a matter of fact, the explanatory note appended to the motion of the draft rules submitted before the Legislature under Sec.347(3) of the Act. [Para 17]

Therefore, it could be seen that the object of the rules itself is to allow participation of the owner/occupier in the very process of assessment/revision by enabling him to disclose certain relevant details relating to the assessable item, in his own interest and even in cases of default cause such details to be ascertained by the inspection assessable item by a person authorised to facilitate assessment/revision. Even under the old rates for assessment/revision the ultimate burden to make the assessment/revision was that of the authorities and the introduction of the system of filing of a return, does not make any change in this regard, except that it extends an extent of participation in the process by the owner/occupier himself of the property concerned. Consequently, the second respondent cannot also be said to be exonerated or relieved of his duties and obligations to cause a due verification of the relevant details relating to the assessable item before proceeding to assess/revise the tax liability of an assessee, in accordance with the well-settled principles relating to the levy and collection of property tax under the Act. Merely because the owner/occupier fails to file a return as envisaged, the second respondent cannot arbitrarily or whimsically assess/revise the liability in any manner he thinks. It is a well accepted principle of law that the phraseology "Having regard to" do not mean having regard to only those mentioned and that the authority could not take into other relevant, vital or necessary materials or particulars or that such materials not specified are excluded from consideration. Likewise the absence of guidelines issued by the council or even the existence of guidelines do not affect the exercise of power of assessment/revision objectively taking into account only the provisions in the Act, Rules and the law declared by courts. The guidelines if any, could only fill up any gaps or at any rate, serve as guidelines and cannot either override the law or have any binding effect so as to fetter or freeze the exercise of discretion and discharge powers and duties objectively and independently. I find nothing wrong in the Commissioner being enjoined to have regard to the annual value of the assessable item as on 1st October, 1978, since that was the last of the general revisions made, for purpose of further revision now contemplated. The relevance of the existing assessment for further revision cannot totally be ruled out and no basic or legal infirmity can be said to affect the exercise made by the Commissioner, which as referred to supra, has to be only in accordance with Sec.100 of the Act and the law already declared by the decisions of this Court, keeping in view to the extent possible and permissible the rules in question. [Para 18]

The right of appeal, no doubt, is a creature of the law and the absence of any provision for an appeal or revision against a decision, in the context of modern development of law is viewed as a serious infirmity, particularly in view of the fundamental principle of rule of law enshrined under Art.14 of the Constitution of India. So far as the case on hand, there is no controversy that a right of appeal to the taxation appeal tribunal and a further appeal to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court. The question is whether the said right of appeal could be denied to an owner/occupier merely because he failed to file the return envisaged under Rule 1-C(1) of Part 1-A of the IV Schedule. The failure on the part of the owner/occupier to file the return disclosing the details sought, as held already by me does not absolve the second respondent of his obligation and duty to verify those details relating to the assessable item or the obligation cast upon him to act objectively and reasonably while exercising his powers of assessment/revision. Consequently, no immunity from challenge could be afforded to an assessment revision made by the second respondent even in such cases and there is no rhyme or reason in Rule 13. In a taxing law, normally orders passed ex parte or to the best of judgment due to the non-co-operation of the assessee in completing the assessment process, are also made subject to a right of appeal and or revision and the stipulation contained in Rule 13 not only sounds illogical, arbitrary and unreasonable, but smacks of draconian devilry and cannot be said to be justifiable for any good reason or on sound principle of law or logic. An owner/occupier, who has failed to file a return, called for, is as much entitled to file an appeal as one who has filed a return. Consequently, Rule 13 of the Part V of the IV Schedule to the Act is struck down as arbitrary, unreasonable and violative of Art.14 of the Constitution of India and declared null and void. [Para 19]

Even under the old and substituted rules when the assessment books have been prepared for the first time and whenever a general revision of such books has been completed, the Commissioner had to give a public notice specifying the time whom and the place where the books may be inspected and stating that revision petitions will be considered if preferred within 15 days from the date of such notice and the rules also provided that in cases of enhancement in the assessment, a special notice shall issue to the owner/occupier and only after hearing the said person shall amend the assessment books. This Court in the decision reported in Dalavai v. Government of Tamil Nadu, 91 L.W. 110, has held that such notice of enhancement should disclose the reasons or basis for such enhancement to enable the assessee to put forward any effective objections to the same. But, the new rules, apparently for the reason that the assessment invariably would be made on the return filed provides for an assessment/revision without any such opportunity. Rule 6 provides for such an opportunity only in cases where the Commissioner, on verification made of the particulars in the return after a general revision and before the next general revision seeks to modify the assessment already made from the date on which the assessment was made and not otherwise. No doubt, there is an appeal to the Taxation Appeal Tribunal and a further appeal to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court. A careful analysis of the rules under challenge disclose the following:

- (a) After the stage of filing the return or ascertaining particulars in the absence of any such return, the Commissioner assess the property tax or revise the existing assessment of the property to tax;
- (b) There is no provision for pre-decisional hearing or making representation as against the proposals of the Commissioner for revision and enhancement;
- (c) No provisions exist for communicating the order passed or disclosing the reasons or basis for the enhancement of the levy or for assessment/revision;
- (d) Only the supply of a property tax card, with details mentioned therein, and that too to only those who filed the return is contemplated;
- (e) Provision has been made for filing an appeal to the Taxation Appeal Committee and a further appeal to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court. The appeal to the Tribunal cannot be entertained unless the appellant deposits in the Corporation the existing tax and also fifty per cent of the difference between the existing tax and the tax as assessed by the Commissioner, in the revision. [Para 20]

It is by now well-settled that rules of natural justice or the principle of audi alteram partem are not rigid rules but they are not only flexible, but their application depends upon the setting and background of a statutory provisions, nature of the right which may be affected and the consequences which may entail its application or non-application. It is also well-settled that the application of the uncodified rules can be excluded by express provisions or by implication of course subject to the rights of this and the other competent authorities to adjudicate on the constitutionality of doing so. Wherever the law contemplates by making a suitable provision for a post decisional hearing amounting to a full review of the original order on merits, it can be construed as an exclusion of the audi alteram partem principle and if the law is silent with regard to the giving of a pre-decisional hearing to the person affected and the decision taken by the authority involves civil consequences and no full review or appeal on merits against the decision is provided. Courts would hesitate to construe an exclusion of the duty to afford a hearing. Unless viewed pragmatically it would paralyse the administrative process or frustrate the need for utmost promptitude. The courts of law have been enjoined to always make every effort to salvage the cardinal rule of audi alteram partem to the maximum extent possible with situation modifications and ensure as far as possible that the person affected has a reasonable opportunity of hearing or showing cause against the proposed section against him. [Para 21]

So far as the cases on hand are concerned, there can be no two views on the claim of the Corporation that a revision of the property tax is long overdue and imminent, having regard to the fact that the last general revision was only in 1978 and the further facts that not only there had been steep rise in the annual value, but substantial increase in the commitments of the Corporation to provide basic amenities and that the increase in the cost of providing such amenities to the residents warrant and justify such a revision. The justification of the end alone cannot justify the adoption of any means or procedure, ignoring completely the prejudice that may be caused to the citizen. Rule 3 obliging the Commissioner to assess the property tax and forming part of Part 1-A relating to assessment of property tax does not exclude the principles of natural justice. Unlike the earlier set of rules there was no opportunity given to make representations by means of a revision to the Commissioner before actually amending or revising or enhancing the assessment and enforcing the same. The rules are silent about giving of any reasons or disclosing the basis of enhancement either before or immediately thereafter by serving any order or proceeding except supplying a property tax card, apparently containing the details relating to property, annual value fixed and the property tax assessed to be paid. In the absence of any of those details or disclosure of the basis or reasons for enhancement, it would not hold the assessee to effectively even vindicate his rights in the appeal provided for and formulate the grounds on which the enhancement can be challenged. As a matter of fact, prior to the impugned amendments and even under the earlier rules when an occasion like this arose, this Court in the decision in Dalavai v. Government of Tamil Nadu, (1978) 1 M.L.J. 93: 91 L.W. 110, pointed out all these and emphasised the need for disclosing the basis and reasons for enhancement. The Legislature has not and could not be said to have nullified or altered the said position of law by the impugned amendments, particularly in the absence of specific rule or provision to the contra. The insertion of Rule 21-A to the extent that notwithstanding anything contained in any rule "in this part" it shall not be necessary for the Commissioner to serve any notice for the levy and collection of property tax under Sec.98 cannot have the effect of dispensary with the requirements of principles of natural justice at the stage of assessment/revision and enhancement of the levy by the Commissioner. This is obvious from the fact that Rule 21-A has been inserted in Part VI relating to collection of taxes and the rule is also meant to be a non obstante clause in respect of anything contained to the contra or in any rule in Part VI and not the other parts of the IV Schedule particular Part I-A. [Para 22]

There can be no serious controversy over the position that the assessment, levy and collection of tax involve civil consequences. The rules relating to assessment are also silent on the exclusion of the principles of natural justice at the stage of assessment or revision as the case may be. While so, merely from the fact that after an assessment or revision, there is a provision for appeal particularly when the rules do not cast an obligation on the Commissioner to write an order with reasons and communicate them to the assessee, for enabling the assessee to effectively challenge the assessment or enhancement of the tax made. The long lapse of time between the present revision proposed and the earlier general revision in 1978 or the justification or imminent need for a general revision is no ground to jettison the application of rules of fair play. Instead suitable directions may and have to be issued to adjust and harmonise the need for speed and also the obligation to set fairly and modify the measure of its application in reasonable proportion to the exigencies of the situation. The assessment and communication of the demand either in the form of a notice or the property tax card or both need not necessarily be in the beginning or the first day of the commencement of the half year and it may be either in the course of the first half year or by the close of the succeeding half year concerned (Vide Rule 20(3)). This would be in conformity with the mandate of Sec.100(2) of the Act that the annual value of lands and buildings shall be deemed to be the gross annual rent at which they may 'at the time of assessment' reasonably be expected and inevitably the assessment is an event to follow the date of commencement of the half year concerned. In view of the above the second respondent would not suffer any damage or injury by being directed to adhere to the principle of natural justice to the required possible extent. Consequently, though there is no justification to stall the assessment process set in motion by the issue of the impugned notification under the rules under challenge, it is necessary, for the second respondent to serve a provisional notice containing the proposed revision and the reasons or basis for the enhancement before passing final orders under Rule 3 and give the assessment atleast a period of 15 days time to submit the objections of the assessee and consider them before passing final orders of assessment/revision under rules, though not a personal hearing at that stage. This procedure shall be adopted in respect of all irrespective of the fact whether they filed a return or not as called for under the impugned notification. The adoption of the said course would be in the best interests of both parties before this Court. [Para 23]

For all these reasons stated above, the court summarises its conclusions and directions in the matter as hereunder:

(1) The assessment/revision of the property tax shall be only in accordance with Sec.100 of the Act on the annual value to be ascertained and determined on the principle laid down in Devan Daulet Rai Kapur v. New Delhi Municipality, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 541, Dr. Balbir Singh v. Municipal Corporation of Delhi, A.I.R. 1985 S.C. 339 and Dalavai v. Government of Tamil Nadu, (1978) 1 M.L.J. 93; 91 L.W. 110, as also conceded by the second respondent.

(2) The owners/occupiers liable to submit their returns shall have further time to do so till 28th February, 1993 and the returns may be either in the same format or any other form but must contain all the relevant details and information stipulated in the format and rules or such further or other details relevant for the purpose.

(3) On receipt of the said returns and even where there are no returns filed, the Commissioner shall be at liberty to proceed with the assessment process by serving a provisional notice of enhancement wherever there is any reason for the enhancement giving atleast 15 days time to enable the assessee to file their representations against the proposal, consider the said objections and pass final order, amending the books of assessment.

(4) The assessment so made shall be effective from the first half year of 1993-94 (with effect from 1-4-1993) as notified subject to the provisions governing revision and appeals.

(5) The provisions of Rule 13 is struck down as arbitrary unreasonable and violative of Art.14 of the Constitution of India and consequently null and void. The assessee shall be entitled to file an appeal or submit their representations irrespective of the fact whether they have actually filed the returns or not.

(6) Subject to the above declaration and directions, the respondent shall be entitled to and be at liberty to proceed further with the assessment process initiated by the notification issued on 3.1.1993, and

(7) The impugned rules issued in G.O.Ms.No.1178, Municipal Administration and Water Supply, dated 10.12.1987, published in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette (Extraordinary) dated 10.12.1987 are held valid, but their enforcement shall be subject to the declaration of law and directions given above in this order. [Para 26]

These writ petitions shall stand ordered in the manner and to the extent indicated above. In all other respects the relief claimed shall stand rejected. [Para 27]

ORDER: The petitioners in the above writ petitions have filed petitions, W.M.P.Nos.2213 to 2216 of 1993 for stay of all further proceedings for the levy and assessment of property tax under the provisions of Schedule IV of the Madras City Municipal Corporation Act, 1919, hereinafter referred to as the Act, as amended by the Rules in Schedule IV of the Act, hereinafter referred to as the Rules, in G.O.Ms.No.1178, Municipal Administration and Water Supply, dated 10.12.1987 on and from 1.4.1993 relating to the respective petitioner's property mentioned therein. Having regard to the nature of the issues raised and by consent of parties the main writ petitions themselves were heard at considerable length. Since the issues are also identical and common, they are disposed of together by this judgment.

2. Though different writ petitioners in respect of different items of property have filed the above writ petitions, the respective contentions are identical and similar and it would suffice to refer to the pleadings from one such writ petition. W.P.No.1421 of 1993 has been filed for a writ of declaration, declaring the provisions of the Amendment to Schedule IV of the Madras City Municipal Corporation Act IV of 1919 undo by the issuance of G.O.Ms.No.1178, dated 10.12.1987 relating to the levy and assessment of property tax in respect of property in the City of Madras on and from 1.4.1993 illegal, ultra vires the Rule making powers and violative of Arts.14 and 265 of the Constitution of India, in so far as it relates to the petitioner's property The petitioners have given the half-yearly property tax and cess hitherto paid on the annual value, which admittedly has been devoid under Sec.100 of the Act and the rules found in Schedule IV of the Act. Thereafter reference is also made to Secs.99 and 100 of the Act and Taxation rules contained in Schedule IV, with particular reference to Part I-A, which existed prior to the impugned amendment. While referring to the Notification issued by the second respondent and published in the daily newspapers The Hindu and The Indian Express under the caption 'revision of property tax' proposing revision with effect from 1.4.1993 of the property tax in Madras City based on returns to be furnished by the owners/occupiers, calling upon them to file the pro forma return to reach the office of the second respondent on or before 1.2.1993. Reference next has been made to G.O.Ms.No.1178, MAWS, dated 10.12.1987. The amended rules substitute Part I-A and Part V with a fresh set of rules for assessment of property tax and revision of assessment respectively as originally contained in the Act.

3. Rule 1-C in Part I-A enables the Commissioner to give publicity in local newspapers and otherwise require the owner or the occupier of any land or building, or a portion thereof to file a return within a period not exceeding one month from the date notified by the Commissioner in this behalf, containing the following particulars with regard to each assessable item, namely:

- (i) the name of the division and the street in which it is situated and the door number;
- (ii) description of the assessable item like number of storeys. plinth are in each storey and the extent of vacant land;
- (iii) the name of the owner;
- (iv) the name of the occupier;
- (v) the year in which the assessable item was last assessed and the amount of annual value fixed by the Commissioner;
- (vi) the amount of tax now being paid per half-year;
- (vii) whether the assessable item is used for residential or non-residential purpose;
- (viii) whether the assessable item is wholly rented or partly occupied by the owner and partly rented; and
- (ix) the amount received as rent or lease amount per year.

The rules also provide that if any person fails to file a return within the notified time, the Commissioner may authorise any person not below the rank of a Bill Collector to enter upon and make an inspection of the assessable item and prepare the return.

4. The Rules also empower the Commissioner to assess the property tax having regard to:

- (a) the annual value of the assessable item as on the 1st October, 1978;
- (b) the property tax payable by the owner or the occupier on the basis of the particulars filed in the return; and
- (c) the property tax payable by the owner or the occupier with reference to the guidelines, if any, issued by the Council.

Thereafter a property tax card, which shall contain all details relating to the assessable item and the amount of property tax payable shall be supplied to every owner or occupier, who has filed the return and that the Commissioner shall receive the property tax specified in the said property tax card and make necessary entry in the said card as well as in the assessment book maintained by the Corporation. Provisions have also been made for correction if any to be made in the property tax card either in pursuance of any revision in the property tax or an order passed in appeal against the order of the Commissioner and authenticated by the Commissioner or any officer authorised by him both in the property tax card as well as in the assessment book. The rules declare that the property tax card shall be valid until the assessment is revised during a general revision or earlier as the Government may direct in this behalf. The Commissioner is also empowered to make arrangements for the verification of the particulars furnished in the return filed by the owner or occupier of every assessable item immediately after a general revision and before the next general revision and if any discrepancy is noticed in the particulars furnished in the return filed by the owner or occupier, the Commissioner is empowered after giving a reasonable opportunity of being heard of the person concerned and after considering the objections, if any, to modify the assessment from the date on which the assessment was made and collect the arrears of tax.

5. The provisions contained in Part V relating to revision of assessment, as substituted under the impugned amendment, proclaims the existence of one or more Taxation Appeal Tribunal for hearing and disposing of appeal preferred by any person, who is not satisfied with the assessment order made by the Commissioner and that the Tribunal shall consist of a judicial officer not below the rank of a Sub Judge. Rule 13 as contained in the said Part V requires to be set out in detail since a substantial grievance has been made out against the provisions contained therein. It reads thus:

"No person who fails to file the return within the notified time under rule 1-C in Part I-A shall be entitled to appeal against any assessment order made by Commissioner."

Rule 14 provides that no appeal shall be entertained by the Tribunal unless the appellant deposits in the Corporation the existing tax and also fifty per cent of the difference between the existing tax and the tax as assessed by the Commissioner in the revision, and enables further that an appeal against the said decision of the Tribunal may also be filed within thirty days from the date of the order to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court. The procedure to be followed by the Tribunal is also set out in the other rules. So far as Part VI of the Schedule is concerned relating to the collection of taxes a new Rule 21-A has been inserted after Rule 21, which reads as hereunder:

"Notwithstanding anything contained in any rule in this part, it shall not be necessary for the Commissioner to serve any notice for the levy and collection of property tax under Sec.98."

6. The rules and the consequent Notification published by the second respondent are challenged as ex facie illegal and ultra vires the jurisdiction as well as the mandate contained in Arts.14 and 265 of the Constitution of India on the following grounds:

- (a) The rules and the notification which compels the owner or occupier to file returns on or before 1.2.1993 even before the date of commencement of the revision with effect from 1.4.1993 and the insufficiency of the time granted renders them arbitrary, unreasonable and opposed to the spirit of Sec.100(2) of the Act.
- (b) Under the provisions contained in Secs.99 and 100 of the Act, the levy of property tax could be on the annual value of the land and building as one unit and that judicial pronouncements of this Court as well as the Apex Court have firmly settled the principles relating to the determination of the annual value with reference to the reasonable or standard rate which a building may fetch under the Rent Control law and an open market rate than the standard or fair rent envisaged under the Rent Control law cannot be assumed as the basis. In substance, the plea is that the hypothetical rent cannot exceed the standard rent as per the Rent Control laws. Provisions of Rule 3 in Part I-A is said to be inconsistent with Sec.100(2) of

(c) The absence of any provision in the Amended Rules neither to make known to the assessee or providing for the assessee to object and to consider such objections is also said to be violative of Sec.100(2) of the Act and the principles of natural justice. In substance, the absence of a pre-decisional hearing of the assessee is said to confer an arbitrary and unguided power to assess in any manner or method without disclosing the same to the assessee.

(d) The absence of guidelines as contemplated under Rule 3(iii) as also the provision for issuing such guidelines is said to be bad in law for the reason that the rent reasonably expected is a matter for adjudication independently and cannot be fettered by any guidelines whatsoever.

(e) The provisions contained in Rule 13 depriving an assessee who failed to file a return, to file an appeal against the assessment made by the Commissioner is challenged as an arbitrary one and the absence or denial of appeal in such cases would constitute conferment of arbitrary and uncanalized power to make assessment on the Authority concerned. Rule 13 is also challenged as in excess of the rule making power and violative of Art.14 of the Constitution of India.

(f) The pro forma framed by the Commissioner and published in the notifications in the Press is not one framed under the Rules, and as a matter of fact, is without reference to and opposed to the rules themselves.

It is contended that in not providing for giving all relevant details and seeking for irrelevant details, the procedure including the form envisaged to be filed and observed for assessment is said to be arbitrary and whimsical.

7. The modality of assessing the appurtenant land as disclosed is also challenged and it is pleaded that an opportunity should be given to enable the assessee to give a computation of his own for determining the annual value of his building. The move of the second respondent to compel disclosure of materials, which are already available with the second respondent himself is challenged to be arbitrary, besides expressing an apprehension with reference to the details sought for in the pro forma as leading to a reasonable presumption that the assessment is going to be on the plinth area in derogation of the Scheme of taxation underlying Sec.100, which should be only on the annual value.

8. The second respondent has filed a detailed counter-affidavit. It is contended therein that the writ petitions are premature as well as misconceived. It is contended that the rules have come into force as early as on 1.4.1988 and the challenge at this stage is belated. While pleading that the population of the Madras city is 40 lakhs as per the latest census and comparatively the per capita property tax collection is the lowest among Bombay, Delhi, Bangalore and Hyderabad City Corporations. It is contended that there is every need to augment the revenue from this source of property tax to keep pace and also meet the alarming increase in the demand for provision of basic amenities to cope up with the increase in population and it is said to be causing considerable financial strain to the Corporation. It is also stated that the last revision of the property tax was during the years 1978-79 and there is every justification and need for revision as visualised and the challenge now made is unjust and unsustainable. While denying the assumption of the petitioners that the revision of the tax is not going to be on the annual value principle, it is declared that the second respondent is going to determine the annual value only as per Sec.100 of the Act and bearing in mind the principles laid down by the various decision of this Court and that of the Apex Court and the details called for in the pro forma are relevant for the purpose of ascertaining the reasonably expected rent and that the apprehension to the contrary has no basis either on facts or in law.

9. The second respondent also states that the time granted is sufficient in law and that the demand to file returns before 1.2.1993 does not offend either Sec.100(2) or Sec.104 of the Act, and that as a matter of fact the liability to pay tax arises in terms of Sec.104 within 15 days after the commencement of the half year and there is nothing wrong in the Corporation in trying to get the relevant details in advance to make the assessment on the commencement of the half year on 1.4.1993. It is contended that the rules made do not provide for a pre-decisional hearing before assessing the annual value and the grievance in this regard has no legal basis. It is stated that even before the amendment effected by the impugned rules, there was no scope for any such hearing and at any rate the Act does not provide for any pre-decisional hearing. While denying that the rules confer any arbitrary or uncanalized or unguided power, it is stated that there is sufficient safeguard in the form of an appeal and also by a further appeal to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court.

10. The second respondent also states that guidelines contemplated under Rule 3(iii) is not a must and that as it is there are no such guidelines issued by the Council and that the tax will be assessed on the basis of the principles enshrined in Sec.100 of the Act. The plea that the assessment procedure is a quasi judicial one is denied. The second respondent also seeks to justify the denial of a right of appeal to a person, who has not submitted a return in time on the ground that no one has an inherent or a fundamental right of appeal and that no exception could be taken to the said provision. It is also contended that the particulars called for in the pro forma are relevant and necessary for properly assessing the annual rental value as laid down in Sec.100 of the Act and that the assessment is going to be really on the basis of reasonable letting value as visualised under Secs.99 and 100 of the Act by limiting the same to the standard fair rent. While stating that the second respondent will be guided by the particulars furnished in assessing the property tax in terms of Secs.99 and 100 of the Act, it is pleaded that there is an opportunity to be heard by the Commissioner or his representative though it is not clearly spelt out in what form and what stage and it is also open to the assessee to file an appeal to the Tribunal and thereafter to the court as envisaged and that the calling for the particulars under the impugned notification in the pro forma cannot be said to be either unreasonable or arbitrary. While contending that the main source of revenue of the Corporation is the property tax, it is pleaded that any stay of assessment or recovery would dislocate the execution of several works of public importance, besides creating a stalemate in the administration of the affairs of the Local Body. It is also assured that the statement of the assessee given in the pro forma would be got verified with the available records maintained by the Corporation and that no exception could be taken to the notification calling upon the filing of the pro forma return.

11. The learned Special Government Pleader appearing for the first respondent while adopting the submissions of the learned counsel for the second respondent, contended that the impugned rules have been made by the state in exercise of the powers conferred under Sec.347(3) of the Act, that the draft of the amended rules has been approved by the Tamil Nadu Legislative Assembly as required by Sub-sec.(5) of Sec.347 and consequently the plea of arbitrariness or unreasonableness or want of jurisdiction is only misconceived and without basis. Argued the learned Special Government Pleader further that the amendments have been devised to keep in conformity with the current requirements and that the Scheme underlying the rules would, on an overall consideration, would prove to be not only just and reasonable but help effectively to ensure a proper implementation of the provisions contained in the chapter relating to the assessment and recovery of property tax under the Act. It has also been contended that the notification issued by the second respondent is quite in conformity with the procedure envisaged by the amended rules and that no exception whatsoever could be taken to the legality or the propriety of the amendments made.

12. Mr.K.C.Rajappa, learned counsel appearing for the petitioners, while Mr.N.R.Chandran, Senior Counsel assisted by Mr.N.Kannadasan appeared for the second respondent and Mr.P.Sathasivam, learned Special Government Pleader appeared for the State (1st respondent). The learned counsel reiterated their respective submissions made in the pleadings as referred to supra. Reference to some of the decisions of courts, both of this Court and the Apex Court, relied upon by the learned counsel, may be made at this stage, before considering their respective tenability of their respective submissions.

13. The decision in State of Andhra Pradesh v. Raja Reddy, (1968)1 M.L.J. (S.C.) 6: (1968)2 S.C.J. 857: (1967)21 T.J. 777: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1458, has been relied upon to contend that absolute discretion cannot be arbitrarily left to the officers and the absence of proper machinery, opportunity and right of appeal renders the very levy unconstitutional. That was a case involving the constitutional validity of Andhra Pradesh Land Revenue (Additional Assessment) and Cess Revision Act as amended by the Amending Act 23 of 1962. The Apex Court was of the view, on the provisions contained therein that the whole imposition of assessment was left to the arbitrary discretion of the officers not even named in the Act and that too without giving any remedy whatsoever to the assessee for questioning the correctness of any of the important stages in the matter of assessment, and that therefore the levy was held to be violative of Art.14 of the Constitution of India. In coming to such a conclusion, the Apex Court applied their earlier decisions, holding that taxation law is not an exception to the doctrine of equality enshrined in Art.14 of the Constitution of India, though in the application of the principles underlying the same the courts, in view of the inherent complexity of fiscal adjustment of diverse elements, permit a larger discretion to the Legislature so that it can adjust its system of taxation in all proper and reasonable ways. The learned counsel next relied upon a decision of this Court in Dalavai v. Government of Tamil Nadu, (1978)1 M.L.J. 93: 91 L.W. 110. The said decision directly concerned the determination of valuation of property, the principles governing such determination and the procedural safeguards to be secured to an assessee to make the assessment and levy in conformity with law. The learned Judge (Ramanujam, J.), while declaring after noticing the decisions of the Apex Court that the property tax cannot be levied under Sec.100 of the Act on the plinth area basis, but has got to be determined on the annual valuation of property, with particular reference to the rent the premises can lawfully fetch if the premises is let out to hypothetical tenant for a fair rent that may be payable under the Rent Control Act in force during the year of assessment, categorically held that the Assessing Authority is not free to assess the tax on any arbitrary annual value. It has been reiterated that even in cases where the rent actually collected by the landlords are higher than the standard/fair rent permissible under the Rent Control Act, the assessment could not be made on the basis of the actual rent received by the landlord, but on the other hand, has to be only by the fair rent, which alone the landlord is entitled to collect legally from the tenants. While analysing the Scheme underlying the assessment and revision rules, which have been substituted by the impugned amendment, it has been held in the said decision as hereunder:

“This leads us to the fourth contention set out above. It has been pointed out that before finalising the assessment list an opportunity must be given to the assessment to object to the enhanced valuation. The petitioner’s complaint is that in all the special notices issued before finalising the assessment list, how the annual value has been ascertained has not been stated and that, therefore the assessee is handicapped in putting forward their objections to the basis and the mode of fixing the annual value. I am inclined to agree with the contention of the petitioner that the mere mention of the annual value, as determined by the assessor in the special notice, is not sufficient and that the details as to how that valuation was arrived at are necessary to put the assessee on notice of the basis, and the mode of fixing the annual value so as to enable him to file objections to the proposed increase. Sec.100 of the Madras City Municipal Corporation Act, 1919, enables the property tax being levied on the gross annual rent at which they may reasonably be expected to let at the time of assessment less a deduction, in the case of buildings, of ten per cent of such annual rent which is attributable to the buildings alone, in lieu of all allowance for repairs, etc. Schedule IV of the Act sets out the rules governing the levy and assessment of property tax. Rule 1-C directs the Commissioner to enter the annual value of all lands and buildings and the tax payable thereon in the assessment books. Rule 1-D enables a general revision of the assessment books by the Commissioner once in every five years. Rule 1-E says that an assessment once made shall continue in force until it is revised and until the revised assessment takes effect. Rule 2 says that when assessment books have been prepared for the first time and whenever a general revision of such books has been completed, the Commissioner shall give public notice specifying the time when and the place where the books may be inspected and stating that revision petitions will be considered if they are preferred within 15 days from the date of such notice. The proviso to rule 2 specifically says that in every case where there is an enhancement in the assessment the Commissioner shall also cause intimation thereof to be given by a special notice to be served on the owner or occupier of the property concerned. Rule 3 says that the Commissioner may after giving notice to the parties concerned and after hearing their objections, if any, amend the property tax assessment books at any time between one general revision and another, by altering the valuation of any property or the amount of tax. The proviso to Rule 2 clearly indicates that wherever there is an enhancement in the assessment, a special notice is to be served on the owner or occupier of the property concerned. The special notice contemplated by the proviso is intended to give an opportunity to the owner or occupier of the property to put forward his objections to the enhancement in the assessment. The owner or occupier can put forward his objections only if he knows why there has been enhancement in the assessment. Therefore, the special notice should necessarily contain the basis for enhancement of the assessment so that the assessee may be able to object to the enhancement of the assessment. Thus, there is considerable force in the contention of the petitioner that the special notices issued by the second respondent should contain the reasons for the enhancement of the assessment and unless the reasons are given, the assessee may not be able to put forward any effective objections to the said enhancement.

The petitioner has produced a bundle of photostat copies of the special notices served on some of the assessment in some of the Corporation Divisions. In all these special notices, the old annual value before the revision and the new annual value after the revisions have alone been mentioned and the reason for enhancement has not been given. The assessee on receipt of such special notices cannot be expected to know as to whether the enhancement may be due to (1) rental difference noticed during the course of inspection of the property by the assessing officers, (2) additions of alterations in the existing building, or (3) construction of a new building. Unless the assessee is told as to what is the reason for the enhancement in the assessment, he may not know on what ground the enhancement has been made. In such cases, he may not be able to put forward his objections specifically and effectively. It is, therefore, clear that the special notices should give reasons for enhancement."

While referring to the decision in Commissioner of Income-tax v. Balakrishna Malhotra, 81 I.T.R. 759, the learned counsel submitted that the word

'assessment' takes within it not only the mere computation of the income, but also the determination of the tax and consequently there should be a pre-decisional hearing. While relying upon Sales Tax Officer v. Abraham, (1967) 20 S.T.C. 367, a case arising under the Central Sales Tax, the learned counsel for the petitioners submitted that the expression 'in the prescribed manner' cannot confer on the rule making authority the power to prescribe a rule of limitation. The decision in Bharat Barrel Company v. Employees' State Insurance Corporation, A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1935: 41 F.J.R. 481: (1972) 1 Lab.L.J. 854: 1972 Lab.I.C. 1074, was also relied upon for the same purpose. While adverting to the phraseology employed in Rule 1(C)(1) and comparing the same with Sec.22(1) of the Income Tax Act, 1922, the learned counsel submitted that individual notices also are necessary in addition to the public notification.

14. Mr.N.R.Chandran, learned Senior Counsel, relied upon the decision in Murugesan v. Collector of North Arcot, (1966) 2 M.L.J. 290 and contended that the assessment would not be without jurisdiction merely because no guidelines have been prescribed by the Council. The decision relied upon was one rendered under the Tamil Nadu Panchayats Act, challenging the division of wards for the conduct of elections to the Panchayats in the State. The Division Bench held that the division of the Panchayat into wards by the Inspector under Sec.16 of the Act would not be without jurisdiction merely because no rules prescribing the scales in accordance with which the division to be effected or formulated by the Government as provided by the later part of Sec.16 of the Panchayats Act. The decision in R.Valliammal v. Commissioner, H.R. & C.E., Madras, (1975) 2 M.L.J. (NRC.) 7, was rendered under the Tamil Nadu Hindu Religion and Charitable Endowments Act, 1959. While construing the expression 'subject to such conditions as may be prescribed in Sec.45 of the Act, the Division Bench held that is only meant that if and when any conditions are prescribed, the power of appointment of an Executive Officer can be exercised only subject to those conditions, and the provisions cannot be construed to mean that the power is not available if no conditions have been prescribed.

15. After a careful consideration of the respective submissions of the learned counsel appearing on either side, I am of the view that the apprehension of the petitioners that the proposed revision of the property tax is sought to be made on the basis of the plinth area and not really on the annual value has no basis in law or otherwise. Apart from the candid admissions made by the second respondent in the counter affidavit filed it is by now well settled by catena of decisions of this Court and that of the Apex Court that the rateable value of a building whether tenanted or self-occupied is limited by the measure of standard rent arrived at by the Assessing Authority by applying the principles laid down in the Rent Act and cannot exceed the figure of the standard rent so arrived at though in a given case, it may be lower than such standard rent. It has been held and the law as beyond controversy that within the upper limit of the rateable value of the premises so fixed the Assessing Authority would have to determine the reasonable rent by evaluating factors such as size, situation, locality and condition of the premises and the amenities thereon provided. Devan Dauler Rai Kapur v. New Delhi Municipality, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 541, Dr.Balbir Singh v. Municipal Corporation of Delhi, A.I.R. 1985 S.C. 339, Dalavai v. Government of Tamil Nadu, (1978) 1 M.L.J. 93: 91 L.W. 110. Thus it has been held that annual value cannot exceed the standard rent and even landlord actually receiving higher rent in an individual case matters very little for determination of the annual value for levying and collecting property tax.

16. The next aspect that requires to be considered is the legality of the pro forma prescribed by the second respondent and the propriety of the demand made by filing the return within the stipulated time on threat of sufferance of certain disabilities. There is no dispute that the proforma return, as such has not been prescribed by the State Government or that any specific authorisation of the second respondent is so made to formulate any such form. But the question would be as to whether the absence of such enabling power undermines the efficacy of the form published. The rules contained 1-C(1) prescribes the particulars that should be furnished by the owner/occupier and the period within which such form should be filed by those liable. In the light of such prescription made, the fact that a format has been devised by the second respondent for the convenience of an owner/occupier or does not militate against its efficiency merely because the format of the return itself has not been so prescribed under rules. The plea on behalf of the petitioners that no time limit or period of limitation as such could have been prescribed under the rules in the absence of specific conferment of power in this regard and the reliance placed upon two decisions of the Apex Court are incorrect and inappropriate. Unlike the ordinary rule making power that was the subject matter of consideration in the decisions of the Apex Court relied upon for the petitioners, the rules in question though made by the State Government are made after two drafts of the same is moved and placed before the Legislature and specifically approved by the State Legislature as required under Sec.347(5) of the Act. That apart, it is a well accepted principle of statutory construction that the rules in the Schedule to the Act are as much part and parcel of the statutes itself and the infirmity alleged cannot be said to exist in such cases so as to affect the legality and validity of the notification prescribing the time limit within which the return visualised has to be filed and the relevant particulars are furnished to facilitate a time bound finalisation of the assessment proceedings to ensure the effective collection of the tax due to the second respondent to carry out their duties and obligation under the statute.

17. The learned counsel for the petitioners made a grievance of the notification of the second respondent and the procedure for assessment, by drawing inspiration from the meaning or purport of the 'return' and 'assessment' from the other taxation laws and contending that the provisions of the impugned rules do not conform to those well accepted concepts of definite import and object in a law of taxation. The learned Senior Counsel appearing for the second respondent contended that there can be no analogy or comparison as is sought to be made by the learned counsel for the petitioners and that the object of calling upon the owners/occupiers to file the returns is to make the details sought in the proforma conveniently available for verification, processing and ultimate assessment only in terms of the statutory formula, standard and principles underlying Sec.100 of the Act and already declared by this Court and the Apex Court. The notification also states that if no return was filed within the notified time, the Corporation will suo motu revise the assessment of the property and the owner of the property shall not be entitled to file an appeal against such assessment, as per the act.

The legality or otherwise of the provision disabling on assessee who has not filed his return from filing an appeal will be separately dealt with and need not concern the consideration of this stage. A reading of the Rule 1-C(1) of Part 1-A would go to show that the return envisaged thereunder is not of the conventional nature as prescribed in the other taxation laws. Apart from the non-prescription of the form as such the rules contemplate a return containing certain details and information which have been stipulated by the rules themselves. Rule 2 provides also that in case of default in the filing of the return within the notified time the preparation of the return by a person authorised by the Commissioner by entering upon and making an inspection of the assessable item. As a matter of fact, the explanatory note appended to the motion of the draft rules submitted before the Legislature under Sec.47(3) of the Act, also refers to the object and purpose of the return in the following terms: "The assessment of property tax is now made by inspecting the buildings and with reference to the oral information furnished by the occupants of the buildings or lands without reference to any written records. Therefore, the present method of assessment of property tax has led to public criticism. In Bombay and Calcutta Corporations, the assessment is based on the returns filed by the owners or occupiers of the buildings or lands. It has, therefore, been considered that the assessment of property tax may be made based on the returns filed by the owners or occupiers of the buildings or lands."

18. Therefore, it could be seen that the object of the rules itself is to allow participation of the owner/occupier in the very process of assessment/revision by enabling him to disclose certain relevant details relating to the assessable item, in his own interest and even in cases of default cause such details to be ascertained by the inspection assessable item by a person authorised to facilitate assessment/revision. Even under the old rates for assessment/revision the ultimate burden to make the assessment/revision was that of the authorities and the introduction of the system of filing of a return, does not in my view make any change in this regard, except that it extends an extent of participation in the process by the owner/occupier himself of the property concerned. Consequently, the second respondent cannot also be said to be exonerated or relieved of his duties and obligations to cause a due verification of the relevant details relating to the assessable item before proceeding to assess/revise the tax liability of an assessee, in accordance with the well-settled principles relating to the levy and collection of property tax under the Act. Merely because the owner/occupier fails to file a return as envisaged, the second respondent cannot arbitrarily or whimsically assess/revise the liability in any manner he thinks. The process of assessment/revision of the liability continues to be objective and not rendered subjective merely on account of any default in filing the return, by an owner/occupier. So far as the assessment to be made is concerned, the learned counsel for the petitioners also expressed the grievance about the provisions contained in Rule 3 of the Rules. It is a well accepted principle of law that the phraseology "having regard to" do not mean having regard to only those mentioned and that the authority could not take into account other relevant, vital or necessary materials or particulars or that such materials not specified are excluded from consideration. Likewise, the absence of guidelines issued by the council or even the existence of guidelines do not affect the exercise of power of assessment/revision objectively taking into account only the provisions in the Act, rules and the law declared by courts. The guidelines, if any, could only fill up any gaps or at any rate, serve as guidelines and cannot either override the law or have any binding effect so as to fetter or freeze the exercise of discretion and discharge of powers and duties objectively and independently. I find nothing wrong in the Commissioner being enjoined to have regard to the annual value of the assessable item as on 1st October, 1978, since that was the last of the general revisions made, for purpose of further revision now contemplated. The relevance of the existing assessment for further revision cannot totally be ruled out and no basic or legal infirmity can be said to affect the exercise made by the Commissioner, which as referred to supra, has to be only in accordance with Sec.100 of the Act and the law already declared by the decisions of this Court, keeping in view to the extent possible and permissible, the rules in question.

19. The learned counsel for the petitioners further challenges the provisions contained in Rule 13 in Part V of the IV Schedule that no person, who fails to file the return within the notified time under Rule 1-C in Part I-A shall be entitled to appeal against any assessment order made by the Commissioner. The learned counsel for the respondents tried to justify the provision as containing a sanction for compelling the owners/occupiers to file a return and that at any rate, there was nothing wrong in a defaulter being denied of a further right of appeal. I am unable to countenance the stand taken for the respondents in this regard. The right of appeal, no doubt, is a creature of the law and the absence of any provision for an appeal or revision against a decision, in the context of modern development of law is viewed as a serious infirmity, particularly in view of the fundamental principle of rule of law enshrined under Art.14 of the Constitution of India. So far as the case on hand, there is no controversy that a right of appeal to the Taxation Appeal Tribunal and a further appeal to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court have been provided for. The question is whether the said right of appeal could be denied to an owner/occupier merely because he failed to file the return envisaged under Rule 1-C(1) of Part I-A of the IV Schedule. The failure on the part of the owner/occupier to file the return disclosing the details sought, as held already by me, does not absolve the second respondent of his obligation and duty to verify about those details relating to the assessable item or the obligation cast upon him to act objectively and reasonably while exercising his powers of assessment/revision. Consequently, no immunity from challenge could be afforded to an assessment/revision made by the second respondent even in such cases and there is no rhyme or reason in Rule 13. In a taxing law, normally orders passed ex parte or to the best of judgment due to the non-cooperation of the assessee in completing the assessment process, are also made subject to a right of appeal and or revision and the stipulation contained in Rule 13 not only sounds illogical, arbitrary and unreasonable, but smacks of draconian devilry and cannot be said to be justifiable for any good reason or on sound principle of law or logic. An owner/occupier, who has failed to file a return, called for, is as much entitled to file an appeal as one who has filed a return. Consequently, Rule 13 of the Part V of the IV Schedule to the Act is struck down as arbitrary, unreasonable and violative of Art.14 of the Constitution of India and declared null and void.

20. The further serious challenge made by the learned counsel for the petitioners is about the absence or denial of any pre-decisional opportunity or hearing before completing the process of assessment/revision. Even under the old and substituted rules when the assessment books have been prepared for the first time and whenever a general revision of such books has been completed, the Commissioner had to give a public notice specifying the time when and the place where the books may be inspected and stating that revision petitions will be considered if preferred within 15 days from the date of such notice and the rules also provided that in cases of enhancement in the assessment, a special notice shall issue to the owner/occupier and only after hearing the said person shall amend the assessment books. This Court in the decision reported in Dalvai v. Government of Tamil Nadu, (1978) 1 M.L.J. 93: 91 L.W. 110, has held that such notice of enhancement should disclose the reasons or basis for such enhancement to enable the assessee to put forward any effective objections to the same. But, the new rules, apparently for the reason that the assessment invariably would be made on the return filed provides for an assessment/revision without any such opportunity. Rule 6 provides for such an opportunity only in cases where the Commissioner, on verification made of the particulars in the return after a general revision and before the next general revision seeks to modify the assessment already made from the date on which the assessment was made, and not otherwise. No doubt, there is an appeal to the Taxation Appeal Tribunal and a further appeal to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court. A careful analysis of the rules under challenge disclose the following:

- (a) After the stage of filing the return or ascertaining particulars in the absence of any such return, the Commissioner assess the property tax or revise the existing assessment of the property to tax;
- (b) There is no provision for pre-decisional hearing or making representation as against the proposal of the Commissioner for revision and enhancement;
- (c) No provisions exist for communicating the order passed or disclosing the reasons or basis for the enhancement of the levy or for assessment/revision;
- (d) Only the supply of a property tax card, with details mentioned therein, and that too to only those who filed the return, is contemplated;

(e) Provision has been made for filing an appeal to the Taxation Appeal Committee and a further appeal to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court. The appeal to the Tribunal cannot be entertained unless the appellant deposits in the Corporation the existing tax and also fifty per cent of the difference between the existing tax and the tax as assessed by the Commissioner, in the revision.

21. The above grievances expressed by the petitioners have got to be considered in the light of those inevitable consequences flowing from the rules under challenge. It is by now well-settled that rules of natural justice or the principle of audi alteram partem are not rigid rules, but they are not only flexible, but their application depends upon the setting and background of statutory provisions, nature of the right which may be affected and the consequences which may entail its application or non-application. It is also well-settled that the application of those uncodified rules can be excluded by express provision or by implication, of course subject to the rights of this Court and the other competent authorities to adjudicate on the constitutionality of doing so. Wherever the law contemplates by making a suitable provision for a post decisional hearing amounting to a full review of the original order on merits, it can be construed as an exclusion of the audi alteram partem principle and if the law is silent with regard to the giving of a pre-decisional hearing to the person affected and the decision taken by the authority involves civil consequences and no full review or appeal on merits against the decision is provided. Courts would hesitate to construe an exclusion of the duty to afford a hearing or opportunity unless viewed pragmatically it would paralyse the administrative process or frustrate the need for utmost promptitude. The courts of law have been enjoined to always make every effort to salvage the cardinal rule of audi alteram partem to the maximum extent possible with situation modifications and ensure as far as possible that the person affected has a reasonable opportunity of hearing or showing cause against the proposed action against him. (Vide: Swadeshi Cotton Mills v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 818: (1981) 1 S.C.C. 664: 51 C.C. 210: 58 F.J.R. 190: (1981) 2 S.C.R. 533).

22. So far as the cases on hand are concerned, there can be no two views on the claim of the Corporation that a revision of the property tax is long overdue and imminent, having regard to the fact that the last general revision was only in 1978 and the further facts that not only there had been a steep rise in the annual value, but substantial increase in the commitments of the Corporation to provide basic amenities and that the increase in the cost of providing such amenities to the residents also warrant and justify such a revision. The justification of the end alone cannot justify the adoption of any means or procedure, ignoring completely the prejudice that may be caused to the citizen. Rule 3 obliging the Commissioner to assess the property tax and forming part of Part 1-A relating to assessment of property tax does not exclude the principles of natural justice. Unlike the earlier set of rules there was no opportunity given to make representations by means of a revision to the Commissioner before actually amending or revising or enhancing the assessment and enforcing the same. The rules are silent about giving of any reasons or disclosing the basis of enhancement either before or immediately thereafter by serving any order or proceeding except supplying a property tax card, apparently containing the details relating to property, annual value fixed and the property tax assessed to be paid. In the absence of any of those details or disclosure of the basis or reasons for enhancement, it would not hold the assessee to effectively even vindicate his rights in the appeal provided for and formulate the grounds on which the enhancement can be challenged. As a matter of fact, prior to the impugned amendments and even under the earlier rules when an occasion like this arose, this Court in the decision in Dalavai v. Government of Tamil Nadu, (1978) 1 M.L.J. 93: 91 L.W. 110, pointed out all these and emphasised the need for disclosing the basis and reasons for enhancement. The Legislature has not and could not be said to have nullified or altered the said position of law by the impugned amendments, particularly in the absence of specific rule or provision to the contra. The insertion of Rule 21-A to the extent that notwithstanding anything contained in any rule "in this part", it shall not be necessary for the Commissioner to serve any notice for the levy and collection of property tax under Sec.98 cannot have the effect of dispensing with the requirements of principles of natural justice at the stage of assessment/revision and enhancement of the levy by the Commissioner. This is obvious from the fact that Rule 21-A has been inserted in Part VI relating to collection of taxes and the rule is also meant to be a non obstante clause in respect of anything contained to the contra or in any rule in Part VI and not the other parts of the IV Schedule particularly Part I-A.

23. In the light of the above principles and context of the rules under consideration and their purport and object, it has to be considered whether there is any justification for excluding the principles of natural justice at the earlier stage. There can be no serious controversy over the position that the assessment, levy and collection of tax involve civil consequences. The rules relating to assessment are also silent on the exclusion of the principles of natural justice at the stage of assessment or revision as the case may be. While so, merely from the fact that after an assessment or revision, there is a provision for appeal, particularly when the rules do not cast an obligation on the Commissioner to write an order with reasons and communicate them to the assessee, for enabling the assessee to effectively challenge the assessment or enhancement of the tax made. The long lapse of time between the present revision proposed and the earlier general revision in 1978 or the justification or imminent need for a general revision is no ground to jettison the application of rules of fair play. Instead suitable directions may and have to be issued to adjust and harmonise the need for speed and also the obligation to set fairly and modify the measure of its application in reasonable proportion to the exigencies of the situation. The assessment and communication of the demand either in the form of a notice or the property tax card or both need not necessarily be in the beginning or the first day of the commencement of the half year and it may be either in the course of the first half year or by the close of the succeeding half year concerned (Vide Rule 20(3)). This would be in conformity with the mandate of Sec.100(2) of the Act that the annual value of lands and buildings shall be deemed to be the gross annual rent at which they may 'at the time of assessment' reasonably be expected and inevitably the assessment is an event to follow the date of commencement of the half year concerned. In view of the above the second respondent, in my view, would not suffer any damage or injury by being directed to adhere to the principles of natural justice to the required possible extent. Consequently, though there is no justification to stall the assessment process set in motion by the issue of the impugned notification under the rules under challenge, it is necessary, in my view, for the second respondent to serve a provisional notice containing the proposed revision and the reasons or basis for the enhancement before passing final orders under Rule 3 and give the assessee at least a period of 15 days time to submit the objections of the assessee and consider them before passing final orders of assessment/revision under the Rules, though not a personal hearing at that stage. This procedure shall be adopted in respect of all assessees irrespective of the fact whether they filed a return or not, as called for under the impugned notification. The adoption of the said course would be in the best interests of both parties before this Court.

24. Many of the other grievances expressed at the time of hearing appear to be hypothetical and premature and in anticipation of some untoward action being taken. In the light of the safeguard now provided by me, there would be no scope for such apprehensions and if in any case any injustice is meted out, there is sufficient safeguard in the form of an appeal to the Tribunal initially and thereafter to the Principal Judge, City Civil Court. The conclusions of mine and directions shall enure to the benefit of all assessees, irrespective of whether any one has filed any writ petition or not in this Court or filed any return within the time stipulated or not, so far.

25. The plea raised by the respondents on the ground of laches has no merit, since the petitioners have come immediately when the rules were sought to be enforced against them. The plea that the writ petitions are premature also does not merit acceptance since the very constitutional validity of the rules themselves are being challenged.

26. For all these reasons stated above, I would summarise my conclusions and directions in the matter, as hereunder:

(i) The assessment/revision of the property tax shall be only in accordance with Sec.100 of the Act on the annual value to be ascertained and determined on the principles laid down in Devan Daulet Rai Kapur v. New Delhi Municipality, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 541, Dr. Balbir

Singh v. Municipal Corporation of Delhi, A.I.R. 1985 S.C. 339 and Dalavai v. Government of Tamil Nadu, (1978) 1 M.L.J. 93: 91 L.W. 110, as also conceded by the second respondent.

(ii) The owners/occupiers liable to submit their returns shall have further time to do so till 28th February, 1993, and the returns may be either in the same format or any other form, but must contain all the relevant details and information stipulated in the format and rules or such further or other details relevant for the purpose.

(iii) On receipt of the said returns and even where there are no returns filed, the Commissioner shall be at liberty to proceed further with the assessment process by serving a provisional notice of enhancement whenever there is any with the reasons for the enhancement, giving at least 15 days time to enable the assessee to file their representations against the proposal, consider the said objections and pass final orders, amending the books of assessment.

(iv) The assessment so made shall be effective from the first half year of 1993-94 (with effect from 1-4-1993) as notified, subject to the provisions governing revision and appeals.

(v) The provisions of Rule 13 is struck down as arbitrary unreasonable and violative of Art.14 of the Constitution of India and consequently null and void. The assessees shall be entitled to file an appeal or submit their representations irrespective of the fact whether they have actually filed their returns or not.

(vi) Subject to the above declaration and directions, the respondents shall be entitled to and be at liberty to proceed further with the assessment process initiated by the notification issued on 3.1.1993, and

(vii) The impugned rules issued in G.O.Ms.No.1178, Municipal Administration and Water Supply, dated 10.12.1987, published in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette (Extraordinary), dated 10.12.1987 are held valid, but their enforcement shall be subject to the declaration of law and directions given above in this order.

27. These writ petitions shall stand ordered in the manner and to the extent indicated above. In all other respects, the relief claimed shall stand rejected. But, in the circumstances of the case, there shall be no order as to costs.

Present:- Abdul Hadi, J.

S.A.No.735 of 1982 27th November, 1992.

A.Sankaralingam ...Appellant
v.

Arunachala Reddiar and others ...Respondents.

(A) Evidence Act (I of 1872), Sec.67 - Mode of proof of document - Objection as to - When should be taken.

It has been held that the objection regarding the mode of proof of a document has to be taken at the time when it is being exhibited and not at a later stage. [Para 5]

(B) Evidence Act (I of 1872), Sec.67 - Piece of evidence not proved in proper manner admitted without objection - If can be challenged at a later stage.

Where a piece of evidence even assuming not proved in the proper manner has been admitted without objection, it is not open to the opposite party to challenge it at a later stage of litigation. [Para 5]

(C) Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (XXVI of 1948), Sec.3(b) - All natham properties whether Government or Panchayat properties.

There is no law saying that all natham properties are Government or Panchayat properties. The decision in Rengaraja Iyengar v. Achukannu Ammal, (1959) 2 M.L.J. 513, is that Gramanatham does not stand vested in the Government under Sec.3(b) of the Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (XXVI of 1948). Thus, at any rate, it cannot be said automatically that all natham properties are Government properties. [Para 7]

(D) Pleadings - Plea not put forward - Evidence on, if can be looked into.

The fundamental principle is that no amount of evidence can be looked into on a plea which was never put forward. [Para 9]

S.V.Jayaraman, for Appellant.

N.V.Balasubramaniam, for Respondent.

The Court delivered the following
JUDGMENT: The plaintiff is the appellant in this second Appeal. The suit is for declaration of his title to the suit property and for consequential injunction or in the alternative for possession. The suit property is a vacant site measuring east to west 10 yards and south to north 23 yards and comprised in S.No.183/1 (part) in Vellur village natham. The plaintiff claimed it under Ex.A-6 sale deed dated 27.3.1978 and according to him, his vendor Gopalakrishnan got the said property under a registered settlement deed dated 22.1.1947, the registration copy of which is Ex.A-3, from one Thirumalaiammal. The plaintiff also sought title by adverse possession alternatively. On the other hand, the claim of the defendant/respondents is that the property being a natham property, vested with the Government and defendants were alone in possession of the property. Further, according to the defendants, the alleged settlement by Thirumalai Ammal could not be true and neither Thirumalaiammal, nor Gopalakrishnan was in possession of the suit property and that the alleged sale in favour of the plaintiff was also invalid.

2. The trial court decreed the suit for declaration on the basis of the abovesaid title deeds Ex.A-3 and A-6 and holding that the defendants were in possession of the suit property on the date of suit, granted decree for possession. But, on appeal, the first appellate court has dismissed the suit and allowed the appeal on the ground that the plaintiff has not proved the abovesaid Ex.A-3 document, he having not examined any attesor to the said document. The lower appellate court also held that since Ex.A-3 is only a registration copy of the original deed, Sec.90 of the Evidence Act would not come to the rescue of the plaintiff, on the footing that the document in question was more than 30 years old. Further, while the trial court has held that item No.19 in Ex.A-3 is the suit property, the lower appellate court has reversed that finding by saying that in item 19 in Ex.A-3, the western boundary is described as Perumal Iyengar's vacant site and the eastern boundary is described as Yoganandasami madam, but that "the abovesaid boundary is not in existence now". On that reasoning, the lower appellate court has held that the property described as item No.19 of Ex.A-3, does not relate to the suit property.

3. Aggrieved by the said decision of the first appellate court, the plaintiff has preferred this second appeal. The learned counsel for the appellant argues that the lower appellate court erred in holding that Ex.A-3 has not been proved since no attesor therein has been examined. According to him, there is no specific denial by the defendants regarding the execution of Ex.A-3. All that has been pleaded in the written statement regarding Ex.A-3 is only as follows:

"The further contention that Thirumalai Ammal executed a registered settlement deed in favour of one Gopalakrishna Iyer on 22.1.1947 cannot be true. The plaintiff should prove the truth and validity of the alleged Settlement Deed dated 22.1.1947. The Settlement deed even if true cannot convey any title in favour of the Donee as the donor herself had no title, right, or interest in the suit property."

According to the said counsel, in view of this pleading, there is no scope for the application of Sec.68 of the Evidence Act. Sec.68 of the Evidence Act runs as follows:

"68. Proof of Execution of Document Required by Law to be attested. If a document is required by law to be attested, it shall not be used as evidence until one attesting witness at least has been called for the purpose of proving its execution, if there be an attesting witness alive and subject to the process of the court and capable of giving evidence:

Provided that it shall not be necessary to call an attesting witness in proof of the execution of any document, not being a will, which has been registered in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Registration Act, 1908 (16 of 1908), unless its execution by the person by whom it purports to have been executed is specifically denied."

According to the learned counsel, since there is no specific denial of the execution of Ex.A-3, it is not necessary to call an attesting witness in proof of the execution of Ex.A-3 registered settlement deed. On the other hand, the learned counsel for the respondents argues that there is a specific denial of the execution of Ex.A-3 and hence one attesor at least has to be necessarily examined.

3A. I shall first consider the rival submissions on the abovesaid point. The learned counsel for the appellant has not cited any authority regarding the term "Specifically denied" used in the proviso to Sec.68. However, since it has been pleaded that the execution of the abovesaid settlement deed cannot be true, it has to be taken that the execution of the said document has been specifically denied. In fact, I find that in Ghansilal v. Bhuridevi, A.I.R. 1964 Raj. 39, relying on Surendra Bahadur v. Behari Singh, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 762: 181 I.C. 216: 1939 M.W.N. 867: A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 117, it has been held that where the defendant pleads that a certain paragraph of the plaint is denied the plaintiff is put to strict proof of the facts stated therein and the plaintiff must prove that a legal and valid gift has been made to her, there is specific denial of the execution of the document within the meaning of the said proviso. In the abovesaid Surendra Bahadur v. Bahari Singh, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 762: 181 I.C. 216: 1939 M.W.N. 867: A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 117, the plea raised by the defendant ran thus:

"The contesting defendant does not admit the execution and completion of the document sued on, nor is receipt of the consideration of the same admitted."

This plea was regarded by the Privy Council as specific denial of the execution of the document within the meaning of the term "Specifically denied" in the abovesaid proviso.

4. In the present case, the defendants have also stated in the above extracted portion of the written statement that the plaintiff should prove the "truth" of the alleged settlement deed. They have specifically referred to the said settlement deed and made the abovesaid allegations. It has also been held in Dhiren Ballung v. Bhutuki, A.I.R. 1972 Ghuhati. 44, that the term "Specifically denied" is used in the abovesaid proviso in contra distinction to the word "generally" and that in order to understand the meaning of the word "specifically" used in the abovesaid proviso to Sec.68 of the Evidence Act, considerable help could be drawn from the meaning given to that word in O.8 Rule 3 C.P.C., whose object is that the defendant should not exhibit casualness in the matter of his pleadings and that he should exhibit sense of responsibility by making his stand known to the court by dealing with the individual facts set out in the plaint. In the present case, the abovesaid denial cannot be merely termed as general denial, but it can as well be taken only as specific denial with reference to the document, relating to the truth of it and not merely to its validity.

5. However, on a different reasoning, I have to hold that the lower appellate court erred in dismissing the suit on the ground that Ex.A-3 has not been proved. It has been held that the objection regarding the mode of proof of a document has to be taken at the time when it is being exhibited and not at a later stage. To illustrate, in Bhagwan Dass v. Khem Chand, A.I.R. 1973 P.& H. 477 (D.B.), it has been held thus:

"The lower appellate court came to the conclusion that Ex.P-12 was not properly proved and, therefore, it had not been established that Kidar Nath was a statutory tenant. In the regular second appeal filed by the plaintiffs, basing his decision on Gopal Das v. Sri Thakurji, (1943)2 M.L.J. 51: 207 I.C. 553: A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 83: 1943 M.W.N. 334, and on a decision of this Court in Harnam Singh v. Dalip Singh, (1963)65 Pun.L.R. 1133, the learned single Judge came to the conclusion that the document being admissible and no objection having been taken by the defendants to the mode of its proof at the relevant time, they cannot now be heard to object that the document has not been properly proved. The observations of the Privy Council in Gopal Das v. Sri Thakurji, (1943)2

M.L.J. 51: 207 I.C. 553: A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 83: 1943 M.W.N. 334, which were relied upon by the learned single Judge, were to the following effect:

"Where the objection to be taken is not that the document is in itself inadmissible but that the mode of proof put forward is irregular or insufficient, it is essential that the objection should be taken at the trial before the document is marked as an exhibit and admitted to the record. A party cannot lie by until the case comes before a court of appeal and then complain for the first time of the mode of proof."

In the present case, I find that there was no objection to the proof of Ex.A-3 through the abovesaid Gopalakrishnan, P.W.1, the settlee under Ex.A-3. The following is his deposition, in seeking to prove Ex.A-3 and also the earlier othi document Ex.A-4 dated 16.3.1941, executed by the abovesaid Thirumalai Ammal in favour of some third party:

"அசல் செட்டில்மென்ட் என்னிடத்தில் இருந்தது அது தொலைந்துவிட்டது. எக்ஸிபிட் எ-3 ரிஜிஸ்ட்ரேஷன் நகல் திருமலையம்மாள் தாயா நிலத்தையும் மற்றும் வேறு சொத்துக்களை கோட்டை ஸ்ரீ அழகப்ப செட்டியாருக்கு ஒத்தி வைத்திருந்தான். எக்ஸிபிட் எ-4 அந்த ஒத்திபத்திரம் இந்த ஒத்தி நீர்ந்துவிட்டது"

In fact, even in the cross-examination, there appears to be no specific suggestion that Ex.A-3 was not executed by Thirumalaiammal in favour of Gopalakrishnan. On the other hand, I am able to see only the suggestion regarding the validity of the settlement as borne out by the following answer given by P.W.1 in the cross-examination:

"செட்டில்மென்ட் சட்டப்படி செல்லக் கூடியது என்பது சரியல்ல."

So where a piece of evidence even assuming not proved in the proper manner, has been admitted without objection, it is not open to the opposite party to challenge it at a later stage of litigation. Therefore, the lower appellate court erred in holding that Ex.A-3 has not been proved.

6. That apart, the other reasoning of the lower appellate court that Sec.90 of the Evidence Act would not help the plaintiff, because Ex.A-3 is only a registration copy, is also misleading. It is well known that Sec.90 of the Evidence Act deals with presumption as to documents of 30 years old.

Though this particular Section may not strictly apply to the registration copy of Ex.A-3 that has been filed in the present case, I think Sec.57(5) of the Registration Act would come to the help of the plaintiff in proving the contents of originals of Ex.A-3. Sec.57(5) of the Registration Act runs as follows:

“All copies given under this section shall be signed and sealed by the registering Officer, and shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original documents.”

In Karupanna v. Kolandaswami, (1953)2 M.L.J. 717: 1953 M.W.N. 799: A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 486, also it has been held thus:

“As stated ‘already under Sec.57(5) of the Indian Registration Act, a certified copy obtained from a Registrar’s office shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original documents. That means that the mere production of a certified copy without any further oral evidence to support it would be enough to show that the original document contained. That a registration copy is the copy of a public document contemplated under Sec.74, Sub-sec.(2) of the Indian Evidence Act is indisputable and the copy of such a document is a certified copy of a public document under Sec.76 of the Indian Evidence Act.”

Therefore, it cannot be said that Ex.A-3 has not been proved. The lower appellate court’s observation as if Ex.A-3 is not admissible is also not correct.

7. Next, the learned counsel for the respondents contends that the suit property being a natham property, vested with the Government and that the plaintiff cannot have the declaration as prayed for. No doubt, the plaintiff also admits that the suit property is a natham. But according to the learned counsel for the plaintiff, that fact does not mean that the said property is a Government property. While considering this point, first of all, I find that even though the defendants plead in the written statement, “as the suit is for declaration of plaintiff’s title to a site in Natham which belongs to the Government and vest with the Panchayat should be decided only making the Government and the Panchayat as parties”, the 2nd defendant, who alone went into the box among the three defendants, did not even depose that the suit property is the property of the Government or the Panchayat. All that he deposed was only that the property was natham. Natham, according to K.G.Iyer’s Judicial Dictionary, 8th edition, page 654, means that part of the village land, on which the houses of the Mirasdars are built as distinct from the lands attached to the village. Shortly putting it, they are house sites in the villages. There is no law saying that all natham properties are Government or Panchayat properties. The learned counsel for the appellant cited Chinnathambi Goundan v. Venkatasubramani, 49 L.W. 326. It says that in a shrotriem village not falling under the Estates Land Act, the control of unoccupied gramathanam vests in the shrotriemdar. So according to the said counsel, natham does not vest with the Government or Panchayat. But, there is neither plea nor proof that the village in question here is one such shrotriem village, not falling under the Estates Land Act. Anyway, the learned counsel for the respondents also could not point out any decision that natham properties automatically vests with the Government or Panchayat. He no doubt cites Rengaraja Iyengar v. Achikanu Annal, (1959)2 M.L.J. 513. But even there, the decision is that gramathanam does not stand vested in the Government under Sec.3(b) of the Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (XXVI of 1948). Thus, at any rate, it cannot be said automatically that all natham properties are Government properties. Therefore, I am unable to hold that the suit property is a Government property.

8. Thirdly, the learned counsel for the respondents also relies on Jai Narain v. Kishan Chand, A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 1165. There, no doubt, it has been held that a suit on mere prior possession within 12 years is not barred and in such a suit, title need not be proved unless the defendant can prove one. But, in the present case, the defendants have not proved title. They only set up title in the Government and, even with reference to it, there is no proof. On the other hand, the plaintiff has come forward to prove his title by virtue of Exs.A-3 and A-6; the plaintiff has to be given a decree for declaration of his title and since the plaintiff is held to be not in possession on the date of suit, he should be given the possessory relief also.

9. No doubt, the learned counsel for the respondents also seek, to argue that the defendants have prescribed title by their adverse possession. But, there is absolutely no plea regarding adverse possession, by the defendants. On the other hand, it is only the plaintiff who has alternatively pleaded title by adverse possession. Therefore, even assuming there is some evidence of possession by the defendants, it cannot be looked into, the fundamental principle being no amount of evidence can be looked into on a plea which was never put forward. Further, even the learned counsel for the respondents could not point out evidence showing open, continuous and peaceful possession as of right by the defendants as against the true owner. Further, as already mentioned, even according to them, the true owner is the Government and not the plaintiff. Therefore, there is absolutely no scope for defendants prescribing title by adverse possession against the plaintiff.

10. Lastly, I may take up the argument of the learned counsel for the respondents that the suit property is not a property covered under Ex.A-3. As against this argument, the learned counsel for the appellant contends that as against the finding of the trial court that item No.19 of the properties given in Ex.A-3 is the suit property, the defendants, while preferring the first appeal, have not taken a specific ground that the abovesaid factual finding of the trial court was wrong. Therefore, according to the learned counsel for the appellant, the lower appellate court has erred in holding that item 19 of Ex.A-3 does not relate to the suit property. The fact that the abovesaid specific ground was not taken in the first appeal, is not disputed by the learned counsel for the respondents. That apart, there was not even a specific suggestion to F.W.1, the donee under Ex.A-3, that the abovesaid item 19 of Ex.A-3 is not the suit property. That apart, I find that D.W.3, the 2nd defendant himself, who is none other than the first cousin of the 1st defendant and the brother of the 3rd defendant, has deposed that on the northern and southern side of the suit property, there are streets. This deposition tallies with the description given in the plaint schedule. Further, P.W.1 has stated that Perumal Iyengar's land is to the east of the suit property. This also tallies with the description of the suit property in the plaint schedule. No doubt, it has been elicited from P.W.1 in cross-examination that he does not have any record showing that the said land on the eastern side of the suit land is that of Perumal Iyengar. But, there is no specific suggestion that east of the suit property was never owned by Perumal Iyengar. Simply because, P.W.1

did not have a record of his adjacent land, it cannot be said that the plaintiff has not proved the identity of the suit property. Further, I also find that no issue has also been framed regarding the identity of the suit property.

11. Therefore, I hold that the lower appellate court has erred in dismissing the suit and that the error committed by the lower appellate court is a substantial one, warranting interference by this Court in second appeal. In the result, the second appeal is allowed, the Judgment and decree of the lower appellate court are set aside and that of the trial court are restored. However, in the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

Veluchami Gounder

...Respondent.

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.21, Rules 64 and 66 - Decree amount of Rs.6,020 - Lands of judgment-debtor worth Rs.67,200 if can be brought to sale in execution.

The decree-holder is trying to bring 4 acres and 48 cents of property belonging to the judgment-debtor to sale. Even according to the decree-holder, the value of the said property would be Rs.67,200. But according to the judgment-debtor, the value of the said property would be about Rs.1,00,000. The decree amount is stated to be Rs.6,020. In view of the decision of the Supreme Court rendered in Ambatti Narasayya v. M.Subba Rao, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 119, the execution court is directed to consider whether the division of property and sale of a portion of the property would be advantageous to the judgment-debtor. If that is so, the property may be divided and a portion of the property can be brought to sale.

ORDER:- This revision is directed against the order passed in E.A.No.560 of 1991 in E.P.No.258 of 1990 in O.S.No.697 of 1985 on the file of the District Munsif, Palani. The judgment-debtor is the petitioner herein. The respondent herein, who is the plaintiff in the suit, obtained a decree against the petitioner herein. A preliminary decree was passed in the suit on 22.7.1986 and a final decree was passed in I.A.No.1442 of 1988 on 16.6.1989. Thereafter, the decree-holder filed E.P.No.258 of 1990 to realise the decree amount of Rs.6,020. The property of the judgment-debtor was brought to sale on four occasions. In the sale proclamation the decree amount is shown as Rs.6,020. The value of 4 acres and 48 cents of property was shown as Rs.67,200. According to the judgment-debtor, the value of the said property would be about Rs.1,00,000. The judgment-debtor contended that since the decree amount is only Rs.6,020, the entire property worth about Rs.1,00,000 according to the judgment-debtor and Rs.67,200 according to the decree-holder should not be brought to sale. The judgment-debtor contended that a portion of the property can be brought to sale so as to satisfy the decree amount. Before the execution court, the judgment-debtor contended that the provisions of O.21, Rules 64 and 66, C.P.C. were not properly complied with by the judgment-debtor. Accordingly, the judgment-debtor requested the execution court to stop the sale. However, the execution court pointed out that the entire property belonging to the judgment-debtor cannot be divided as requested by the judgment-debtor since the property mortgaged is a single unit. On that basis the execution court dismissed E.A.No.560 of 1991 filed under Sec.47, C.P.C.

2. It is against this order, the judgment-debtor is in revision before this Court. The learned counsel appearing for the petitioner herein submitted that the decree amount is only Rs.6,020 and the property admeasuring 4 acres and 48 cents worth about Rs.1,00,000 need not be brought to sale to realise the paltry decree amount. In support of his contention, the learned counsel relied upon a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Ambatti Narasayya v. M. Subba Rao, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 119. The learned counsel appearing for the decree-holder submitted that the property was brought to sale for four times earlier, but the sale was not fructified. When the property was brought to sale for the fifth time, the judgment-debtor came forward with this application so as to prevent the decree-holder from realising the decree amount. It was further pointed out that the property mortgaged is a single indivisible unit and therefore it cannot be divided. According to the learned counsel the provisions contained in O.21, Rules 64 and 66, C.P.C. were not violated in this case. In support of this contention, the learned counsel appearing for the respondents relied upon a decision of this Court in the case of P.L.V. Giri v. A. Subramaniam and another, (1992) 2 L.W. 237.

3. I have heard the rival submissions.

4. The fact remains that the decree-holder obtained a decree against the judgment-debtor on a mortgage executed by the judgment-debtor. The suit property was brought to sale. According to the sale proclamation, a sum of Rs.6,020 is due to the decree-holder. The decree-holder brought to sale a property admeasuring 4 acres and 48 cents belonging to the judgment-debtor. According to the decree-holder, the value of the said property is Rs.67,200. But according to the judgment-debtor the value of the said property would be Rs.1,00,000. The learned counsel for the judgment-debtor contended that the entire property need not be brought to sale and a sale of a portion of the said property would satisfy the decree amount. But according to the decree-holder the entire property is a single indivisible unit and therefore it cannot be divided. Hence, according to the decree-holder there is nothing wrong in bringing the entire property to sale.

5. This point came up for consideration before the Supreme Court in the case of Ambatti Narasayya v. M. Subba Rao, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 119, wherein the Supreme Court while considering the provisions of O.21, Rule 64, C.P.C. held as under:

"It is of importance to note from this provision that in all execution proceedings, the court has to first decide whether it is necessary to bring the entire attached property to sale or such portion thereof as may seem necessary to satisfy the decree. If the property is large and the decree to be satisfied is small, the Court must bring only such portion of the property, the proceeds of which would be sufficient to satisfy the claim of the decree-holder. It is immaterial whether the property is one or several. Even if the property is one, if a separate portion could be sold without violating any provision of law only such portion of the property should be sold. This, in our opinion, is not just a discretion, but an obligation imposed on the court. Care must be taken to put only such portion of the property to sale the consideration of which is sufficient to meet the claim in the execution petition. The sale held without examining this aspect and not in conformity with this requirement would be illegal and without jurisdiction."

6. On this aspect another decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Direndranath Gorel and another v. Sudir Chandra Gosesh and others, (1965) 1 S.C.J. 219, was also brought to my notice. According to the facts arising in the above cited decision, two appeals raised the question of the validity of the court sale held in contravention of Sec.35 of the Bengal Money Lenders Act, 1940 (Bengal Act 10 of 1940). In the appeal before the Supreme Court, learned counsel for the appellants in both the appeals contended that whether Sec.35 of the Act is mandatory or directory the sale held in violation of the said provision is only illegal but not a nullity and therefore it can be set aside only in the manner and for reasons prescribed in O.21, Rule 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure and further that as the respondents did not attend at the drawing up of the proclamation of sale the sale cannot be set aside at their instance.

7. While answering these contentions, the Supreme Court held as under:

"In the present case the executing court had inherent jurisdiction to sell the property. We have assumed that Sec.35 of the Act is a mandatory provision. If so, the question is whether the said provision is conceived in the interest of the public or in the interest of the person affected by the non-observance of the provision. It is true that many provisions of the Act were conceived in the interest of the public. But the same cannot be said of Sec.35 of the Act, which is really intended to protect the interest of the judgment-debtor and to see that a larger extent of his property than is necessary to discharge the debt is not sold. Many situations may be visualised when the judgment-debtor does not seek to take advantage of the benefits conferred on him under Sec.35 of the act. For instance, if the part of the property carved out by the court for sale is separated from the rest of his property, the value of the remaining property may be injuriously affected by the carving out, in which case the judgment-debtor may prefer to have his entire property sold so that he may realise the real value of the property and pay part of the sale price towards the decretal amount. He cannot obviously be compelled to submit to the sale of a part of the property to his disadvantage. A provision intended for his benefit cannot be construed in such a way to work to his detriment."

8. This judgment of the Supreme Court was rendered by three learned Judges of the Apex Court. The decision in Ambatti Narasayya v. M. Subba Rao, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 119, was rendered by two learned Judges of the Apex Court. According to the facts arising in the decision reported in Direndranath Gorel and another v. Sudir Chandra Gosesh and others, (1965) 1 S.C.J. 219, cited supra, the auction sale had taken place and the application under O.21, Rule 90, C.P.C. was filed to set aside that sale. But in the present case, the sale has not yet taken place. In the decision reported in Direndranath Gorel and another v. Sudir Chandra Gosesh and others, (1965) 1 S.C.J. 219, cited supra, the Supreme Court rendered its decision on the facts available on record in the light of Sec.35 of Bengal Money Lenders Act, 1940 and the provisions of O.21, Rule 90, C.P.C. But the facts arising in the present case are entirely different.

9. Yet another decision rendered by a learned single Judge of this Court in the case of P.L.V. Giri v. A. Subramaniam and another, (1992) 2 L.W. 237, was also brought to my notice. While considering the facts arising on record in the abovesaid case in the light of provisions of O.21, Rules 64, 66 and 90, C.P.C., the learned single Judge held as under:

"Considering the conduct of the judgment-debtor all along and also the in-built and intrinsic circumstances to be culled out from the facts of this case, it goes without saying that the executing Court fully applied its mind, taking into consideration the amount of the decree that remains to be satisfied and other peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, in bringing the entirety of the suit property to sale and such act cannot amount to bringing more extent of property for sale than what was necessary for the satisfaction of the decree.”

In the abovesaid decision, the learned single Judge has also observed that the latter pronouncement of a Bench of two learned Judges of the Supreme Court in Ambatti Narasayya v. M. Subba Rao, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 119, will have to give way to an earlier pronouncement of a larger Bench of three learned Judges of the Supreme Court in Direndranath Gorel and another v. Sudir Chandra Gosesh and others, (1965) 1 S.C.J. 219.

10. According to the facts arising in the instant case, the sale has not yet taken place. The decree-holder is trying to bring 4 acres and 48 cents of property belonging to the judgment-debtor to sale. Even according to the decree-holder, the value of the said property would be Rs.67,200. But according to the judgment-debtor, the value of the said property would be about Rs.1,00,000. The decree amount is stated to be Rs.6,020. Under such circumstances, the judgment-debtor contended that sale of a portion of the property would satisfy the decree amount and the entire property need not be brought to sale in view of the decision of the Supreme Court rendered in Ambatti Narasayya v. M. Subba Rao, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 119. Under such circumstances, I direct the execution court to consider whether the division of property and sale of a portion of the property would be advantageous to the judgment-debtor. If that is so, the property may be divided and a portion of the property can be brought to sale. Accordingly, I set aside the order passed by the execution court in E.A.No.560 of 1991 and restore the same to the file of the execution court with a direction to dispose of the same in accordance with law after taking into consideration the direction given above and after giving an opportunity of being heard to both the parties. Accordingly, the revision stands allowed. However, there will be no order as to costs.

Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960), Sec.11(4) - Petition under - Enquiry as to quantum of arrears - Tenant to be given opportunity to show cause why he was not able to pay the amount - Procedure not followed - Order, if sustainable.

The court feels that the orders passed by the courts below are not sustainable as they have not followed the procedure laid down with regard to the dealing with the petition under Sec.11(4) of the Act and in view of the fact that the opportunity was given before fixing the quantum of arrears and no opportunity was given for explaining the reason for not paying the rent within the time. In spite of the petition filed by the revision-petitioners for extension of time, the court below allowed the petition for eviction holding that there was wilful default and evidence was necessary for demolition and reconstruction. In view of the failure to receive the additional documents filed by the petitioners on erroneous reasons of the matter requires reconsideration to prevent miscarriage of justice. It is further seen that as per the calculation statement produced before this Court by the petitioners they have paid an excess rent of Rs.50 upto August, 1992. However, according to the statement produced by the respondent-landlady, a sum of Rs.650 is due as arrears. This also requires an enquiry at the hands of the Rent Controller. For all these reasons, this Court feels that the matter should be remitted to the court below in order to give an opportunity to the revision-petitioners/tenants to substantiate their case, by holding the necessary enquiry as contemplated under Sec.11(4) of the Act. The Court made the following ORDER:- These two revisions are directed by the unsuccessful tenants before both the forums below against the order passed under Sec.11(4) of the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') to stop proceedings and also the consequential order of eviction passed in the main R.C.O.P.

2. The brief facts which are necessary for the disposal of these two revisions are as follows:

The respondent herein (Landlord) filed R.C.O.P.No.10 of 1987 against the tenant Sankar Chettiar (who died and whose legal representatives are the revision-petitioners) under Secs.10(2)(i) and 14(1)(b) of the Act on the ground that tenant committed wilful default in payment of rent from August, 1986 till December, 1986, for 5 months and also for demolition and reconstruction on the ground that the building is aged about 80 years and requires demolition and reconstruction. The said petition was resisted by the tenant. When the enquiry was pending, the respondent-landlord filed a petition, I.A.No.137 of 1987 under Sec.11(4) of the Act alleging that the tenant has not paid the rents for the subsequent period. The tenant paid a sum of Rs.1500 and the said petition was terminated. Again another petition was filed in I.A.No.88 of 1989 under Sec.11(4) of the Act alleging that the tenant has not paid the rent for the period from January, 1987 to January, 1989 to the extent of Rs.3,750 and out of the sum, Rs.2,500 alone was paid and the balance of Rs.1,250 is payable. Hence the respondent-landlord prayed for a direction not to permit the tenant to take part in the eviction proceedings and allow the petition. The said application was resisted by the tenant. While denying the said allegations, it is stated that these applications were filed in order to evict the tenant from the premises with mala fide intention. The respondent-landlord was not in the habit of issuing receipts. The tenant has paid the rent for the month of January, 1987 to the respondent directly, and for the months of February and March, 1987, he paid the rent on 5.4.1987 to the mother-in-law of the respondent, one Yasodai Ammal. She also received the rent for April, 1987 on 21.5.1987 on behalf of the respondent. He also sent a sum of Rs.750 by money order being the rent up to the period of September, 1987. After the filing of the petition, he paid Rs.1,500 and he is not liable to pay any rent. He has already narrated all the facts in I.A.No.137 of 1987. He has to pay rent for a period of six months upto March, 1989. Since the respondent was in the habit of receiving rent in lump sums and not in the habit of receiving rent every month, he would pay the rent to him. The allegation that the tenant was in arrears of rent of Rs.1,750 is false. After the filing of the petition, the Rent Controller directed the tenant to pay a sum of Rs.1,950 on or before 22.8.1989, after deducting a sum of Rs.750 only, in his order dated 8.8.1989. The tenant paid a sum of Rs.500 on 22.8.1989 towards arrears of rent before the Rent Controller, to the respondent-landlord, and another sum of Rs.300 on 11.9.1989. After deducting the said sum of Rs.800, it was found that the balance of 1,150 was not paid. Hence, I.A.No.88 of 1989 under Sec.11(4) of the Act was allowed on 3.10.1989 and on the same day the consequent order of eviction was passed in the main petition, R.C.O.P.No.10 of 1987. Challenging the said order, the tenant preferred appeals before the appellate authority and he was unsuccessful. In the meantime, the tenant died and his legal representatives were added and they are the revision-petitioners herein.

3. The learned counsel for the revision-petitioner-tenants submits that the tenants filed a petition I.A.No.5 of 1992 before the appellate authority, wherein they produced two money order acknowledgements in respect of the payment of Rs.300 on 7.6.1989 and Rs.150 on 13.11.1987 and the court did not receive the same on the ground that only a xerox copy of the acknowledgement was produced and further the tenant has not stated in the counter-affidavit filed in the petition 88 of 1989. The learned counsel would submit that the petitioners were not given an opportunity to prove the same by adducing necessary evidence and the court straightway allowed the application and ordered eviction and that it is not sustainable. He would submit that even as per the orders passed by the Appellate Authority as well as the Rent Controller, the revision-petitioner/tenants were in the habit of sending rent by money orders, as even according to the Appellate Authority on 6.2.1987 a sum of Rs.300 was received by the respondent-landlord by money order and another sum of Rs.750 was received by money order on 26.10.1987. A sum of Rs.1,500 was paid during the pendency of the application, I.A.No.137 of 1987. The learned counsel would submit that the court below did not hold any enquiry for ascertaining the arrears of rent. Even though the revision-petitioners filed the petition I.A.No.302 of 1989 for granting sufficient time to pay the arrears as determined by court, the court has not given sufficient opportunity to pay the arrears. Both the courts below erred in presuming that the petitioners admitted the amount of Rs.1,950 as arrears upto the filing of the petition for extension of time. The learned counsel also vehemently argued that as on to-day there is no arrears payable and the entire amount has been paid to the landlord respondent herein. He has filed a statement of rental payments upto August, 1992. The learned counsel for the respondent also filed a statement of rental payments, wherein he has stated that upto the end of August, 1992, there is a balance of Rs.650. According to the learned counsel for the petitioners, the tenants have paid an excess of Rs.50 while according to the learned counsel for the respondent, the balance payable to the landlord is Rs.650. The petitioners-tenants have filed a petition in this Court, C.M.P.No.8403 of 1992 to receive additional evidence to establish that during the pendency of the proceedings, Sankar Chettiar, tenant, who is the husband of the deponent of the affidavit, was affected by several diseases like giddiness and urinal and eye problems and he was undergoing treatment in the Christian Medical College Hospital from 30.10.1987 to 5.4.1990 and to prove the bona fide treatment, they produced number of documents. Subsequently the diseases developed into high pitch and Sankar Chettiar died on 22.7.1990. Subsequent to his death, his son met with an accident on 20.9.1990. The petitioners were attending to their needs till their death, besides attending to the court proceedings. Subsequent to their deaths, they were grief-stricken and they were unable to bear their loss. The circumstances caused were beyond their control and it is neither wilful nor wanton but due to the above just cause. Further, they have produced medical certificate for the period Sankar Chettiar suffered, in the lower appellate court. According to them there was no arrears. The learned counsel contended that the court ought to have given sufficient opportunity to establish the circumstances under which they were prevented from paying the rent. Further, the court failed to make an enquiry before ever the amount is determined. They produced 9 documents in support of the same. Per contra the learned counsel for the respondent submits that the application is not maintainable and the court cannot entertain the documents. Even if those documents are admitted, they will only explain the wilful default committed by the tenant in payment of rent for a long period prior to the filing of the petition under Sec.11(4) of the Act. The respondent-landlord reserved his right to file additional counter as and when copies are furnished to him.

4. The learned counsel for the petitioners-tenants vehemently argued that this is a case where the court below straightway ordered eviction consequent on allowing the petition under Sec.11(4) which was also straightway allowed. The case of the petitioners is that when the court fixed the quantum of arrears as Rs.1,950 without holding any enquiry, when it was opposed the tenant should have been given an opportunity to show cause why the court should not determine the quantum of arrears as Rs.1,950. A further opportunity should also have been given to show cause why they were not able to pay the amount. In the absence of enquiry, the order is vitiated. In this connection, the learned counsel for the petitioner relied on the decision reported in Abdul Wahab v. Dorairaj, (1957) 1 M.L.J. 33 (NRC.), wherein it was held that in cases where the Controller or the Appellate Authority under the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949, acts under the provisions of Sec.7-A(4) of the Act, the procedure contemplated by the sub-section should be followed, viz., the tenant should be given an opportunity to show cause as to why he was not able to deposit the arrears of rent. In the absence of any enquiry on that point, the order will be vitiated. The learned counsel for the petitioner would submit that Sec.7-A(4) of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949, is in pari materia with the present Sec.11(4) of the Act, and in view of the ratio laid down in the abovequoted decision, since no opportunity was given to the petitioners to show cause as to why they were not able to deposit the arrears of rent, the order of eviction is vitiated. In any event, the matter should be remitted back to the Controller so as to enable the Controller to give an opportunity to the petitioners to explain the same. The learned counsel for the petitioners relied on another decision in Hyderabad Construction Company v. Major E. Hussain, (1966) 2 An.W.R. 373, wherein while dealing with the provisions in Sec.11(1) and (4) of the Andhra Pradesh Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction Control) Act, 1960, it was held: "In respect of each default, unless the previous default is sufficient to order eviction, an opportunity should be given to the tenant to show cause as to why he has not been able to pay the rent."

"In the instant case, if the petitioner had explained the default committed in respect of payment of rent for December, 1964, it would not have been necessary to refer to the default committed in January, 1965. But once the default in January, 1965, is taken as the basis for eviction, unless the petitioner is given an opportunity to show sufficient cause for non-payment, an order under Sec.11(4) of the Act cannot be made."

In Mohd. Sabar Ali v. Mubarak Begum, (1982) 1 An.W.R. 195, it was held:

"The petitioner-tenant disputed the arrears of rent claimed by the land-lady. Therefore, it is always safe to post the case of enquiry. It is necessary that the learned Judge should have posted the case for enquiry so that there could have been no scope for passing such an order. The tenant could have also an opportunity to state the facts in the enquiry in respect of the payment of rents whether they are due or not. So far as sub-sec.(4) of Sec.11 of the Rent Control Act is concerned, it seems to have an important bearing on this case. It is quite evident that in this case, the tenant has not deposited or paid the arrears of rent. Therefore, under the provisions of Sub-sec.(4) of Sec.11 of the Act, it was necessary for the Rent Controller to have issued a notice to the tenant as to why he has failed to pay or deposit the rents, as directed by him and if the tenant failed to show sufficient cause, then only further proceedings should have been stopped directing the tenant to put the landlady in possession. In the instant case, proceedings were not taken under Sub-sec.(4) of Sec.11 of the Rent

Control Act. It was necessary that the Rent Controller should have complied with this provision of the Act to find out as to why the amount was not deposited or paid. Therefore, the proceedings issued by the Rent Controller on 28th December, 1977 are vitiated on account of non-compliance of sub-sec.(4) of Sec.11 of the Rent Control Act.

When the default for a particular month is sought to be pressed against the tenant, which is not pleaded in the petition, it becomes necessary for the court to bring it to the notice of the tenant and afford him an opportunity to explain and show sufficient cause as to why he committed default for that period, before an order is passed.

When the case was posted to 27th December, 1977, it was the duty of the court to ask the tenant to show cause as to why the amount was not deposited. If the tenant failed to show sufficient cause, then only the court could have passed the order stopping further proceedings and directing the tenant to put the landlady in possession of the property. This was not done, as contended by the learned counsel for the petitioner, in the case on hand. Therefore the order of the Principal Rent Controller is vitiated."

5. The learned counsel for the petitioners vehemently argued that in the instant case the petitioners opposed the application and filed a counter contending that the amount claimed by the respondent is not correct, that he has made certain payments, that it has to be determined and that he is to pay only a lesser sum. The court below did not hold an enquiry and did not reach any finding and simply accepted the case of the respondent-landlady and fixed the quantum of arrears as Rs.1,150 and directed the petitioners to pay the amount. Further, even though the petitioners asked for time, sufficient opportunity was not given. The court below also refused to receive additional documents with regard to payment of rent made by money order and the court straightway ordered eviction without considering the question as to whether there is any wilful default and the building requires immediate demolition in the main application. He would submit that the petitioners have filed additional documents and they may be permitted to file the additional documents and the same may be received in the revision proceedings as they can be received in view of the decision of this Court in Babu Syed v. Subaida Bee, (1991)1 M.L.J. 412, wherein it was held:

"In view of the legal position it has to be held that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are applicable to the revision petition filed before this court under Sec.25 of the Act. From this it follows that a petition filed under O.41, Rule 27, C.P.C. to receive document as additional evidence in the revision petition filed under Sec.25 of the Act is maintainable and the documents can be received as additional evidence provided the requirements of O.41, Rule 27 of the Code of Civil Procedure are satisfied. In this case, the documents are necessary for deciding the issue."

In the instant case, the documents sought to be filed as additional evidence show the illness of the tenant and his subsequent death and also the death of his son due to accident. According to the learned counsel for the petitioners these documents are necessary to decide the issue with regard to the default in payment of rent which has been directed to be paid by the court below. On a careful consideration of the entire materials, this Court feels that the orders passed by the courts below are not sustainable as they have not followed the procedure laid down with regard to the dealing with the petition under Sec.11(4) of the Act and in view of the fact that the opportunity was given before fixing the quantum of arrears and no opportunity was given for explaining the reason for not paying the rent within the time. In spite of the petition filed by the revision-petitioners for extension of time, the court below allowed the petition for eviction holding that there was wilful default and eviction was necessary for demolition and reconstruction. In view of the failure to receive the additional documents filed by the petitioners on erroneous reasons of the matter requires reconsideration to prevent miscarriage of justice. It is further seen that as per the calculation statement produced before this Court by the petitioners, they have paid an excess rent of Rs.50 upto August, 1992. However, according to the statement produced by the respondent-landlady, a sum of Rs.650 is due as arrears. This also requires an enquiry at the hands of the Rent Controller. For all these reasons, this Court feels that the matter should be remitted to the court below in order to give an opportunity to the revision-petitioners/tenants to substantiate their case, by holding the necessary enquiry as contemplated under Sec.11(4) of the Act.

6. In the result, both the revisions are allowed, the impugned orders passed by both the courts below are set aside and the matter is remitted to the Rent Controller who is directed to restore both the petitions, namely, R.C.O.P.No.10 of 1987 and I.A.No.88 of 1989, and give opportunity to both the parties to adduce necessary evidence and dispose of the same according to law as expeditiously as possible, in any event within two months from the date of receipt of the order copy. The parties are directed to bear their costs in these proceedings. The parties are directed to appear before the Rent Controller on 30.11.1992.

O.S.A.No.158 of 1986

16th December, 1992.

V.D.Swami and Company (P) Ltd. ...Appellant
v.

Southern Switchgear Ltd., Madras-2.

...Respondent.

(A) Companies Act (I of 1956) - Sole agent - Not defined - Legal relationship of principal and agent - Not that of employer and employee.

(B) Companies Act (I of 1956), Sec.294(1), (2) and (2-A) as substituted by Amending Act (LXV of 1960) - Contract Act (IX of 1872), Secs.64 and 65 - Agreement between parties - Failure of company to place agreement before the next general body meeting of the company - Whether invalid - Court not considering whether plaintiff was in pari delicto - Agreement whether would give plaintiff right to realise obligations - To the extent of the advantage received by defendant not considered - Order set aside.

(C) Maxims - In pari delicto potior est conditio defentis.

The defendants who were manufacturers of switchgears equipment appointed the plaintiff as the sole selling agent to fix export of switchgears in the area covered by the Middle East, Africa and South East Asia. The plaintiff was able to obtain a contract from the National Electricity Administration of Baghdad for supply of 11 Kv switchgear to the value of Rs.15-lakhs. The consignment should have been completed by 15.9.1970. The defendant was not able to ship the goods as per schedule. Further extension was obtained so that the last shipment could make only a partial supply. The foreign buyers cancelled contract and levied a penalty on the plaintiff and blacklisted them from securing any further business from them. The plaintiff sued the defendant for the recovery of a sum of 20 lakhs by way of damages and costs.

Held: There is no definitions of sole agent under any provision of the Companies Act. But it has been understood to mean any individual (firm or Company) who is given exclusive rights to sell in a particular area the goods of the Company concerned to the exclusion of even the Company. It is, however, a legal relationship of principal and agent and not that of employer and employee.

On the pleadings of the parties, it has to be held that a certain agreement was entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant in which according to the former, the latter appointed it as the sole selling agent for export of switchgears and according to the latter, the former's appointment as sole selling agent of the defendant ought to have been approved by the company at its next general meeting which meeting was held but the appointment of the plaintiff as the sole selling agent was not placed before the meeting and consequently the plaintiff ceased to be the sole selling agent on or after the said meeting and/or there was no appointment of the plaintiff as the sole selling agent in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956, the parties were, therefore, dealing as principal to principal in respect of the transaction. In the agreement under which the plaintiff was appointed as the sole selling agent for the defendant, there was no reference at all about the placing of the said agreement before the next general body meeting of the defendant company and admittedly it was not so placed before the general body meeting held on 9.9.1968. Thus, the said agreement itself was void ab initio and as such the claim based thereon is void ab initio and is bound to fail. It appears that at no stage in the course of the trial anyone took notice of the admitted existence of the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant and the exceptions to the rule in pari delicto potior est conditio defendant is, so that the court could test the facts and circumstances of the case to find out, whether, actually, the plaintiff and the defendant were in in pari delicto potior est conditio defendant is for, if the defendant was to perform a certain act and did not do so, the defendant is the wrong-doer and the plaintiff was wronged by what it did in the sense that the defendant failed to bring on the agenda of the meeting of the company after the agreement was entered into, the question of approval. Thereof the judgment was set aside and remitted the same to the trial court for rehearing in accordance with law.

N.Srivasthamani, for Appellant.

T.K.Seshadri, for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.: A Private Limited Company carrying on business as exporters of various goods claiming to have been appointed as the sole agent for export of switchgears by the defendant, a Public Limited Company by letter dated 2.9.1967, has filed a suit for recovery of a sum of Rs.2,00,000 by way of damages and for costs. A learned single Judge of this Court has dismissed the suit, holding that Sec.294(2A) of the Companies Act operated as a bar to the maintainability of the suit, besides the force majeure clause in the agreement completely answered the suit claim of damages. The plaintiff has preferred this appeal.

2. The plaintiff's case has been that the defendants who are manufacturers of switchgear equipment, by its letter dated 2.9.1967, appointed the plaintiff as its sole agents for export of switchgears. The plaintiff was appointed as the sole agent to represent the defendant in the areas covered by the Middle East, Africa and South East Asia. The plaintiff, by reason of its contacts and influence, was able to obtain for and on behalf of the defendant a contract from the National Electricity Administration of Baghdad for supply of 11 KV switchgears to the value of about Rs.15,00,000 (C & F Baghdad). The plaintiff received this order from the National Electricity Administration of Baghdad on 4.8.1969. The plaintiff thereafter in terms of the arrangement with the defendant, communicated vide its letter dated 20.8.1969, the order of Iraqi buyers to the defendant who had irrevocably and without any reservation accepted the said order which was in all respects and entirely identical and essentially similar to the terms and conditions of the Iraqi buyers order. In terms of the said order, the first consignment should have been effected by April, 1970 and the remaining balance consignment should have been completed by 15.9.1970. On 9.11.1969, the plaintiff also received a letter from the tendering authorities by which the plaintiff was informed that a letter of credit had been opened on 5.11.1969 in its favour for a sum of Stg 86,250 being the total C & F Baghdad value of the order of the F.O.B. value of the order being Stg 78003-13-06 (equivalent to Rs.14,00,550-70). The defendant ought to have shipped the first lot of equipment by April, 1970 and completed the shipment of the remaining portion of the order by the 15th September, 1970 as provided in the order and in the letter of credit and unconditionally accepted by the defendant. However, the first shipment was effected by the defendant only on 3.8.1970 and thereafter no shipment was made by the defendant even though the letter of credit was extended by the Iraqi buyers from time to time on the request of the plaintiff and finally on 31.1.1972. The defendant wrote to the plaintiff on 21.1.1972 furnishing a revised delivery schedule by which it agreed to complete the order of shipping the remaining items three instalments, the first one by the end of January, 1972, the second by the end of February, 1972 and the third by the end of March, 1972 and requested the plaintiff to persuade the foreign buyer to extend the validity of the letter of credit upto 31.3.1972 by which time it assured the plaintiff that it would definitely be completing the shipments of the balance portion of the equipment. On the persuasion of the plaintiff, the Iraqi buyers extended the validity of the letter of credit upto 31.3.1972. The defendant, however, failed to keep up its promise and the undertaking and no shipment was effected even as per the revised schedule except a part shipment towards the end of March, 1972 leaving a sizeable quantity unshipped as on 31.3.1972. The foreign buyers, left with no option cancelled the orders for the remaining quantity and invoked the performance guarantee issued by the plaintiff and the defendant which action was eventually taken by the Iraqi buyers and communicated to the plaintiff by letter dated 29.8.1972 besides levying a penalty of Stg. $460.74 and black-listing the plaintiff from securing any further business from them.

3. The plaintiff has then stated that it was only acting as an export agent of the defendant, though this position is now being disputed by the defendant. The plaintiff has relied on several circumstances and documents to demonstrate its position as export agent of the defendant. According to the plaintiff, the total C & F value of the unexecuted portion of the goods as on 1.4.1972 is Stg. £21,375.12 which is equivalent to Rs.4,00,020.90 and that of the commission which had been increased by 1% by the letter of the defendant dated 22.2.1971, calculated on the F.O.B. value of the unshipped portion of the contract amounted to Rs.30,403.82. In addition, the plaintiff has claimed, it is also entitled to receive a sum of Rs.2,915.32 being the commission due by the defendant to the plaintiff on the shipment already made. The plaintiff addressed a legal notice to the defendant dated 31.1.1973 claiming a sum of Rs.5,00,000 inclusive of the commission due to them by reason of the failure of the defendant to carry out their obligations. By final reply the defendant, through its counsel, refuted the claim of the plaintiff and pleaded that it was unable to keep up to the terms of the delivery schedule by reason of circumstances beyond its control and pleaded that having paid the penalty under the contract for delay in delivery, there could be no further liability on the part of the defendant. The defendant also denied that there was any agreement to refer the matter to arbitration.

4. The defendant, on appearance, stated first as follows: The alleged appointment of the plaintiff as a sole selling agent of the defendant ought to have been approved by the company at its next general meeting after 2.9.1967. The company held a general meeting on 9.9.1968. The plaintiff's appointment as sole selling agent was not placed before the said meeting and consequently the plaintiff ceased to be the sole selling agent on and after 9.9.1968 and no commission was payable to the plaintiff thereafter. It is also averred that without prejudice to the foregoing the defendant does not admit the averments in paragraph 3 of the plaint that the plaintiff was appointed as the sole selling agent of the defendant for export of switchgear. No appointment of the plaintiff as sole selling agent in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 was made at any time. The parties were, therefore, dealing as principal to principal in respect of this transaction, the defendant having agreed to give the plaintiff a discount of 5% on the F.O.B. value of the order placed by the plaintiff with it. The defendant also pleaded that the quotation of the defendant and communication addressed to the plaintiff would establish that the contract between the parties was subject to the usual force majeure clause in and by which the defendant was relieved of all the obligations under the contract if the performance thereof was prevented by force majeure. The defendant denied the other allegations in the plaint and contested practically every item of the claim made by the plaintiff in the suit. On the issue, however, as to the quantum of damages to be awarded to the plaintiff, in case the defendant is found to have committed breach of the agreement, the learned single Judge has found that the plaintiff is entitled to damages of Rs.30,403.82 towards the unexecuted portion of the goods as on 14.1.1972 and Rs.2,915.32 being the commission due to it in respect of the shipment already made, the total being Rs.33,319.14.

5. As to the counter claim made by the defendants in the written statement, the learned single Judge has stated as follows:

"In view of the admission made by P.W.1 in cross-examination and Ex.D-6, the plaintiff is bound to render account in respect of 2589 sterling pounds to the defendant."

The learned single Judge has also held that the defendant is not entitled to call upon the plaintiff to pay any sum as damages.

6. Learned counsel for the appellant has attacked the findings recorded by the learned single Judge on the issue whether the provisions of Sec.294 (2-A) of the Companies Act would operate as a bar to the maintainability of the suit on the ground, inter alia, that Sec.294(1) and (2-A) of the Companies Act read together ceased the validity of the appointment of a sole selling agent for any area with effect from the date of a general meeting of the company which disapproved the appointment or did not approve the appointment, but operated as no bar to the maintainability of the suit which in common law and the Law of Contract were/are available to the plaintiff. He has, for the said purpose, drawn our attention to Sec.294(1) substituted by Act 65 of 1960. Sec.294(1)(2) and (2-A) read:

"B.294. Appointment of sole selling agents to require approval of company in general meeting: (1) No company, shall, after the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1960, appoint a sole selling agent for any area for a term exceeding five years at a time. Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to prohibit the re-appointment, or the extension of the term of office, of any sole selling agent by further periods not exceeding five years on each occasion.

(2) After the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1960, the Board of Directors of a Company shall not appoint a sole selling agent for any area except subject to the condition that the appointment shall cease to be valid if it is not approved by the Company in the first general meeting held after the date on which the appointment is made;

(2-A) If the company in general meeting as aforesaid disapproves the appointment, it shall cease to be valid with effect from the date of that general meeting.

7. There is no definition of 'sole agent' under any provision of the Companies Act. But it has been understood to mean any individual (firm or company) who is given exclusive rights to sell in a particular area the goods of the company concerned to the exclusion of even the company. It is, however, a legal relationship of principal and agent and not that of employer and employee. The executive power of the Company's Board of Directors to appoint a sole selling agent has been subjected to the condition that the appointment shall cease to be valid if it is not approved by the company in the first general meeting held after the date on which the appointment is made and the invalidity shall be effective from the date of that general meeting. Courts, however, have construed this condition of approval of the appointment of the sole selling agent at the general meeting as a mandatory condition in all appointments of sole selling agents and have gone further to say that if any appointment is made without containing such a clause, the appointment is void ab initio. We, however, do not think it necessary in the instant case to go into any details on this aspect of the law as engrafted in Sec.294 of the Act, aforequoted, for whether a sole selling agent's appointment would fall within the mischief of Sec.294 of the Act and when shall it become inoperative, do not appear to be beyond the terms and conditions of the appointment of a certain person as the agent of another and in case there is a claim of sole selling agency, it would depend upon the fulfilment of the condition of approval by the company in the first general meeting held after the date on which the appointment is made, upon which would depend whether the appointment would be valid or cease to be valid.

7A. What is noticeable in the instant case is, however, that the defendant has not disputed the de facto transaction of business with the foreign buyers through the plaintiff and conceded that it did give to the plaintiff the contract which according to the plaintiff was the plaintiff's appointment as the sole agent for export of such orders in the areas covered by the Middle East, Africa and South East Asia. According to the defendant, the company held a joint meeting on 9.9.1968 (after the defendant's appointment on 2.9.1967) and the plaintiff's appointment as the sole selling agent was not placed before the said meeting and consequently the plaintiff ceased to be the sole selling agent on and after 9.9.1968 and/or there was no appointment of the plaintiff as the sole selling agent in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act 1956 and/or the parties (plaintiff and defendant) were dealing as principal to principal.

The learned single Judge has stated:

"It is not in dispute that the said appointment under Ex.P-1 was not placed in the general body meeting of the company of the defendant and there is no reference at all about the placing of the same in the general body meeting in Ex.P-1."

He has also noticed the fact that there was no mention in the agreement that it was subject to the approval of the company in the general body meeting and that it would cease to be valid if not approved as per Sec.294 (2-A) of the Companies Act. He has, on that basis, held:

"In Ex.P-1 agreement under which the plaintiffs were appointed as the sole selling agent for the defendant-company, there is no reference at all about the placing of the said agreement before the next general body meeting of the defendant-company. Further, admittedly it was not so placed before the general body meeting held on 9.9.1968. The said agreement itself is void ab initio and as such the claim based on that agency agreement is bound to fail."

8. Learned counsel for the respondent has supported the aforesaid finding mainly on the ground that once it is found that the agreement is void ab initio, it is right to contend that no claim can be based on a void contract. The principle that the Courts will refuse to enforce an illegal agreement at the instance of a person who is himself a party to the illegality or fraud is expressed in the maxim in pari delicto potior est conditio defendantis. But there are exceptions to that. The Supreme Court in the case of Sita Ram v. Radha Bai, (1968) 2 S.C.J. 251; A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 534, has said:

"But as stated in Anson's Principles of English Law of Contracts', and 22nd Edn. P.343, there are exceptional cases in which a man will be relieved of the consequences of an illegal contract into which he has entered-cases to which the maxim does not apply. They fall into three classes; (a) where the illegal purpose has not yet been substantially carried into effect before it is sought to recover money paid or goods delivered in furtherance of it; (b) where the plaintiff is not in pari delicto with the defendant; (c) where the plaintiff does not have to rely on the illegality to make out his claim."

In this judgment, the Supreme Court has further added:

"It is settled law that where the parties are not in pari delicto, the less guilty party may be able to recover money paid, or property transferred, under the contract. First, the contract may be of a kind made illegal by statute in the interests of a particular class of persons of whom the plaintiff is one. Secondly, the plaintiff must have been induced to enter into the contract by fraud or strong pressure. Thirdly, there is some authority for the view that a person who is under a fiduciary duty to the plaintiff will not be allowed to retain property, or to refuse to account for moneys received, on the ground that the property or the moneys have come into his hands as the proceeds of an illegal transaction. - See Anson's Principles of The English Law of Contract page 346."

9. In the Indian Contract Act, we have in Sec.64 the consequences of rescission of voidable contract and in Sec.65, the obligation of persons who have received advantage under void agreement or contract that became void. Sec.64 of the Contract Act says that when a person at whose option a contract is voidable rescinds it, the other party thereto need not perform any promise therein contained in which he is promisor. The party rescinding a voidable contract shall, if he has received any benefit thereunder from another party to such contract, restore such benefit, so far as may be, to person from whom it was received. Sec.65 spells out the obligation of the person who has received advantage under void agreement or contract that becomes void in these words:

"When an agreement is discovered to be void or when a contract becomes void, any person who has received any advantage under such agreement or contract is bound to restore it, or to make compensation for it, to the person from whom he received it."

10. The Supreme Court has in the case in Kuju Collieries v. Jharkhand Mines, (1974) 2 S.C.C. 533: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1892, examined the scope of Sec.65 of the Contract Act and stated as follows:-

"Sec.64 makes a distinction between an agreement and a contract. According to Sec.2 of the Contract Act, an agreement which is enforceable by law is a contract and an agreement which is not enforceable by law is said to be void. Therefore, when the earlier part of Sec.65 speaks of an agreement being discovered to be void, it means that the agreement is not enforceable and is, therefore, not a contract. It means that it was void. It may be that the parties or one of the parties to the agreement may not have, when they entered into the agreement, knowing that the agreement was in law not enforceable. They might have come to know later that the agreement was not enforceable. The second part of the Section, refers to a contract becoming an agreement which was originally enforceable and was, therefore, a contract, becomes void due to subsequent happenings. In both these cases, any person who has received any advantage under such agreement or contract is bound to restore such advantage, or to make compensation for it to the person from whom he received it. But where even at the time when the agreement is entered into both parties know that it was not lawful and, therefore, void, there was no contract but only an agreement and it is not a case where it is discovered to be void subsequently. Nor is it a case of the contract becoming void due to subsequent happenings."

The Supreme Court has in the case of Kuju Collieries v. Jharkhand Mines, (1974) 2 S.C.C. 533: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1892, approved the decision of the Andhra Pradesh High Court in the case of Sivaramakrishnaiah v. Narahari Rao, A.I.R. 1960 A.P. 186, in which it is stated:

"In order to invoke Sec.65 the invalidity of the contract or agreement should be discovered subsequent to the making of it. This cannot be taken advantage of by parties who knew from the beginning the illegality thereof. It only applies to a case where one of the parties enters into an agreement under the belief that it was a legal agreement i.e., without the knowledge that the agreement is forbidden by law or opposed to public policy and as such illegal. The effect of Sec.65 is that, in such a situation, it enables a person not in pari delicto to claim restoration since it is not based on an illegal contract but dissociated from it. That is permissible by reason of the section because the action is not founded on dealings which are contaminated by illegality. The party is only seeking to be restored to the status quo ante. Sec.65 also does not recognise the distinction between a contract being illegal by reason of its being opposed to public policy or morality of a contract void for other reasons. Even agreements, the performance of which is attended with penal consequences, are not outside the scope of Sec.65. At the same time, Courts will not render assistance to persons who induce innocent parties to enter into contracts of that nature by playing fraud on them to retain the benefit which they obtained by their wrong."

The Supreme Court has clearly laid down that an agreement on being discovered void and which is not enforceable as a contract can give to a person a right to restoration or compensation and have all the advantages derived by another if they are parties to the agreement and if the agreement was not invalid in the sense that it was a valid contract until it ceased to be valid for the reason of statute or otherwise, any person who has received any advantage under such a contract is bound to restore such advantage or to make compensation for it to the person from whom he received it. Courts usually in these matters also bear in mind that no one should be allowed to retain the benefit which he obtained by his own wrong. In other words, no one should be given any premium on his own recalcitrance.

11. In a Full Bench decision of this Court in Kanniappa v. Karuppiah, (1962) 2 M.L.J. 109: I.L.R. (1962) Mad. 441: 75 L.W. 119: A.I.R. 1962 Mad. 240 (F.B.), the respondent who had obtained licence under the provisions of the Central Excise and Salt Act, 1944 was carrying on business in the manufacture and sale of safety matches under the name and style of Sarada Match Works, Ramalingapuram. He admitted the appellant as a partner in the business which both agreed to run for a minimum period of six years. The agreement which was reduced to writing on 16.7.1955, expressly stipulated that the partners were to obtain an amendment of the existing licence in favour of one of them in their joint names and that the appellant should contribute capital in a sum of Rs.10,000. The firm was duly registered under the Indian Partnership Act. The appellant advanced on various dates a sum of Rs.10,000 to the respondent. The appellant and his son were put in charge of a section of the business. But by the rules framed under the Central Excise Act, a licensee who admits a partner in his business should intimate the fact to the licensing authority within 30 days thereof. The respondent did not do so and the business continued as before till the parties fell out and the respondent expelled the appellant from the business. The latter instituted the suit.

12. The principal point for determination in the above case was whether the suit partnership was illegal, in that it contravened the provisions of the Central Excise and Salt Act, 1944, and whether even if the partnership was illegal, the appellant would be entitled to the alternative relief for restitution of the moneys paid to him for the business. The trial Court as well as the first Appellate Court accepted the defence that the contract of partnership which enabled the appellant to join the business without an appropriate licence was prohibited by the statute and, therefore, illegal. They also negated the appellant's prayer for the alternative relief on the ground that it was a more equitable claim which did not deserve to be granted in the light of the circumstances that the appellant was put in charge of the business for some time.

13. The two contentions which were before Court, however, were based on the appellant's claim for accounts in two ways: (1) that the partnership was not illegal, in that one of the parties had a licence and business could be done under it. (2) further as under that rule the parties had 30 days time to intimate the authorities about the formation of the partnership, the firm should be considered to be legally constituted for that period of 30 days. The Full Bench observed:

"The second of the two contentions cannot be sustained, for the obvious reason that no contract between the parties to have a partnership for 30 days existed and indeed there could be none as what the agreement envisaged was the carrying on of the business by the firm only on obtaining a joint licence; if the licence was not obtained the contract itself would fail on account of impossibility of performance or the non-fulfilment of the basic condition thereof."

The Full Bench then noticed that the District Judge rejected both the contentions on the authority of the decision in Govindaraj v. Kandaswami Goundan, (1956) 2 M.L.J. 578: A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 186, as also took notice of the reference ordered by a Bench of this Court that an earlier Full Bench of this Court in the case of Velu Padayachi v. Sivasoorian, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 315: 63 L.W. 234: I.L.R. (1950) Mad. 987: A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 444 (F.B.), required consideration and that the decision in the case of Govindaraj v. Kandaswami Goundan, (1956) 2 M.L.J. 578: A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 186, was incorrect and then said as follows:

"It can be taken as settled law that if a contract is forbidden by a statute either expressly or by necessary implication or the contract itself is ex facie illegal or where the contract though legal can be performed only illegally or was intended to be so performed neither party would be entitled either directly or indirectly to enforce his rights under such a contract. The question then is whether the parties in the present case intended to do anything which was prohibited by law or was in contravention of the provisions of the Central Excise and Salt Act of 1944 by entering into a partnership for the sale and manufacture of safety matches. Entering into partnership by a licensee cannot be held to be per se illegal. Rule 178 of the rules framed under the Central Excise and Salt Act impliedly recognises that when it states that a licensee on entering into such partnership shall report the fact to the licensing authority within 30 days of his entering thereto. It assumes that the partnership can be entered into even before the licence is amended under Rule 178(4). In the instant case, it was the respondent who under the terms of the contract and under Rule 178 was to apply for an appropriate amendment of the licence; and he failed to do so. He, therefore, committed a breach of the terms of the agreement which disabled further performance. He will normally be under a duty to restore the benefits received under the contract which had been put an end to."

The Full Bench also referred to the judgment of the Privy Council in the case of Muralidhar Chatterjee v. International Film Co. Ltd., (1943) 2 M.L.J. 869; A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 34, to say as follows:

"In Muralidhar Chatterjee v. International Film Co. Ltd., (1943) 2 M.L.J. 869; A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 34, Sir George Ranking in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council analysed the various provisions of the Indian Contract Act and held that money received by a party to a contract in part discharge of the consideration due or to become due, though applied for defraying the expenses of carrying out this part of the contract and spent for that purpose was nevertheless a benefit or advantage had by him, liable to be restored under Sec.64, on his rescission of by contract by reason of breach thereof. It would follow that where an agreement of partnership like the present one has either become impossible of performance by reason of the fact that no joint licence had been obtained in favour of both the partners or by reason of the rescission by one party or the other to the contract the party in the position of the appellant will be entitled to restitution of the monies paid by him towards the contract."

14. When we advert to the facts of the instant case, however, we have to say that on the pleadings of the parties, it has to be held that a certain agreement was entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant in which according to the former, the latter appointed it as the sole agent for export of switchgears and according to the latter, the former's appointment as sole selling agent of the defendant ought to have been approved by the company at its next general meeting which meeting was held, but the appointment of the plaintiff as the sole selling agent was not placed before the said meeting and consequently the plaintiff ceased to be the sole selling agent on or after the said meeting and/or there was no appointment of the plaintiff as the sole selling agent in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956, the parties were, therefore, dealing as principal to principal in respect of the transaction.

15. We have already noticed in the judgment of the learned single Judge a reference to this controversy between the parties and said that in Ex.P-1 the agreement under which the plaintiff was appointed as the sole selling agent for the defendant, there was no reference at all about the placing of the said agreement before the next general body meeting of the defendant company and admittedly it was not so placed before the general body meeting held on 9.9.1968. Thus, the said agreement itself was void ab initio and as such the claim based thereon is void ab initio and is bound to fail. None of the parties, however, addressed the Court on the question whether the kind of invalidity as attached to the agreement will give to the plaintiff, if no other rights, at least the right to realise the obligations to the extent of the advantages received by the defendant in terms of Sec.64 or Sec.65 of the Contract Act. It appears that at no stage in the course of the trial any one took notice of the admitted existence of the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant and the exceptions to the rule in pari delicto potior est conditio defendantis, so that the court could test the facts and circumstances of the case to find out, whether, actually, the plaintiff and the defendant were in pari delicto potior est conditio defendantis for, if the defendant was to perform a certain act and did not do so, the defendant is the wrong-doer and the plaintiff was wronged by what it did in the sense that the defendant failed to bring on the agenda of the meeting of the company after the agreement was entered into, the question of approval thereof.

16. Dealing with the clause "delays due to causes beyond control (force majeure) will not be liable to penalties provided, however, that such causes will have been immediately notified by registered letter", Ex.P-2 purchase order and the mention under Ex.P-3 that the same general conditions will equally apply to the pay order and other evidence in this behalf, the learned single Judge has stated;

"It must be noted that even though details of the circumstances under which the defendants were prevented from fulfilling the contract are not mentioned, yet the defendants have been consistently urging that it was only because of the reasons beyond their control, they are relying on the force majeure clause and that they could not fulfil the agreement and in support of the same, they can certainly rely on the document produced by the plaintiffs. It is not in dispute that time has been periodically extended on number of occasions till 31.3.1972 and even after 31.3.1972 the plaintiffs themselves have admitted in the correspondence under Ex.D-15 that the same situation continued. In Ex.D-15 they have given details of various circumstances, which were responsible for non-fulfilment of the agreement. They have stated that the circumstances are beyond the control of the defendants and sought for extension of time till August 1972. For all these reasons, I am of the view that the defendants have satisfactorily established that they can rely on the force majeure clause in the agreement as complete answer to the suit claim and accordingly this issue is answered in favour of the defendants."

17. We are not required to go into many details, either of the facts or the principles of law in this behalf, as according to the pleadings of the defendant, its failure to perform its part of the contract was occasioned for the reasons beyond its control, meaning thereby it was not possible for it to fulfil its obligations under the contract/agreement. In Kanniappa v. Karupiah, (1962) 2 M.L.J. 109: 1 L.R. (1962) Mad. 441: 75 L.W. 119: A.I.R. 1962 Mad. 240, the Full Bench of this court has also gone into this aspect and said if it is a case of the agreement becoming impossible of performance for the reasons beyond the control of the defendant, still the law will protect the plaintiff to the extent of the obligations of the defendant as in Secs. 64 and 65 of the Contract Act. It is surprising how without asking the defendant whether it notified by registered letter to the plaintiff the causes as contemplated in the agreement, the learned single Judge has accepted the case of the defendant that the force majeure clause in the agreement is a complete answer to the suit claim. Since we have good reasons to interfere with the findings of the learned single Judge that the provisions of Sec. 294 of the Companies Act operate as a bar to the maintainability of the suit and for the reason that there has been no examination by the learned single Judge of the question falling under Sec. 64 and 65 of the Indian Contract, exceptions to the rule, in pari delicto potior est conditio defendantis and whether the plaintiff and the defendant are in in pari delicto potior est conditio defendantis for which specific issues are necessary, we propose to remand the case. We do not proceed to examine the evidence on the question whether the defendant can rely on force majeure clause in the agreement as a complete answer to the suit claim ourselves. We think our recording that the finding in this behalf by the learned single Judge in the Judgment is without sufficient consideration of the principles of law and the evidence on the subject will be enough for the limited purpose of remand. There are findings recorded in the impugned judgment with respect to certain claims and a certain quantum of damages has also been determined by the learned single Judge. The learned single Judge, as we have already noticed, has also examined the counter claim of the defendant and found that the claim of accounting is justifiable but not any damages on account of penalty levied for the delayed delivery and collected by the foreign buyers. The case of the parties in this regard, however, will have to be redetermined as damages for the alleged breach of contract and compensation in terms of Secs. 64 and 65 of the Contract Act create different kind of obligations and require different kind of evidence. Since we are interfering with the impugned judgment and remitting the case for a fresh hearing, after reframing the issues in the light of the observations made above, we think it proper to reopen the determination of the issues as to the quantum of compensation to either side or accounting as the case may be.

18. In view of what has been found by us, we have no hesitation in setting aside the impugned judgment and remitting the case to the trial court for rehearing in accordance with law after reframing the issues and if necessary affording opportunity to the parties to adduce evidence, if any.

19. In the result, the appeal is allowed, the impugned judgment is set aside and the case is remitted for trial and disposal in the light of the observations made above. There shall be no order as to costs. Court-fee paid on the memorandum of appeal will be refunded in accordance with law.

R.Ashok and another
v.

...Appellants

R.Bhagavathi Ammal (Deceased) and others

...Respondents.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (LXXVIII of 1956), Secs.8 and 11 - Widow having no child - Co-widow having a child through her husband - Widow whether can adopt a son or daughter to herself - Effect of such adoption.

There is a strong reason for accepting the right of a widow to adopt a son or daughter for herself even though there may be a child to her co-widow through her husband for the reason of the concept of full blood, half blood and uterine blood relationship that have been one of the vital postulates of the rule of inheritance when two persons stand together to inherit a certain property. A son of the co-widow is the step-son to a Hindu widow and it is different in the case of inheritance of the properties exclusively going to the step son in the same moiety as he is equal to her son when the devolution as contemplated under Sec.15 of the Hindu Succession Act is confined to the sons and daughters including the children or predeceased son or daughter and the husband and consequently upon the basis of the husband. Chapter II of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 which regulates adoptions by a male or female Hindu does not in any way inhibit a Hindu female who is not married and if married whose marriage has been dissolved or whose husband is dead or has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been so declared by a Court of competent jurisdiction from adopting a child either male or female if her husband has left a child through another wife. If such an inhibition is to be found, then courts will have to read in Sec.8 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, additional Words that only such female Hindu whose husband is dead and has not left a child through another wife can alone adopt. That will be a violation of the provisions in Secs.8 and 11 of the Act. The conditions in Sec.11 leave no room to doubt that in the case of the adoptive father, he should not have a son, son's son or son's son's son (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption and in the case of adoptive mother, she should not have son or son's son or son's son's son (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adopting) the right given to the adoptive mother is independent of the right given to the adoptive father. This right she can exercise not on the basis of the existence of a son to her husband but a son to herself. A son to a co-widow may be a step-son to her but cannot be accepted as a son for the purpose of adoption. As the effect of the adoption, the child will not only become entitled to inherit the properties exclusively belonging to his/her father but also get all such rights that would accrue to a son to the adoptive mother because such a son enters into the co-parcenary as found by the Supreme Court in the case of a joint family as also otherwise entitled to intestate succession to the estate of her mother's husband who becomes the fictional or legal father. Appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the Order of Venugopal, J. dated 8.2.1984 and made in the exercise of the Special Original Jurisdiction of the High Court in Appeal No.504 of 1979, etc.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.:- This appeal on behalf of the first defendant has arisen out of a proceeding in O.S.No.115 of 1977 of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Nagercoil for declaration of the plaintiff's title and for recovery of possession of the suit property and other reliefs. The suit property originally belonged to one Andiappa Chettiar. He had two daughters Valliammal and Umayaparvathi. The plaintiff is the son of Valliammal, Umayaparvathi's husband Jeevarathinam Chettiar had two wives. The first wife is Umaayaparvathi and the second wife is Iyyin Pillai. The first defendant (appellant) is the son of the second defendant and the second defendant is the son through the abovesaid Iyyin Pillai, the second wife. Andiappa Chettiar executed a Will under which, on his demise, Umayaparvathi got a life estate over the suit property and the vested remainder was left with the plaintiff and his brother Rengaswami, who predeceased him. Umayaparvathi, adopted the first defendant as her son and executed a Will with regard to the suit property in his favour.

2. According to the plaintiff Umayaparvathi was not competent to adopt a son after the death of her husband since her husband Jeevarathinam had another wife Valliammal and through him, sons including the plaintiff. She also had no right except the limited estate that had been given to her in the property to execute a Will. The first defendant, however pleaded that Umayaparvathi validly adopted him by observing all formalities and she was perfectly competent to bequeath the suit property in favour of her adopted son, the first defendant for her life interest got enlarged into an absolute estate.

3. The trial court found that on the date of death of Andiappa Chettiar, the succession opened and Umayaparvathi got only a life interest and as she had got only a life interest since she had no children the contingent interest was enlarged into a vested remainder to Valliammal's heirs; that as Umayaparvathi had got only a life interest she cannot make a bequest by conveying absolute interest in favour of the first defendant and that the adoption of the first defendant by Umayaparvathi was invalid in law and the plaintiff is entitled to the suit property on the death of Umayaparvathi and the first defendant, the alleged adopted son did not derive any interest over the suit property on the basis of the Will executed by Andiappa Chettiar.

4. In the appeal, A.S.No.804 of 1979, that was brought to this Court, it was contended that the legacy bequeathed in favour of Valliammal's heirs being contingent on Umayaparvathi having no children and the bequest to the legatee being a contingent interest contingent on Umayaparvathi dying without children succession to the heirs of Valliammal would open only when Umayaparvathi died without children and that even if the bequest to unborn children of Umayaparvathi was void, the provisions of the Hindu Succession Act would apply and the first defendant being the adopted son of Umayaparvathi was entitled to a half share in the suit property. The learned Judge has, however, found on both counts against the first defendant/appellant.

5. The findings aforementioned, however, are assailed before us by learned counsel for the appellant for the reason inter alia that the court below has fallen in error in not appreciating the role that the provisions in the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, introduced in the field of law of adoption and the fact that once adoption is found valid as a consequence thereof, the first defendant would be entitled to a share in the property along with the plaintiff.

6. Since no serious arguments have been advanced before us with respect to the finding that the bequest made under Ex.A-1 in favour of the children of Umayaparvathi is void we do not enter into any discussion in this behalf. We do not also advert to the question as to whether the Will which Umayaparvathi executed could not confer absolute interest in favour of the first defendant as parties appeared to take the position that in case it is found that Umayaparvathi had validly adopted the first defendant, the plaintiff and defendants would share the properties in equal moieties.

7. The origin of the custom of adoption is lost in antiquity. It has been recognised for the reasons of sashtric belief that a male child alone would discharge the spiritual debts and unless there is a son the spiritual welfare of the soul is in jeopardy. Texts recognize that a male Hindu could adopt a son for himself and his wife not only without consulting his wife but even in spite of her opposition but a wife could not adopt a son without being authorised by her husband. An Act to amend and codify the law relating to adoptions and maintenance among Hindus known as the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, hereinafter referred to as 'the Act' brought about some revolutionary changes in the known law of adoption. The Chapter of the Act dealing with 'Adoption' in Sec.5 thereof states that no adoption shall be made after the commencement of the Act by or to a Hindu except in accordance with the provisions contained in the Chapter (viz. Chapter II) and any adoption made in contravention of the said provisions shall be void. After stating about the requisites of a valid adoption and saying that in a valid adoption the person adopted not only has the capacity but also the right to take in adoption; the Act had recognised the capacity of a male Hindu to take in adoption but added that if he has a wife living he shall not adopt except with the consent of his wife unless the wife has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a Court of Competent jurisdiction of unsound mind. The Act as in Sec.8, however, recognizes the capacity of a female Hindu to take in adoption stating as follows:

"8. Capacity of a female Hindu to take in adoption: Any female Hindu-

- (a) who is of sound mind,
- (b) who is not a minor, and
- (c) who is not married, or if married, whose marriage has been dissolved or whose husband is dead or has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a Court of competent jurisdiction to be of unsound mind, has the capacity to take a son or daughter in adoption."

After providing as to persons capable of giving in adoption and persons who may be adopted, the Act has enumerated under Sec.11 other conditions of a valid adoption. It reads as follows: "In every adoption, the following conditions must be complied with:

(i) If the adoption is of a son, the adoptive father or mother by whom the adoption is made must not have a Hindu daughter or son's daughter (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption...

(ii) If the adoption is of a daughter, the adoptive father or mother by whom the adoption is made must not have a Hindu daughter or son's daughter (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption;

(iii) if the adoption is by a male and the person to be adopted is a female the adoptive father is at least twenty-one years older than the person to be adopted;

(iv) If the adoption is by a female and the person to be adopted is a male, the adoptive mother is at least twenty-one years older than the person to be adopted;

(v) the same child may not be adopted simultaneously by two or more persons;

(vi) the child to be adopted must be actually given and taken in adoption by the parents or guardian concerned or under their authority with intent to transfer the child from the family of its birth (or in the case of an abandoned child or a child whose parentage is not known, from the place or family where it has been brought up) to the family of its adoption;

Provided that the performance of Datta Homam shall not be essential to the validity of an adoption."

Marked departures from the Shastric Law, however, have not completely removed control upon the power of the adoptive father or mother. The general conditions in Sec.11 for a valid adoption are besides the conditions, which are enumerated in the provisions preceding that section. Sec.12 which precede the general conditions of adoption, however, states what are the effects of adoption in these words:

"An adopted child shall be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes with effect from the date of the adoption and from such date all the ties of the child in the family of his or her birth shall be deemed to be severed and replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family;

Provided that--

- (a) the child cannot marry any person whom he or she could not have married if he or she had continued in the family of his or her birth;
- (b) any property which vested in the adopted child before the adoption shall continue to vest in such person subject to the obligations, if any, attaching to the ownership of such property, including the obligation to maintain relatives in the family of his or her birth;
- (c) the adopted child shall not divest any person of any estate which vested in him or her before the adoption."

The circumstances in which Umayaparvathy came to adopt the first defendant are not in dispute. Umayaparvathy is the first wife of her husband Jeevarathinam Chettiar. Through his second wife, Jeevarathinam had a son, the second defendant. The first defendant, the adopted son of Umayaparvathy, is the second defendant's natural son. The learned single Judge has come to the conclusion that though the adoption is by the widow Umayaparvathy, the adopted son became a member of the widow's family with the ties of relationship with the deceased husband of the widow as his adoptive father, but, has in the same breath, stated, "This being the effect of adoption, a widow cannot adopt a son if her husband has already a natural son through her or through another wife. To test the validity of an adoption, we have not only to see whether the conditions laid down under Sec.11 for a valid adoption are complied with but also to see whether the effect of adoption, as provided under Sec.12 in any way infringes the conditions imposed under Sec.11. Thus, Secs.11 and 12 are interlinked and interconnected and Sec.11 cannot be read in isolation as sought to be made out by the learned counsel for the appellant. Both Secs.11 and 12 have to be read together and if the effect of adoption is such that it infringes the conditions laid down under Sec.11, the adoption has to be held invalid. In the present case, the effect of adoption is that the adopted son by the widow is son, not only to her but also to her husband and as the husband has already a natural son in existence through his second wife, the adoption made by the widow infringes the condition laid down under Sec.11(1) of the Act and consequently, the adoption has to be held as void."

We have seen above that this Act has particularly introduced a provision in Sec.8 about the capacity of a female Hindu to take in adoption a son or a daughter. This section states that any female of sound mind, not a minor and who is not married, or if married, whose marriage has been dissolved or whose husband is dead or has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a Court of competent jurisdiction to be of unsound mind as the capacity to take a son or daughter in adoption. Thus, a widow or a divorced wife has been given the capacity to take a son or daughter in adoption. Can this power to adopt be restricted if there is a child born to the husband of a divorced wife, who married another woman, after divorcing her and can a widow be denied the capacity to adopt a child on the ground that her husband had a child through another wife? Learned single Judge has, on the basis of the principles that appeared to merge from the effect of adoption, as stated in Sec.12 of the Act, taken the view that a widow whose husband had a son by another woman, cannot adopt. In effect, thus a divorced wife will have no capacity to adopt a son to herself, if her husband remarried and got a child by the second wife. We shall dilate a little further into it, but before we do so, we may have taken notice of the definition of the word 'agnate' in Sec.3 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, which says, one person is said to be an agnate of another if the two are related by blood or adoption wholly through males and the definition of 'cognate', which says, one person, is said to be a 'cognate' of another if the two are related by blood or adoption but not wholly through males. The word 'related' has been defined in this section of the Hindu Succession Act to mean related by legitimate kinship and provided that illegitimate child shall be deemed to be related to their mother and to one another and their legitimate descendants shall be deemed to be related to them and to one another; and any word expressing relationship or denoting a relative shall be construed accordingly. It is unnecessary to say that sons are class I heirs, both of a male Hindu as well as a female Hindu. But, the Hindu Succession Act, in Sec.9 says, those in class I shall take simultaneously and to the exclusions of all other heirs and Sec.10 says, the property of an intestate shall be divided among the heirs in class I of the schedule in accordance with the following rules-

Rule 1: The intestate's widow or if there are more widows than one, all the widows together, shall take one share.

Rule 2: The surviving sons and daughters and the mother of the intestate shall each take one share;

Rule 3: The heirs in the branch of each predeceased daughter of the intestate shall take between them one share and the distribution of the share referred to in the last rule shall be one among the heirs in the branch of the predeceased son, widow or widows together and the surviving sons and daughters equal portions and the branch of predeceased sons the same portion and among the heirs in the branch of the predeceased daughter, the surviving sons and daughters in equal portions. We have proceeded in this case on the footing, since it has been conceded that there would be no use contesting that Umayaparvathy had a limited interest or that she had enlarged her interest in the property because in any case the validity of the adoption alone shall permit the first-defendant to inherit as the son of Umayaparvathy any share in the estate of the family of Andiappa Chettiar. It has not been contested seriously before us that in case adoption is found valid, the second defendant, as the son of Umayaparvathy shall be entitled to half of the estate and the remaining half will go to the child of Valliammal. A learned single Judge of this Court in Arumugha Udayar v. Valliammal, A.I.R. 1969 Mad. 72, has taken the view that a son adopted by the widow does not become adopted of deceased husband conferring upon him rights of inheritance to the estate of the deceased husband. He, in his detailed study of the law on the subject, found a provision in Sec.14 of the Adoption Act of some help, which says, where a Hindu who has a wife living adopts a child, she shall be deemed to be the adoptive mother and where an adoption has been made with the consent of more than one wife, the senior-most in marriage among them shall be deemed to be the adoptive mother and the others to be step-mothers. Where a widower or a bachelor adopts a child, any wife whom he subsequently marries shall be deemed to be the step-mother of the adopted child, and where a widow or an unmarried woman adopts a child, any husband whom she marries subsequently shall be deemed to be the step-father of the adopted child. The Supreme Court, however, in the case of Sawan Ram v. Kalwanti, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1761, commenting upon a similar view expressed in a judgment of the Andhra Pradesh High Court in Hanumantha Rao v. Hanumayya, I.L.R. 1966 A.P. 140, wherein the Andhra Pradesh High Court has observed:

"The Act has made a notable departure from the previous law in allowing a widow to adopt a son or daughter to herself in her own right. Under the Act, there is no question of the adopted child divesting of any property vested in any person or even in herself. The provisions of Sec.13 make this position clear, by providing that an adoption does not deprive the adoptive father or mother of the power to dispose of his or her property by transfer inter vivos or by will..... On a fair interpretation of the provisions of Sec.12 of the Act, we are of the opinion that the section has the effect of abrogating ordinary rule of Mitakshara Law that, as a result of the adoption made by the widow, the adoptee acquires rights to the share of his deceased adoptive father which has passed by survivorship to his father's brothers."

The Supreme Court has said,

"We are unable to accept this interpretation of the provisions of the Act by the Andhra Pradesh High Court as it appears to us that the High Court ignored two important provisions of the Act and did not consider their effect when arriving at its decision. The first provision, which is of great significance, is contained in Sec.5(1) of the Act, which lays down:

"No adoption shall be made after the commencement of this Act by or to a Hindu except in accordance with the provisions contained in this Chapter and any adoption made in contravention of the said provisions shall be void'. It is significant that, in this section, the adoption to be made is mentioned as 'by order to a Hindu'. Thus, adoption is envisaged as being of two kinds. One is adoption by a Hindu and the other is adoption to a Hindu. If the view canvassed on behalf of the appellant be accepted, the consequence will be that there will be only adoptions by Hindu and not to Hindus. On the face of it, adoption to a Hindu was intended to cover cases where an adoption is by one person, while the child adopted becomes the adopted son of another person also. It is only in such a case that it can be said that the adoption has been made to that other person. The most common instance will naturally be that of adoption by a female Hindu, who is married and whose husband is dead, or has completely and finally renounced the world, or has been declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be of unsound mind. In such a case, the actual adoption would be by the female Hindu, while the adoption will be not only to herself, but also to her husband who is dead, or has completely and finally renounced the world or has been declared to be of unsound mind. The second provision, which was ignored by the Andhra Pradesh High Court is one contained in Sec.12 itself. The section, in its principal clause not only lays down that the adopted child shall be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes with effect from the date of the adoption, but in addition, goes on to define the rights of such an adopted child. It lays down that from such date all the ties of the child in the family of his or her birth shall be deemed to be severed and replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family. A question naturally arises which is the adoptive family of a child who is adopted by a widow, or by a married woman whose husband has completely and finally renounced the world or has been declared to be of unsound mind even though alive. It is well recognised that, after a female is married, she belongs to the family of her husband. The child adopted by her must also, therefore, belong to the same family. On adoption by a widow, therefore, the adopted son is to be deemed to be a member of the family of the deceased husband of the widow. Further still, he loses all his rights in the family of his birth and those rights are replaced by the rights created by the adoption in the adoptive family. The right, which the child had, to succeed to property by virtue of being the son of his natural father, in the family of his birth is, thus, clearly to be replaced by similar rights in the adoptive family and consequently, he would certainly obtain those rights in the capacity of a member of that family as an adopted son of the deceased husband of the widow, or the married female, taking him in adoption. This provision in Sec.12 of the Act, thus itself makes it clear that, on adoption by a Hindu female who has been married the adopted son or will, in effect, be the adopted son of her husband also. This aspect was ignored by the Andhra Pradesh High Court when dealing with the effect of the language used in other parts of this section". The Supreme Court again in the case of Sitabai v. Ramchandra, A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 343: (1970)1 S.C.J. 476: (1970)2 S.C.R. 1: 1970 S.C.D. 420: (1970)1 S.C.A. 222, adverted to this aspect of the law and in this judgment has said as follows:

"It is clear on a reading of the main part of Sec.12 and sub-sec.(VI) of Sec.11 that the effect of adoption under the Act is that it brings about severance of all ties of the child given in adoption in the family of his or her birth. The child altogether ceases to have any ties with the family of his birth. Correspondingly, these very ties are automatically replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family. The legal effect of giving the child in adoption must therefore be to transfer the child from the family of its birth to the family of its adoption. The result is, as mentioned in Sec.11(4) namely where a wife is living, adoption by the husband results in the adoption of the child by both these spouses; the child is not only the child of the adoptive father, but also of the adoptive mother. In case of there being two wives, the child becomes the adoptive child of the senior-most wife in marriage, the junior wife becoming the step-mother of the adopted child. Even when a widower or a bachelor adopts a child, and he gets married subsequent to the adoption his wife becomes the step-mother of the adopted child, when a widow or an unmarried woman adopts a child, any husband she marries subsequent to adoption becomes the step-father of the adopted child. The scheme of Secs.11 and 12, therefore, is that in the case of adoption by a widow the adopted child becomes absorbed in the adoptive family to which the widow belonged. In other words, the child adopted is tied with the relationship of sonship with the deceased husband of the widow. The other collateral relations of the husband would be connected with the child through that deceased husband of the widow. For instance, the husband's brother would necessarily be the uncle of the adopted child. The daughter of the adoptive mother (and father) would necessarily be the sister of the adopted son and in this way, the adopted son would become a member of the widow's family, with the ties of relationship with the deceased husband of the widow as his adoptive father. It is true that Sec.14 of the Act does not expressly state that the child adopted by the widow becomes the adopted son of the husband of the widow. But, it is a necessary implication of Secs.12 and 14 of the Act that a son adopted by the widow becomes a son not only of the widow but also of the deceased husband. It is for this reason that we find in Sub-sec.(4) of Sec.14, a provision that where a widow adopts a child and subsequently marries a husband, the husband becomes the 'step-father' of the adopted child. The true effect and interpretation of Secs.11 and 12 of Act No.78 of 1956 therefore is that when either of the spouse adopts a child, all the ties of the child in the family of his or her birth become completely severed and these are all replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family. In other words, the result of adoption by either spouse is that the adoptive child becomes the child of both the spouses. This view is borne out by the decision of the Bombay High Court in Ankush Narayan v. Janabai Rama Sawat, 67 Bom.L.R. 864: A.I.R. 1966 Bom. 174. It follows that in the present case, plaintiff No.2 Suresh Chandra, when he was adopted by Bhagirath's widow, became the adopted son of both the widow and her deceased husband Bhagirath and, therefore, became a coparcener with Dulichand in the joint family properties. After the death of Dulichand, plaintiff No.2 became the sole surviving coparcener and was entitled to the possession of all joint family properties. The Additional District Judge was, therefore, right in granting a decree in favour of the plaintiff No.2 declaring his title to the agricultural lands in the village Palasia and half share of the house situated in the village".

The Supreme Court reiterated this view in the case of G.Hanumantha v. Nagappa, A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1401: 1972 S.C.D. 231: (1972) 3 S.C.R. 360. A Bench of the Karnataka High Court in Babu Nanjappa v. Arunkumar, A.I.R. 1988 Karn. 139, has after taking notice of all relevant authorities on the subject found, on the set of facts that were in the case, that if adoption, after the adoption Act came into force, is found valid, then the question that the adopted son was not born to his father would not be relevant for entitling the adopted child to claim a share in the family property as a coparcener.

8. The principles of law aforesaid lead us to split the questions as to validity of adoption and the right of the adopted child in the estate of the husband of the widow, who adopted him, for the validity of the adoption has absolutely no correlation with the right of the adopted child in the estate of the husband of the adoptive mother. The question that is posed before us, however, is slightly different from what has been decided by the Supreme Court or other courts. No case law has been brought to our notice in which a woman, whose husband has died, and who does not have a child of her own, was not found capable to adopt on the ground that her co-widow had a child of her husband.

9. There is a strong reason for accepting the right of a widow to adopt a son or daughter for herself even though there may be a child to her co-widow through her husband for the reason of the concept of the full blood, half blood and uterine blood relationship that have been one of the vital postulates of the rule of inheritance when two persons stand together to inherit a certain property. Two persons are said to be related to each other by full blood when they are descended from a common ancestor by the same wife and by half blood when they are descended from a common ancestor but by different wives and two persons are said to be related to each other by uterine blood when they are descended from a common ancestress but by different husbands. (See: Sec.3(1)(c) of the Hindu Succession Act). Sec.18 of the Hindu Succession Act says:

"Full blood preferred to half blood. Heirs related to an intestate by full blood shall be preferred to heirs related by half blood, if the nature of the relationship is the same in every other respect".

A son of the co-widow is the step-son to a Hindu widow and it is difficult in the case of inheritance of the properties exclusively belonging to her going to the step-son in the same moiety as if he is equal to her son when the devolution as contemplated under Sec.15 of the Hindu Succession Act is confined to the sons and daughters including the children or predeceased son or daughter and the husband and consequently upon the basis of the husband. Chapter II of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, which regulates adoptions by a male or female Hindu does not in any way inhibit a Hindu female who is not married and if married whose marriage has been dissolved or whose husband is dead or has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been so declared by a court of competent jurisdiction, from adopting a child either male or female if her husband has left a child through another wife. If such inhibition has to be found then, courts will have to read in Sec.8 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, additional words that only such female Hindu whose husband is dead and has not left a child through another wife can alone adopt. That will be, in our opinion, a violation of the provisions in Secs.8 and 11 of the Act. The conditions in Sec.11 leave no room to doubt that in the case of the adoptive father he should not have a son, son's son or son's, son's son (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption and in the case of the adoptive mother she should not have a son, son's son or son's son's son (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption). The right given to the adoptive mother is independent of the right given to the adoptive father. This right she can exercise not on the basis of the existence of a son to her husband but a son to herself. A son to a co-widow may be a step-son to her but cannot be accepted as a son for the purpose of adoption.

10. Once this question of the right of the widow who adopts a son to herself is answered then the question as to the effect of the adoption would start. As the effect of the adoption the child will not only become entitled to inherit the properties exclusively belonging to his/her father but also get all such rights that would accrue to a son to the adoptive mother because such a son enters into the coparcenary as found by the Supreme Court in the case of a joint family as also otherwise entitled to intestate succession to the estate of her mother's husband who becomes the fictional or legal father.

11. There has been some argument before us that the impugned property exclusively belonged to Umayaparvathi as it had been donated to her by her father and thus it has to devolve upon her adopted son in accordance with the rule of succession. We have quite a few reservations however to this for the reasons that the Will under which Valliammal and Umayaparvathi got the properties in equal moiety does not appear to vest any property alone in her and there had been a time when she alone held the property it was on account of the death of Valliammal who predeceased her.

12. We, therefore, do not propose to accept the above contention. Since we have, however, held that no invalidity in the adoption of the first defendant by Umayaparvathi and we have also found that as a consequence of the adoption the first defendant would become entitled to inherit any property that vested in her mother, we find that the first defendant is entitled to take the share of Umayaparvathi in the estate jointly held by Valliammal and Umayaparvathi. As a result of this finding we hold that the first defendant would be entitled to a share equally with the plaintiff. The appeal is accordingly allowed to the extent indicated above. The decree shall be drawn accordingly. No costs.

JUDGMENT:- The defendant-Assistant Commissioner of the Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments (Administrative) Department is the appellant in this second appeal against the reversing judgment in A.S.No.18 of 1980 on the file of the Additional Sub Court, Tuticorin. The suit O.S.No.135 of 1977 on the file of the District Munsif's Court, Tuticorin was filed by the five respondents-plaintiffs as representatives of Hindu Nadar Community of Sebathiapuram, hamlet of Sawyerpuram, Srivaikuntam Taluk. It is for a declaration that the suit temples viz., Muthumalai Amman Temple, Narayanaswamy Temple and Ananda Vinayagar temple are denominational temples belonging to the abovesaid plaintiffs' community and for a consequential permanent injunction.

2. The main defence to the suit is that the said

Temples are not such denominational temples. One other defence is that the suit is bad for mis-joinder of necessary party viz., the Commissioner, H.R. & C.E. Department, Madras. The trial court, though held that the suit is not bad for mis-joinder of necessary party as claimed by the defendant, accepted the defence that the suit temples are not denominational temples and so dismissed the suit. The plaintiffs preferred the above referred to first appeal, wherein the lower appellate court though concurred with the trial court on the abovesaid question of mis-joinder, held that the suit temples are denominational temples and decreed the suit as prayed for and allowed the appeal. Aggrieved by the said decision of the lower appellate court, the defendant has preferred this second appeal.

3. No doubt, the lower appellate court has found that the suit temples were founded by the above referred to Hindu Nadars of Sebathiapuram from out of their own funds as disclosed by Exs.A-4 to A-8, that the other community people living in Sebathiapuram did not have any right of management in the suit temples and that P.Ws.1 and 2 had spoken to the fact that Kodai Festival was used to be celebrated from out of the contribution collected from the members of Hindu Nadar community of Sebathiapuram and not from Hindu Nadars of other villages and from the members of other community of Sebathiapuram.

4. The learned counsel for the appellant seriously argues the following submission:

There is no finding by the lower appellate court as to whether the abovesaid Hindu Nadars are a "religious denomination" There is also no plea or proof regarding the ingredients of the term "religious denomination" as applied to the above referred to Hindu Nadar Community of Sebathiapuram. In this connection, he drew my attention to the decisions in S.P.Mittal v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 1: (1983)1 S.C.J. 45: (1983)1 S.C.R. 729: (1983)1 S.C.C. 51, Acharya Jagdiswaran v. Commissioner of Police and another, 1983 Cr.L.J. 1872: (1983)4 S.C.C. 522: 1983 S.C.C. (Cr.) 1: A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 51, and Assistant Commissioner, H.R. and C.E., Salem, etc. v. Nattamai K.S.Ellappa, etc., 100 L.W. 240.

5. The learned counsel for the respondents made the following submissions in reply: There is plea regarding the necessary ingredients of the term "religious denomination" as it is applied to the above referred to Nadar community. The above referred to Supreme Court decisions explaining the ingredients of religious denomination, will not apply in the present case. The abovesaid S.P. Mittal v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 1: (1983)1 S.C.J. 45: (1983)1 S.C.R. 729: (1983)1 S.C.C. 51, related not to a temple, but to a society called Sri Aurobindo Society. The abovesaid Nadar community is a separate sect of Hindus and no further proof is required to establish that they belong to a religious denomination. In Sankar-kumara Nadar v. Assistant Commissioner, H.R. and C.E., (1975)1 M.L.J. 12 (D.B.), a particular temple in the village Sivagurnathapuram belonging to Hindu Nadars of that village was held to be a denominational temple.

6. I have considered the rival submissions. To find out whether the suit temple is a denominational temple belonging to the abovesaid Hindu Nadar community of the abovesaid village Sebathiapuram, firstly, it has to be seen whether the said community of the said village is a religious denomination by itself. If it is found to be so, then consequently, it has to be seen whether the said community has established the said temple and whether it had exclusive right of management of the said temple. Both these requirements should not be mixed up and it has to be seen whether each of the said requirements is satisfied. This aspect has also been pointed out in the abovesaid Assistant Commissioner, H.R. and C.E., Salem, etc. v. Nattamai K.S. Ellappa, etc., 100 L.W. 240, in paragraph 23 thereof.

7. But, I find that the lower appellate court has not given a finding at all regarding the first of the abovesaid two questions to be decided. In fact, the term 'religious denomination' according to the decision in S.P. Mittal v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 1: (1983)1 S.C.J. 45: (1983)1 S.C.R. 729: (1983)1 S.C.C. 51, and the earlier decisions of the Supreme Court must satisfy the following three conditions:

- (1) It must be a collection of individuals who have a system of beliefs or doctrines which they regard as conducive to their spiritual well-being, that is, a common faith;
- (2) Common organisation and
- (3) Designation by a distinctive name.

Even assuming that there is satisfaction of second and third of the abovesaid three conditions in the present case, it has to be seen whether the first of the three conditions has been satisfied. Regarding this, first of all, it has to be seen whether there is plea to this effect. If there is plea, we have to see whether there is proof to that effect. The learned Counsel for the respondents-plaintiffs points out that the following passages in the plaint would amount to the abovesaid plea relating to the first of the abovesaid conditions:

"Hindu Nadars are a minority community with peculiar customs, manners and mode of religious worship, living mostly in Tirunelveli, Ramnad, Madurai Districts, of Tamil Nadu. At Sebathiayapuram, a section of that community is living and their ancestors have put up from out of their own funds, the three temples. ... The Hindu Nadars, whom the plaintiffs represent have a special mode of worship with distinct specific rituals. The plaintiffs collect subscription from among themselves and celebrate 'Kodai' festival in the month of Panguni and in Adi every year. The 'Kodai' festival itself is evolved by the plaintiffs as a separate cult not ordinarily followed by the recognised Siva and Vishnu Temples. The plaintiffs also offer special pujas at the time of Vinayagasadurthi....."

But, even after reading the above passages, I am unable to say that they speak about the abovesaid first condition mentioned in the Supreme Court decision. In the said first condition what is mentioned is that the collective body of individuals concerned must have a "system of beliefs or doctrines". Such system of beliefs or doctrines is not spoken to in the abovesaid passages. What is mentioned in the said passages is only about the mode or manner of worship and not any system of belief or doctrine, which is conducive to the spiritual well-being of the abovesaid Nadar community. No doubt, while referring to Kodai Festival, it is mentioned that it is evolved by the plaintiffs as a separate cult. The word "cult" may no doubt refer to a system of religious belief. But the celebration of a particular festival would normally represent only a mode of worship and not strictly a system of religious belief.

7-A. Anyway, in having used the word "cult", if it is assumed that there is the requisite plea, it has to be seen whether there is proof regarding the abovesaid first condition mentioned in the Supreme Court decisions. But, I find that neither of the two witnesses, who have given evidence on behalf of the plaintiffs, have spoken to this fact, viz., that the abovesaid Nadar Community of the abovesaid village had any such separate system of beliefs or doctrines which they regard as conducive to their spiritual well-being. P.W.1, the Accountant of the abovesaid community only spoke about the management of the abovesaid temples being exclusively with the said community. Likewise, P.W.2, the 4th plaintiff also laid emphasis on the abovesaid management aspect. Though he also spoke about the abovesaid Kodai festival, he did not say that the said Kodai festival was evolved by the abovesaid Nadar community of the abovesaid village as a separate cult not ordinarily followed by the recognised Siva and Vishnu Temples. In fact, he also did not speak of any exclusive system of beliefs or doctrines held by the abovesaid Nadar Community of the abovesaid village. There is also no documentary evidence showing and such system of beliefs or doctrines of the abovesaid community.

7-B. In Assistant Commissioner, H.R. and C.E., Salem, etc. v. Nattamai K.S. Ellappa, etc., 100 L.W. 240, also it has been observed thus:

"As seen from the decision of the Supreme Court the words 'Religious denomination' must take their colour from the word 'Religion'. It is, therefore, clear that the common faith of the community should be based on religion. It is essential that they should have common religious tenets. The basic chord which connects them should be religion and not anything else. If the aforesaid tests are applied in the present case, it will be seen that Senguntha Mudaliar community of Tharamangalam cannot claim to be a religious denomination. There is absolutely no evidence on record to prove that the members of the community have common religious tenets peculiar to themselves other than those which are common to the entire Hindu community..... It is well known that communities were formed in this country on account of various reasons under several circumstances. It is not as if religion is the only common bond for the members of the communities found in this country. Instances are not wanting where communities were formed on the basis of profession or business or calling."

While so, it is difficult to hold that the abovesaid community of the abovesaid village in the present case comes under the term "religious denomination".

7-C. No doubt, earlier, the Supreme Court in one other decision, viz., The Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar of Sri Shirur Mutt, (1954) 1 M.L.J. 596: 1954 S.C.J. 335: 1954 S.C.R. 1005: 1954 M.W.N. 363: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 282, observed thus:

"After Sankara, came a galaxy of religious teachers and philosophers who founded the different sects and sub-sects of the Hindu Religion that we find in India at the present day. Each one of such sects or sub-sects can certainly be called a religious denomination, as it is designated by a distinctive name, in many cases it is the name of the founder and has a common faith and common spiritual organization."

But, I think the above reference to sects and sub-sects which go by the name of founder if the sect or sub-sect is different from the different castes in the Hindu religion, one of which, viz., the Nadars, to which the plaintiffs claim to belong. Further, in the abovesaid observation of the Supreme Court in The Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar of Sri Shirpur Mutt, (1954) 1 M.L.J. 596: 1954 S.C.J. 335: 1954 S.C.R. 1005: 1954 M.W.N. 363: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 282, while noting that one of such sects or sub-sects can certainly be called a religious denomination, the Supreme Court proceeds on the assumption that each of them has a separate system of beliefs or doctrines which is regarded as conducive to its spiritual well-being.

7-D. At any rate, in the subsequent Supreme Court decision, viz., the above referred to S.P. Mittal v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 1: (1983) 1 S.C.J. 45: (1983) 1 S.C.R. 729: (1983) 1 S.C.C. 51 and Acharya Jagdiswaran v. Commissioner of Police and another, 1983 Cr.L.J. 1872: (1983) 4 S.C.C. 522: 1983 S.C.C. (Cr.) 1: A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 51, it is specifically reiterated that all the abovesaid three conditions must be satisfied if a group or community could be called a "religious denomination". I may also state that the decision in K. Eranna v. Commissioner, H.R. and C.E., A.I.R. 1970 Mysore. 191, cited by the learned Counsel for the respondents will have no application to the present case. There, it was only held that Hindus in the larger sense including all sections of Hindus constitute a religious denomination. In view of the above, I am of the view that the plaintiffs have not established that the abovesaid Hindu Nadar Community of the abovesaid village would come within the definition of the religious denomination,

7-E. In this context I must also point out that the case of the plaintiffs is not that Hindu Nadars in general constitute a religious denomination, but that the Hindu Nadars of the abovesaid Sebatthiapuram village would constitute a religious denomination. To this effect also, there is no proof in present case.

8. No doubt in Sarikarakumara Nadar v. Assistant Commissioner, H.R. and C.E., (1975) 1 M.L.J. 12 (D.B.), it was held that the suit temple therein was a denominational temple belonging exclusively to the Hindu Nadars of Sivagurunathapuram village. But, simply because it was held so in that case, it cannot be held in the present case that the suit temples herein are denominational temples exclusively belonging to the Hindu Nadars of Sebatthiapuram village, holding that the said Nadars constitute a religious denomination. Each case turns on its facts and unless there is the required plea and proof satisfying the above laid down conditions set out by Supreme Court decisions, the relief prayed for in the present suit, cannot be given.

9. No doubt, the learned counsel for respondents drew my attention to the decision in A.V. Sabha v. H.C. and R.I. and E., Commissioner, Hyderabad, A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 475, also and sought to contend that this question regarding religious denomination is a question of fact and the decision arrived at by the lower appellate court should not be disturbed. The said Supreme Court decision, did not say positively that the said question is only a question of fact. In fact, the Supreme Court, in the abovesaid decision, extracts the following observation from the judgment of the High Court, which earlier decided the case:

"Likewise, whether a particular religious or charitable institution is or is not a religious denomination or any section thereof within the meaning of Art.26 of the Constitution, is also a question of fact or, in any event, a mixed question of fact and law which can be more satisfactorily and effectively adjudicated upon in a competent civil court."

Actually, the question before the High Court and the Supreme Court therein was whether the jurisdiction under Art.226 of the Constitution of India could be invoked or whether the proper remedy would be only a suit in a civil court, and the High Court and the Supreme Court came to the conclusion that since the matter involved is a disputed question of fact, it could not be appropriately determined under Art.226 of the Constitution of India. The said decision has no application to the present case. That apart, here, the lower appellate court did not at all give a finding on the abovesaid question regarding religious denomination, even though the case warrants a finding on the said question. Therefore, it is but proper particularly in view of Sec.103, C.P.C. that this Court goes into that question and gives a finding and dispose of the second appeal accordingly.

10. No doubt, in the present case, there is factual finding by the lower appellate court that the abovesaid temples were established and managed exclusively by the abovesaid Nadar Community of the abovesaid village. However, in view of the other fact, viz., that there is no proof that the said community constitutes a religious denomination, the relief prayed for cannot be given.

10-A. No doubt the learned counsel for the respondents also relied on a passage in V.Balakrishnan and others v. The Assistant Commissioner, H.R. and C.E., (Admn.) Department, Tirunelveli and others, (1978) T.L.N.J. 359, saying that "the worshippers of communities other than those belonging to the denomination having access to the temple and offering worship therein is not conclusive of the question whether it is a denominational temple or not". This is no doubt true. But this passage has no relevance to the abovesaid discussion on the question whether the abovesaid Nadar Community is a religious denomination or not. Likewise, A.Palaniandi Pillai v. Commissioner, H.R. and C.E., Madras, 93 L.W. 12, cited by the learned counsel for the respondents, has no relevance to the abovesaid point of discussion.

10-B. The other submission of learned counsel for appellant regarding the above referred to other question of non-joinder has no merit at all and hence is not dealt with in any detail.

11. In the result, the second appeal is allowed, the judgment and decree of the lower appellate court are set aside and that of the trial court are restored. However, in the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

The Government of Tamil Nadu and another

...Respondents.

Civil Services - Disciplinary enquiry - Punishing authority differing from enquiring authority - Reasons for taking different decision to be given - Order passed without application of mind, cannot be sustained - High Court whether can go into the question of quantum of punishment.

On a perusal of the materials placed before the court, it has to be held that the impugned order shows the non-application of mind. The impugned order proceeds in the footing as if 'demand' and 'acceptance' are proved by the enquiry authority. A reading of the enquiry report does not show that. The enquiry authority has held that only the demand portion alone is proved. But the punishing authority has come to the conclusion that it has been clearly proved, on the report of the enquiry officer, the charge stands with regard to 'demand' and 'acceptance' of the bribe. No reasons are stated in the impugned order as to how such a conclusion has been arrived at when the punishing authority normally, differs from the enquiry report, the least what could be expected is that reasons should be stated therein as to why a different decision has been taken. A reading of the impugned order shows that no reasons are stated therein for differing from the report of the enquiry officer. In such a circumstance, the impugned order has got to be set aside. Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorari calling for the records pertaining to the order of the 2nd respondent as communicated by the proceedings No.DC.4/76932/85, dated 27.8.1989 by its Chairman and Managing Director and to quash the order of the 2nd respondent as communicated by the proceedings No.DC.4/76932/85, dated 27.8.1989 by its Chairman and Managing Director.

S.Sundar for Aiyar and Dolia, for Petitioner.

P.Balasubramaniam, Additional Government Pleader, for Respondent No.1.

S.Doraisamy, for Respondent No.2.

ORDER: The petitioner challenges the order of the second respondent dated 27.8.1989 by which the petitioner has been removed from the services of the second respondent Board. The petitioner and one Kesavan were working as Assistants in the Besant Nagar division of the second respondent Tamil Nadu Housing Board. on 14.10.1985 both were arrested for having demanded and accepted a bribe of Rs.150 from one Sriramkrishnan, for giving information regarding Flat No.102/20 and the petitioner herein was kept under suspension pending inquiry, by an order of suspension dated 18.10.1985. A charge was framed against the petitioner under Service Regulation 37(b) of Tamil Nadu Housing Board Service Regulations, 1969, stating that the petitioner has demanded and accepted a bribe of Rs.150 from one Sriramkrishnan for furnishing the details of the amount outstanding towards the Flat No.M.102/20, Besant Nagar. An enquiry was conducted in which witnesses were examined and the matter was placed before the respondent-Board and the respondent-Board by resolution dated 30.12.1988 resolved to remove the petitioner from the service of the Board and the said resolution was sent to the Government for approval. The Government by letter dated 31.7.1989 accepted the proposal of Tamil Nadu Housing Board and as such the second respondent-Board issued proceedings dated 27.8.1989, which is impugned herein by which the services of the petitioner has been terminated. The petitioner has come up before this Court challenging the said order of removal.

2. The petitioner alleges in the affidavit that the second respondent erred in thinking that the charge of demand and accepting the payment had been proved while it was the specific finding of the enquiry officer that the acceptance part of it is not proved beyond doubt. It is also alleged in the affidavit that the disciplinary authority, while accepting the report of the enquiry officer, misread the report and imposed the punishment thinking that the charge of receiving bribe was also proved. It is also alleged in the affidavit that many of the witnesses were shown, their alleged statements recorded under Sec. 161, CrI.P.C., and those statements were treated as substantive evidence, and that the disciplinary authority has failed to note that the police officers who are originally said to have laid a trap had after detailed investigation, dropped the case and did not file a charge sheet and that it shows that the petitioner was not guilty of any misconduct. It is also alleged that the disciplinary authority and the enquiry authority ought to have seen that the said Sriramkrishnan was the only witness speaking about the alleged demand and the acceptance of bribe by the petitioner, that the enquiry officer having rightly disbelieved the said witness by holding that the acceptance of bribe by the petitioner had not been proved, ought to have disbelieved him on the aspect of demand also. It is also stated in the affidavit that nobody else was examined to prove the demand aspect, except the said Sriramkrishnan, that the charge of acceptance was not at all proved and as such the disciplinary authority ought to have seen that it is not safe to believe the evidence of the said Sriramkrishnan on the aspect of alleged demand which alone, according to enquiry officer had been proved. It is also alleged in the affidavit that the finding of the enquiry officer is perverse as some portion of the findings is based on 'no evidence' and some portions are contrary to evidence and that no reasonable person would come to a conclusion as arrived at by the enquiry officer. It is also stated in the affidavit that the report of the enquiry officer and the impugned orders are non-speaking ones and as such they have to be quashed.

3. A counter affidavit has been filed on behalf of the second respondent. It is claimed in the counter affidavit that the enquiry officer had stated in the report that though the charge that the petitioner had demanded the bribe stands proved and the acceptance part was not proved beyond doubt. It is also stated in the counter affidavit that the result of the Phenolphthelin test which was conducted on his left hand confirms turning pink and that it shows that the petitioner would have accepted the money even though the money was recovered from the complainant during the incident. It is also claimed in the counter affidavit that two witnesses have justified the fact that the petitioner thrust the money back to the said Sriramkrishnan, the complainant and that the petitioner could have done it fearing the imminent arrest by the vigilance and anti-corruption people. It is also claimed in the counter affidavit that since the Government have directed the Tamil Nadu Housing Board to take departmental proceedings, no police action has taken place against the petitioner, that the competent persons to speak about the bribe will be the persons who demanded to pay the amount and as such there is no other evidence is available to speak about the demand made by the petitioner. It is also claimed in the counter affidavit that it is quite enough to arrive at the conclusion that the petitioner had demanded and accepted the money and thrust the money back in the hands of the complainant on seeing the vigilance and anti-corruption officers approached him.

4. The first respondent has adopted the counter-affidavit of the second respondent herein.

5. Mr. S. Sundaram, the learned counsel for the petitioner contends that according to the enquiry report, only the demand is proved even as per the evidence of the said Sriramkrishnan and acceptance was not at all proved. According to the learned counsel for the petitioner to rely upon the evidence of one portion with regard to demand and not to accept the portion of evidence with regard to acceptance is not correct on the part of the enquiry officer. According to the learned counsel for the petitioner, as per the report of the enquiry officer, the charge is partly proved in the sense the acceptance was not at all proved beyond doubt, but there must have been evidence to prove the bribe. As such, the learned counsel points out that in so far as the impugned order state that the charges framed against the petitioner are held to be proved, when the demand is not accepted by the petitioner, according to the enquiry report, the charge of bribe against the petitioner is not correct. According to the learned counsel for the petitioner, it is true that the punishing authority can differ from the findings of the enquiry officer, but in this case, no reasons are given in the affidavit for arriving at a decision that the acceptance of bribe is proved. On this score alone, the impugned order has got to be set aside is the contention raised by the learned counsel for the petitioner.

Learned counsel further contends that no reasons are stated in the impugned order for arriving at such a decision and that the respondents had passed a non-speaking order and as such it is vitiated.

6. Mr.S.Doraisamy, the learned counsel appearing for the second respondent-Board points out that the chemical analysis report has clearly proved the receipt of money, that on seeing the vigilance officers, the petitioner thrust back the money into the pocket of the said Sriramkrishnan, the complainant and that itself shows that the petitioner has made a demand of bribe. According to the learned counsel appearing for the respondent-Board, atleast 'demand' is proved, though 'acceptance' is not proved.

7. I have considered the arguments of S.Sundaram, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner, and of Mr.P.Balasubramaniam, learned Additional Government Pleader appearing for the first respondent and of Mr.S.Doraisamy, the learned counsel appearing for the respondent-Board.

8. The short point that arises for consideration in this case is whether the punishing authority has applied its mind before passing the impugned order. On a perusal of the materials placed before me, I am of the view that the impugned order shows the non-application of mind. The impugned order proceeds on the footing as if 'demand' and 'acceptance' are proved by the enquiry authority. A reading of the enquiry report does not show that the enquiry authority has held that only the 'demand' portion alone is proved. But the punishing authority has come to the conclusion that it has been clearly proved him on the report of the enquiry officer, the charge stands with regard to 'demand' and 'acceptance' of the bribe. No reasons are stated in the impugned order as to how such a conclusion has been arrived at. When the punishing authority, normally differs from the enquiry report, the least could be expected is that reasons should be stated therein as to why a different decision has been taken. A reading of the impugned order shows that no reasons are stated therein for differing from the report of the enquiry officer. However, the learned counsel appearing for the second respondent-Board contends that this Court can come to the conclusion that, at any rate, the 'demand' is proved. I do not think that such a conclusion can be arrived at by this Court, since no reasons are stated by the punishing authority for differing from the findings of the enquiry officer and it is not possible for this Court to guess as to what was passing on the mind of the punishing authority when the quantum of punishment was arrived at. It has been held by the Apex Court in State of West Bengal v. Atul Krishna Shaw, A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 2205 at 2208, to the following effect:

"..By process of judicial review we cannot appreciate the evidence and record out own findings of fact. If the findings are based on no evidence or based on conjectures or surmises and no reasonable man would on given facts and circumstances, come to the conclusion reached by the appellate authority on the basis of the evidence on record, certainly this Court would oversee whether the findings recorded by the appellate authority is based on no evidence or beset with surmises or conjectures.

..Giving of reasons is an essential element of administration of justice. A right to reason is, therefore, an indispensable part of sound system of judicial review. Reasoned decision is not only for the purpose of showing that the citizen is receiving justice, but also a valid discipline for the Tribunal itself. Therefore, statement of reasons is one of the essentials of justice...."

This view has to be arrived at necessarily in view of another decision of the Apex Court of the land in Bangalore Medical Trust v. B.S.Muddappa, A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 1902, wherein it has been held that the disciplinary enquiry is quasi-judicial in nature. As such, this Court cannot go into the question of quantum of punishment, as I have always stated. In such circumstances, the impugned order of the second respondent has got to be set aside and accordingly it is set aside and the punishing authority of the second respondent-Board is directed to pass an order afresh.

9. In the result, the impugned order is set aside and the writ petition is allowed and the matter is remitted back to the punishing authority for passing an order afresh as mentioned above. However, there will be no order as to costs.

A.A.O.No.852 of 1985 22nd January, 1993.

S.Kuppurathinam and others ...Appellants
v.
A.R.Munirathinam ...Respondent

(A) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.41, Rule 27 and O.13, Rule 2 - Documents available in court - Omitted to be marked due to inadvertence - Party, if can be allowed to mark them by appellate court.

It is true that the provisions of O.41, Rule 27, C.P.C. should be strictly complied with by the lower appellate court. However, it cannot be gainsaid that only by inadvertence, the documents available in court were omitted to be marked during trial by the present respondent. At the most, it can reflect only on the carelessness of the counsel concerned in conducting the case. It is unfortunate that even in the lower appellate court, the advocate appearing for the present respondent had not cared to file an application seeking permission to let in additional evidence. However, the party need not be penalised for the mistake of the counsel. Under O.13, Rule 2, C.P.C. additional evidence could be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings if good cause is shown to the satisfaction of the court for the non-production thereof. While, so interests of justice as contemplated under O.41, Rule 23 requires that the respondent herein is given an opportunity to mark the documents already available in court as additional evidence and have a decision on consideration of the entire materials on record in respect of his liability to render accounts in case he has functioned as an agent under the present appellants. [Para. 14]

(B) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.41, Rule 23 - Suit whether can be remanded by appellate court merely to give opportunity to a party to let in additional evidence.

There cannot be any remand merely for the purpose of affording an opportunity to a party to let in additional evidence. The expression 'interest of justice' occurring in O.41, Rule 23 does not widen the powers of the appellate court to remand a suit in the sense that irrespective of the fact whether it comes to the conclusion that the judgment and decree of the trial court are liable to be reversed or set aside or not, if the appellate court is of the opinion that the interests of justice require that there should be a fresh trial, it can remand the suit for fresh disposal. There is no principle or authority to support such a contention. It is clear from the scheme of the rules that generally speaking, only where it is not possible to apply O.41, Rules 24 to 27, C.P.C., a remand should be resorted to under O.41, Rule 23, C.P.C. P.Veeraraghavan, for Appellants.

C.Jeganathan, for Respondent.

The Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT: The appellants are the plaintiffs before the trial court. They instituted O.S.No.1187 of 1981 on the file of the learned District Munsif of Kancheepuram for declaration that the first appellant is entitled to 'D' schedule properties and for directing defendants 1 and 2 to hand over vacant possession of the same. The other reliefs claimed are recovery of vacant possession of A, B and C Schedule properties and for directing the respondent to render accounts of his management of A to D Schedule properties from the year 1975-76 onwards till delivery of possession. Appellants 1 and 3 are husband and wife. The second appellant is their son. The respondent is the son of the first appellant's aunt. The second defendant in the suit is the mother of the respondent. The case of the appellants is that plaint A and B Schedule lands were allotted to the shares of appellants 1 and 2 respectively under Ex.A-4 partition deed dated 13.4.1970. The 'C' Schedule properties were purchased by third appellant. The 1st appellant is in enjoyment of 'D' Schedule properties as their absolute owner. The respondent was entrusted with the management of all the plaint items with a direction to collect the Waram or Kuthagai from the tenants and hand over the same to the appellants. The respondent was paid 10 bags of paddy per bogum as his remuneration. Defendants 3 to 10 are the tenants of the suit lands. And the respondent had failed to render accounts from

2. The respondent disputed his liability to render accounts. He pleaded that he had surrendered possession of all items of plaint A, B and 'C' Schedule properties except Survey Nos. 181/1 and 181/2. 'D' Schedule properties were given as a gift to his mother by the father of first appellant. He also contended that he was never an agent nor was he paid 10 bags of paddy per bogum as his remuneration for management. According to him, the appellants themselves have directly leased out the properties to tenants for Fasli 1386. He never collected any rent from the alleged tenants. He had paid rent in full for Fasli 1386 and nothing more is due to the appellants. He is not liable to hand over possession of Survey Nos. 181/1 and 181/2 and the 'D' Schedule properties. He is a cultivating tenant of items 2 and 3 of 'C' Schedule. The properties were never entrusted with him for management. Defendants 3 to 10 are in possession.

3. The trial court granted the declaration that the appellants are the owners of 'D' Schedule property and directed the respondent to deliver possession of 'D' Schedule property and items 2 and 3 of 'C' Schedule. Besides, it passed a decree for rendition of accounts against the respondent from 1975-76 till delivery of possession in respect of A, B, C and D Schedule items. The respondent was directed to pay the cost of the suit to the appellants. Thereupon the respondent herein took up the matter in appeal before learned Subordinate Judge of Kancheepuram in A.S.No.123 of 1983 on his file. His mother the second defendant died pending suit. The lower appellate court allowed the appeal without cost, set aside the judgment and decree of the trial court and remanded back the suit to learned District Munsif for fresh disposal according to law. Aggrieved by the said decision the plaintiffs have preferred this civil miscellaneous appeal.

4. Both sides admitted in this Court that pending this C.M.A. the appellants have taken possession of items 2 and 3 of 'C' Schedule through court by proceeding in execution.

5. Thiru P. Veeraraghavan, learned counsel for the appellants assailed the order of remand on these grounds:

1. Since the findings of the trial court in regard to the plaint 'D' Schedule lands are confirmed by learned Subordinate Judge, the remitting of the entire case for fresh disposal is unsustainable.

2. The finding of the lower appellate court on the status of the respondent as a cultivating tenant is contrary to law.

3. The lower appellate court did not give any finding on the liability of the respondent to render accounts.

4. The lower appellate court was wrong in remanding the case with the sole object of enabling the appellants to prove the documents which they failed to exhibit in the trial court.

5. The requirements of the provisions of O.41, Rule 26, C.P.C., are not complied with.

6. Learned counsel for the appellants first submitted that the subject matter of dispute in A.S.No.123 of 1983 are items 2 and 3 of 'C' Schedule properties and 'D' Schedule property. So plaint 'A' and 'B' Schedule properties and the remaining item in 'C' Schedule are not covered by A.S.No.123 of 1983. While so, the lower appellate court went wrong in remanding the entire suit for fresh disposal. A perusal of the decree of the trial court reveals that the reliefs granted were declaration in respect of 'D' Schedule property, recovery of possession regarding 'D' Schedule property and items 2 and 3 of 'C' Schedule and rendition of accounts for all schedules from 1975-76 onwards. Though there is no specific recital regarding the dismissal of the suit on other reliefs, evidently the claim for delivery of possession of 'A' and 'B' Schedule and item 1 of 'C' Schedule properties has been negatived. And the plaintiffs have not preferred any cross appeal before the lower appellate court on this aspect. And the findings of the trial court on these items have become final. While so, the order of the lower appellate court in directing the retrial of the entire case is clearly unsustainable.

7. The respondent denied his liability to render accounts for all the items of the suit properties on the ground that he was not an agent under the appellants herein. He pleaded that he was a cultivating tenant. The trial court found that the tenancy set up by the respondent was not proved and instead he was functioning only as an agent of the appellants and accordingly he was bound to render accounts from 1975-76 in respect of A, B, C and D Schedule properties. One of the points formulated for consideration by the lower appellate court was regarding the agency. It is argument of learned counsel for the appellants that the lower appellate court has committed an error in remanding the case for fresh trial without giving any finding on this point. A perusal of the judgment of learned Subordinate Judge discloses that after stating the respective contentions of the parties he has narrated how certain documents available in court were omitted to be marked during trial by the present respondent. He took the view that in the interest of justice an opportunity should be given to the respondent herein to prove his contentions by marking those documents and accordingly he set aside the judgment and decree of trial court and remanded back the suit to the trial court for fresh disposal after giving an opportunity for both parties to adduce oral and documentary evidence in proof of their respective contentions.

8. We find from the records that the present respondent has not marked any document before the trial court in proof of his contentions. It appears that as many as 11 documents were marked as Exs.B-1 to B-11 on the side of the present respondent during the enquiry, on the injunction application and these documents were omitted to be exhibited in evidence at the time of trial. As we have already seen, in order to enable the present respondent to place all his evidence before the court learned Subordinate Judge has remitted back the matter for fresh trial.

9. Let us now extract the relevant provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. O.41, Rule 23, states:

“Where the court from whose decree an appeal is preferred has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point and the decree is reversed in appeal or where the appellate court in reversing or setting aside the decree under appeal considers it necessary in the interest of justice to remand the case, the appellate court may, by order remand the case and may further direct what issue or issues shall be tried in the case so remanded, and shall send a copy of its judgment and order to the court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, with directions to readmit the suit under its original number in the register of civil suits, and proceed to determine the suit; and the evidence (if any) recorded during the original trial shall, subject to all just exceptions, be evidence during the trial after remand.”

O.41, Rule 23-A, states:

“Where the court from whose decree an appeal is preferred has disposed of the case otherwise than on a preliminary point, and the decree is reversed in appeal and a retrial is considered necessary, the appellate court shall have the same powers as it has under Rule 23.”

O.41, Rule 27, runs as under:

“(1) The parties to an appeal shall not be entitled to produce additional evidence, whether oral or documentary, in the appellate court. But if,

(a) The court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has refused to admit evidence which ought to have been admitted, or

(aa) the party seeking to produce additional evidence, establishes that notwithstanding the exercise of due diligence, such evidence was not within his knowledge or could not, after the exercise of due diligence, be produced by him at the time when the decree appealed against was passed, or

(b) the party seeking to adduce additional evidence satisfies the appellate court that such evidence notwithstanding the exercise of due diligence, was not within his knowledge or could not be produced by him at or before the time when the decree under appeal was passed, or

(c) the appellate court requires any document to be produced or any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment, or for any other substantial cause, the appellate court may such evidence or document to be produced or witness to be examined.

(2) Whenever additional evidence is allowed to be produced by an appellate court, the court shall record the reason for its admission.”

Under O.41, Rule 28,

“Wherever additional evidence is allowed to be produced, the appellate court may either take such evidence, or direct the court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, or any other subordinate court, to take such evidence and to send it when taken to the appellate court.”

10. Learned counsel for the appellants submits that under the abovesaid provisions of the Code, additional evidence could be produced in appeal only, (i) when the trial court has erroneously refused to admit evidence, (ii) the evidence sought to be produced, was not within the reach of the appellants during trial, (iii) the appellate court itself requires any evidence to render a judgment and (iv) for any other substantial cause. The plea of the present respondent does not come under any of the said four categories. He did not take any steps before the trial court for exhibiting the documents which were available in the records of the trial court at any time before the judgment was delivered. Even in the lower appellate court there was no application by him to file those documents as additional evidence. He did not raise in the grounds of appeal that he was not given an opportunity to exhibit his documents. Nor he sought for any such opportunity before the lower appellate court. Even pending this C.M.A., no application was made by him to mark those documents as additional evidence. Learned Subordinate Judge has erred in assuming that on account of oversight, documents were failed to be marked in the trial court. Further, reception of additional evidence cannot be a ground for remand. A remand cannot be ordered to enable the parties to fill up lacunae in a case. The discretion of the court should not be exercised in an arbitrary manner but should be exercised by sound principles. The impugned order of remand in the absence of any application under O.41, Rule 27, C.P.C., to let in additional evidence is erroneous.

11. In Kannu Naicker v. Kalaimani, 100 L.W. 922, cited by learned counsel for the appellants the respondents filed the suit for declaration and permanent injunction in respect of 12 items of the suit properties. The trial court decreed the suit in its entirety as prayed for. On appeal the Subordinate Judge while confirming the conclusions of the trial court with regard to items 1 to 8, held so far as items 9 to 12 are concerned that they have not let in any evidence to establish the rights and there is no evidence to prove the specific share of the plaintiffs. Hence learned Subordinate Judge considered it as expedient to remit the matter to the trial court to consider whether or not the plaintiffs have any share in items 9 to 12. Accordingly, the judgment and decree of the trial court so far as the findings regarding items 9 to 12 are concerned were set aside and the matter was remitted to the trial court. The parties were also given opportunity to adduce fresh evidence in respect of items 9 to 12. Aggrieved by the remit order passed, the defendants took up the matter in appeal before this Court. Natarajan, J. took the view that the common case of the parties being that they were not prevented from adducing any evidence, the only test that should be applied by the lower appellate court is, whether the appellate court itself requires any document to be produced or any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce a judgment or for any other substantial cause. As has been pointed out in a number of decisions, the appellate court should come to a finding on that question and this finding could only be after considering the entire evidence already on record. And he held that the order of remand in that case was unsustainable, as learned Subordinate Judge had remanded the matter only for the purpose of giving an opportunity to the plaintiffs to adduce further evidence to establish their case with regard to items 9 to 12. The lower appellate court was directed to restore the appeal on its file, give opportunity to both parties to adduce further evidence in respect of items 9 to 12 before that court itself and to dispose of the appeal on merits and according to law.

12. In Visalakshi Ammal v. Dhanalakshmi Ammal (1989) 2 L.W. 414, a Division Bench of this Court in a Letters Patent Appeal had occasion to consider the order of remand of a single Judge of this Court on the ground that the discussion relating to the various aspects of the case had not been properly approached by the trial court and that additional evidence had to be let in by both sides in order to appreciate the issues involved in accordance with law. The Division Bench, while deciding the question as to whether the order of remand ought not to have been made or the lis ought to have been decided on merits by learned single Judge himself, held: "The unsatisfactory consideration of an issue by the first court and the non-advertence to the judicial precedents by the first court while deciding an issue and the need to take additional evidence should not always be counted in favour of making an order of remand. These lacunae, if in fact they are present, can be rectified by the appellate court itself, unless there are very compelling circumstances to make an order of remand. An order of remand should not be taken to be matter of course on the above grounds. The power of remand should be sparingly exercised. There should be always endeavour to dispose of the case by the appellate court itself, when the commissions and omissions made by the first court could be corrected by the appellate court. It is not claimed by either side that there is a total dearth of evidence to decide the concerned questions. Maybe the parties were and are anxious to place additional evidence, but even that question can be thrashed out and settled by the appellate court itself. All the questions require comprehensive consideration on merits and decisions thereon by the learned single Judge himself and we are not able to sustain the order of remand made on the grounds expressed by the learned single Judge on the facts of the present case."

13. In Natarajan Chettiar v. Balachandran, (1990) 2 L.W. 394, the appellate court had admitted the survey plan as additional evidence. No ground has been raised in the memorandum of appeal challenging the order admitting additional evidence. On the basis of the additional evidence and on the basis of certain other factors which are referred by the lower appellate court in its judgment, it found that the trial court has not taken into account several relevant matters and the trial court had to reconsider the matter. When this order of remand was challenged before this Court, it was argued by the appellants that it was the duty of the appellate court to consider the evidence by itself and decide the case on merits. Srinivasan, J., has held that no doubt that it is so. When the lower appellate court has held that on the basis of additional evidence admitted, the matter should be reconsidered and certain facts should be ascertained by taking the measurements of the properties, a remand is justified. And the provisions of O.41, Rule 23 of the C.P.C., have been satisfied and so there was no justification for interfering with the order of the lower appellate court.

14. It is true that the provisions of O.41, Rule 27, C.P.C. should be strictly complied with by the lower appellate court. However, it cannot be gainsaid that only by inadvertence, the documents available in court were omitted to be marked during trial by the present respondent. At the most, it can reflect only on the carelessness of the counsel concerned in conducting the case. It is unfortunate that even in the lower appellate court, the advocate appearing for the present respondent had not cared to file an application seeking permission to let in additional evidence. However, the party need not be penalised for the mistake of the counsel. Under O.13, Rule 2, C.P.C. additional evidence could be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings if good cause is shown to the satisfaction of the court for the non-production thereof. While so, interest of justice as contemplated under O.41, Rule 23 requires that the respondent herein is given an opportunity to mark the documents already available in court as additional evidence and have a decision on consideration of the entire materials on record in respect of his liability to render accounts in case he has functioned as an agent under the present appellants.

15. We have already seen that the order of remand directing the fresh trial of the entirety of the case is unsustainable since the decision of the trial court in respect of relief of recovery of possession of A and B Schedule and item 1 of 'C' Schedule properties has become final. During arguments before this Court both sides conceded that possession of items 2 and 3 of 'C' Schedule properties has also been taken through court in execution proceedings. So on the remaining issues of controversy the appellate court itself can finally dispose of the appeal after taking the additional evidence as provided under O.41, Rule 28, C.P.C. There cannot be any remand merely for the purpose of affording an opportunity to a party to let in additional evidence. The expression 'interest of justice' occurring in O.41, Rule 23 does not widen the powers of the appellate court to remand a suit in the sense that irrespective of the fact whether it comes to the conclusion that the judgment and decree of the trial court are liable to be reversed or set aside or not, if the appellate court is of the opinion that the interests of justice require that there should be a fresh trial, it can remand the suit for fresh disposal. There is no principle or authority to support such a contention. It is clear from the scheme of the rules that generally speaking, only where it is not possible to apply O.41, Rules 24 to 27, C.P.C., a remand should be resorted to under O.41, Rule 23, C.P.C. And in view of the ratio laid down in the decisions referred to above the order of remand in this case by the lower appellate court is unsustainable.

16. In the result, the appeal is allowed and the judgment and decree of the lower appellate court are set aside. The lower appellate court is directed to restore A.S.No.123 of 1983 on its file, give opportunity to both parties to adduce further evidence, oral and documentary, in respect of the points still in controversy before the lower appellate court itself and to dispose of the appeal on merits and according to law. In the circumstances, there will be no order as to costs.

Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960), Sec.10(2)(ii)(b) - Building leased for cycle shop business - Business not abandoned - Substantial quantity of liquor found stored in building - Building if can be said to be used for a purpose other than that for which it was leased.

From the fact that a very substantial quantity liquor bottles had been stored in the demised building, it is not difficult to infer that at least a substantial part of the building was used by the petitioner for the liquor trade. Therefore, even assuming that the original cycle business was not altogether abandoned, the relevant clause in Sec.10 would be satisfied. [Para. 5]

K.R.Ramabhadran, for Petitioner.

ORDER: Having failed before both the Authorities below, the tenant under the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1960, has preferred this civil revision petition.

2. The respondents/landlord herein filed the eviction petition R.C.O.P.No.74 of 1990 on the file of the Rent Controller, Vellore on the ground that the petitioner-tenant used the demised building for a purpose other than that for which it was leased. The petition was filed under Sec.10(2)(ii)(b) of the said Act. Both, the Rent Controller and the Appellate Authority, Vellore in R.C.A.No.6 of 1992 have concurrently held that the petitioner has so used the said building. Admittedly, the petitioner was an ex-servicemen and so the respondents leased out the demised building for running cycle business. There was a raid by the prohibition wing of the police of the abovesaid building on 24.8.1989 and 173 bottles of Indian made foreign liquor were seized from the building and in the subsequent police proceedings, the petitioner admitted his guilt in having stored the liquor bottles in the abovesaid building. A fine was levied on him and he paid the same. That is borne out by Ex.A-3 document dated 25.8.1989. That apart by Ex.A-2 letter dated 25.9.1989 by the petitioner to the 2nd respondent he has admitted the above facts and pleaded thus:

“எனவே இம்முறை மேற்கண்ட செயல் களுக்காக என்னை மன்னித்து மேல்கண்ட சைக்கிள் கடையை தொடர்ந்து நடத்த அனுமதி வழங்குமாறு தாழ்மையுடன் கேட்டுக் கொள்கிறேன்.”

Primarily based on these two documents Exs.A-3 and A-2 the Authorities below have come to the conclusion that the abovesaid liquor bottles were stored in the petition-building. Further, the explanation offered by the petitioner that the abovesaid liquor bottles were temporarily kept in the said building on behalf of ex-servicemen who come to purchase such liquor from the adjacent godown, was not believed by the Authorities below. As per the relevant rules, each ex-serviceman was allowed to have supply of only five bottles and there is no scope in that context for the petitioner to have stored as many as 173 bottles, even as per the explanation. This explanation was not accepted also because the petitioner did not examine any of such ex-servicemen, who allegedly left liquor bottles in the custody of the petitioner. Further, even before the Authorities below, the argument of the petitioners was that the abovesaid raid was only a solitary instance wherein the petitioner was found to possess the abovesaid liquor bottles and that on that footing, it could not be held that the building was used for liquor trade. For this argument Rathnam Naicker v. Mani Naicker, (1955)1 M.L.J. 2 (S.N.), was also relied on. This argument was also considered and the Authorities below have negatived the said contention on the footing that the facts in the said case were different.

3. Now, before me, the learned counsel for the petitioner advances the same argument along with the other argument that at any rate, the cycle business, for which the original lease was given, has not been abandoned at all. In connection with this latter argument the learned counsel relies on Gopal Stores v. Arunachala Naicker, (1958)2 M.L.J. 617. With reference to the former argument certain other decisions like, Abdul Razack v. Umappathy, (1965)2 M.L.J. 41 (S.N.) and E.A.E. Kamal Pasha v. V.A. Tajuddin and others, 1974 T.L.N.J. 180, were also relied on.

4. So far as Rathnam Naicker v. Mani Naicker, (1955)1 M.L.J. 2 (S.N.), is concerned, I find that the said case held that merely because a tenant played cards for stake in the demised building on a solitary occasion and was convicted under the City Police Act, it could be held that the building was used for a different purpose. But playing cards on one single occasion cannot be equated with storing as many as 173 liquor bottles, particularly in the light of the other finding by the Authorities below that the petitioner's only explanation that the said liquor bottles were kept in custody only at the request of the other ex-servicemen is not acceptable. Therefore, the Appellate Authority is right in not applying Rathnam Naicker v. Mani Naicker, (1955)1 M.L.J. 2 (S.N.), to the present case. Abdul Razack v. Umappathy, (1965)2 M.L.J. 41 (S.N.), only says that a fugitive and sporadic user of the lease premises for a limited period ought not to be taken as the test of conversion to some other use. In the said case, the tenant of a building leased as a shop, for a limited period, conducted some cooking and also stayed there, though he had his residence elsewhere. Only in the context of those facts, the said decision was given and I do not think that decision could be applied to the present facts, in view of the above referred to features in the present case. In E.A.E. Kamal Pasha v. V.A. Tajuddin and others, 1974 T.L.N.J. 180, the court held that the landlord impliedly consented to the different use to which the landlord put the building. After holding so, no doubt, the learned Judge also observes that only a small room in the total demised building was put to such a different use and that in order to bring the case within the relevant sub-section, it is necessary to prove that a substantial part of the building was put to a different use. In the present case, the Authorities below, taking into consideration all the features in the case, have come to the factual inference that the building was used for liquor business, and so, this decision also is not applicable to the present case.

5. The second contention of the learned counsel is that it is nobody's case that he has abandoned the cycle business for which the building was leased and that hence eviction could not be ordered under the abovesaid relevant clause in Sec.10 of the abovesaid Act. In the abovesaid case, viz. Gopal Stores v. Arunachala Naicker, (1958)2 M.L.J. 617, in the building which was let out for selling betel leaves, a small portion was used for selling crackers during a particular season like Deepavali, in addition to the main business. In that context, it was no doubt held that such use for selling crackers would not amount to using the building for a different purpose, since the original business was not abandoned. But, in the present case, from the fact that a very substantial quantity of liquor bottles had been stored in the demised building, it is not difficult to infer that atleast a substantial part of the building was used by the petitioner for the liquor trade. Therefore, even assuming that the original cycle business was not altogether abandoned, the relevant clause in Sec.10 would be satisfied.

6. In fact, it has been held by a Full Bench of this Court in Dr. N.R. Rao v. Premier Auto Electric Private Limited, (1980)1 M.L.J. 1 (F.B.), that where it was found that a third party has been using a portion of the demised building contrary to the purpose for which the building was leased out, it was held that Sec.10(2)(ii)(b) is satisfied. Further, there it has also been held thus:

defines, building to include part of the building also. In Sec.10(2)(ii)(b), the expression is "used the building for a purpose other than that for which it was leased..." Such a reference to "building" will include part of the building also. Therefore, the occupation of R.W.1 of a part of the building will definitely attract the mischief of Sec.10(2)(ii)(b). As contended by Mr.Rao, the occupation of a portion of the building by a third party will squarely come within the meaning of occupation of "substantial part" of the building, as contemplated by the Supreme Court in Palaniappa Chettiar v. Ponnuswami Pillai, (1970)1 S.C.W.R. 487 and such an expression "substantial part" has been used in contract to a minimal or trivial portion of the building. This argument is fortified by the definition given to "building" in the Act and also the expression "building" occurring in Sec.10(2)(ii)(b) of the Act."

Thus, this Full Bench decision also explains the term "substantial part" used by the Supreme Court Palaniappa Chettiar v. Ponnuswami Pillai, (1970)1 S.C.W.R. 487, which was relied on in the above referred to E.A.E.Kamal Pasha v. V.A.Tajuddin and others, 1974 T.L.N.J. 180.

6A. Further, in view of K.A.Anthappai v. Ahammed, (1992)2 L.W. 735 (S.C.), as to the limited scope of the present revisionary power, I do not think, I will be justified in interfering with the conclusion reached by the authorities below.

7. Therefore, there is no merit in this civil revision petition and hence, it is not admitted, but dismissed. Time for vacating three months.

(A) Torts - Damages for short delivery of goods - Railway receipt showing 51.660 M.T., was consigned - 48.300, M.T. alone delivered - Endorsement of consignee that contents received in tact fully - It will absolve Railways from liability.

As per Ex.B-1 railway receipt, the weight of the consignment was 51.660 M.T., This being the case, the Railways are bound by that weight and it is not open to them to contend that the medicals consigned were not of that weight. It has to be held that while loading, the consignment was of the weight of 51.660 M.T. That being the case, if, on arrival at the destination any storage is found, only the defendants are responsible for that shortage. Ex.B-3 endorsement 'Received (8) in tact fully' for whatever reason it was made by the plaintiff, will not absolve the defendants from their liability.

[Para. 8]

(B) Torts - Damages for short delivery of goods - Consignment partly carried by Railways and partly by Railways belonging to the Madras Port Trust - Liability for shortage.

It is not the case of defendants 1 and 2 that the shortage has occurred while the consignment was in transit in the Railways of the third defendant Port Trust or it was in their (Port Trust's) Custody and it is not the case of the third defendant that the storage occurred when the consignment was to transit in the first and second defendant's railway. In this position, it would be quite reasonable and lawful to hold that both the defendants 1 and 2 as well as the third defendant are jointly and severally liable to make good the shortage. B.Rajagopalan, for Appellant.

R.G.Rajan and P.S.Srisailam, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: The unsuccessful plaintiff, Steel Authority of India Limited, which filed the suit for recovery of a sum of Rs.16,324.90 against the three defendants as damages for short delivery of goods, is the appellant.

2. The plaintiff booked 51.660 metric tonnes of G.C.Sheets in 8 bundles in the first defendant Railways at Rourkela to be delivered to the plaintiff at Madras Harbour. The consignment was booked under Railway Risk. The materials arrived at Madras Harbour on 10.8.1975. The plaintiff found the packing conditions disturbed. Therefore, the plaintiff requested the third defendant Port Trust to re-weigh the materials. Accordingly, the materials were re-weighed on 11.8.1975. It weighed only 48.300 M.T. Thus, there was a shortage of 3.360 M.T. It is not in dispute that the value of this shortage is Rs.16,324.90. The materials were then delivered to the plaintiff on 12.8.1975. The plaintiff has filed the suit for recovery of the said sum of Rs.16,324.90 for short delivery alleging that it was only due to the negligence of the defendants the shortage had occurred and the defendants 1 to 3 are jointly and severally liable.

3. Defendants 1 and 2 filed a written statement while the third defendant filed a separate written statement. Both of them denied negligence on their part. Defendants 1 and 2 contending inter alia denied that the plaintiff loaded eight bundles of steel sheets weighing 51.660 M.T. and it further denied that there was any shortage. It further contended that the consignment was safely carried and handed over to Madras Port Trust on 8.8.1975 in a sound condition and the Madras Port Trust did not make any remarks.

4. The third defendant Port Trust contended that on 12.8.1975 the consignment was delivered to the plaintiff's men with an endorsement in the delivery note "Received 8 bundles in tact in full". Therefore, this defendant or its employees are not liable for any shortage. They further contended that the suit is barred by limitation.

5. The trial court on consideration of the evidence held that the plaintiff has made an endorsement Ex.B-3 "Received in tact fully". While taking delivery and therefore the plaintiff's case cannot be believed that there was shortage. The trial court held that the suit is not barred by limitation. In the result, the trial court dismissed the suit. Hence, this appeal by the plaintiff.

6. The point for decision is whether the trial court was not correct in holding that there was no shortage and that the plaintiff is not entitled to the amount claimed.

7. It is the case of the third defendant itself that the consignment arrived at the Port on 10-8-1975, it was reweighed on 11-8-1975 and as against the weight mentioned in the Railway Receipt there was a shortage of 3.360 M.T., and the consignment was delivered to the plaintiff on 12.8.1975. Thus, admittedly there was a shortage as against the weight mentioned in the Railway Receipt before the consignment was delivered to the plaintiff.

8. It is, however, contended that the plaintiff must prove that actually 51.660 M.T., was consigned. Now, as per Ex.B-1 Railway receipt the weight of the consignment was 51.660 M.T. This being the case the Railways are bound by that weight and it is not open to them to contend that the materials consigned were not of that weight. If any authority is required for this, refer to Jugalkishore Devideen v. Sri Murugan Ghree Supply Company and others, 86 L.W. 135; A.I.R. 1973 Mad. 331. Therefore, it has to be held that while loading the consignment was of the weight 51.660 M.T. That being the case if on arrival at the destination if any shortage is found only the defendants are responsible for that shortage. Ex.B-3 endorsement "received (8) in tact fully", for whatever reason it was made by the plaintiff, will not absolve the defendants of their liability.

9. The goods consigned by the plaintiff had been carried by the defendants 1 and 2 railways and also the Railways belonging to the third defendant in the Port before unloading. It is not in evidence as to how and when the shortage occurred. In these circumstances, the question arises as to whether all the three defendants are liable jointly and severally or defendants 1 and 2 alone are liable or the third defendant alone is liable.

10. As far as the plaintiff is concerned, according to it, all the three defendants are liable jointly and severally. It is not the case of defendants 1 and 2 that the shortage has occurred while the consignment was in transit in the Railways of the third defendant Port Trust or it was in their (Port Trust) custody and it is not the case of the third defendant that the shortage occurred when the consignment was in transit in the first and second defendant's railways. In this position, it would be quite reasonable and lawful to hold that both the defendants 1 and 2 as well as the third defendant are jointly and severally liable to make good the shortage. True, when the consignment was handed over to the Port Trust no remarks were made by the Port Trust. But this will not disentitle the plaintiff to make a claim against defendants 1 and 2 because it is to the first defendant the plaintiff gave the consignment. It would appear, as to between the defendants 1 and 2 on the one hand and the third defendant on the other hand who is liable, it is a matter to be settled as between themselves.

11. However, it was brought to my notice that in a similiary case in Steel Authority of India Limited v. The Union of India, etc., (1981)1 M.L.J. 126, a Division Bench of this Court has held that the Port Trust Railways being the destination Railways, it (Port Trust) alone is liable. But on going through the judgment I find that the said finding was not rendered while considering a question of law, but it was held so merely stating that the Port Trust Railways is the destination Railways. Therefore, that finding is not a stare decisis binding on me.

12. In the result, the appeal is allowed and the judgment and decree of the trial court are set aside and the suit is decreed as prayed for against all the three defendants. The defendants shall pay costs to the plaintiff throughout.

v.

The Regional Transport Officer, Salem.

...Respondent.

Motor Vehicles Act (IV of 1939), Sec.2(3) and (29) - Vehicle not picking up passengers en route - Conductor collecting separate fares from passengers - Vehicle whether can be said to have been used as a stage carriage and not as a contract carriage.

Held: As could be seen from the definition of 'contract carriage' by the collection of separate fares from the passengers, it would not lead to the deduction that the vehicle has been used as a stage carriage and not as a contract carriage. The court is, therefore of the view that there are no materials on the basis of which the impugned orders could be sustained.

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorari calling for the records of the respondent in R.No.69173/B4/83 and R.No.17390/B4/83 respectively and quash the demand dated 27.5.1984 respectively made thereon in respect of Bus KRV.7270 (in both the petitions) demanding a tax of Rs.3,267 and Rs.2,683 respectively in respect of petitioner's All India permit contract carriage KRV. 7270.

Cases referred to:

Roshanlal v. State of U.P., A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 991: (1965)2 S.C.J. 721: (1965)1 S.C.R. 841. [Para. 8]
Krishnasami Chetty v. The Licensing Officer, 100 L.W. 654. [Para. 9]

Mrs.Bagirathi Narayanan, for Petitioner
B.Radhakrishnan, Government Advocate, for Respondent.

The Court made the following

ORDER: One Raja Devaputhran Cunniah, a resident of Trivandrum, holds a permit for the vehicle KRV 7270 granted by the State Transport Authority, Kerala, to use the vehicle as an All India Tourist Vehicle. It can operate throughout India without any endorsement from any other State. Its liability to pay tax is only to the parent State viz. the Kerala Government. This had been paid and the vehicle had been used as a contract carriage.

2. The vehicle was checked by the Motor Vehicles Inspector, Grade II, Salem on 27.6.1983. A check report was issued alleging that the vehicle was coming from Trichy to Bangalore along with 35 adult passengers, collecting Rs.40 for the journey as individual fare. Based on the check report, the Regional Transport Officer, Salem, issued a show cause notice stating that the vehicle was being used as a stage carriage and hence the permit holder is liable to pay proportionate tax of Rs.3,267 for the month of June, 1983 to the Government of Tamil Nadu. On 3.8.1983, the petitioner submitted an explanation that the vehicle had been hired to a travel agency as a contract carriage for a specified purpose and, therefore, no liability arises for payment of any tax whatever, especially when tax had already been paid to the Government of Kerala. This was not accepted by the respondent who passed an order in R.No.69173/B4/83, dated 27.5.1984, confirming the proposal and demanding a sum of Rs.3,267. It is this order that is challenged in W.P.No.7333 of 1984.

3. Similarly, the vehicle was previously stated to have been checked by the Motor Vehicles Inspector, Grade II, Salem on 21.2.1983. A check report was issued alleging that the vehicle was coming from Salem to Bangalore with 37 adult passengers collecting Rs.20 per individual. Based on the check report, the respondent issued a show cause notice on 17.3.1983 stating that the vehicle was being used as a stage carriage and demanding Rs.2,683 as proportionate tax for February, 1983, to the Government of Tamil Nadu. On 4.6.1983, the petitioner gave an explanation that the vehicle was not used as a stage carriage and that no individual fare was collected. The explanation was not accepted by the respondent who passed an order in R.No.17390/B4/83, dated 27.5.1984, confirming the proposal and demanding a tax of Rs.2,683. It is this order that is challenged in W.P.No.7334 of 1984.

4. It could be seen from the above facts that the petitioner, respondent, the vehicle demand etc., are one and the same and the difference is only with regard to the month and amount demanded.

In this background and setting up of facts, the two writ petitions had been taken up for disposal together.

5. What the petitioner contended before the respondent in his explanation and equally so here with all vigour and vehemence, is that his vehicle had been hired to travel agents as a whole for fixed sums of money and if the agents collected individual fare from each passenger, the petitioner could not be made liable for the same. The further contention is that the collection of separate fares is not prohibited under Sec.2(3) of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'), when it defines 'contract carriage' and his vehicle plied between points without stopping to pick up or set down along the line of the routes, passengers not included in the contract. These contentions were, however, repelled by the respondents.

6. The tenability or otherwise of the rival submissions made may now fall for consideration. The tangle posed in these writ petitions is capable of solution, with ease and grace, if the distinction between a contract carriage and a stage carriage is understood properly. Sec.2(3) defines 'contract carriage' as follows:

" 'contract carriage' means a motor vehicle which carries a passenger or passengers for hire or reward under a contract, expressed or implied for the use of the vehicle as whole at or for a fixed or agreed rate or sum--

(i) on a time basis whether or not with reference to any route or distances, or

(ii) from one point to another and in either case without stopping to pick up, or set down along the line of route passengers not included in the contract and includes a motor cab notwithstanding that the passengers may pay separate fares."

7. Sec.2(29) defines 'stage carriage' as follows"

" 'stage carriage' means a motor vehicle carrying or adapted to carry more than six persons excluding the driver which carries passengers for hire or reward at separate fares paid by or for individual passengers either for the whole journey or for stages of the journey."

8. The criteria to be adopted to distinguish a contract carriage from a stage carriage as set down in the pronouncement of the Supreme Court in Roshanlal v. State of U.P., A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 991: (1965)2 S.C.J. 721: (1965)1 S.C.R. 841, may be usefully referred to here:

"By Sec.2(3) a contract carriage is defined as a motor vehicle which carries a passenger or passengers for hire or reward under a contract from one point to another without stopping to pick up or set down along with the line of that route passengers not included in the contract. A stage carriage is defined as a motor vehicle carrying or adapted to carry passengers for hire or reward at separate fares paid for the whole journey or for stages of the journey. The distinction between the two is this: the contract carriage is engaged for the whole of the journey between two points for carriage of a person or persons hiring it, but it has not the right to pick up other passengers en route. The stage carriage, on the other hand, runs between two points irrespective of any prior contract and it is boarded by passengers en route who pay the fare for the distance they propose to travel."

9. It is not at all the case of the respondent, that the vehicle was picking up other passengers en route, so as to come within the mischief of the above ratio. As we could see from the definition of 'contract carriage' by the collection of separate fares from the passengers, it would not lead to the deduction that the vehicle has been used as a stage carriage and not as a contract carriage. I am, therefore of the view that there are no materials on the basis of which the impugned orders could be sustained. In similar circumstances this Court in Krishnasami Chetty v. The Licensing Officer, 100 L.W. 654, has taken the view that collection of separate fares from passengers would not lead to the conclusion that the vehicle was being used as a stage carriage and not a contract carriage.

10. For the abovestated reasons, I am unable to uphold the impugned orders and accordingly, these writ petitions are allowed as prayed for. No costs.

(A) Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Sec.107 - Lease of land for 5 years not by registered deed - It bars 9 findings of a monthly tenancy in favour of the tenant.

Even though the lease for five years would be certainly invalid, since there is no registered lease deed, that cannot be a bar in holding that there was atleast a monthly tenancy in favour of the plaintiff in the present case. In the present case, it is clear from the written statement of the first defendant, that atleast upto a period, viz. six months prior to January, 1978. The first defendant was accepting rents from the plaintiff. So, there can be no difficulty in holding that the plaintiff was at least under a monthly tenancy of the suit site. Even according to law, there is atleast a monthly tenancy in the present case. [Paras. 8 & 9]

(B) Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Sec.106 - Tenancy lawfully terminated by notice - Tenant unlawfully dispossessed from demised property - Tenant, if can seek redelivery.

Can it be said that though there is unlawful dispossession of the plaintiff from the demised property, the plaintiff cannot seek redelivery since there is lawful termination of the tenancy? The answer to this question should only be in the negative. In other words, even in such a situation, the plaintiff can seek redelivery. [Para. 12]

S.Radhakrishnan, for Appellant.

P.Shanmugham, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: The plaintiff is the appellant in this second appeal against the reversing judgment in A.S.No. 13 of 1981 on the file of the Subordinate Judge, Tiruppur. According to the plaintiff, he was the tenant for five years from 20.1.1974 under the 1st defendant-1st respondent, of the suit land and has put up the superstructure thereon and the 2nd defendant-2nd respondent was looking after the tea stall run by the plaintiff therein, but the 1st defendant unlawfully dispossessed him by getting back possession from the 2nd defendant on 21.3.1978. Hence he sought for re-delivery in the suit O.S.No.185 of 1978.

2. According to the 1st defendant, there was no lease for five years, the plaintiff was only a monthly tenant, and since the plaintiff had sub-leased the premises to the 2nd defendant, the plaintiff ceased to be a tenant and the 2nd defendant had voluntarily delivered possession to the 1st defendant. According to the 2nd defendant, he was lessee under the plaintiff, on 21.3.1978 when he returned from his native place, he found that the 1st defendant had locked the premises and subsequently the 1st defendant refused to open it.

3. The trial Court found that the 2nd defendant was the sub-lessee and that he did not voluntarily surrender possession to the 1st defendant. So holding, the trial Court, decreed the suit and granted redelivery of the suit property "in the same condition in which it was at the time when he was unlawfully dispossessed along with the articles kept therein".

4. But, on appeal by the 1st defendant, the lower appellate Court has held that the alleged lease for five years, being not registered and consequently hit by Sec.107 of the Transfer of Property Act, was not valid and that the plaintiff cannot claim any right of possession and that hence the relief prayed for cannot be granted. It was also held that though the 1st defendant had not taken possession from the proper person, viz., the plaintiff, his taking possession should be taken as peaceful and not wrongful. So holding, the lower appellate Court dismissed the suit. Hence, the second appeal by the plaintiff.

5. The submissions of the learned Counsel for the appellant are: Though the lease for five years may be invalid in view of Sec.107 of the Transfer of Property, there is at least a monthly tenancy. The lower appellate Court erred in holding that the taking of possession by the 1st defendant from the 2nd defendant was not wrongful, particularly when it has also held that forcible possession was taken.

6. The 2nd respondent-2nd defendant remains unrepresented.

7. The learned Counsel for the 1st respondent reiterates that the reasoning of the lower appellate Court is right.

8. I have considered the rival submissions. It is quite clear that the lower appellate court grossly erred; even though the lease for five years would be certainly invalid since there is no registered lease deed, that cannot be a bar in holding that there was at least a monthly tenancy in favour of the plaintiff in the present case. In fact, even according to the written statement of the 1st defendant, the plaintiff was his lessee. His written statement pleaded only thus:

"The plaintiff has taken the premises for rent at Rs.40 per mensem payable on every English calendar month... The plaintiff is not entitled to sub lease the premises to the 2nd defendant, which had been leased out to him. The plaintiff ceases to be a tenant immediately when he had sub-let the same to the 2nd defendant... Rent is due for 6 months amounting to Rs.240 due upto January, 1978."

Thus, once it is pleaded that the rent is due upto January, 1978, it is clear that the plaintiff was tenant at least upto January, 1978, right from 20.1.1974. In Ex.A-7 dated 29.1.1978, the notice issued by the 1st defendant's counsel to the plaintiff and the 2nd defendant also it is stated that the plaintiff became the tenant from 20.1.1974, of the suit site.

9. Even according to law, there is at least a monthly tenancy in the present case. The Supreme Court has also held thus in Biswabani Private Limited v. Santosh Kumar Dutta, (1980)1 S.C.C. 185:

"The Privy Council in Arif v. Jadunath, 60 M.L.J. 588: 131 I.C. 762: 58 I.A. 91: 1931 M.W.N. 480: A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 79. in terms held that if an indenture of lease is compulsorily registrable under Sec.107 of the Transfer of Property Act, such a lease can only be made by a registered instrument and if not so made, is void altogether. However, if from such a person in possession under a void lease the landlord accepts rent as held in Ram Kumar Das case, 1951 S.C.J. 813: 1952 S.C.R. 269: 1952 M.W.N. 120: A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 23. an inference of tenancy would follow. Mulla in 'Transfer of Property Act', 6th Edn., at P.680 has observed that an oral agreement accompanied by delivery of possession, if for more than one year is valid, by delivery of possession, for the first year, and thereafter, the lessee continuing in possession with the assent of the lessor becomes a tenant by holding over under Sec.116 of the Transfer of Property Act. Such a lease being created by operation of law is binding even though the provisions of Sec.107 have not been complied with. It is also noted in P.681, that though an un-registered lease is void as a permanent lease, it can be deemed to be a monthly lease terminable by 15 days' notice."

In the present case, it is clear from the above extracted averment in the written statement of the 1st defendant that at least upto the period, viz., six months prior to January, 1978, the 1st defendant was accepting rents from the plaintiff. So, there can be no difficulty in holding that the plaintiff was at least under a monthly tenancy of the suit site. If so, the possession taken by the 1st defendant from the 2nd defendant, a sub-lessee, with whom the 1st defendant has no privity of contract, cannot be taken as lawful, particularly when the lower appellate Court has also held that the 1st defendant took possession forcibly from the 2nd defendant, though it has strangely held that such possession taken was peaceful. The 1st defendant can take possession only from the plaintiff and that too by recourse to law, if the plaintiff is not willing to give possession. So, if the possession taken by the 1st defendant is unlawful, he has to redeliver possession to the plaintiff.

10. The learned counsel for the appellant also relies on the decision of Ramanujam, J. in Ramakrishnan, M.R.S. v. The Assistant Director of E.S.W., Etc., Board, 95 L.W. 450. There it has been held thus:

"Thus, the preponderance of the Judicial opinion is that the tenant in possession of the leasehold property after the termination of the lease cannot be dispossessed by force except under due authority of law and the position is not different in the case of a tenancy under the Government; that even if forcible possession had been taken by the Government as a quandom lessor, the quandom tenant is entitled to get back possession of the property under Sec.9 of the Specific Relief Act."

No doubt that was not a case where redelivery was actually sought. That was actually a case where, the remedy sought for by the lessee, was for restraining the respondents-lessors from taking possession of the premises. (No doubt the remedy was sought for under Art.226 of the Constitution of India seeking for a mandamus to the above effect.) In the said case, this Court found as a fact that possession was still with the lessee on the date of the writ petition, and so it granted the abovesaid mandamus sought for. But, it also observed as follows:

"It is no doubt true, if on the date of the filing of the petition the petitioner has been thrown out of the premises even by force, then the petitioner cannot seek restoration of possession in these proceedings by getting a writ of mandamus as prayed for by him and his remedy is only to claim damages or other reliefs in other appropriate forums."

Then, let me see whether this observation could be correct.

11. In the present case, admittedly, the plaintiff is out of possession and seeks the relief of redelivery of possession. Then, the question is whether redelivery could be ordered. No doubt, if the contractual lease has not come to an end, the plaintiff can certainly seek redelivery. Even as on the date when the suit was filed, viz., 28.4.1978, he cannot rely on the alleged five years lease from 20.1.1974 since admittedly there was no such registered lease deed for five years at all in the present case. I have already held that the plaintiff could be taken only as a monthly tenant. I also find that Ex.A-7, dated 29.1.1978, the lawyer notice, was sent by the 1st defendant to the plaintiff terminating the tenancy and demanding possession as on 1st April, 1978. Therefore, it has to be concluded that the tenancy has been lawfully terminated by the end of March, 1978.

12. Nevertheless, can it be said that though there is unlawful dispossession of the plaintiff from the demised property, the plaintiff cannot seek redelivery since there is lawful termination of the tenancy? The answer to this question should only be in the negative. In other words, even in such a situation, the plaintiff can seek redelivery. In K.K. Verma v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1954. Bom. 358., Chagla, C.J. speaking for the Division Bench of the Bombay High Court observed as follows:

“Under the Indian Law, the possession of a tenant who has ceased to be a tenant is protected by law. Although he may not have a right to continue in possession after the protected by statute. Under Sec.9 of the Specific Relief Act, a tenant who has ceased to be a tenant may sue for possession against his landlord if the landlord deprives him of possession otherwise than in due course of law, but a trespasser who has been thrown out of possession cannot go to Court under Sec.9 and claim possession against the true owner. Therefore, our law makes a clear and sharp distinction between a trespasser and an erstwhile tenant. Whereas the trespasser's possession is never juridical and never protected by law, the possession of an erstwhile tenant is juridical and is protected by law. Therefore, as far as the Indian Law is concerned, an erstwhile tenant can never become a trespasser. It may or may not be that in English law in certain circumstances he can become a trespasser and it does seem that the landlord can enter the premises and deprive the erstwhile tenant of his possession, but in India a landlord can only eject his erstwhile tenant by recourse to law and by obtaining a decree for ejectment.”

13. This decision has also been affirmed by the Supreme Court in Yeshwant Singh v. Jagdish Singh, (1968) 2 S.C.J. 244: (1968) 2 S.C.R. 208: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 620, (vide paragraphs 10 and 15 therein).

14. The Supreme Court in the said decision has also overruled the decision in W.B. State v. Birendra Nath, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 601, relied on by the lower appellate Court in the present case, thus:

“Our attention was invited to the decision of the Calcutta High Court in W.B. State v. Birendra Nath, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 601. In that case the High Court refused to issue an order under Art.226 of the Constitution prohibiting the Government from forcibly taking possession of lands which had been validly resumed by Government. We are not concerned with that question here. But we do not agree with the conclusion of the High Court that a lessor is entitled in India to use force to throw out his lessee.”

The abovesaid K.K. Verma v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 358. Yeshwant Singh v. Jagdish Singh, (1968) 2 S.C.J. 244: (1968) 2 S.C.R. 208: A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 620. were also relied on in the abovesaid Ramakrishnan, M.R.S. v. The Assistant Director of E.S.W., etc., Board, 95. L.W. 450. by Ramanujam, J. In fact, Ramanujam, J. also relied on the decision in M/s. Chandra and Company v. State, A.I.R. 1981. Raj. 217. thus:

“In M/s. Chandra and Company v. State, A.I.R. 1981. Raj. 217, in more or less similar circumstances as in this case it was held that the State is not free to act in a high-handed manner as to dispossess a person in juridical possession, of a property otherwise than in due course of law, that a person is in peaceful possession of property cannot be deprived of the possession of the same by the State or its officers, except in accordance with law, that in a case where the State or its officers have dispossessed such a person of the property in his possession without any authority of law, it is open to him to seek redress against the aforesaid unlawful action of the State and its officers by invoking the jurisdiction of the High Court under Art.226 of the Constitution and that the State as owner of property does not enjoy any higher rights than the citizen in the matter of taking possession of its property.”

In the light of this observation of Rajasthan High Court, which is approved by Ramanujam, J., it can be safely said, with due respect, that the abovesaid other observation of Ramanujam, J. extracted above at Page 8 herein stating that if on the date of the petition, the petitioner had been dispossessed, the petitioner cannot seek restitution of possession by writ of mandamus, but can claim damages or other reliefs in other appropriate forums, may not be quite correct and, such a petitioner can seek restitution also.

15. In the result, the second appeal is allowed, the judgment and decree of the lower appellate Court are set aside. The judgment and decree of the trial Court are restored subject to the following modification: The expression, “in the same condition in which it was at the time when he was unlawfully dispossessed along with the articles kept therein “ shall be deleted in the decree since there is no clear proof as to in what condition the suit property was at the abovesaid time and about the abovesaid articles and since the trial Court has also not dealt with this question and given any finding thereon. The learned counsel for the appellant also did not advance any argument before me in this regard. In other respects, the decree of the trial Court shall stand. In the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

16. No doubt, it is needless to add that it is open to the 1st defendant to take appropriate steps in accordance with law to take possession from the plaintiff after redelivery decreed herein.

C.R.P.No.3431 of 1992 17th February, 1993.

Kovilpatti Sri Dhandayuthapani Trust, through its Hugdar A.Scethalakshmi ...Petitioner v.

M.Tilakaraj ...Respondent.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), Secs.17 and 49 - Lease for rent of Rs.700 per month - Unregistered document filed showing that lease was extinguished and also showing that possession of premises was handed over to the lessor - If can be admitted in evidence:

Held:- The prohibition against admissibility enacted by Sec.49 of the Registration Act is not an absolute one, but the section renders the unregistered document inadmissible only for the two limited purposes specified in clauses (a) and (c) and leaves it available to be used in evidence for other purposes. The last sentence of the document sought to be filed would amount to extinguishment of the lease. As such this is a document compulsorily registrable under Sec.17 of the Registration Act inasmuch as monthly rent was Rs.700. So to evidence extinguishment of the lease, this document cannot be received as evidence. But the penultimate sentence would indicate that possession was handed over by 'T' to 'S'. For the purpose of showing that possession was handed over, this document can be received in evidence since it is for a collateral purpose. If we apply the proposition of law which the court has deduced above, this document is made available to be used in evidence for the other purpose viz., with regard to handing over possession. [Paras. 4 & 6]

Petition under Sec.115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the Order of the Court of the District Munsif, Kovilpatti, dated 6.11.1992 and made in I.A.No.1610 of 1992 in O.S.No.330 of 1992.

K.Alagiriswamy, Senior Counsel, for T.Ravikumar, P.T.S.Narendravasan and T.Muruganandan, for Petitioner.

P.Peppin Fernando, for Respondent.

The Court made the following

ORDER: This revision is directed against the Order in I.A.No.1610 of 1992 in O.S.No.330 of 1992 on the file of the District Munsif, Kovilpatti, in which the learned District Munsif has passed an order, holding that the document dated 23.8.1992 is not admissible in evidence.

2. Short facts are: The respondent has filed the suit in O.S.No.330 of 1992 for permanent injunction against the petitioner herein. He also filed petition in I.A.No.1610 of 1992 under O.39, Rule 1 and Sec.151, C.P.C., praying for temporary injunction restraining the respondent from interfering with his possession. That was opposed by the revision petitioner herein who was the respondent in the trial court. In that enquiry, the revision petitioner herein had filed the document dated 23.8.1992 given by the respondent herein, duly attested by two witnesses. Objection was raised for receiving it in evidence. On that objection, the learned District Munsif has passed an order, holding that it is not admissible in evidence. Aggrieved by the same, this revision petition is filed.

3. Mr.K.Alagiriswamy, the learned senior counsel appearing for the revision petitioner would submit that this document does not extinguish any right in an immovable property and as such it may be received in evidence. Inter alia he submitted that at any rate the said document can be admitted in evidence for the collateral purpose of showing possession. Per contra, Mr.Peppin Fernando, would submit that according to the affidavit, the rent payable by the tenant for this lease was Rs.700 and it was not disputed in the counter and as such it was a monthly tenancy with a rental over Rs.100 and as such extinguishment of the tenancy right can be only by a registered document and inasmuch as this document was not registered, it cannot be admitted in evidence. He would further submit that lower court has stated that it was not made out as to for what collateral it should be received as evidence and as such it cannot be received in evidence even for collateral purpose and in view of that reasoning, this document cannot be received in evidence either for any collateral purpose.

4. I have carefully considered the submissions made by learned counsels. At the outset, I shall refer to the rulings relied upon by the learned counsels: In M.S.Ram Singh v. B.S.Surana, A.I.R. 1972 Cal. 190, it was held that surrender of lease by an instrument in writing purporting to extinguish right of a tenant valued at over Rs.100 is compulsorily registrable. In Neelakanda Rao v. State of Mysore, A.I.R. 1960 Mys. 87, it was held that a surrender deed by a tenant in favour of the landlord in respect of the tenancy, the value of which exceeds Rs.100 is clearly an instrument which purports to extinguish the right of the tenant and as such comes within clause (b) of Sec.17(1) of the Registration Act and therefore is compulsorily registrable, and if such document is not registered, it cannot be received in evidence of the transaction of surrender, affecting the property in view of Sec.49 of the Registration Act. In Muruga Mudaliar v. Subba Reddiar, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 818 (F.B.), it was held that Sec.49(c) of the Registration Act prohibits the use of an unregistered instrument in any legal proceeding in which such a document is sought to be relied on in support of a claim to enforce or maintain any right, title or interest to or in immovable property. So long as the document is not sought to be relied on as evidence of any right, title or interest to or in immovable property, there is nothing to prevent the document being received in evidence. It was held that the prohibition against admissibility enacted by Sec.49 of the Registration Act is not an absolute one, but the section renders that unregistered document inadmissible only for the two limited purposes specified in clauses (a) and (c) and leaves it available to be used in evidence for other purposes. In Roshan Singh v. Zile Singh, (1989) 2 M.L.J. 18, the ratio of this ruling is that the document could always be looked into for the collateral purpose of proving the nature and character of possession of each item of property. In Mst.Kirpal Kaur v. Bachan

Singh, 1958 S.C.R. 948, it was held that the document concerned in that case was inadmissible in evidence in view of Sec.49 of the Indian Registration Act, 1908. From the above rulings, the following proposition of law can be deduced:

The prohibition against admissibility enacted by Sec.49 of the Registration Act is not an absolute one; but the section renders the unregistered document inadmissible only for the two limited purposes, specified in Clauses (a) and (c) and leaves it available to be used in evidence for other purposes.

5. Sec.49 of the Registration Act in so far as it is material for our purposes runs thus:

"No document required by Sec.17 or by any provision of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, to be registered shall---

(a) affect any immovable property comprised therein, or....

(c) be received as evidence of any transaction affecting such property.....unless it has been registered."

The last sentence would amount to extinguishment of the lease. As such this is a document compulsorily registrable under Sec.17 of the Registration Act, inasmuch as monthly rent was Rs.700. So to evidence extinguishment of the lease, this document cannot be received as evidence. But the penultimate sentence would indicate that possession was handed over by Thilakaraj to Seethalakshmi. For the purpose of showing that possession was handed over, this document can be received in evidence, since it is for a collateral purpose. If we apply the proposition of law, which I have deduced above, this document is made available to be used in evidence for the other purposes, viz. with regard to handing over possession. As such, the trial court is wrong in refusing to receive this document as evidence. Though not for the purpose of extinguishment of the leasehold rights, but for the purpose of handing over possession which is a relevant factor in a suit for injunction, the document can be received in evidence. The trial court has stated in the last portion of para.4 of its order that it is not clear as to for what collateral purpose this document was sought to be produced as evidence. Now, K. Alagiriswamy, the learned senior counsel, would submit that the revision petitioner is relying upon it for the purpose of showing that possession was no longer with the respondent herein. To that limited extent, the document ought to have been received in evidence.

7. Mr. Peppin Fernando, would submit that now plaint has been amended and now the relief sought for is for recovery of possession. In case this document was relied upon for extinguishment of the leasehold rights, definitely the trial court can reject such an argument. Suffice it for me to state at this juncture that the lower court is wrong in rejecting this document totally and ought to have received it in evidence for the collateral purpose of showing possession.

8. In view of the above, this civil revision petition is allowed, setting aside the order of the trial court refusing to receive this document in evidence. The document shall be received in evidence not for showing extinguishment of leasehold rights, but for the limited purpose of showing possession.

*Hindu Law - Adoption - Person dying before 1956
Having son born to him - If can adopt a son.*

In a petition under Sec.63(b) of the Tamil Nadu Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act it was contended by the plaintiffs that he was a hereditary trustee of a certain temple. They averred that one 'T' was poojari-cum-trustee of the temple that his son 'P' succeeded as poojari-cum-trustee and functioned in that capacity till 1952 when he died and that he adopted his sister's son 'G', the father of the plaintiffs who was poojari-cum-trustee. The petition was dismissed. An appeal was also dismissed. A suit under Sec.70 was decreed by the trial court.

Held: 'P' having died in 1952, if at all there was any adoption, it could be only before then. At that time, the law prior to the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, will be applicable. As per that law, 'P' could not have validly adopted a son when he had a son born to him. [Para. 7]

P.M.Bhaskaran, Assistant Government Pleader for Appellants.

W.C.Thiruvengadam and T.L.Ram Mohan, for Respondents.

The Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT: The first two defendants viz. the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner of Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments (Administration) Department are the appellants. The suit filed by the two plaintiffs under Sec.70 of the Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, hereinafter called 'the Act', has been decreed and hence this appeal.

2. The case of the plaintiff is that the temple dedicated to Sri Chenroya Perumal in Dhattimanipalli village, Gudiyatham Taluk, which is a small village temple is an ancient one and the origin of it is not traceable. The temple is possessed of 1.60 acres in Survey No.211/1 and 0.22 cents with 8 mango trees in Survey No.74. The annual income from the properties would be Rs.120. The plaintiffs and their predecessors have been doing pooja in the temple and also were managing the temple affairs. They are thus poojaris-cum-trustees of the temple. Long ago one Thandavaraya Gounder was poojari-cum-trustee of the temple and after his death his son Ponnappa Gounder succeeded as poojari-cum-trustee. He functioned in that capacity till 1952 when he died. Since Ponnappa Gounder had no male issues he adopted his sister's son Govindappa Mudaliar as his son. The plaintiffs belong to Vellala Gounder and they are called both as Gounders and Mudaliars. Govindappa Mudaliar took over the Poojariship and the management of the affairs of the temple. He died on 21.1.1975, leaving behind the plaintiffs, his sons to succeed as poojaris-cum-hereditary trustees, and the office of the hereditary trusteeship of the temple had been vested in the plaintiffs' family from time immemorial. The plaintiffs filed a petition O.A.No.79 of 1972 before the Deputy Commissioner, Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments (Administration) Department under Sec.63(b) of the Act to declare them as hereditary trustees of the suit temple but the petition was dismissed by the Deputy Commissioner. The plaintiffs preferred an appeal also to the Commissioner, A.P.35 of 1976 and the appeal also was dismissed. Since defendants 3 and 4 are objecting to the claim of the plaintiffs to the hereditary trusteeship they were impleaded as parties before the Commissioner. Therefore, the plaintiffs have filed the suit to set aside the order of the Commissioner and for declaration that the plaintiffs are the hereditary trustees.

3. Defendants 1 and 2 viz., the Commissioner and the Deputy Commissioner in their written statement denied that the plaintiffs and their ancestors have been hereditary trustees of the temple. They denied that the plaintiffs' father Govindappa Mudaliar was adopted as a son by Ponnappa Gounder. They also denied that excepting the members of the plaintiffs' family no other person acted as trustee of the temple. They contended that one Manickam, Duraisamy Naidu and Thambu Reddiar who are not members of the plaintiffs' family were trustees of the temple. Even the first plaintiff was appointed as non-hereditary trustee by the Assistant Commissioner in the year

1963 for a period of five years. The Fit Person appointed by the Department has taken possession of the temple and its properties. Therefore, the suit is liable to be dismissed.

4. Defendants 3 and 4 also filed a written statement wherein they denied that no one outside the family of the plaintiffs was trustee of the temple. They contended that one Kuppusamy Naidu, Manicka Naidu, Duraisamy Naidu and Thambu Chettiar and one Mohana Rangam were trustees of the temple having been appointed by the appropriate authorities. For the past more than two decades the Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Department has been in charge of the temple and its properties and appointing trustees on the merits of the applications made for such appointment.

5. The trial court on consideration of the evidence adduced in the case held that the plaintiffs are the hereditary trustees as claimed by them and consequently it set aside the order of the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner and declared the plaintiffs as hereditary trustees.

6. The point for consideration in the appeal is:

"Whether the finding of the trial court that the plaintiffs are hereditary trustees of the temple is not correct?"

7. According to the plaintiffs Ponnappa Gounder was poojari-cum-hereditary trustee of the temple until his death in 1952 and then his adopted son Govindappa Mudaliar became trustee till his death on 21.1.1975 and thereafter his sons, the plaintiffs, are the trustees, and thus for three generations the plaintiffs and their family have been the trustees and therefore the plaintiffs are hereditary trustees. Ex.A-10 is a copy of 'A' Registrar which shows that Ponnappa Gounder was acting as trustee of the temple. Ex.A-11, dated 17.7.1948 is a registration copy of the sale deed executed by one Kichana Naidu in favour of Ponnappa Gounder wherein Ponnappa Gounder has been described as trustee (Dharmakarta) of the temple. From these two documents it would appear that Ponnappa Gounder was trustee (it may be noted that it is not mentioned that Ponnappa Gounder was a hereditary trustee).

If Ponnappa Gounder was a trustee and his adopted son Govindappa Mudaliar was also a trustee and then his sons-the plaintiffs are also trustees then of course for three generations the plaintiffs' family members having been trustees, the plaintiffs can claim to be hereditary trustees. Now, as per the plaintiff allegations since Ponnappa Gounder had no son he adopted Govindappa Mudaliar, his sister's son, as his son. The defendants deny that there was any such adoption. Admittedly there is no adoption deed.

The plaintiffs have let in oral evidence to prove adoption by examining P.Ws. 2 to 5 besides the first plaintiff as P.W. 1. The question arises whether by mere oral evidence of P.Ws. 1 to 5, it can be held that in fact there was an adoption. However, that may be, from the evidence it would appear that Ponnappa Gounder was not competent to adopt a son because he had a son by name Chithira Gounder. To prove that Ponnappa Gounder had a son by name Chithira Gounder, the defendants have filed Ex.B-9, kist receipt and Ex.B-10 voters' list. The learned trial Judge seems to be of the view that these two documents show that Ponnappa Gounder had a son by name Chithira Gounder. During the course of arguments in the appeal also the defendants' case that Ponnappa Gounder had a son by name Chithira Gounder has not been seriously disputed. Therefore, it can be safely held that it is true that Ponnappa Gounder had a son by name Chithira Gounder.

However, the learned trial Judge would say that there is no evidence to prove that Chithira Gounder was acting as a trustee of the suit temple after the death of Ponnappa Gounder. That may be true. But the question is while Chithira Gounder was alive as a son of Ponnappa Gounder can Ponnappa Gounder adopt a son. In law, Ponnappa Gounder cannot do so. Ponnappa Gounder having died in 1952 if at all there was any adoption it could be only before then. At that time, the law prior to the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, will be applicable. As per that law, in Mulla's Hindu Law, Fifteenth Edition, at page 570, under Sec. 450, as to the competency of a male Hindu before the Act, it is stated thus:

"450. (1) Subject to the provisions of any law for the time being in force, every male Hindu, who is of sound mind, and has attained the age of discretion, even though he may be a minor, may lawfully take a son in adoption, provided he has no son, grandson, great grandson, natural or adopted, living at the time of adoption."

It is, therefore, clear that as per the law then existing Ponnappa Gounder could not have validly adopted a son when he had a son born to him.

In this position one thing is that it is difficult to believe that when the law is such Ponnappa Gounder had adopted Govindappa Mudaliar as his son and another thing is that even if some ceremonies of adoption had been gone through that will not give a valid adoption. Therefore, Govindappa Mudaliar cannot be regarded as the son of Ponnappa Gounder, and as such he cannot be a member of the family of Ponnappa Gounder. Therefore, even if Govindappa Mudaliar had been a trustee of the temple that will not help the plaintiffs to prove that the members of their family had been trustees for three generations and therefore they are hereditary trustees.

In Ex.A-17 audit report dated 3.8.1976 of the suit temple for faslis 1378 to 1383 submitted by the Inspector, Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments (Administration) Department, it is stated that Govindappa Mudaliar-father of the plaintiffs, was acting as hereditary trustee of the suit temple from 1.7.1968 to 30.8.1974. Merely because Govindappa Mudaliar was acting as a trustee the Inspector was not competent to say that he was acting as a hereditary trustee. This may only show that for the said period Govindappa Mudaliar was a trustee. But, it will not show that he became a trustee hereditarily. Here it may be noted that it is in evidence that Ponnappa Gounder died in 1952 and as per Ex.A-17 Govindappa Mudaliar was trustee only from 1.7.1968 to 30.8.1974 and it is not known as to who was the trustee from 1952 to 30.6.1968. In this view of the matter the plaintiffs-sons of Govindappa Mudaliar cannot claim that they are hereditary trustees. Here it is worth noting that the first plaintiff himself has been appointed as a trustee for five years by the Deputy Commissioner as per his order Ex.B-15, dated 26.6.1963. In the normal course, this would not have happened if the first plaintiff was a hereditary trustee. It is argued that the first plaintiff has not applied for being appointed as a trustee and there is no evidence to show that there was such an application. But as per Sec. 114 of the Evidence Act, Official Acts must be presumed to have been regularly performed and there appears to be no reason as to why the first plaintiff should have been appointed as a trustee if there was no application made by him.

8. Considering the circumstances of the case discussed above it cannot be held that the plaintiffs are the hereditary trustees of the suit temple.

Therefore, the judgment of the trial court is not correct. Accordingly, the appeal is allowed, the judgment and decree of the trial court are set aside and the suit is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

v.

The State of Tamil Nadu and another ...Respondents.

Tamil Nadu Levy of Ryotwari Assessment on Freehold Lands Act (XXXI of 1973) - Object of - Determination of issuance of rough patta to occupiers of lands - Permissibility.

Held: It is clear that the object of the Act is only to provide for the levy of ryotwari assessment as freehold land in the State of Tamil Nadu. It does not purport to affect or alter in any manner other rights in the freehold land. Ryotwari settlement of freehold land can be effected in accordance with the settlement notification framed and published by the Government for the purpose. The object of various notices now under challenge is not only to bring the lands in question on par with similarly situate ryotwari lands for the purpose of assessment, but also for the purpose of deciding the question as to the entitlement of rough patta of these lands by the occupiers. [Para. 18]

Case referred to:

certiorari calling for the records of the 2nd respondent connected with issuance of notices No.66, 75 and 79, dated 18.6.1984 under the Tamil Nadu Act 31 of 1973 of the second respondent and quash the same.

B.Kumar, for Petitioner.

V.Raghupathy, Additional Government Pleader, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: Sri Mahalingaswami Devasthanam, Thiruvidaimaruthur and Sri Manokianathaswami Devasthanam, Thiruneelakudi, it is said are registered holders of the lands in villages going by the names Manjamalli, Thiruneelakkudi and Thiruvidaimaruthur in Thanjavur District. The Tamil Nadu Levy of Ryotwari Assessment on Freehold Lands Act, 1972 (Tamil Nadu Act XXXI of 1973- for short 'the Act') came into force with effect from 16.10.1979. The Assistant Settlement Officer, Thanjavur, pursuant to the salient provisions adumbrated in the said Act, issued notices Nos.66, 75 and 79, dated 18.6.1984 to the aforesaid Devasthanams, relatable to their holdings of the registered lands respectively in the villages of Manjamalli, Thiruvidaimaruthur, Thiruneelakkudi, as respects determination of the question of issuance of a rough patta and rates of assessment imposable on such holdings at a ryotwari settlement. The Devasthanams resorted to the present action under Art.226 of the Constitution impleading the State of Tamil Nadu represented by the Secretary to Government, Revenue Department, Fort St.George, Madras-9 and the Assistant Settlement Officer, Thanjavur as respondents praying for issue of writ of certiorari to quash those impugned notices.

2. Manifold grounds, though taken in the affidavit filed in support of the writ petition, inclusive of the grounds relatable to the constitutional vires of the Act XXXI of 1973, yet during the course of arguments, learned counsel appearing for the petitioners thought fit to abandon all those grounds- specifically the grounds relatable to the challenge made as to the constitutional vires of the Act XXXI of 1973 and the right of the Government to determine the question of rates and assessments imposable on the holdings of the petitioners at a ryotwari settlement- and was rest content to vehemently put forth his submission revolving on the question of determination of the issuance of rough patta to the occupier of the lands by stating that such a question is beyond the pale of the provisions of the said Act and consequently, any action taken therefor by the Government is without jurisdiction and therefore, it goes without saying that the impugned notices deserve to be quashed, in so far as they relate to determination of the question of issuance of a rough patta to the occupier of the lands.

3. Learned Additional Government Pleader appearing for the respondents would, however, repel such a submission.

4. There is no pale of controversy whatever that the registered land holdings of the petitioners-Devasthanams are relatable to holdings of grants traceable to Mohini allowance.

5. A Division Bench of this Court consisting of K. Veeraswami, J. (as he then was) and Natesan, J., in Sri Velur Vaidyanathaswami Devasthanam v. State of Madras, (1967) 1 M.L.J. 43, referring to Secretary of State for India in Council v. Vaithilinga Pandara Sannadhi Avargal, (Appeal Nos. 40, 41, 42, etc. of 1936), which traced the history of Mohini grants, expressed that Mohini inam grants were only assignment to temples of the right of the Government revenue over specified lands, the Government retaining the right to future increments to revenue and the right to impose assessment on lands within the villages not covered by the specific terms of assignment. The grant of land revenue is not in respect of inam land but on lands which were held on ryotwari tenure. These assignment of revenue, in lieu of existing cash allowances, which in turn, were being made as compensation for temple lands resumed by East India Company. The so-called Mohini inam grants are not therefore 'minor inams' within the meaning of the Madras Minor Inams (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (Act XXXI of 1964) and as such, do not fall within the purview of that Act.

6. In the backdrop and setting of the history of Mohini inam grants, it is thus clear that registered holdings of the petitioners-Devasthanams, which were traceable to Mohini inam grants are not inam lands, but only lands held on ryotwari tenure.

7. Having understood the nature and character of Mohini inam holdings of the petitioners-Devasthanams, the question that now falls for consideration is whether the Government under the Act XXXI of 1973 is entitled to determine the question of issuance of rough patta to occupier of lands.

8. In finding an answer to the question so posed, a survey of certain salient provisions adumbrated under the Act (XXXI of 1973), is necessary and as such an exercise may now be resorted to.

9. Sec.2(d) defines 'freehold land' and it is as under:

" 'freehold land' means any land held-

(i) free from demand of land revenue, or

(ii) subject to the payment of concessional land revenue and specified in Part I of the Schedule to this Act, and includes any land--
(i) in respect of which land revenue or other tax in respect of such land has been assigned in favour of any religious institution or charitable endowment in lieu of cash allowance known as mohini allowance, and

(ii) which is specified in Part II of the Schedule to this Act."

10. Sec.2(h) defines 'ryotwari assessment' by way of 'means' definition and it reads thus:

" 'ryotwari assessment' means the assessment payable to the Government under Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.9"

11. Sec.8 dealing with 'manner of effecting ryotwari settlement' is couched in the following terms:

"8. Manner of effecting ryotwari settlement: (1) The Settlement Officer shall, as soon as may be, after the publication of this Act, effect ryotwari settlement of every freehold land in accordance with a settlement notification framed and published by the Government for the purpose.

2. The said notification shall embody the principles adopted in making ryotwari settlement in ryotwari areas and shall adopt-

(a) the rates of assessment as set out in the settlement or re-settlement notification in force on the date of the publication of this Act in the district in which the freehold land is situated; or

(b) if more than one such notification is in force in that district, the rates set out in one of those notifications which the Government consider to be most appropriate to the case.

(3) All rates of assessment imposed at a ryotwari settlement under this section shall be liable to revision from time to time as laid down in the settlement or re-settlement notification referred to in Sub-secs.(1) and (2).

(4) Any settlement notification published under Sub-sec.(1) shall have effect in supersession of any settlement or re-settlement notification, if any, already, in force in respect of the freehold land concerned.

(5) Neither such settlement notification nor any order passed in pursuance thereof shall be liable to be questioned in any court of law."

12. Sec.9 prescribing 'owner of freehold land liable to pay land revenue to Government' runs as under:

"9. Owner of freehold land liable to pay land revenue to Government: (1) Every owner of freehold land shall, for the fasli year commencing on the 1st day of July, 1972 and for each subsequent fasli year, be liable to pay to Government in respect of his freehold land the assessment under the ryotwari settlement effected under this Act.

(2) The ryotwari assessment payable under Sub-sec.(1) shall be deemed to be public revenue due on land within the meaning of the Tamil Nadu Revenue Recovery Act, 1864 (Tamil Nadu Act II of 1864) and shall be recoverable under the provisions of that Act."

13. Sec.10 provides for machinery for 'decision of certain disputes' relating to liability to pay ryotwari assessment. It reads:

"10. Decision of certain disputes: (1) If any person disputes--

(i) his liability to pay the ryotwari assessment under this Act; or

(ii) the application in respect of his land, of a particular rate of ryotwari assessment imposed as a ryotwari settlement under Sec.8, the Settlement Officer shall decide such dispute.

(2) From every decision of the Settlement Officer under Sub-sec.(1) an appeal shall, within such time as may be prescribed lie to the Director.

Explanation: Nothing in this section shall be construed as conferring any right on any person to dispute the rates of ryotwari assessment imposed at a ryotwari settlement under Sec.8."

14. Sec 11 deals with 'power of revision by Board of Revenue'. It is couched in the following terms:

"11. Power of revision by Board of Revenue: (1) The Board of Revenue may,

(i) on its own motion call for and examine the records of any proceeding under this Act; or

(ii) on application made by the owner of freehold land in this behalf, call for and examine the records of any proceeding under this Act (not being a proceeding in respect of which an appeal lies to the Director under Sub-sec.(2) of Sec.10), to satisfy itself as to the regularity of such proceeding or the correctness, legality or propriety of any decision or order passed therein, and if, in any case, it appears to the Board of Revenue that any such decision or order should be modified, annulled, reversed or remitted for reconsideration, it may pass orders accordingly;

Provided that the Board of Revenue shall not pass any order under this section prejudicial to any party unless he has had a reasonable opportunity of making his representation.

(2) The Board of Revenue may stay the execution of any such decision or order pending the exercise of its powers under Sub-sec.(1) in respect thereof.

(3) Every application to the Board of Revenue for the exercise of its powers under this section shall be preferred within the prescribed period;

Provided that the Board of Revenue may in its discretion allow further time not exceeding one month for the filing of any such application if it is satisfied that the appellant had sufficient cause for not preferring the application within the prescribed period."

15. Sec.23 dealing with 'Act to override contract, grant, etc.', provides:

"23. Act to override contract, grant, etc.: The provisions of this Act shall have effect notwithstanding anything contained in any engagement, contract, grant, order or any law for the time being in force and any provision in any such engagement, contract, grant, order or law, by virtue of which the owner of freehold is not liable to pay to the Government any land revenue or other tax shall be deemed to have become inoperative with effect from the 1st of July, 1972."

16. From the very conspectus of various provisions, as extracted above, it is thus clear that the object of the Act is only to provide for the levy of ryotwari assessment on freehold land in the State of Tamil Nadu. It does not purport to affect or alter in any manner other rights in the freehold land. Ryotwari settlement of freehold land can be effected in accordance with the settlement notification framed and published by the Government for the purpose. The notification shall embody the principles adopted in making ryotwari settlements in ryotwari areas and it shall adopt the rates of assessment in force in the district, in which the freehold land is situate. All rates of assessments imposed at ryotwari settlement shall be liable to revision from time to time.

17. Any settlement notification published shall have effect in supersession of any settlement or re-settlement notification already in force in respect of the freehold land concerned. Neither such settlement notification nor any order passed in pursuance thereof shall be liable to be questioned in any court of law. Every owner of freehold land shall for the fasli year commencing from 1st July, 1972 and for subsequent fasli year, be liable to pay to Government in respect of freehold land the assessment under ryotwari settlement. If any dispute arises as to liability to pay ryotwari assessment, such a dispute shall be decided by the Settlement Officer. The order of the Settlement Officer is liable to be challenged in appeal before the Director. The order of the Director in appeal is challengeable by way of revision before the Board of Revenue. Top of all, the provisions of the Act shall override any contract, grant or order or any law for the time being in force with effect from 1st July, 1972, thereby indicating the Government's right to future increments to revenue in respect of freehold lands.

18. The object of various notices now under challenge is not only to bring the lands in question on par with similarly situated ryotwari lands for the purpose of assessment, but also for the purpose of deciding the question as to the entitlement of rough patta of those lands by the occupiers. It is, therefore, clear that the rights of the petitioners-Devasthanams in the lands in question are likely to be interfered with as a result of those notices under challenge and therefore, it goes without saying that any action taken therefor by the Government is without jurisdiction, as rightly contended by learned counsel for the petitioners-Devasthanams and in that view of the matter, the impugned notices deserve to be quashed in so far as they relate to deciding the question as to the entitlement of rough patta by the occupiers of those lands and the same are ordered accordingly.

19. The writ petition is thus disposed of on the above terms. No costs.

Deed - Construction - Unborn child - Father executing a settlement - Mother to get absolute estate after the death of the father in case there is no issue - Condition that no property can be sold by one without the consent of the other - Nature of interest conferred.

Held. It is quite clear that the suit properties are not the joint family properties of the family of the plaintiff and her father under Ex.A-1 the plaintiff has got absolute interest in the properties after the lifetime of his parents. Therefore, it has to be held that these properties are her own exclusive properties and in such circumstances, the existence of family benefit or family necessity, even assuming cannot validate Exs.B-1 and B-6. Further pursuant to Sec.8 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, without the prior permission of the court, the minor's property cannot be sold away by the parents. [Para 7]

V.Subramani, for Appellant.

K.Venugopal, for Respondents.

The Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT: The plaintiff is the appellant. Though her suit O.S.No.9 of 1976 on the file of the District Munsif, Cheyyar was decreed, the decree was reversed by the Subordinate Judge, Vellore in A.S.No.40 of 1978, preferred by the defendants and the suit was dismissed.

2. The plaintiff claimed title to the suit properties basing on Ex.A-1, the registered settlement deed, dated 2.8.1951, executed by Munusamy Naidu, the father of the plaintiff, covering all the three items of the suit properties. No doubt, on the date of Ex.A-1, the plaintiff was not alive, she having been born on 28.8.1955. But the relevant recital in Ex.A-1 is as follows:

“என் மணப்பூர்வமாக அடியில் விவரித்த ரூபாய் 500 ஐந்நூறு பெருமான சொத்தை செட்டிமெண்ட் பத்திரம் மூலமாய் எழுதி வைத்திருக்கிறேன். மேற்படி சொத்தை நாம் இருவரும் ஏகோபித்து மாகுல்களை மட்டும் அடைந்து அனுபவித்து வர வேண்டியது அனுபவிக்கும் அளவில் நமக்கு சந்ததி ஏற்பட்டால் அவர்கள் நம் காலத்திற்குப் பிறகு அடைய வேண்டியது சந்ததி ஏற்படாவிட்டால் மேற்கண்ட நிபந்தனைப்படியே நிலத்தின் மாகுலை அனுபவித்து வந்து என் காலத்திற்கு பிறகு நீயே சர்வ சுதந்திரமாய் அடைய வேண்டியது. வை சொத்தை இன்றே உம் வசம் ஒப்படைத்து விட்டேன். பட்டா மாறுதலும் செய்து விட்டேன். நம்மில் ஒருவர்க்கொருவர் அனுமதியில்லாமல் மேற்படி சொத்தை எவ்வித பராதீனமும் செய்யக் கூடாது மேற்படி சொத்தின் பேரில் யாதொரு வில்லங்கமும் இல்லை”

So, according to the plaintiff under Ex.A-1 life interest in the suit properties has been given to the settlor's wife and the settlor himself and after their lifetime, their children to be born are to get the vested interest in those properties. No doubt, there was another elder brother of the plaintiff. But, it appears that he had died in the year 1953 itself. So, according to the plaintiff she is the only surviving child of her abovesaid parents and the said parents having already died the plaintiff alone is entitled to the suit properties. As per Ex.A-3, the mother of the plaintiff died on 3.11.1957 and it appears that subsequently, her father also died.

3. On the other hand, the case of the defendants is that the mother of the plaintiff had executed a registered sale deed under Ex.B-1, dated 17.8.1956, in favour of both the defendants, in respect of item Nos.1 and 2 of the suit properties that the father of the plaintiff had executed another sale deed Ex.B-6, dated 12.3.1959 in respect of the third item of the suit properties, in favour of the 2nd defendant and that thus the defendants derived their respective title to the suit items. In both Exs.B-1 and B-6, the plaintiff who was a minor on the relevant dates of the execution of these documents, also figured as one of the executants and it is also recited in Exs.B-1 and B-6 that the respective sales under these documents had been made because of the family necessity and for family benefit. So, according to the defendants, Exs.B-1 and B-6 are valid. Further, the father and mother of the plaintiff had also earlier executed two mortgage deeds, Exs.B-2 and B-3 in the years 1953 and 1954 and, according to the defendants, in order to discharge the said mortgage debts, they had executed Exs.B-1 and B-6.

4. Learned counsel for the appellant made two submissions attacking the judgment of the lower appellate court. Initially he submitted that the lower appellate court had erred, while interpreting the abovesaid recital found in Ex.A-1 in holding that the plaintiff's parents had right to alienate the property under Ex.A-1. According to the said learned counsel, only life interest has been given to the plaintiff's parents under Ex.A-1 in respect of the suit properties. Secondly, the learned counsel for the appellant contended that the lower appellate court has unnecessarily taken into consideration the question of family benefit or family necessity to uphold the abovesaid Exs.B-1 and B-6 sale deeds. According to him, the suit properties were the exclusive properties of the plaintiff and they were not the family properties of the family of the plaintiff and her father. Only in the case of alienation of family properties the question of family benefit or family necessity would arise and, therefore, the learned counsel contends that the lower appellate court has taken an extraneous consideration to decide the matter. Further, he would also contend that there is a specific provision under Sec.8 of the Hindu Minority and Guardians Act, wherein it is stated that a minor's property has to be alienated only with the previous permission of the Court.

5. On the other hand, learned counsel appearing for the respondents contended that the interpretation made by the lower appellate court on the abovesaid recitals in Ex.A-1 is perfectly correct and the parents of the plaintiff have been given right to alienate the properties under Ex.A-1. Further, according to the learned counsel, the plaintiff, who was a minor at the time of execution of Exs.B-1 and B-6 has also been a party in these documents and only because the power of alienation has been given under Exs.B-1 and B-6, the parents of the plaintiff had together executed the abovesaid Exs.B-2 and B-3 mortgage deeds.

6. I have considered the rival submissions. I shall first take up the question of interpretation of the abovesaid recitals found in Ex.A-1. The initial portion of the abovesaid recitals specifically says as follows:

‘மேற்படி சொத்தை நாம் இருவரும் ஏகோபித்து மாகுல்களை மட்டும் அடைந்து அனுபவித்து வர வேண்டியது.’

This shows that the parents of the plaintiff could only enjoy the usufructs from the suit properties and that they do not get any other right in the properties. Particularly when the settlor has stated that they should enjoy only the usufructs of the properties and after their lifetime the properties shall go to their children, it is clear that no power of alienation has been given to the parents of the plaintiff under Ex.A-1. Even assuming that such power has been given under Ex.A-1 it is clear according to the recitals referred to above that only with the consent of each other they could alienate the properties. Admittedly, in the present case, Ex.B-1 has been executed only by the mother of the plaintiff and not by her father. Likewise, Ex.B-6 has been executed by the father of the plaintiff and not by her mother. The learned counsel appearing for the respondents also could not bring to my notice any evidence showing that the mother of the plaintiff obtained her husbands consent to alienate the properties under Ex.B-1 and vice versa in the case of Ex.B-6. Therefore, both Exs.B-1 and B-6 in my view, are not valid.

7. Further, on the second question, it is quite clear that the suit properties are not the joint family properties of the family of the plaintiff and her father. Under Ex.A-1, the plaintiff has got absolute interest in the properties, after the lifetime of her parents. Therefore, it has to be held that these properties are her own exclusive properties and in such circumstances the existence of family benefit or family necessity, even assuming cannot validate Exs.B-1 and B-6. Further, pursuant to Sec.8 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, without the prior permission of the court, the minor's property cannot be sold away by the parents.

8. Therefore, for all these reasons, it is clear that the judgment and decree of the lower appellate court suffer from substantial error of law and therefore they are set aside and the decree and judgment of the trial court and restored. This second appeal is accordingly allowed. However, in the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

...Petitioner

v.

The Chairman, Tamilnadu Housing Board and another

...Respondents.

(A) Disciplinary proceedings - Petitioner employed of the Tamil Nadu Housing Board - Two separate charges levelled against him - Two separate incidents - Two separate enquiries - Show cause notice issued referring to both the memos - Report of the enquiry officer not served on the petitioner - Petitioner removed from service - Procedure adopted illegal.

The impugned order is clearly illegal because the said order is passed clubbing the charges mentioned in the two separate charge memos dated 8.2.1981 and 5.8.1982 in respect of two separate incidents which took place on 22.8.1980 and 31.7.1982 respectively. The materials on record go to show that there are two different incidents. With regard to the two different incidents, charge-memos were issued to the petitioner. The materials on records also go to show that two separate enquiries were also held with regard to the alleged misconduct referred to in the two separate charge-memos. Though the incidents were different separate charge-memos were issued to the petitioner relating to the two incidents and separate enquiries were held with regard to the misconduct alleged in the two charge-memos, strangely the first respondent issued the show-cause notice dated 18.8.1983 referring both the charge-memos, incidents and enquiries held in respect of those charges and proposed to impose a punishment of removal from service which ultimately led to the passing of the impugned order removing the petitioner from service. Thus, the impugned order is clearly illegal and, therefore, the impugned order is liable to be quashed. [Para. 3]

(B) Civil Services Disciplinary Proceedings - Copy of order of enquiry officer not served - Second show cause notice proposing punishment - Order if vitiated.

The impugned order does not show that the copy of the report of the enquiry officer either with regard to the first charge memo or with regard to the second charge memo was ever served on the petitioner along with the second show cause notice proposing the punishment. Even in the counter affidavit, there is no averment that the copy of the report of the enquiry officer was supplied to the petitioner along with the second show cause notice proposing the punishment. The Court is inclined to hold that the infirmity is a serious one which would render the entire disciplinary proceedings initiated against the petitioner culminating in the order challenged in the writ petition illegal.

[Paras. 4 & 5]

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorarified mandamus calling for the records relating to the proceedings Ref.No.DC3/74352/80, dated 27.12.1983, on the file of the first respondent and quash the same and direct the first respondent to reinstate the petitioner in service. M.Venkatachalapathy for S.M.Loganathan and K.R.Pandian, for Petitioner.

S.Doraisamy, for Respondents.

ORDER: This writ petition has been filed for the issue of a writ of certiorarified mandamus to quash the order of the first respondent dated 27.12.1983 in his proceedings Ref.No.DC3/74352/80 and to direct the 1st respondent to reinstate the petitioner in service.

2. On 22.8.1980, at about 3.30 p.m., Thiru L.Vinayagam, Building Inspector of Madurai Special Division accompanied by the Assistant Engineer Thiru Jayachandran, complained to the Executive Engineer and Administrative Officer, Madurai that he was beaten up by chappal by the Watchman Thiru V.Gurusamy and that he was threatened with a knife by the petitioner, while he was engaged in unloading steel rods at Ellis Nagar store-yard. The Executive Engineer immediately went to the spot with two Assistant Executive Engineers Thiru R.Sundaram and Thiru S.Elango. When they entered the scheme area, they found the petitioner lying on the ground fully drunk and in a unconscious state. In the above circumstances, the following charges were framed against the petitioner:

"1. That he was in drunken mood and threatened with knife Thiru L.Vinayagam, building inspector, while he was performing his official duties;

2. That he allowed himself under alcoholic influence and thus failed in his official duties of watching storeyard and scheme area."

The petitioner was directed to submit his explanation for the above charges and to return the questionnaire form duly filled in. The petitioner submitted a reply to the charge memo denying the charges levelled against him. Thereafter, an enquiry was conducted by the Executive Engineer and Administrative Officer, Madurai Special Division. The Executive Engineer and Administrative Officer found that the charges framed against the petitioner have been proved. By the memo dated 3.8.1981, the first respondent issued a show cause notice to the petitioner asking him to show cause within 15 days from the date of receipt of the memo as to why his increment should not be stopped for a period of one year without cumulative effect and to treat the period of suspension as leave to which he is eligible. On 24.10.1981, the petitioner submitted his reply to the show-cause notice dated 3.8.1981. Thereafter, another complaint was received against the petitioner to the effect that he entered the room of the Assistant Executive Engineer-I, at 12.30 p.m. of 31.7.1982 and uttered unparliamentary words and also tried to assault the Executive Engineer under the influence of alcohol. In respect of the said complaint, the petitioner was placed under suspension with effect from 4.8.1982. Then on 18.8.1983, the first respondent issued another show cause notice to the petitioner and the other watchman Gurusamy asking them to show cause within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice as to why they should not be removed from service for the charges proved against them. To the said show cause notice dated 18.8.1983, the petitioner submitted his reply on 6.9.1983. On 27.12.1983, the respondent passed an order removing the petitioner and the other watchman Gurusamy from service, pursuant to the show-cause notice issued earlier on 18.8.1983. The said order dated 27.12.1983 is challenged in this writ petition.

3. Mr.S.M.Loganathan, the learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that the respondent ought to have dealt with the two charge memos namely, the charge memo dated 5.2.1981 relating to the incident dated 22.8.1980 and the charge memo dated 5.8.1982 relating to the second incident dated 31.7.1982 separately and passed separate orders on the basis of the independent enquiries conducted pursuant to the two charge memos referred to above. The learned counsel further contended that the impugned order is illegal and liable to be quashed because the respondents have clubbed the two charge memos issued with regard to two separate incidents which took place on two different dates and the two enquiry reports and passed the order challenged in this writ petition in respect of the misconduct alleged in both the charge memos. There is no merit in the contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner. In respect of the incident that took place on 22.8.1980, the charge memo dated 5.2.1981 was served on the petitioner. According to the respondents after enquiry into the charges contained in the charge memo dated 5.2.1981, a show-cause notice was issued to the petitioner on 3.8.1981 proposing to impose the punishment of stopping the increment for a period of one year without cumulative effect and to treat the period of suspension as leave to which the petitioner is eligible. The petitioner submitted his explanation to the show-cause notice dated 3.8.1981 on 24.10.1981. Further, the first respondent did not pass any final order pursuant to the show-cause notice dated 3.8.1981 proposing the punishment of stoppage of increment. Thereafter, on 18.8.1983, the first respondent issued another show-cause notice to the petitioner. In the said show-cause notice dated 18.8.1983, a reference is made only to the charge memo dated 5.2.1981, the reply of the petitioner dated 16.3.1981, the earlier show-cause notice dated 3.8.1981 and the reply of the petitioner dated 24.10.1981. However, in the body of the show cause notice dated 18.8.1983, the first respondent refers to the second incident that took place on 31.7.1982, the charge memo issued dated 5.8.1982 to the petitioner with regard to the incident that took place on 31.7.1982, the oral enquiry said to have been conducted by the Executive Engineer and Administrative Officer on 3.10.1982, the resolution of the Board dated 3.11.1982 and thereupon called upon the petitioner and the other watchman Gurusamy to the show-cause within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice as to why they should not be removed from the services for the charges proved against them. Thus, it is clear from the proceedings referred to above that the first respondent clubbed the two enquiries at the stage of issuing the second show-cause notice and issued a common show-cause notice dated 18.8.1983 with regard to the misconduct alleged in both the charge memos. Thereupon, after receiving the reply from the petitioner, the first respondent passed the impugned order removing the petitioner and another watchman Gurusamy from service. On a perusal of the show-cause notice dated 18.8.1983 and the impugned order it is clear that the punishment imposed by the first respondent on the petitioner by the impugned order is in respect of the misconduct alleged against the petitioner in both the charge memos dated 5.2.1981 and 5.8.1982. The impugned order is clearly illegal because the said order is passed clubbing the charges mentioned in the two separate charge memos dated 5.2.1981 and 5.8.1982 in respect of two separate incidents which took place on 22.8.1980 and 31.7.1982 respectively. The materials on record go to show that there are two different incidents. With regard to the two different incidents, two separate charge-memos were issued to the petitioner. The materials on records also go to show that two separate enquiries were also held with regard to the alleged misconduct referred to in the two separate charge-memos. Though the incidents were different separate charge memos were issued to the petitioner relating to the two incidents and separate enquiries were held with regard to the misconduct alleged in the two charge-memos, strangely the first respondent issued the show-cause notice dated 18.8.1983 referring both the charge-memos, incidents and enquiries held in respect of those charges and proposed to impose a punishment of removal from service which ultimately led to the passing of the impugned order removing the petitioner from service. Thus, the procedure adopted by the respondent in passing the impugned order is clearly illegal and, therefore, the impugned order is liable to be quashed. 4. Another infirmity in the impugned order is that it was passed removing the petitioner from service ignoring the earlier show-cause notice issued on 3.8.1981 proposing to impose the punishment of stoppage of increment for a period of one year without cumulative effect and to treat the period of suspension as leave to which the petitioner is eligible. Yet another infirmity in the order challenged in this writ petition pointed out by the learned counsel for the petitioner in this. The impugned order proceeds on the basis that during the enquiry conducted by the Superintending Engineer, Madurai Circle on 30.6.1983, the petitioner has admitted the charge that he has misbehaved and used abusive words against the superior officers. But, the report of the Superintending Engineer dated 14.7.1983 does not support the above conclusion of the first respondent. Further, the impugned order does not show that the copy of the report of the enquiry officer either with regard to the first charge memo or with regard to the second charge memo was ever served on the petitioner along with the second show cause notice proposing the punishment. Even in the counter affidavit, there is no averment that the copy of the report of the enquiry officer was supplied to the petitioner along with the second show cause notice proposing the punishment.

5. For all the reasons stated above, I am inclined to hold that the infirmities in the impugned order noticed above are serious infirmities which would render the entire disciplinary proceedings initiated against the petitioner culminating in the order challenged in the writ petition illegal. Therefore, the impugned order is liable to be set aside. Accordingly, the writ petition is allowed, the order challenged in this writ petition is set aside and the respondents are directed to reinstate the petitioner in service. No costs.

Chidambaram Pillai and others ...Appellants
v.

Muthammal and others ...Respondents.

(A) Evidence Act (I of 1872), Secs.101 and 102 - Burden of proof - Rule of non est factum - Special cloak of Protection applied to Pardanashin women, whether can be extended to Illiterate Woman - Illiterate Woman - Alleging that settlement deed was executed without knowing its character and contents - Whether asked for further pleadings or proof of undue influence and fraud.

(B) Indian Contract Act - Sec.16 - Allegations of fraud and undue influence - Burden of proof.

Held:- A rule of non est factum which in full reads non est factum, scriptum, predictum non est factum rule has existed as a rule of law in England as well as in India and there has been a good deal of improvement in this behalf, while applying the rule of burden of proof in evidence to women in India. A section of womenfolk, in view of the social conditions of the times are presumed to have imperfect knowledge of the world. It is thus imperfection of the knowledge of the world that the law throws round such Women, a special cloak of protection which demands that the burden of proof shall, in such a case, rest not with those who attack but with those who found upon the deed and the proof must go so far as to show affirmatively and conclusively that the deed was not only executed by but was explained to and was really understood by the grantor. In such case, it must also, of course, be established that the deed was not signed under duress, but arose from the free and independent will of the grantor. A pardanashin may not be illiterate but she still may be ignorant in the sense that she has an imperfect knowledge of the World and she is practically excluded from social intercourse and communion with the outside world. If, it is so for this reason that they are taken at persons suffering from disabilities which make them dependent upon or subject to the influence of others, the illiterate Women who, for the reason of social compulsion are required to move out the work in the field and elsewhere for livelihood cannot be said to be less disabled and deprived. The Court finds itself in complete agreement with the view that the special cloak of protection applied to Pardanashin Women has to be applied to illiterate Woman as well. The distinction as to the law of burden of proof in the case of pardanashin and Illiterate Women or the case where the rule of non est factum is applied and a case otherwise falling in the category of cases of undue influence and fraud in which initial burden has to be discharged by the person making the allegations before the onus probandi; is applied has to be kept. In the former case, there is no burden of proof upon a Woman who alleges that she was ignorant of the character and contents of the documents for the reason of illiteracy or she being a pardanashin woman. It has to be presumed in such a case that she could have transferred her rights to the other only for the reason of fraud or undue influence. In the latter case, the burden shall be upon the person alleging undue influence and fraud. The onus will shift only when there is a clear pleading in this behalf with necessary particulars and the initial onus is discharged. Adverting to the facts of the case, it is a case of an Illiterate Woman thus seeking the protection of 'س' as she executed. The document without knowing its true character and contents. Learned single Judge has fallen in error seeking any further pleadings and/or proof of undue influence fraud from her. The burden in this behalf is upon the defendants.

 The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.:- Thirumalai Vadivu Ammal filed a suit in the Sub Court, Tirunelveli in O.S.No.447 of 1979 to set aside a registered deed of settlement dated 23.1.1975 which she herself had executed in favour of her brother's daughter, the 1st defendant in the suit. The 2nd defendant, 2nd respondent is the husband of the 1st defendant, 1st respondent. She sought cancellation of the said deed on the ground that the respondents misrepresented that she was executing only a power of attorney for collecting the arrears of rent from the tenants. According to her, thus, the respondents exercised undue influence and fraudulently got the said document executed on the above misrepresentation.

2. The defendants/respondents denied the plea of misrepresentation, undue influence and fraud, denied that there were any arrears due from the tenants and stated that there was no necessity to execute a power deed. They came out with a positive case that the 1st defendant/1st respondent was brought up by the plaintiff, that the plaintiff gave her in marriage to the 2nd defendant/2nd respondent and met the marriage expenses. She, according to the defendants/respondents, executed the settlement deed knowing fully that she was transferring her interest in the property to her brother's daughter i.e., to say, 1st defendant/ 1st respondent, V has since died. Her heirs and legal representatives are on record as per order of Court dated 15.4.1987 in C.M.P. 14184 of 1987 in A.S.231 of 1981.

3. The trial Court held that there was no misrepresentation, fraud or undue influence in the execution of deed of settlement as alleged by the plaintiff. A learned single Judge of this Court has affirmed the judgment of the Trial Court. He has taken up the plea of undue influence and fraud separately and said in respect of undue influence that there was no such allegation in the suit notice and that the necessary ingredients of undue influence have not been pleaded at all and in respect of misrepresentation or fraud that he did not think that there was anything in the case which would make him to come to a different conclusion from that of the Trial Court.

4. Before we proceed further, we may recapitulate that in the plaint, it was stated by the plaintiff that her husband died on 16.11.1973 without any issue and without any will. She was very old, but possessed nanja land, which was leased to one A., who did not pay to her the lease of two crops (rent in kind). She felt that she needed a male or female helper to collect paddy from the lessee and to look after her other affairs. She had no other relative except her brother who was not in good terms with her and "the 1st defendant, the daughter of her brother who had no connection with her father, was close to her (the plaintiff) from 1974-75 onwards and helping her." The defendants told her to give a registered power of attorney to collect the arrears of paddy from A. She suspected nothing foul and agreed to execute the power of attorney. The plaint also contains a statement that the 2nd defendant took her signature in the document which was made ready. The contents of the document were not read over to her. The 2nd defendant/respondent took her to the office of the Sub Registrar and instructed her that she needed to talk to none and say before the Sub Registrar that she had no heir other than the 1st defendant. The plaintiff, it is said in the plaint, then put her thumb impression in the presence of the Sub Registrar. The Sub Registrar did not ask anything from her. She did not purchase any stamp paper or pay any money for the registration charges. The 2nd defendant undertook to get the said document from the Sub Registrar's office and the plaintiff believed the same. Two years after the registration of the said document, i.e., sometime in January, 1977, the defendants came and lived with the plaintiff. Even at that time, the plaintiff did not suspect the defendants. The plaintiff informed the lessee A. that she had executed a power of attorney in favour of the defendants and that the leasehold paddy in question could be given to the defendants in future. The defendants stayed with the plaintiff for about 6 1/2 months. The plaintiff did not suspect anything at that time. Later on, the defendants went and lived in some other house. Subsequently the defendants stopped visiting the plaintiff. The plaintiff came to know that the defendants did not collect the lease paddy from the said A. and they did not supervise the land in question. She for the said reason went and asked the defendants to hand over the power of attorney stating that she would collect the lease paddy directly. The defendants refused to give the same and informed that she had executed a settlement deed in their favour on 23.1.1975 and that they had got the power to drive her out of the house. Thereafter, according to the plaintiff, she with the help of one M. got a copy of the document and came to know that the plaintiffs had played a fraud on her. Both the trial Court as well as the learned single Judge have entered into the question whether the settlement deed executed by the plaintiff was vitiated due to fraud and undue influence by placing reliance upon a judgment of this Court in the case of Madhavakrishnan v. Sami, (1980)2 M.L.J. 398. wherein it is laid down as follows:

"The general rule of law is that a party of full age and understanding is normally bound by his signature to a document whether he reads it or understands it or not. Equity does not save people from the consequences of their own folly but will save them from being victimised by other people.

Whenever a person of full age and understanding puts his signatures to a legal document without taking the trouble of reading it or without asking the document to be read and explained to him but signs it relying on the word of another as to its character, content or effect, he cannot be heard to say that it is not his document.

It is settled law that a vague and general plea of undue influence will not be sufficient when the plaintiff comes forward with an action to set aside a contract on that ground or for fraud. It is the duty of the Court to scrutinise the pleadings to find out that a plea has been made and full particulars thereof have been given before considering whether undue influence has been made out or not".

This statement of the general rule of law however has got several exceptions and it is said to record that such exceptions were not brought to the notice of either the Trial Court or the Court of Appeal below. A rule of non est factum which in full reads non est factum, scriptum, predictum non est factum sum has existed as a rule of law in England as well as in India and there has been a good deal of improvement in this behalf, while applying the rule of burden of proof in evidence to Women in India. While affirming a judgment by Mohan, J., in K. Varadhan v. Pattammal, (1992)2 L.W. 209, a Division Bench of this Court of which one of us was a member, has stated as follows:

"Courts in India have on the rule of evidence enshrined in Secs. 101 and 102 in Chapter VII of the Evidence Act, particularly in cases of women in India who in some parts and some communities are pardanashin and in most parts of the country illiterate for the reason that they transact their business generally through male-folk only, men always dominated women and women lived a life dominated by men, this being the curse that always surrounded womenfolk even though law recognised their independent rights, accepted that onus lies upon the defendants to show that there has been no fraud, undue influence or coercion in the transaction. One could easily, since the plaintiff alleged misrepresentation and fraud, ask her to prove the misrepresentation and fraud. But not in a case where she being an illiterate and unaware of the contents signed the document. Unless fully and faithfully informed about the contents, she cannot be asked to bring evidence to prove her case. Learned single Judge, in our opinion, is right in holding that the Court will not ask the plaintiff to prove the allegation, but demand from the defendant to disprove the allegation of misrepresentation and fraud. The learned single Judge, in our opinion, has taken the correct view of the law on the face that the 1st plaintiff is an illiterate women who merely affixed her thumb impression. She is a women who possibly could not act without help.

We would have faithfully followed the above principle and interfered with the impugned judgment on the sole ground that the courts below have not taken notice of this exception, but for the reason that even though we find that a serious error of law has been committed in not taking notice of the rule of burden of proof that is invariably applied by the Courts in India in the cases of ignorant and illiterate women, since there is a little misapprehension for the reason of the use of the expression, "onus lies on the defendant to show that there has been no fraud, undue influence or coercion in the transaction," in the above judgment we decided to give a full length hearing to all the parties to state the law in full in this behalf.

5. In the case of Madhavakrishnan v. Sami, (1980)2 M.L.J. 398, a reference has been made to the doctrine of non est factum also. But this has been explained after a statement of the general rule of law that a party of full age and understanding is normally bound by his signature to a document whether he reads it or understands it or not. Because, equity does not save people from the consequence of their own folly but will save them from being victimised by other people. The learned Judge who has delivered the judgment in the Court has stated:-

".....Sir Raymond Evershed, M.R. has observed in Tufton v. Sperni, as follows:

"Extravagant liberality and immoderate folly do not of themselves provide a passport to equitable relief".

But if, however, a party has been misled in executing a deed or signing a document essentially different from that which he intended to execute or sign, he can plead non est factum in an action against him and the deed or writing is completely void in whomsoever hands it may come. As Byles, J., said in Foster v. Mackinnon:

"It is invalid not merely, on the ground of fraud, where fraud exists, but on the ground that the mind of the signor did not accompany the signature; in other words, that he never intended to sign, and therefore, in contemplation of law never did sign the contract to which his name is appended".

"The doctrine of non est factum does not apply unless there is a misrepresentation in inducing a mistaken belief as to the class of character of the supposed document and not a misrepresentation simply as to its contents. On the other hand, a mistake as to the contents of a deed of document is not sufficient.

In a recent case in Saunders v. Anglia Building Society, the House of Lords had to consider the scope of the doctrine of non est factum in the following circumstances. G, a widow aged 78, who had a leasehold interest in a house, gave the deeds to her trusted nephew, intending to make a gift to him to take effect immediately. She knew that her nephew wished to raise money on the house and that L, her nephew's business associate was to collaborate with the nephew in raising money on the house. In June, 1962, L, asked her to sign a document. She had broken her spectacles and could not read it. She asked what it was and L. told her that it was a deed of gift of the house of her nephew. She..... "executed it in that belief, and the nephew witnessed the execution, it being part of his arrangement with L., that L. should raise money on the house and repay it to the nephew by instalments. The document signed was in fact an assignment of the house by her to L. for Pound 3,000. The 3,000 pounds was never paid nor intended to be paid to her. L. having obtained the deed and a reference as to his reliability from the nephew, mortgaged the house for 2,000 pounds to a building Society, but used the money so raised to pay his debts and defaulted on the mortgage instalments. The building society sought to obtain possession of the house, G., at the nephew's instigation began an action, in which she pleaded non est factum, against L., and the building society and asked for a declaration that the assignment was void and that the title deeds should be delivered to her. The trial Judge found that G., did not read the document, that L., represented it to her as a deed of gift to the nephew; that she executed it in that belief; and that a sale or gift to L., was something which she did not and would not ever have contemplated; and he held that the plea of..... "non est factum" was established and granted the declaration asked for. The Court of Appeal reversed the decision. An appeal to the House of Lords the following propositions were laid down: (1) The plea of non est factum can only rarely be established by a person of full capacity; and, although it is not confined to blind or illiterate persons, any extension in the scope of the plea will be kept within narrow limits. (2) The burden of establishing the plea falls on the signatory seeking to disown the documents; and he must show that, in signing the document he acted with reasonable care. Carelessness which would preclude him from pleading non est factum is based on the principle that no man can take advantage of his own wrong and is not an instance of negligence operating by way of estoppel. (3) In relation to the extent and nature of the mistake relied upon to set up the plea, the distinction formerly drawn between the character and class and the contents of a document is unsatisfactory. For the plea to succeed, it is essential to show that there is as regards the transaction a radical or "fundamental distinction between what the person seeking to set up the plea actually signed and what he thought was signing. The decision of the House of Lords in this case is particularly significant in so far as it has held that a person who signs a document may not be permitted to raise the defence of non est factum where he has been guilty of carelessness in appending his signature. It was formerly held in Carlisle and Cumberland Banking Co. v. Bragg, and other cases that negligence was only material where the document actually signed was a negotiable instrument, for there was not otherwise any duty of care owed by the person executing the document to an innocent third party who acted in reliance on it. The House of Lords in Saunders v. Anglia Building Society, has overruled Carlisle and Cumberland Banking Co. v. Bragg, and has held that no matter what class of document would exclude the defence of "non est factum."

Akin to the doctrine of non est factum, Indian courts as well as the Privy Council evolved the doctrine as to burden of proof in cases of the documents executed by a class of women in India who were identified as Pardanashin Ladies. This has been best stated in a judgment by the Privy Council in the case of Farid-Un-Nisa v. Mukhtar Ahmad, 52 I.A. 342; A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 204; 49 M.L.J. 758; 89 I.C. 649; 1925 M.W.N. 918, which has been extracted by the Supreme Court in its judgment in the case of Mst. Kharbuja Kuer v. Jangbahadur Rai and others, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1203; (1963) 2 S.C.J. 382. Lord Sumner traced the origin of the custom and stated the Principle in these words:

"In this it has only given the special development, which Indian social usages make necessary, to the general rules of English law, which protect persons, whose disabilities make them dependent upon or subject them to the influence of others, even though nothing in the nature of deception or coercion may have occurred. This is part of the law relating to personal capacity to make binding transfers or settlements of property of any kind."

The learned Lord has also pointed out:

"Of course fraud, duress and actual undue influence are separate matters."

The Supreme Court has, in Mst. Kharbuja Kuer v. Jangbahadur Rai and others, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1203; (1963) 2 S.C.J. 382, observed:

"It is therefore, manifest that the rule evolved for the protection of pardanashin ladies shall not be confused with other doctrines, such as "fraud, duress and actual undue influence, which apply to all persons whether they be pardanashin ladies or not."

There has been, however, some confusion in the Courts as to who a Pardanashin lady, is and even if she is identified as a Pardanashin lady, what is the scope and extent of the protection of this rule.

6. A Lahore Bench, in the case of Fayyazud-Din v.

Kutab-ud-Din, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 309, declared that a woman belonging to a family of barbers, keeping a hamam in the town of Delhi, whose females did not live in a state of seclusion is not pardanashin, for, it thought that a pardanashin is a 'woman of rank' who lives in seclusion, shut in the "Zenana" having "no communication except from behind the parda, or screen with any male persons save a few privileged relations or dependants". The Lahore Bench was not alone in holding this view, for, in its Judgment, it relied on what it thought was stated by the Privy Council in the case of Buzloor Raheem v. Shumsoonnissa Begum, 8 W.R. 3. In the words of Tak Chand, J., who delivered the Judgment, "as pointed out in the leading case of Buzloor Raheem v. Shumsoonnissa Begum, 8 W.R. 3, a pardanashin is a 'woman of rank' who lives in seclusion, shut in the 'zenana' having "no communication....."

"except from behind the parda, or screen with any male persons save a few privileged relations of dependants; see also Nanavati v. Digbijai Singh and Sajjad Hussain v. Wazir Ali Khan, 39 I.A. 156 and the exhaustive review of the case law on the subject by Mukerjee, J., in Mirian Bibi v. Mohammed Ibrahim, Chandra Ghose v. Kali Dasi. This description does not obviously apply to a woman belonging to a family of barbers, keeping a hamam in the town of Delhi, whose females do not live in a state of seclusion."

There are, however, many stages of development of law on the subject, and it will not be futile if the consensus of Judicial opinion is taken out for the purpose of understanding the meaning of the expression 'Pardanashin lady' and the scope and extent of this special provision for them. But, skipping over a plethora of decisions on this subject, if we refer to a Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court in Smt. Sonia Parshini v. Sheikh Moula Baksha, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 17 and the Judgments of the courts thereafter, we shall not be losing much, rather we shall be saved of the repetition of what has been already done by the Courts.

7. In the Calcutta case Smt. Sonia Parshini v. Sheikh Moula Baksha, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 17, as they have stated in the judgment, 'the real question between the parties was whether the plaintiff appellant was entitled to any kind of protection under the law by reason of the helplessness of her state on account of illiteracy and ignorance and secondly if she was so entitled what corresponding burden was cast on the respondent who dealt with her'.

8. Debabrata Mukerjee, J., speaking for the Court, has said:

"....The issues framed in the case raised in substance these questions though they appear to have been raised in a somewhat confused manner. The rule of law governing transactions entered into by a pardanashin woman properly so-called is in no unsettled state. It has been the subject of judicial pronouncements of the highest eminence and authority. Such a woman has been held to be entitled to protection because of the disabilities peculiar to the class to which she belongs which make her dependent upon or subject to the will of others.

In the case of Kali Baksh Singh v. Ram Gopal Singh, 41 I.A. 23. (P.C.) (A), Lord Shaw in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee observed:

"The law throws around her a special cloak of protection. It demands that..... the burden of proof shall in such case rest not with those who attack, but with those who found upon the deed, and the proof must go so far as to show affirmatively and conclusively that the deed was not only executed by but was explained to and was really understood by the grantor. In such cases, it must also, of course, be established that the deed was not signed under duress but arose from the free and independent will of the grantor."

These observations were in essence an extension of the principle affirmed in an earlier decision of the Board in the case of Sajjad Hussain v. Wazir Ali Khan, 39 I.A. 156 (P.C.) (B), that it rested upon those founding upon a deed executed by a pardanashin woman to affirmatively establish that she understood its effect and the deed was intelligently and properly executed by her.

After the above, the Calcutta judgment proceeds:

"The substantial question here is whether in the facts and circumstances proved by the plaintiff appellant could be held to be entitled to this protection. This would require examination of the reasons behind the rule protecting transactions in which pardanashin women are concerned. The inhibitions imposed by Social conditions upon women of a certain well-defined class bring in their train disabilities which have compelled reversal of the rule that ordinarily a person is to be held to his contract. These disabilities are due largely to illiteracy and ignorance which superadded to restrictions on free movement and contract with the world outside induce a condition of helplessness requiring the utmost vigilance to prevent unfairness in a deal in which she is concerned. The parties to the transaction not being evenly placed, courts called upon to pronounce on such transactions have always jealously guarded against possible unfairness. It has therefore come to be recognised as a rule of law that a party founding on a deed executed in such circumstances has to establish intelligent understanding of the deed and the burden is not discharged by mere proof of the execution of the document. Question of fraud or undue influence apart, the plain requirement of the law in such cases is clear proof of comprehension of the contents of the document executed by her.

Such protection cannot plainly be the exclusive privilege of the class commonly known as pardanashin. The parda with its inhibitions may be an additional feature or element in the case but the real reason behind the rule is lack of understanding and appreciation of what an illiterate woman without independent advice, is about. Where ignorance and illiteracy are proved exposing the woman concerned to the danger and the risk of an unfair deal it would, we think, be a perversion of the rule to deny in such case the protection, despite the helplessness of her state, merely on the ground that she is not strictly pardanashin. It is quite conceivable that a woman belonging to the pardanashin class properly so-called may be in spite of the restraints of the parda have sufficient understanding and appreciation of the contents of a document to which she is a party. In such case there can be no question of the protective cloak being thrown around her and she cannot be heard to plead her pardah in avoidance of the transaction. The criterion cannot be the social status implied in the pardah class but the ability to comprehend the contents of the document in question and the means or opportunities of such comprehension. The emphasis must be on the factual understanding of the document with reference to the individual concerned, and not upon presumptive disability incidental to mere status.”

9. The Calcutta Court, for the above, found support in the observations of the Judicial Committee in the case of Hodges v. Delhi and London Bank Limited, 27 I.A. 168 (P.C.), that indicated the cases of women who were outside the well known class of pardanashin women. The observation of the Judicial Committee in this behalf is as follows:

“It must depend in such case on the character and position of the individual women whether those who deal with her are or are not bound to take special precautions that her action shall be intelligent and voluntary and to prove that it was so in case of dispute.”

Mainly on this, the Calcutta Court has said:

“It would therefore be wrong to suppose that a women outside the parda class is not entitled to the protection despite the disability of illiteracy and ignorance and absence of independent advice where her pardanashin counterpart is readily admitted to it.”

10. In the case of Smt. Patal Bala Debi v. Santimoy Majumdar, A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 575, once again the case of an illiterate woman executing a deed under the impression that she was executing a deed authorising her distant nephew to manage her lands, but, in reality a deed of gift, came up for consideration. The appellant relied upon the judgment of the Calcutta Court in the case of Smt. Sonia Parshini v. Sheikh Moula Baksha, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 17 and urged that even though the appellant was not a Pardanashin strictly speaking, she was an illiterate woman and since she had questioned the validity of the deed, the privileges and protection given to a Pardanashin woman should have been extended to her and the party relying upon the deed should have been asked to prove that her action was intelligent and voluntary. The Court held on facts that the appellant was an illiterate woman for all practical purposes and thereafter notified the opposite arguments in these words:

“Mr. Lala appearing on behalf of the respondent contended, on the other hand, that a woman who is not a pardanashin is not entitled to get the protection given by law to a pardanashin woman by reason of her illiteracy alone, but she must prove before the protection can be made available to her that she had no capacity for business or that she was incapable of managing her own affairs. Mr. Lala submitted that mere illiteracy in a man or woman does not necessarily connote an incapacity for business on his or her part. In support of his above contention, he relied on the case of Hodges v. Delhi and London Bank Limited, 27 I.A. 168 (P.C.) and he submitted that if the decision reported in Smt. Sonia Parshini v. Sheikh Moula Baksha, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 17 (A) meant to lay down the broad proposition that an illiterate woman who is not a pardanashin, is entitled, by reason of her illiteracy alone, to all the protections afforded by law to a pardanashin women, then it must be held that that decision has some measure of conflict with the Privy Council case reported in Hodges v. Delhi and London Bank Limited, 27 I.A. 168 (P.C.).”

The Court, however, did not proceed to examine the worth of this argument, for in its opinion:

“In the present case, however, it would not be necessary for us to enter into and decide this controversial question of law in view of our finding on the question whether the deed of gift was the outcome of any fraud or malpractice practised by the respondent on the appellant.”

The variation in the judgment of the Calcutta Court in the case of Smt. Sonia Parshini v. Sheikh Moula Baksha, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 17, which was to some extent questioned in the case of Bala Debi v. Santimoy, A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 575, but not answered, has received, in our opinion, an adequate explanation by a Bench of the Himachal Pradesh High Court in the case of Kanwarani Madna Vati v. Raghunath Singh, A.I.R. 1976 H.P. 41. The Himachal Pradesh High Court considered the case of a woman who never pleaded that she was a Pardanashin lady but raised the plea that she was an illiterate woman. She had pleaded that she remained almost constantly sick and her mind had been enfeebled by physical and mental distress. She had also stated that she had none to look after or advice her. Her two brothers were addicts to intoxicants. The Court upon that said:

“On these facts it cannot be presumed that she was a Pardanashin lady. If the appellant had raised that plea in the pleadings the respondents would have had an opportunity to challenge the same and evidence could have been produced not only in support of the allegation but it could have been shown also that even if she was outside that class the circumstances were such that a person dealing with her was bound to take special precautions and to prove that she had done so. See: Bank of Khulna Limited v. Jyoti Prakash Mirra, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 147."

The court thereafter noticed the argument that the protection given to a Pardanashin lady can also be extended to other women of that class and observed as follows:

"The learned counsel contends that this protection which is given to Pardanashin ladies can also be extended to other women of that class and for this he placed reliance on Smt. Sonia Parshini v. Sheikh Moula Baksha, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 17. It has been stated in this authority that the protection given by the rule relating to Pardanashin women cannot plainly be the exclusive privilege of the class commonly known as Pardanashin. The Parda with its inhibitions may be an additional feature or element in the case but the real reason behind the rule is lack of understanding and appreciation of what an illiterate woman without independent advice, is about. Where ignorance and illiteracy are proved exposing the woman concerned to the danger and the risk of an unfair deal, it would be a perversion of the rule to deny protection in such case, despite the helplessness of her state, merely on the ground that she is not strictly Pardanashin. The emphasis must be on the factual understanding of the document with reference to the individual concerned and not upon presumptive disability incidental to mere status. Therefore, what follows from this authority is that the persons who base their case on the deed executed by any woman must show that the executant, although an illiterate woman, was capable of understanding what she was doing. Mere ignorance or illiteracy will not be sufficient, but it must be shown that she was fully aware or understood what she was going to do."

After taking notice of the evidence in the case, the Himachal Pradesh High Court observed:

"Therefore, the only thing the Court has to see is whether a lady although not a Pardanashin, had the capacity, when executing a document, of knowing what she was doing without any advice from any quarter."

11. The Allahabad High Court has ruled in several cases on the same lines and in the case of Par- asnath Rai v. Tileshra Khauar, 1965 All.L.J. 1080, the law is stated in these words:

"Rules regarding transactions by Pardanashin lady are equally applicable to an illiterate and ignorant woman though she may not be a pardanashin. It is not by reason of the Pardah itself that the law throws its protection round a Pardanashin lady but by reason of those disabilities which a life of seclusion lived by a Pardanashin lady gives rise to, and which are consequently presumed to exist in the case of such a lady. But the disabilities which make the protection necessary may arise from other causes as well as old age, infirmity, ignorance, illiteracy, ailing mental deficiency, inexperience and dependence upon others may by themselves create disabilities that may render the protection equally necessary. It is, therefore, proved that a woman, who is not a Pardanashin lady, suffers from disabilities to which a Pardanashin lady is presumed to be subject, the validity and the binding nature of a deed executed by her have to be judged in the light of those very principles which are applied to a deed by a Pardanashin lady."

The Allahabad High Court reiterated the above view in another judgment in Manoharlal v. Rajeswari Devi, A.I.R. 1977 All. 36, and a learned single Judge of that High Court stated thus:

"The rule regarding transaction by Pardanashin lady apply equally to illiterate widow though she may not be in strict sense a pardanashin lady."

12. A Bench of the Orissa High Court in Bhikary Ram v. S. Hedait Mohammed Sahaji and another, A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 62, has taken notice of the fact of the case that the woman who was alleged to have executed a document was an illiterate for all practical purposes except that she knew to sign her name in Oriya and stated the law in these words:

"The law dealing with alienation made by illiterate Pardanashin ladies is too well known and need not be described at length. There are several decisions of the Privy Council, on the subject which have been summarised by Rowland, J. In Sadhavi Debi v. Parmananda Misra, 4 Cut.L.T. 6, as follows:

"In the case of a deed executed by a pardanashin lady the law protects her by demanding that the burden of proof shall in such cases rest not with those who attack, but with those who rely on the deed; and it must be proved affirmatively and conclusively that the deed was not only executed by, but was explained to and really understood by, the grantor. Ordinarily the Courts insist on proof that the lady had independent legal advice, and though this is not an absolute and invariable rule although there may be exceptions where the lady was shown to have business capacity and strength of will and where the deed is shown to be in the circumstances not an unnatural disposition of her property as in Kali Baksh Singh v. Ram Gopal Singh, 41 I.A. 23 (P.C.), the general rule is that save in such exceptional cases the courts will demand affirmative proof of the subject of the lady's intelligent understanding and execution of a deed and will not readily hold this onus to have been discharged where it is not shown that the lady had any independent advice."

"Thus burden is therefore heavily on the plaintiffs to establish affirmatively (1) that the mortgage bond was explained to and really understood by defendant No.3 and (2) that defendant No.3 had independent advice or else that she had so much business capacity and strength of will as to dispense with the necessity of independent advice."

13. In Brundaban Misra v. Iswar Swain, A.I.R. 1982 Ori. 172, a learned single Judge of the Orissa High Court has referred to the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Mst. Kharbujia Kuer v. Kangbahadur Rai and others, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1203: (1963) 2 S.C.J. 382., and that of the Patna High Court in the case of Satyadeo Prasad v. Smt. Chanderjoti Devi, A.I.R. 1966 Pat. 110, and has stated the law on the subject in these words:

"As regards execution of documents by Pardanashin Ladies, in Mst. Kharbujia Kuer v. Jangbahadur Rai and others, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1203: (1963) 2 S.C.J. 382., it was held:

"...The burden of proof shall always rest upon the person who seeks to sustain a transaction entered into with a pardanashin lady to establish that the said document was executed by her after clearly understanding the nature of the transaction. It should be established that it was not only her physical act but also her mental act. The burden can be discharged not only by proving that the document was explained to her and that she understood it, but also by other evidence, direct and circumstantial."

In Satyadeo Prasad v. Smt. Chanderjoti Devi, A.I.R. 1966 Pat. 110, it was held:

"...It is the well-established principle of law that those who want to take advantage of a document executed by a pardanashin lady must prove that she knew its contents and executed it with full knowledge of its effects and consequences, and that she had independent advice in the matter. In such a case the burden is always, in the first instance, on the person founding on that document to show that the grantor intelligently understood the deed, and if they fail to establish that point, when the document is not binding on the executant or anyone else and is void ab initio...."

And decided:

"Also I respectfully agree with the view expressed in Agadei Mahkani v. Abhimanyu Mallik, (1968) 34 Cut.L.T. 874, that the principles which govern proof of execution of documents taken from Pardanashin women are equally applicable to documents taken from illiterate Women."

14. It is not necessary to add many more Authorities, but we think we may take notice of a pronouncement of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of Mirja Sajjid Hussain v. Nawab Wazir Ali Khan, 23 M.L.J. 210. In that case, one Madad Ali had appointed by a deed of endowment, one Mehadi Begam as a co-trustee with another, of a wakf. After the death of her co-trustee, she continued to manage the property alone. Later, she executed a document whereby she intended to add to the endowment, and she appointed certain persons as Trustees besides herself. The Privy Council noticed the facts as follows:

"Mehadi Begam was a pardanashin woman, she was separated from her husband, she was unable to read or write, and she was possessed, at the date of the deed which is questioned, of a fortune of about Rs.50,000. It is not disputed that in the ordinary case of a deed granted by a pardanashin lady, it rests upon those founding upon the document to establish that she understood its effect and that the deed was intelligently and properly executed by her."

After the above, the Privy Council in this judgment said:

"The document may be described shortly as an intervivous conveyance, taking effect de presenti and stripping the lady of all her possessions, except to the extent of the reservation made to herself of her pension of Rs.40 per month. It appears to their Lordships that the deed accordingly is of a character justifying a strict and careful application of the rule operating for the protection of pardanashin women and demanding affirmative proof on the subject of their intelligent understanding and execution of deeds attributive to them. This view is strengthened by the marked contrast which exists between this document of 1902 and the previous deed of endowment of 1898, which was limited in its scope, was purely testamentary, and expressly reserved power of management of all the affairs of the endowed property to the lady herself, with power of amending and cancelling the endowment."

"According to the principles which have always guided the courts in dealing with sales or gifts made by ladies in such a position (pardanashin ladies) the strongest and most satisfactory proof ought to be given by the person who claims under a sale or gift from them, that the transaction was a real and bona fide one and fully understood by the lady whose property is dealt with."

This is the language of Sir Montagu Smith in Tacoorden Jewerry v. Nawab Syed Ali Hussain Khan and is still the law. In the words of Sir Andrew Scoble in Shambati Koeri v. Jago Bibi:

"It is a well-known rule of the Committee that in the case of deeds and powers executed by Pardanashin ladies, it is requisite that those who rely upon them should satisfy the court that they have been explained to and understood by those who executed them."

15. A section of womenfolk in view of the social conditions of the times are presumed to have imperfect knowledge of the world, as the Supreme Court has said in the case of Mst. Kharbuja Kuer (supra). They are presumed to have imperfect knowledge of the world, as, by the pardah system, they are practically excluded from social intercourse and communion with the outside world. The origin is traced to the Indian Social usages and the general rules of English Law, which protect persons whose disabilities make them dependent upon or subject them to the influence of others even though nothing in the nature of deception or coercion may have occurred, are made applicable to such section of women. In the words of Lord Sumner, which have been quoted with approval by the Supreme Court in the case of Mst. Kharbuja Kuer (supra):

"This is part of the law relating to personal capacity to make binding transfers or settlements of property of any kind."

It is this imperfection of the knowledge of the world that the law throws round such women a special cloak of protection which demands that the burden of proof shall in such a case rest, not with those who attack, but with those who found upon the deed, and the proof must go so far as to show affirmatively and conclusively that the deed was not only executed by, but was explained to, and was really understood by the grantor. In such case, it must also, of course, be established that the deed was not signed under duress, but arose from the free and independent will of the grantor. That is what the Privy Council said first in its judgment in the case of Farid-un-Nisa v. Mukhtar Ahmad, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 204, and in the case of Hemchandra v. Suradhani Debya, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 134, and summed up by the Supreme Court in the case of Ms. Kharbuja Kuer (supra), in the following words:

"Shortly it may be stated thus; The burden of proof shall always rest upon the person who seeks to sustain a transaction entered into with a Pardahnashin lady to establish that the said document was executed by her after clearly understanding the nature of the transaction. It should be established that it was not only her physical act but also her mental act. The burden can be discharged not only by proving that the document was explained to her and that she understood it, but also by other evidence, direct and circumstantial."

16. The pardah system as understood by the Courts in India is not the system of keeping a woman under a veil indoors in zenana, but in seclusion, away from the knowledge of the world, in the sense that they are not ordinarily allowed to interact with the malefolk and are kept away from social intercourse and communion with the outside world. The view of the Lahore Court in the case of Farid-ud-din, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 309, had almost worked as an alarm for the courts to develop a sense that any strict meaning to pardah was going to exclude a greatly deprived section of the society from the protection cloak of the law, namely, the illiterate women and other women having such infirmities that they practically live without any social intercourse and communion with the outside world. The Judicial consensus, as we have already noticed, has been expressed thus:

"The rules regarding transaction by the Pardanashin apply equally to illiterate women though they may not be in a strict sense Pardanashin."

A Pardanashin may not be illiterate, but she still may be ignorant in the sense that she has an imperfect knowledge of the world, and she is practically excluded from social intercourse and communion with the outside world. Her ignorance is the course of a social usage that womenfolk depend upon malefolk for transaction of their business with the outside world. Thus, not all women, but only those who are practically excluded from social intercourse and communion with the outside world fall in this category. If it is for this reason that they are taken as persons suffering from disabilities which make them dependent upon or subject to the influence of others, the illiterate women who, for the reason of social compulsion are required to move out to work in the fields and elsewhere for livelihood, cannot be said to be less disabled and deprived. Even if they are intelligent to know where to go and how to earn their livelihood, yet they cannot read anything nor write anything, and unless told about the contents by others, will not know what the document contains. To the extent the character, content and the effect of the document are concerned, she has to be presumed to be ignorant by sheer illiteracy, the curse which is still pervading the ancient society, particularly the women living in this part of the country, a fact about which, we think, we are competent to take judicial notice. We find ourselves in complete agreement with the view that the special cloak of protection applied to Pardanashin women has to be applied to illiterate women as well.

17. When we have said as above, we should not be understood to say that in a given case, a male cannot be protected by such a rule. In Omanhele Kwanin Bassavin v. Omanhele Bendentu, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 274: 170 I.C. 423, the Privy Council applied such a rule of burden of proof upon the defendant in the case of a person who was illiterate and who pleaded that the contents of the document were not read over and explained to him. A learned Judge of this court in Ramaswami Jadaya Gounderv. V.T.Elaiya Pillai, A.I.R. 1972 Mad. 336, has dealt with a case of a person who knew to sign his name, but said, he had no knowledge of the contents of the document to which his signatures were taken, and he was not informed of the contents of the documents as the documents were not read over or explained to him. The learned Judge has said:

"In this case, the plea of the plaintiff is that he is illiterate and that apart from putting his signature he does not know how to read or write. In the circumstances, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that the defendant had executed the document."

It is possible to say that the special protection cloak, as the Courts have described this rule, is a modification of the rule of non est factum property women and wherever needed chiselled to suit the Indian conditions. Since, in the instant case, we are concerned with a woman who is an illiterate, we are in no need to say anything further.

We have seen that on occasions courts have used the word 'onus' in lieu of 'burden', and in certain circumstances, it is made to appear as if the courts treated this rule of burden of proof only as a rule of onus of proof. This impression one gets only when he views the Authorities superficially. The distinction in this behalf we shall indicate a bit later. Before doing so we propose to clear ourselves through the language of Sec.16 of the Indian Contract Act which particularly deals with the requirement of evidence and the onus in a case in which undue influence is alleged. Sec.16 of the Contract Act reads as follows:

"16.(1) A contract is said to be induced by "undue influence" where the relations subsisting between the parties are such that one of the parties is in a position to dominate the will of the other and uses the position to obtain an unfair advantage over the other.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing principle, a person is deemed to be in a position to dominate the will of another--

(a) where he holds a real or apparent authority over the other, or where he stands in a fiduciary relation to the other; or

(b) where he makes a contract with a person whose mental capacity is temporarily or permanently affected by reason of age, illness, or mental or bodily distress.

(3) Where a person who is in a position to dominate the will of another, enters into a contract with him, and the transaction appears, on the face of it or on the evidence adduced, to be unconscionable, the burden of proving that such contract was not induced by undue influence shall be upon the person in a position to dominate the will of the other.

Nothing in this sub-section shall affect the provisions of Sec.111 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872."

It can be seen from the language of this section of the Contract Act that the court has to ask the person who has founded his claim upon a document to prove that the grant was not obtained by undue influence only when the initial onus is discharged by the person who alleges undue influence, and that there has been such relations existing between the parties that one of the parties was in a position to dominate the will of the other and could use the position to obtain an unfair advantage.

18. We have a plethora of decisions dealing with this aspect of the law that court must scrutinise pleadings to find out that a plea of undue influence has been made out and that full particulars thereof have been given before examining whether undue influence was exercised or not and that the court trying a case of undue influence must consider two things to start with, viz., (i) are the relations between the donor and donee such that the donee is in a position to dominate the will of the donor, and (ii) has the donee used that position to obtain an unfair advantage over the donor. Upon the determination of these issues, a third point emerges, which is that of the onus probandi. If the transaction appears to be unconscionable, then, the burden of proof that the contract was not induced by undue influence, is to lie upon the person, who was in a position to dominate the will of the other. We can pick up from the lot some land marked judgments as are in Ladi Prasad Jaiswal v. Karnal Distillery Company Limited, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1279 and Subbhas Chandra v. Ganga Prasad, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 878. In this context, one must note that a vague and general plea can never serve the purpose and satisfy the requirements of pleadings as to undue influence, for which purpose, the party pleading must plead the precise nature of the influence exercised, the manner of the use of the influence and unfair advantage obtained by the other. Certain observations in this behalf found in Halsbury's Laws of England, Third Edition, Volume 17, page 673 Art.1298, have been cited in the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Subbhas Chandra v. Ganga Prasad, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 878, which reads,

"where there is no relationship is shown to exist from which undue influence is presumed, that influence must be proved."

and Art.1299, at page 674,

"There is no presumption of imposition or fraud merely because a donor is old or of weak character."

The Supreme Court has also noted what is stated at pages 678 to 681 and particularly pointed out notes on page 679 which say,

"There is no presumption of undue influence in the case of a gift to a son, grandson or son-in-law, although made during the donor's illness and a few days before his death."

A Bench of this Court in the case of P.Saraswathi v. Lakshmi, (1977) 2 M.L.J. 179: A.I.R. 1978 Mad. 361, has stated this part of the law on the subject in these words:

"In a case where a litigant intends to overlook and by pass a registered document under which prima facie certain rights have become vested and under which third parties have acquired indefeasible rights, then the challenging party should be in a position to give such particulars about such undue influence which should form the basis of her complaint. The primary ground on which the plea of undue influence is founded is based on relationship. It is axiomatic that mere proof of relationship however near it may be, is not sufficient for a court to assume that one relation was in a position to dominate the will of the other. Such bonds of kinship which are universally felt should not be mistaken as equivalent to saying that the kinsman could unduly influence the other in the circuit of such bondage. Even if any advice is given, it may be influence, but not undue influence. The tie of relationship need not necessarily be used unwisely, injudiciously and unhelpfully so as to gain an unfair advantage by the relation who is advising the other relation. Particularly in a Hindu family a widowed mother who would rather be fairly and affectionately inclined to an unmarried daughter would not make undue preferences in favour of a married one who has already been provided for and who was well set in life. The sentiment, the traditional features of a Hindu Home., the love and affection of a mother towards her natural and last child which is always in one way unless there are very extraneous circumstances to assume otherwise should always prompt a Court to raise the reasonable presumption that any advice or influence which a parent brought to bear on his own child is not to gain an advantage for herself or to see that an unfair advantage is gained by another child of hers in preference to the challenging child. There is also one other important and salient feature which ought to be established on materials pleaded and acts established that the 'bargain is tainted by undue influence,' and it is unconscionable that it could reasonably be said that the person to obtain unfair advantage for himself and so as to cause injury to the person sought relying upon his authority or aid. It is only after such particulars are made available and a reasonable proof thereof has been given, the onus probandi would shift on the so-called 'person of domination.' Until then the burden is on the complainant to establish it is so."

In a scholarly exposition of this aspect of law, a Bench of this Court has deliberated on the doctrine of undue influence and fraud in some details in the case of Madhavakrishnan v. Sami, (1980)2 M.L.J. 398. The Bench after quoting from Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edition, page 174 on the subject has said about the law in our country in these words:

"In India, the law as to undue influence is embodied in Sec.16 of the contract Act. In order to satisfy the terms of Sec.16 and thereby render a contract voidable because of undue influence the following two conditions must be established by the person seeking to avoid the transaction: (1) the other party to the transaction must have been in a position to dominate his will; (2) the other party should have obtained an unfair advantage by using the position. Clause (2) of Sec.16 lays down a special rule of presumption as to when a person may be deemed to be in a position to dominate the will of another. They are among others: (1) where he holds a real or apparent authority over the other; (2) where he stands in a fiduciary relation to the other; (3) where he enters into a transaction with a person whose mental capacity is temporarily or permanently affected by reason of age, illness or mental or bodily distress. Clause (3) of Sec.16 provides that where a person who is in a position to dominate the will of another, enters into a contract with him and the transaction appears, on the face of it or on the evidence adduced to be unconscionable, the burden of proving that such contract was not induced by undue influence shall lie upon the person in a position to dominate the will of the other. It is necessary to state that the rule in clause (3) of Sec.16 will only be attracted when it is established that one person is in a position to dominate the will of the other and that the transaction was on the face of it unconscionable."

The above position has been made clear in Ladli Prasad Jaiswal v. Karna Distillery Co., Ltd. A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1279, and in Subhas Chandra v. Ganga Prasad, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 878. The test has been laid down as follows in the latter decision; "The three stages for consideration of a case of undue influence were expounded in the case of Raghunath Prasad v. Sarju Prasad, 46 M.L.J. 610, in the following words:

"In the first place relations between the parties to each other must be such that one is in a position to dominate the will of the other. Once that position is substantiated the second stage had been reached namely, the issue whether the contract has been induced by undue influence. Upon the determination of this issue a third point emerges, which is that of the onus probandi. If the transaction appears to be unconscionable, then the burden of providing that the contract was not induced by undue influence is to lie upon the person who was in a position to dominate the will of the other. Error is almost sure to arise if the order of those propositions be changed. The unconscionableness of the bargains is not the first thing to be considered. The first thing to be considered is the relations of these parties. Were they such as to put one in a position to dominate the will of the other?"

The learned Judge of the Supreme Court has extracted the following passage from the judgment of the Privy Council in Poosathurai v Kan- nappa Chettiar, 38 M.L.J. 349.

"It is a mistake (of which there are a good many traces in these proceedings) to treat undue influence as having been established by a proof of the relations of the parties having been such that the one naturally relied upon the other for advice and the other was in a position to dominate the will of the first in giving it. Upto that point, 'influence' alone has been made out. Such influence may be used wisely, judiciously, helpfully. But whether by the law of India or the Law of England, more than mere influence must be proved so as to render influence, in the language of the law 'undue.'"

19. We have dilated to the rule of initial burden of proof in the case where allegations of undue influence and fraud are made and the principles that are borne in mind before the rule of onus probandi is applied. We have adverted to this aspect of the law for the purpose of keeping the distinction as to the law of burden of proof in the case of Pardanashin and illiterate woman or the case where the rule of non est factum is applied and a case otherwise falling in the category of cases of undue influence and fraud, in which the initial burden has to be discharged by the person making the allegations before the onus probandi is applied. In the former case, there is no burden of proof upon a woman, who alleges that she was ignorant of the character and the contents of the documents for the reason of illiteracy or she being a Pardanashin woman. It has to be presumed in such a case that she could have transferred her rights to the other only for the reason of fraud or undue influence. In the latter case, the burden shall be upon the person alleging undue influence and fraud. The onus will shift only when there is a clear pleading in this behalf with necessary particulars and the initial onus is discharged.

20. Adverting to the facts of this case, we notice that the plaintiff after the death of her husband needed a male or female helper to collect paddy from the lessee and to look after her other affairs and that in the plaint, she has alleged, she had no other relative except her brother, who was not in fact on good terms with her and "the 1st defendant, the daughter of her brother who had no connection with her father, was close to her (plaintiff) from 1974-75 onwards and helping her. The defendants told her to give her a registered power of attorney to collect the arrears of paddy from

Arumugam. She suspected nothing foul and agreed to execute the power of attorney. The plaint also contains a statement that the 2nd defendant took her signature in the document which was made ready, the contents of the document were not read over to her, the 2nd defendant/respondent had taken her to the Office of the sub Registrar and instructed her that she need not talk before the Sub Registrar and asked her to state that she had no heir other than the 1st defendant. The plaintiff, it is said in the plaint, then put her thumb impression in the presence of the Sub Registrar. The Sub Registrar did not ask her anything from her. She did not purchase any stamp paper or pay any money for the registration charges. The 2nd defendant undertook to get the said document from the Sub Registrar's Office and the plaintiff believed the same. Two years after the registration of the said document, i.e., to say somewhere in January, 1977, the defendants came and lived with the plaintiff. Even at that time, the plaintiff did not suspect the defendants. The plaintiff informed the lessee Arumugam that she had executed a power of attorney in favour of the defendants and that the leasehold paddy in question could be given to the defendants in future. The defendants stayed with the plaintiff about 6 1/2 months. The plaintiff did not suspect anything at that time. Later on, the defendants went and lived in some other house. The defendants stopped visiting the plaintiff after some time. The plaintiff came to know that the defendants did not collect the lease paddy from the said Arumugam and they did not supervise the land in question. She for the said reason went and asked the defendants to hand over the power of attorney stating that she would collect the lease paddy directly. The defendants at that stage only informed that she had executed a settlement deed in their favour on 23.01.1975 and that they had got the power to drive her out of the house. It is a case, in our opinion, of an illiterate woman moving the Court alleging that she acted only on the basis of the representation of the defendants when she put her thumb impression on the document in the impugned settlement deed in the presence of the Sub Registrar. It is a case of an illiterate woman thus seeking the protection of law as she executed the document without knowing its true character and contents. Learned single Judge has fallen in error seeking any further pleadings and/or proof of undue influence and fraud from her. The burden in this behalf is upon the defendants. The impugned judgment for the said reason has to be set aside. Since both the courts below have fallen in error in this behalf and have not approached the case in the light of the correct law on the subject, unless evidence of the case is analysed afresh, it will not be possible to give any final verdict. It is a fit case, in our opinion, although the proceedings have taken quite a few years, for remand to the Court of Appeal below for a hearing and adjudication in accordance with law on the basis of the evidence already on the record.

21. In the result, the appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree is A.S.No.231 of 1981 on the file of the High Court, Madras, are set aside. The case is remitted to the Court of Appeal below for a hearing a disposal in accordance with law. On the facts of this case, however, we make no order as to costs.

[Special Original Jurisdiction]

W.P.Nos.14858 and 15703 of 1992

30th November, 1992.

Mina Parikh Petitioner
v.
Pondicherry Planning Authority, Anna Nagar, Pondicherry represented by its Member-Secretary and others Respondents.

Constitution of India (1950), Art.226 - Alternative remedy - Existence of - If bars petition under Article - Pondicherry Town and Country Planning Rules.
Just because the Rules provide an appeal against an order, the petitioner cannot be prevented from invoking the jurisdiction of this Court under Art.226 of the Constitution of India. The existence of an alternative remedy could only be availed for the purpose of exercising discretion of this Court and it is not a bar to the filing of the petition. [Para 10]

Petitions under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the respective affidavits filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue writs of certiorari and mandamus calling for the records of the first respondent in its (i) Order dated 10.1.1991 No.690/RA/PPA/90-91 and quash the same and consequently forbear the respondents from demolishing the petitioner's superstructure construction in (1) R.S.No.86/1, 384 at Manaveli Village, Ariyankuppam, Pondicherry, etc.

P.S.Raman, for Petitioner.

K.S.Ahamed, Government Pleader, for Pondicherry, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The parties in both the cases are the same. The petitioner's husband is the Chairman of a Public Limited Company by name East Coast Steel Limited having factory at Pondicherry. The petitioner applied for planning permission to build a farm house in the outskirts of Pondicherry. The application was made to the first respondent on 23.7.1990. A receipt was issued on the same date for acknowledging the receipt of charges, by the first respondent. On 10.1.1991, the petitioner received an order passed by the first respondent that the Pondicherry Tourism and Development Corporation had clarified that the land is situated in an area earmarked for Tourism Development and the application of the petitioner could not be considered. Immediately, the petitioner sent a reply on 17.1.1991, bringing to the notice of the authority that the building had almost been completed and it would not in any manner obstruct the scenery in the area and it has adequate drainage facilities. He also said that the building was to be used as a farm house where Horticulture operations had commenced and it would not hinder any proposed tourism activity. He completed the building thereafter and was writing to the Pondicherry Tourism Development authority to consider the grant of 'no objection'. The first respondent issued a notice to the petitioner on 2.9.1991 to the effect that the petitioner's construction was unauthorised and contrary to Sec.47(3) of the Pondicherry Town and Country Planning Act and that she should dismantle the same within one month from the date of receipt of the notice caused under Sec.44 of the Act. The petitioner sent a reply on 7.9.1991 informing the first respondent that the construction was not unauthorised as the application for permit was deemed to have been sanctioned because of the relevant Rules. As the petitioner was threatened with another order dated 11.9.1992 by the first respondent under Sec.44 of the Act that the building would be demolished, the petitioner filed W.P.No.14858 of 1992. She prayed for the quashing of the earlier order dated 10.1.1991 made by the first respondent in No.690/RA/PPA/90-91 and also to issue a writ forbearing the demolition of superstructure.

2. The first respondent filed a counter affidavit and contended that the Rule relating to the deemed sanction of the permit would not apply to this case. According to the respondents, a reply was sent to the petitioner on 10.8.1990, calling upon her to accompany the authorities for a joint inspection of the premises, and for attending to some correction in the plan submitted by the petitioner. It is also stated in the counter affidavit that another letter was issued on 30.10.1990 to make some corrections in that plan, in response to which the petitioner had collected the plans from the respondent's office on 2.11.1990. It is specifically alleged in the counter-affidavit that the plans taken back by the petitioner's representative were not represented after making the corrections. Several other objections are raised by the respondents in the counter affidavit. It is not necessary to refer to all of them at this stage.

3. The petitioner was obliged to file the second W.P.No.15703 of 1992 on 13.10.1992, on receipt of a notice issued by the first respondent dated 8.10.1992 in No.690/PDA/RA-II/EC/92-93. In that notice, the first respondent purported to act under Sec.45(1) of the Pondicherry Town and Country Planning Act and called upon the petitioner to discontinue the construction of the premises and threatened the petitioner that if she did not comply with the same, the first respondent would with the aid of Police, remove all the persons and the materials from the land. It is the contention of the petitioner that the construction had already been completed and only flooring, painting and compound wall work remained.

4. The first question to be considered is whether the petitioner's application for permit is deemed to have been sanctioned by virtue of Rule 13(2) of the relevant Rules. The said Rule represents the old Rule which was numbered as 15(2). But the language in both the Rules is the same.

5. As per the said Rule, if the planning authority/local authority fails to intimate in writing to the persons, who have given the notice, within 30 days of the receipt of the application of its refusal or sanction the application, plan and specifications shall be deemed to have been sanctioned. However, there is a proviso to the effect that nothing shall be construed to authorise any person to do anything on contravention or against the terms of lease or title of the land or against any other by-laws or Act operative on the site of the work.

6. It is the contention of the first respondent that on 10.8.1990, a communication was sent to the petitioner herein. The petitioner has categorically denied receipt of any such communication. Admittedly, the said communication was sent by Ordinary Post. In order to prove the issue of such communication learned counsel for the first respondent has produced a 'thapal' register. The relevant entry relied on by the first respondent in the Register gives the reference number of the communication as No.690/RA/PPA/90-91. But the copy of communication said to have been issued by the first respondent is a printed card. It bears reference No.690/Z/RA/90. There is no explanation whatever by the first respondent as to how the difference in the reference number occurred between the copy of the postal register and the copy of the communication. There is absolutely no evidence on record to show that such a communication was issued by the first respondent excepting the card which is printed and which is produced by the first respondent themselves. Apart from that, the next communication which is said to have been issued by the first respondent is 10.1.1991. That letter does not make any reference to the alleged communication of 10.8.1990. If really, the first respondent had issued a communication on 10.8.1990, the first respondent would certainly have referred to the same in the letter dated 10.1.1991. It is not the case of the first respondent that pursuant to the letter dated 10.8.1990, the petitioner attended the first respondent-office for the purpose of joint inspection on making corrections. On the other hand, the stand taken by the first respondent in the communication dated 30.10.1990 is that the petitioner was directed to attend the office of the first respondent to make certain corrections in the plan. The receipt of that communication has been admitted by the petitioner and it is stated by the petitioner that her representative attended the office of the first respondent and rectified the defects pointed out by the first respondent. It is now clearly stated in the reply affidavit filed by the petitioner that the plans which were taken back by the petitioner for rectification were represented in the office of the first respondent on 5.11.1991.

7. The first respondent disputes the representation of the plans. It is stated in the counter affidavit that the plans which were taken by the petitioner's representative were never represented. The said statement is not correct for the following reasons. If the plans had not been represented by the petitioner, there was no necessity for the first respondent to send a communication dated 10.1.1991 that objections had been taken to the application by the Pondicherry Tourism Development Corporation. The first respondent would have simply kept quiet without sending any communication whatever to the petitioner if the latter had not represented the plans. If the petitioner had made any enquiry thereafter it would have been informed that the plan not having been represented there was no valid application to be considered by the first respondent. On the other hand, the communication dated 10.1.1991 proceeds as if the application for permit was very much alive which had to be considered by the first respondent. Apart from that, the communication dated 10.1.1991 did not refer to the return of the plans to the petitioner and the failure of the petitioner to represent the same. If the petitioner had not represented the plans, the first respondent would have definitely stated in the communication dated 10.1.1991 that the plans had not been represented by the petitioner. Hence, I do not accept the contention of the first respondent that the plans had been taken back by the petitioner's representative and not represented.

8. It is very unfortunate that a statutory authority should rely upon certain documents and claims that communications were sent to the petitioner and, therefore, the petitioner will not be entitled to the benefit of Rule 13(2) of the Rules. In the absence of any proof of such communication having been issued by the first respondent, I have to accept the statement of the petitioner that there was no communication whatever after the filing of the application of the petitioner within the period set out in the Rule. Hence, the rule will apply to the petitioner's application and in law, the petitioner's application is deemed to have been granted. Once the statutory fiction is applied and the petitioner's plan is deemed to have been sanctioned, there is nothing which prevents the petitioner from proceeding with the construction. The only condition imposed by the Rule is that it shall not be in contravention of any terms of lease or title of the land or against any other bye-laws or Act operative on the site of the work. It is not the case of the first respondent that any other bye-laws or Act had been violated or that the terms of lease or title of the land had been violated.

9. It is contended by learned counsel for the first respondent that the petitioner had not applied for permission for development as required by the rules. According to learned counsel, even before applying for permission to build, it is the duty of the petitioner to apply for development, but for which there could not have been any application for erecting the building. There is no substance in the contention. It was never the case of the first respondent that the petitioner ought to have in the first instance applied for Development. In none of the communications the first respondent pointed out that in the absence of any communication, the petitioner's application for building permit could not be entertained. If really that was the position, the first respondent would have immediately returned the application stating that without the petitioner getting permission for development of the land, he could not maintain the application for building permit. Once the statutory fiction is applied and in the eye of law, the application for building permit is deemed to have been granted, it implies that all the prior requirements of law have been satisfied. There is no question of first defendant contending that there was no prior permission for development of the land and it is also implied in the grant of permission to erect the building. Hence, there is no substance in the contention.

10. It is next argued that the petitioner ought to have filed an appeal before the appellate authority as per the Rules against the order dated 10.1.1991 in which it was pointed out that the application could not be considered as the land fell within the area earmarked for development under tourism sector by the Pondicherry Tourism Development Corporation. The order dated 10.1.1991 has come into existence long after the statutory fiction has come into force. Once the permit for building is sanctioned then there is no question of first respondent passing an order stating that the land falls within the area earmarked for development under tourism sector and, therefore, the permission cannot be granted. The permission having already been granted by the statutory fiction, it is not open to the first respondent thereafter to reject the application. Hence, the communication dated 10.1.1991 is, on the face of it unsustainable and it is not necessary for the petitioner to file an appeal in this case. Just because the Rules provide against such an order, the petitioner cannot be prevented from invoking the jurisdiction of this Court under Art.226 of the Constitution of India. The existence of the alternative remedy could only be availed for the purpose of exercising discretion of this Court and it is not a bar to the filing of the petition.

11. It is next contended that the petitioner ought to have filed an appeal against the order directing demolition based on the communication dated 2.9.1991 by the first respondent. Whatever has been stated above with regard to it, the order dated 10.1.1991 will apply to the communication dated 2.9.1991. The order is unsustainable on the face of it as there is statutory sanction under Rule 13(2) of the Act for the application filed by the petitioner.

12. The contention that the petitioner has satisfactorily established that the construction had been completed except for flooring, painting and compound wall work by the time the notice dated 8.10.1992 was issued was received by the petitioner on 10.10.1992 and the construction part of the building was already over. Hence, the notice dated 8.10.1992 is really infructuous. In fact, the first defendant is aware of the proceedings pending in W.P.No.14858 of 1992 when the notice dated 8.10.1992 was issued. The first respondent instead of issuing such a notice could have waited for the decision of this Court and issue of such a notice necessitated the filing of the second writ petition.

13. I am convinced that the petitioner has acted lawfully in erecting the superstructure and there is no warrant for notices issued by the first respondent directing demolition of the building. The writ petitions are allowed. The orders passed by the first respondent set out and referred to in the petitions are quashed. There will be no order as to costs.

B.S. --- Petitions allowed.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present: V.Ratnam, Acting Chief Justice and Somasundaram, J.

W.A.No.1008 of 1989 2nd February, 1993.

Managing Director, Repatriate Co-operative Finance and Development Bank Ltd., Madras.

...Appellant

v.

Deputy Commissioner of Labour-II, Labour Welfare Board Building, DMS Compound, Teynampet, Madras and another ...Respondents.

(A) Appeal - Act conferring right of appeal - Repealed - Repealing enactment providing a new forum - Effect of.

The right of appeal is a substantive right and gets vested in a litigant no sooner the lis is commenced in a suit in a Court of first instance and such right or any remedy in respect thereof will not be affected by any repeal of the enactment conferring such right. Unless the repealing enactment either expressly or by necessary implication takes away such right or remedy in respect thereof. However, the forum where such an appeal can be lodged is a procedural matter and therefore if the repealing Act provides a new forum where the remedy by way of appeal or legal proceedings in respect of such vested right can be perused after the repeal, the forum must be as provided in the repealing Act. [Para. 10]

(B) Tamil Nadu Shops and Establishments Act (XXXVI of 1947), Secs.6 and 41 - Tamil Nadu Co-operative Societies Act (LIII of 1961), Sec.11 - Appeal by the dismissed employee before Deputy Commissioner of Labour - Jurisdiction of the Deputy Commissioner.

When the special by-laws were registered before the Registrar under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act on 12.4.1978, by virtue of G.O.Ms.No.5780, the appellant bank is exempted from the provisions of Sec.41 of the Act and only the new forum provided under the special by-laws namely the Central Registrar can hear and dispose of the appeal filed by the second respondent against the order of the appellant bank dismissing him from service. The second respondent was dismissed from service on 21.7.1975 and on that date, the second respondent had the right of appeal under Sec.41 of the Act and, as a matter of fact, the second respondent had filed an appeal before the first respondent on 25.8.1975 and the appeal was pending before the first respondent when the special by-laws were registered under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act on 12.4.1978. Therefore, from 12.4.1978, the appellant bank gets an exemption from the provisions of Sec.41 of the Act and thereafter, only the provisions of the special by-laws dealing with the dispensing with the services of the employees of the appellant bank, the right of appeal available to such employees whose services have been dispensed with and the forum of appeal will apply in the place of Sec.41 of the Act. Again clause 6(d) of the special by-laws provides the forum before which an appeal can be filed against the order of the appellant bank dispensing with the services of any employee of the bank. The vested right of appeal available to the employees of the appellant bank to prefer appeals against the orders of the appellant Bank dispensing with their services is not taken away by the incorporation of the model by-laws in the registered by-laws of the appellant Bank and by the registration of such by-laws under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act, but such right of appeal is preserved and kept in tact under Clause (d) of the special by-laws. On 12.4.1978 when the special by-laws were registered, they have repealed Sec.41 of the Act and the clause 6(d) of the Special by-laws provides a new forum of appeal before which an appeal can be filed against the order dispensing with the services of the employee of the appellant bank. The appeal filed by the second respondent and which was pending before the first respondent could be pursued after the registration of the special by-laws only before the new forum viz., the Central Registrar. After the registration of the Special by-laws under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act on 12.4.1978, the second respondent ought to have asked for the transfer of the appeal to the new forum provided under Clause 6(d) of the special by-laws or the first respondent himself should have transferred the appeal in the Central Registrar. In these circumstances, it has to be held that after 12.4.1978, the first respondent had no jurisdiction to hear and dispose of the appeal filed by the second respondent under Sec.41 of the Act and which was pending on that day. Appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the Order of S. Ramalingam, J., dated 22.6.1989 and made in the exercise of the Special Original Jurisdiction of the High Court in W.P.No.5192 of 1982 presented under Art.226 of the Constitution of India to issue a writ of certiorari calling for the records pertaining to the impugned order dated 30.6.1981 of the first respondent herein and passed in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 and quash the said order.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Somasundaram, J.: This writ appeal has been filed against the order allowing W.P.No.5192 of 1982 filed by the second respondent herein praying for the issue of a writ of certiorari to quash the order of the 1st respondent dated 30.6.1981 in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976.

2. The second respondent was working as a Junior Assistant/Cashier/Recovery Assistant in the Repatriate Co-operative Finance and Development Bank, the appellant, hereinafter referred to as the appellant bank. According to the second respondent, he was sick in the month of August, 1973 and he applied for 15 days leave from 14.8.1973 to 30.8.1973 by submitting a letter dated 16.8.1973 to the appellant bank. Thereafter, he sent a medical certificate dated 22.8.1973. However, the appellant bank treated the period from 14.8.1973 as absence without leave, suspended him from service and thereafter issued a charge memo dated 22.5.1974 containing the following three charges:

1. He was careless and negligent in the performance of his duty and this has caused financial loss to the Bank.
2. He was responsible for damaging the reputation of the Bank.
3. He stayed away from duty without any intimation.

The statement of allegation in respect of charge No.1 is that a cheque bearing No.942472 dated 10.3.1972 for Rs.3,000 was issued by the appellant bank to one Saibudeen of Indian Bank, Madras-28 and that the 2nd respondent had not ensured to obtain acknowledgment for the receipt of the said cheque from Saibudeen and the disbursement of the amount was also not entered in the loan ledger. It is further alleged that there are no records, viz., loan application, loan sanction order, etc., available in the office. It was also alleged that the issue of a cheque in favour of Saibudeen is a grave irregularity. The Statement of allegation in respect of charge No.3 is that the 2nd respondent stayed away from duty without giving prior intimation to the appellant bank and thus deserted duty. On receipt of the charge memo referred to above, the second respondent submitted his representations dated 5.6.1974 and 2.9.1974 denying all the charges. On 11.12.1974, the second respondent was called upon to give specimen writing in words and figures the value of the cheque viz., Rs.3,000 so as to compare with the writings in the cheque bearing No.942472 dated 10.3.1972. The second respondent gave his specimen writings and the same were sent to the handwriting expert. The handwriting expert gave a report stating that the writings in the cheque dated 10.3.1972 are those of the second respondent. The handwriting expert was thereafter produced as a witness and the second respondent cross-examined him. The handwriting expert in his evidence stated that that the handwritings of the name Saibudeen and the words and figures Rs.3,000 were made in the hand of the second respondent, both in the cheque and in the counter foil. Thiru Sadanandam who was appointed as enquiry officer for the purpose of conducting an enquiry into the charges framed against the second respondent submitted a report to the appellant bank holding that the second respondent was guilty of the charges framed against him. On the basis of the report of the enquiry conducted by Mr. Sadanandam and on the basis of the evidence of the handwriting expert, a show cause notice dated 12.5.1975 was issued by the appellant bank to the 2nd respondent asking him to show cause against the proposed punishment of dismissal from service. The second respondent offered his explanation stating that he never admitted that he wrote the cheque dated 10.3.1972 and that since the release order issued by the Managing Director was not available it cannot be concluded that the cheque was issued without the release order. In report of charge No.3, the second respondent stated that he submitted a leave application supported by a medical certificate issued by a qualified doctor and therefore there was no deliberate or wilful absence by the second respondent from duty. The Managing Director of the appellant bank by his order dated 21.7.1975 dismissed the second respondent from service holding that he is guilty of charges 1 to 3. The second respondent preferred an appeal to the Chairman of the appellants bank and the Chairman rejected the appeal petition by his order dated 9.1.1976. Thereafter, the second respondent preferred an appeal in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 under Sec.41(2) of the Tamil Nadu Shops and Establishments Act hereinafter referred to as the Act before the first respondent. By the order dated 30.6.1981, the Shop Act authority, the first respondent herein dismissed the appeal T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976. Aggrieved by the order of the first respondent dated 30.6.1981 dismissing the appeal T.S.E. No.43 of 1976 the second respondent filed W.P. No.5192 of 1982 to quash the said order dated 30.6.1981 made in T.S.E. No.43 of 1976.

3. The learned single Judge who heard the writ petition took the view that the enquiry officer Sadanand had conducted the domestic enquiry and submitted a report holding that the second respondent is guilty of all the charges levelled against him without giving an opportunity to the second respondent to participate in the domestic enquiry and therefore, the domestic enquiry conducted against the second respondent was vitiated by non-observance of the principles of natural justice. The learned single Judge further held that on the basis of the evidence available on record, no findings could be rendered that it is the responsibility of the 2nd respondent as cashier to issue cheque and obtain acknowledgment from the loanee. The learned single Judge also found that there was no evidence on the aspect of causing loss to the bank and the authorities have also not rendered any findings on that aspect. Consequently, the learned single Judge came to the conclusion that the charge No.1 had not been proved against the 2nd respondent. With regard to the charge No.3, the learned single Judge found that the conclusion of the first respondent that the absence of the 2nd respondent from duty from 16.8.1973 to 23.8.1973 was unauthorised can be sustained. However, the learned single Judge took the view that the punishment of dismissal from service on charge No.3 alone cannot be sustained, as it is disproportionate to the gravity of the allegations levelled against the second respondent. Ultimately, the learned single Judge allowed the writ petition. This writ appeal is directed against the order of the learned single Judge.

4. Mr. B. Kumar, the learned counsel appearing for the appellant in the first place contended that the appellant bank is an establishment under the Central/State Government and therefore, by reason of the Sec.4(1)(c) of the Act, the provisions of the said Act will not apply to the appellant bank. The learned counsel submitted that the appellant bank was set up by the Government of India and initial contribution as well as 90% of funds are brought by the Government of India and the Southern States, that the management of the appellant bank is wholly under the Government, that the functions of the appellant bank are Governmental in every sense that the appellant bank is an instrumentality of the State and therefore the appellant bank is exempted from the provisions of the Act under Sec.4(1)(c) of the Act. We are unable to accept the above contention of the learned counsel for the appellant. The said contention of the learned counsel for the appellant based on Sec.4(1)(c) of the Act was not raised on behalf of the appellant bank in the appeal T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976, filed by the second respondent against the order of the appellant bank dismissing the second respondent from service, before the first respondent. Such a plea was also not raised in the counter affidavit filed by the appellant bank in W.P.No.5192 of 1982 nor it was raised during the arguments before the learned single Judge, who heard the said writ petition. Again, the plea based on Sec.4(1)(c) of the Act was not even raised in the grounds of the writ appeal. In those circumstances, we are not inclined to permit the learned counsel for the appellant to raise the contention that by reason of Sec.4(1)(c) of the Act, the provisions of the Act will not apply to the appellant bank, for the first time, at this stage of the proceedings 17 years after the commencement of the proceedings before the first respondent. In Indian Bank represented by its Assistant General Manager v. R.S. Thiruvengadam, 1991 W.L.R. 699, a Division Bench of this Court has held that the plea of want of jurisdiction of the appellate authority under Sec.41 of the Act to entertain the appeal against the order dismissing the employee from service cannot be allowed to be raised for the first time after 17 years in the writ appeal. In view of the above legal and factual position, we have no hesitation in rejecting the first contention of the learned counsel for the appellant.

5. The second contention of the learned counsel for the appellant is that Sec.6 of the Act provides that the State Government may by notification exempt any establishment or caluse of establishments from all or any of the provisions of the Act subject to such conditions as the State Government may deem fit. By virtue of powers conferred by Sec.6, the State Government issued a notification in G.O.Ms.No.5780, Industries, Labour and Co-operation, dated 11.12.1963 exempting the co-operative societies from the provisions of the Act from the date on which the model by-laws were incorporated in the registered by-laws of these societies. The learned counsel further contended that in the present case, the model by-laws were incorporated in the registered by-laws of the appellant bank and they were registered under Sec.11 of the Co-operative Societies Act, 1961 on 12.4.1978 and therefore the appellant bank is permanently exempted from the provisions of Sec.41 of the Act from 12.4.1978 and consequently on the date when the first respondent heard and disposed of the appeal in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 such appeal filed under Sec.41 of the Act would be incompetent and the order of the first respondent dismissing the appeal is liable to be confirmed on the ground that the appeal filed by the second respondent before the first respondent under Sec.41 of the Act would be incompetent after 12.4.1978. The learned counsel also contended that the learned single Judge ought to have confirmed the order of the first respondent dismissing the appeal in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 holding that the said appeal is not maintainable under Sec.41 of the Act, after 12.4.1978 and that the order of the single Judge interfering with the order of the first respondent on merits cannot be sustained. Per contra, Mr. G. Venkataraman, the learned counsel for the 2nd respondent contended that the right of appeal available to the second respondent under Sec.41 of the Act is a vested right and such right is determined as on the date of the cause of action and this vested right cannot be taken away unless there are express words to that the learned counsel for the 2nd respondent further contended that G.O.No.5780 referred to above and the special bye-laws of the appellant bank relating to dispensing with the service of an employee of the appellant bank and filing of appeal against such order dispensing with the service of an employee are prospective in operation and not retrospective. In support of the above contention, the learned counsel relied on the decision in A.K. Appaswamy v. The Pollachi Co-operative Marketing Societies by its Secretary and another, 1974 T.L.N.J. 37. The learned counsel also contended that the appellant bank has not raised the above plea based on Sec.6 of the Act in the writ petition before the learned single Judge and therefore, the appellant should not be permitted to raise such plea in the writ appeal. No doubt, the plea based on the exemption granted under Sec.6 of the Act and G.O.Ms.No.5780, Industries, Labour and Co-operation, dated 11.12.1963 was not raised on behalf of the appellant bank in the counter filed in the writ petition and before the learned single Judge at the time of the hearing of the writ petition. However, in the supplemental counter affidavit filed by the appellant bank in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 before the first respondent the appellant bank has specifically raised the plea that it is exempted from the provisions of the Act from 12.4.1978 in the following terms:

"This respondent states that the special bye-laws relating to service conditions of the employees of the bank was registered before the Registrar of Co-operative Societies on 12.4.1978 under Sec.11 of the Cooperative Societies Act, 1961. This respondent further submits that the said special bye-laws constitute a statutory contract governing the rural relationship between this respondent and the appellant.

This respondent submits that this respondent is exempted under the Tamil Nadu Shops and Establishments Act, 1947, from 12.4.1978 (the date of Registration of Special bye-laws) by virtue of Notification dated 11.12.1963 in G.O.Ms.No.5780, Industries, Labour and Co-operation (Labour) published in Part II, Section I of the Fort St. George Gazette, dated 25.12.1963 at page 2999 issued under Sec.6 of the Tamil Nadu Shops and Establishments Act, 1961.

This respondent, therefore, prays that the above appeal may be dismissed."

As the appellant bank has raised the plea based on the exemption granted under Sec.6 of the Act at the earliest point of time in the supplemental counter affidavit filed in T.S.E.No.43 of 1976 before the 1st respondent as well as in the grounds of writ appeal and inasmuch as the plea relates to the jurisdiction of the first respondent to hear and dispose of the appeal we are inclined to consider the second contention of the learned counsel for the appellant on merits.

6. Sec.6 of the Act provides that the State Government may by notification exempt either permanently or for any specified period any establishment or class of establishments or person or persons from all or any of the provisions of the Act subject to such conditions as the State Government may deem fit. By virtue of powers conferred by Sec.6 of the Act, the Government issued a notification in G.O.Ms.No.5780, Industries, Labour and Co-operation, dated 11.12.1963 hereinafter referred to as the G.O., which reads thus:

"In exercise of the powers conferred by Sec.6 of the Madras Shops and Establishments Act, 1947 (Madras Act XXXVI of 1947), (hereinafter in this referred to as "the 1947 Act") the Governor of Madras hereby exempts permanently every society registered or deemed to be registered under the Madras Co-operative Societies Act, 1961 (Madras Act 53 of 1961); (hereinafter in this notification referred to as the "The 1961 Act") from--

(i) the provisions of clause (a) of sub-section (2) of Sec.34, Sec.35 and Sec.41 of the 1947 Act-

(a) on and from the 1st January, 1964, if the registered bye-laws for the time being in force or the registered amendment of the bye-laws of such society contain the model bye-laws appended to this notification; and

(b) on and from the date on which the model by-law aforesaid are incorporated in the registered by-laws of the society and registered under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act if the registered by-laws of the society do not contain the model by-laws aforesaid; and

(ii) all the other provisions of the 1947 Act on and from the 1st January, 1964."

In the present case, it is not in dispute that the special by-laws relating to service conditions of the employees of the appellant bank was registered before the Registrar of Co-operative Societies on 12.4.1978 under Sec.11 of the Co-operative Societies Act, 1961. It is also admitted that the 2nd respondent was dismissed from service on 21.7.1975 with effect from 16.7.1975 and that the second respondent filed an appeal before the 1st respondent against the order of the appellant bank dismissing the second respondent from services on 24.8.1975 and that the first respondent dismissed the appeal on 30.6.1981. Clause 6(c) of the special by-laws relating to the service conditions of the employees of the appellant bank (hereinafter referred to 'the special by-laws') provides that the service of any member of the bank who is employed continuously for a period of not less than 6 months shall not be dispensed with except for a reasonable cause and without giving such member at least one month's notice or wages in lieu of such notice. The proviso to Clause 6(c) of the special by-laws says that such notice shall not be necessary where the services of such member are dispensed with on a charge on misconduct supported by satisfactory evidence recorded at an enquiry held for the purpose. Clause 6(d) of the special by-laws provides that any member of the bank who has completed a continuous service of not less than 6 months in the establishment and whose services have been dispensed with may appeal to the Central Registrar either on the ground that there was no reasonable cause for dispensing with his services on the ground that he had not been guilty of misconduct, as held by the authority who imposed the penalty. By virtue of G.O.Ms.No.5780, the Co-operative Societies are permanently exempted from the provisions of Sec.41 of the Act on and from the date on which the model by-laws are incorporated in the registered by-laws of the Co-operative Societies. After the special by-laws were registered before the Registrar of Co-operative Societies under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act on 12.4.1978, by virtue of clause 6(d), of the special by-laws, only the Central Registrar is competent to hear and dispose of the appeal filed by the second respondent against the order of the appellant bank dismissing him from service. G.O.Ms.No.5780 clearly states that on and from the date on which the model by-laws are incorporated in the registered by-laws of the society and registered under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act, the Co-operative Societies will be exempted from the provisions of Sec.41 of the Act. From the plain meaning of G.O.Ms.No.5780, it is clear that the operation of Sec.41 of the Act ceased to apply to the appellant bank when the model by-laws were incorporated in the registered by-laws of the appellant bank on 12.4.1978. The first respondent herein, the appellate authority under Sec.41 of the Act, though competent to entertain the appeal filed by the 2nd respondent against the order of the appellant bank dismissing him from service, after the model by-laws are incorporated in the registered by-laws and registered under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act on 12.4.1978, the first respondent, ceased to have jurisdiction to hear and dispose of the appeal pending before it, because by virtue of G.O.Ms.No.5780, after the registration of the special by-laws on 12.4.1978 the exemption had come into force and Sec.41 of the Act ceased to apply to the case of the appellant bank. Again it must be remembered that by virtue of clause 6(d) of the special by-laws an alternative forum is provided before whom appeals against the orders dispensing with the services of employees of the appellant bank, can be preferred. Therefore, it has to be held that on 30.6.1981, when the first respondent passed orders in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 he was not competent to hear and dispose of the said appeal. 7. In Ittyavira Mathia v. Varkey Varkey, A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 907, in a suit instituted before the repeal of Travancore High Court Act 4 of 1909 an appeal was filed after the repeal of that Act by Act 5 of 1125. At the time of filing the appeal even Sec.24 of the latter Act, which provided that a Full Bench will hear and decide the appeal from the decrees of the District Courts in which the amount or value of the subject matter is in excess of Rs.5,000 stood repealed. The appellants contended before the Supreme Court that their appeal could be heard only by a Bench of three Judges as provided by Sec.11(1) of the Travancore High Court Act 4 of 1099. The Supreme Court repelling the above contention of the appellants pointed out that the High Court of Travancore was itself abolished as the result of the merger and a new High Court came into being viz. the High Court of Travancore-Cochin. The Supreme Court further pointed out that the rights of the parties to prefer appeals to that High Court were governed initially by Ordinance II of 1124 and later by Act V of 1125. These provisions came into being subsequent to the institution of the suit and therefore, the rights of a person aggrieved by the decision of a suit instituted prior to the coming into force of Act V of 1125 were only those which were conferred by that Act. In the above decision, the Supreme Court has further held as follows:

"A litigant has no right to contend that a tribunal before whom he should have taken an appeal when he instituted the suit should not be abolished. The Legislature has full power to enact a law of that kind and it is not contended before us that the repeal of the Travancore High Court Act was unconstitutional. It would, therefore, follow that whatever rights may have vested in the party in the matter of filing an appeal were abrogated by competent legislature. New rights were conferred in place of those which were taken away and it is only the new rights which could be availed of."

8. In Mohamed Meera v. Thirumalaya, (1966)1 S.C.R. 574; A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 430, the appellants' suit for recovery of possession of property and mesne profits filed in 1950 was substantially decreed by the trial court. The appellant however filed an appeal before the Kerala High Court against the decree in so far as it went against him. The appeal was heard in 1960 after the Kerala High Court Act 5 of 1959 had been passed and under its provisions the appeal was heard by a single Judge. When the appellant had filed his suit, and later on his appeal, the Travancore-Cochin High Court Act of 1949 was in force and under that Act the appeal would have been heard by a Division Bench. On the judgment of the High Court going against him the appellant went to the Supreme Court by Special leave. Before the Supreme Court it was contended on his behalf on the basis of Radhakrishna's case, I.L.R. 1950 Nag. 532, that the Kerala High Court Act 5 of 1959 could not retrospectively take away his right to be heard by a Division Bench which he had under the law as it stood when he filed his suit and appeal. Reliance was also placed on Grikapati Veeraya's case, for the proposition that the institution of a suit carries with it the implication that all rights of appeal then in force are preserved to the parties thereto till the rest of the career of the suit. The Supreme Court rejected the above contention raised on behalf of the appellant based on Radhakrishnan v. Shridhar, I.L.R. 1950 Nag. 532 and Garikapatti Veeraya v. N.Subbaiah Choudhury, (1957)1 M.L.J. (S.C.) 1; (1957)1 An.W.R. (S.C.) 1; 1957 S.C.J. 439; 1957 S.C.C. 399; 1957 S.C.R. 488; A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 540 and held that no party has a vested right to be heard by a specified number of Judges, that the Travancore-Cochin High Court Act of 1949 did not confer any right of appeal on the appellant which has been taken away by the later Act and that it only provided for procedural matters which are dealt with several High Courts under the Letters Patent.

9. In Maria Christine v. Maria Zurna, A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1352, the Supreme Court has held that it is well-settled that the right of appeal is a substantive right and it gets vested in a litigant no sooner the lis is commenced in the Court of the first instance, and such right or any remedy in respect thereof will not be affected by any repeal of the enactment conferring such right unless the repealing enactment either expressly or by necessary implication takes away such right or remedy in respect thereof. The Supreme Court after pointing out that the above position has also been settled by the decisions of the Privy Council in The Colonial Sugar Refining Company Limited v. Irving, 1905 A.C. 369 and Garikapatti Veeraya v. N.Subbaiah Choudhury, (1957)1 M.L.J. (S.C.) 1; (1957)1 An.W.R. (S.C.) 1; 1957 S.C.J. 439; 1957 S.C.C. 399; 1957 S.C.R. 488; A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 540, held that the forum where such appeal can be lodged is indubitably a procedural matter and, therefore, the appeal, the right to which has arisen under a repealed Act, will have to be lodged in a forum provided for by the repealing Act. In the above decision, the Supreme Court has observed as follows:

"If the repealing Act provides new forum where the remedy or the legal proceedings in respect of such vested right can be pursued after the repeal, the forum must be as provided in the

10. The position of law which emerges from the decisions of the Supreme Court referred to above is that the right of appeal is a substantive right and gets vested in a litigant no sooner the lis is commenced in a suit in a court of first instance and such right or any remedy in respect thereof will not be affected by any repeal of the enactment conferring such right unless the repealing enactment either expressly or by necessary implication takes away such right or remedy in respect thereof. However, the forum where such an appeal can be lodged is a procedural matter and therefore if the repealing Act provides a new forum where the remedy by way of appeal or legal proceedings in respect of such vested right can be pursued after the repeal, the forum must be as provided in the repealing Act. The above ratio of the decisions of the Supreme Court can be applied to the facts of the present case. If we so apply the ratio of the decisions of the Supreme Court referred above to the facts of the present case, it follows that when the special by-laws were registered before the Registrar under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act on 12.4.1978, by virtue of G.O.Ms.No.5780, the appellant bank is exempted from the provisions of Sec.41 of the Act and only the new forum provided under the special by-laws namely the Central Registrar can hear and dispose of the appeal filed by the second respondent against the order of the appellant bank dismissing him from service. As already pointed out, the second respondent was dismissed from service on 21.7.1975 and on that date, the second respondent had the right of appeal under Sec.41 of the Act and, as a matter of fact, the second respondent had filed an appeal before the first respondent on 25.8.1975 and the appeal was pending before the first respondent when the special by-laws were registered under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act on 12.4.1978. Therefore, from 12.4.1978, the appellant bank gets an exemption from the provisions of Sec.41 of the Act and thereafter, only the provisions of the special by-laws dealing with the dispensing with the services of the employees of the appellant bank, the right of appeal available to such employees whose services has been dispensed with and the forum of appeal will apply in the place of Sec.41 of the Act. Again clause 6(d) of the special by-laws provides the forum before which an appeal can be filed against the order of the appellant bank dispensing with the services of any employee of the bank. The vested right of appeal available to the employees of the appellant bank to prefer appeals against the orders of the appellant Bank dispensing with their services is not taken away by the incorporation of the model by-laws in the registered by-laws of the appellant Bank and by the registration of such by-laws under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act, but such right of appeal is preserved and kept in tact under Clause 6(d) of the special by-laws. On 12.4.1978 when the special by-laws were registered, they have repealed Sec.41 of the Act and the clause 6(d) of the Special by-laws provides a new forum of appeal before which an appeal can be filed against the order dispensing with the services of the employee of the appellant bank. The appeal filed by the second respondent and which was pending before the first respondent could be pursued after the registration of the special by-laws only before the new forum viz., the Central Registrar. After the registration of the Special by-laws under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act on 12.4.1978, the second respondent ought to have asked for the transfer of the appeal to the new forum provided under Clause 6(d) of the special by-laws or the first respondent himself should have transferred the appeal to the Central Registrar. In these circumstances, it has to be held that after 12.4.1978, the first respondent had no jurisdiction to hear and dispose of the appeal filed by the second respondent under Sec.41 of the Act and which was pending on that day. Therefore, we are inclined to hold that the order of the first respondent dated 30.6.1981 dismissing the appeal T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 filed by the 2nd respondent is correct, not for the reasons stated in the order of the 1st respondent, but on the ground that the appeal filed by the second respondent before the first respondent under Sec.41 of the Act would be incompetent after 12.4.1978.

11. In view of the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in Ityavira Mathia v. Varkey Varkey, A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 907. in Mohamed Meera v. Thirumala, (1966)1 S.C.R. 574: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 430 and in Maria Christine v. Maria Zurna, A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1352, referred above we are unable to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the second respondent based on the decision in A.K. Appaswamy v. The Pollachi Co-operative Marketing Societies by its Secretary, 1974 T.L.N.J. 37, that no retrospective effect can be given to G.O.Ms.No.5780 and that the said G.O.s will not apply to the appeals pending before the appellate authority under Sec.41 of the Act, viz. the first respondent on the date when model by-laws were incorporated in the registered by-laws and registered under Sec.11 of the 1961 Act. It must be remembered that the special by-laws specifically provided for a forum for filing appeals against the order dispensing with the services of the employees of the appellant bank. In view of the decisions of the Supreme Court referred to above it has to be held that where the special by-laws provided a new forum, where the vested rights of appeal against the order dispensing with the services of an employee can be pursued by him, the forum of appeal must be as provided under the special by-laws and not the forum provided under Sec.41 of the Act the operation of which ceased to apply to the appellant bank when the special by-laws were registered on 12.4.1978. We are also not inclined to follow the decision in A.K.Appaswamy v. The Pollachi Co-operative Marketing Societies by its Secretary, 1974 T.L.N.J. 37, as the ratio of that decision runs counter to the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in Ittyavira Mathia v. Varkey Varkey, A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 907, Mohamed Meera v. Thirumala, (1966) 1 S.C.R. 574; A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 430 and Maria Christine v. Maria Zurna, A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1352, which we are bound to follow.

12. For all the reasons stated above, we are inclined to hold that the first respondent had no jurisdiction to hear and dispose of the appeal T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 filed by the second respondent which was pending when the special by-laws were registered under Sec.11 of 1961 Act on 12.4.1978 and therefore, the order of the 1st respondent dated 30.6.1981 dismissing the appeal T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 is correct though not for the reasons given in the order of the first respondent dated 30.6.1981, but, for the reason given by us in this judgment viz. after 12.4.1978 the first respondent is not competent to hear and dispose of the T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976. As we are upholding the order of the first respondent dismissing the appeal in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976 on the ground that it would be incompetent after 12.4.1978, the order of the learned single Judge in W.P.No.5192 of 1982 interfering with the order of the first respondent on merits cannot be sustained and therefore the order in W.P.No.5192 of 1982 is liable to be set aside. As we are inclined to allow the writ appeal and set aside the order of the learned single Judge in W.P.No.5192 of 1982 for the reasons stated above, it is not necessary to deal with the order contentions urged by the learned counsel for the appellant.

13. In the result, we allow the writ appeal, set aside the order of the learned single Judge in W.P.No.5192 of 1982 and restore the order of the first respondent dated 30.6.1981 dismissing the appeal in T.S.E. Case No.43 of 1976. No costs.

(A) Evidence Act (I of 1872), Sec.115 - Doctrine of promissory estoppel - If available as against Governmental action in exercise of statutory power.

(B) Imports and Exports (Control) Act (XVIII of 1947), Sec.3 - Policy banning export of any product made out of red sanders wood framed for 5 years commencing from 1.4.1992 - If arbitrary and unreasonable.

Held: The uniform view taken by all the High Courts and the Supreme Court is that the doctrine of promissory estoppel will be available as against Governmental action, though the said action has been taken in exercise of statutory power. There is also no doubt that the principle of estoppel is available against the subordinate legislature and delegated legislations which cannot be placed on the same pedestal as an enactment passed by the legislature in exercise of the plenary powers. In the present case, the petitioner has produced in relevant records to show that it has acted in pursuance of the representation contained in the policy which was announced for the period from 1st April, 1990 to 31st March, 1993 and incurred detriment by borrowing loans from financial institutions. Apart from that, the petitioner has already prepared musical instrument parts by applying the necessary manufacturing process and made them ready for export. At that stage, the policy of the Government is changed and undoubtedly the principle of promissory estoppel would apply against the enforcement of new policy.

There is also no doubt in this case that the policy is arbitrary and unreasonable in so far as the goods which are ready for export in the converted form are concerned. There is nothing on record to show that the cutting of red-sanders wood has been banned by the Government or any authority at any time. If that has not been done, the imposition of the new policy would be like cutting the trunk of a tree while sitting on the branch of the tree. If the cutting of the trees is not banned and the citizens are allowed to manufacture musical instrument parts out of the trees, there is no substance in the contention that the export of the instrument parts or the export of wood in any form has been banned after the trees are cut and converted into parts of musical instruments. In that case, there is no question of maintaining ecological balance or conserving ecological surroundings in the particular area. It is contended that it is open to the petitioner to sell the goods inside the country and they need not be exported to a foreign country. The said argument only cuts the nose of the respondents themselves. If the export of goods is banned for the purpose of conserving ecological measure, there is no substance in contending that the goods would be sold inside the country. The purpose for which the policy is alleged to have been brought into force will not be served in any manner by the sale of goods inside the country, if the trees are cut and converted into such goods. Thus, the new policy in so far as it prohibits export of goods which are ready for export is unreasonable and arbitrary and it has no nexus whatever with the proclaimed object of the new policy.

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein, and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorari and mandamus calling for the records of the respondents culminating in the communication No.57/1/92/E.II/230, dated 14.5.1992 of the 2nd respondent and to direct the second respondent to grant the licence for the value of US $ 75,000 against letter of credit No.41-24324-45031 made available to the petitioner for which the application is pending with the second respondent and for export of musical instrument parts and koto parts a value of US $ 1,29,000 against pending application firm, contracts placed by overseas buyers for which ready and took is available.

R. Krishnamurthy, Senior Counsel, for V. Soundararajan and T.S. Thiagarajan, for Petitioner.

M. Kalyanasundaram, Additional Central Government Standing Counsel, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: Petitioner is a recognised exporter. The main product of export is musical instruments part made out of red-sanders wood. The petitioner is a partnership firm and it has installed the necessary infrastructures for carrying on its export business by setting up a production facility at No.1, Rizwan Road, Madhavaram, Red Sanders Wood is widely used by Japanese for making the musical instrument known as "Shamisen". It is used for accompaniment of two types of vocal music. Export of red-sanders musical instruments and chips and powder and koto parts had been taking place for the past several years from the Tamil Nadu and in the Import-Export Policy prevailing upto 31.3.1992. The export of the said product was on the basis of the licence issued by the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports, New Delhi. In fact the policy was for the period from April, 1990 to March, 1993. But in March, 1992 the policy was suddenly changed and a new policy was framed for five years commencing from 1.4.1992 ending with 31.3.1997. Under the new policy, a prohibition is introduced against export of red-sanders in any form. The petitioner made a representation to the authorities submitting that there is a confusion in understanding the new policy and the matter should be clarified as to whether musical instruments and other chips etc., which were being exported by the petitioner could be exported even after the coming into force of the new policy. Second respondent sent a reply on 14.5.1992 under reference No.57/1/92/E.11/230. The reply is to the effect that the export of red-sanders in any form is prohibited under the new policy and the petitioner will not be entitled to continue the export. A reference is made in the letter to Serial Number 7 of Part I, Serial No.44 of Part V of Negative List of Exports in the Export and Import Policy, 1992-97. Aggrieved thereby, the petitioner has filed this writ petition for quashing the said communication dated 14.5.1992 and for the issue of a mandamus directing the respondents to grant a licence for the value of U.S. $ 75,000 against the letter of credit No.41-2432445-031. The petitioner on the basis of the earlier policy had been entering into contracts with foreign buyers for sale of musical instruments parts. Under one such contract, a letter of credit was opened on 21.2.1992 by Sanwa Bank, Osaka, in favour of Indian Overseas Bank, Madras. It is an open irrevocable letter of credit and the amount mentioned is U.S. $ 1,00,000. The date of expiry for negotiations was mentioned as July 31, 1992. But, it was subsequently extended upto the end of December, 1992. As per the said letter of credit, it covers musical instrument parts made of red-sanders as approved by buyer.

2. There is no dispute before me as to the genuineness of the letter of credit or the correctness of the claim made by the petitioner that it had entered into contracts with foreign buyers prior to the introduction of the new policy, 1992-97.

3. Item No.7 of Part I of Negative List of Exports reads thus:

"Wood and Wood products in the form of logs, timber, stumps, roots, barks, chips, powder, flakes, dust, pulp and char coal".

Item No.44 of Part V is in the following words:

"Processed timber of all species excluding sandalwood and redsanders wood". Though the petitioner attempted to make a distinction between "wood" and "timber" and contend before the authorities that there was a distinction between "wood" and "timber" and that the position was not clear with regard to export of parts of musical instruments made of red-sanders, such a contention is not urged before me and I do not think it necessary to go into the same. In so far as this case is concerned, it is contended by the petitioner that the Principle of promissory estoppel would apply and the petitioner having acted upon the representations made by the respondents in the earlier policy which was to be in force till 31.3.1993 and suffered detriment by availing loans from financial institutions for the purpose of purchasing red-sanders and manufacturing parts of musical instruments, it is not open to the respondents to change the policy all on a sudden and prevent the petitioner from fulfilling its contractual obligations. It is also contended that the new policy is unreasonable and arbitrary in so far as it relates to red-sanders already cut and converted into parts of musical instruments. Per contra, the contention of learned Central Government Standing Counsel is that the principle of promissory estoppel will not apply to a legislative action of the respondents. According to him, the import and export policy is a result of a legislative function exercised by the Government under Sec.3 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act 1947 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'). Learned counsel contends that inasmuch as the policy is legislative in character, the Court is not entitled to apply the doctrine of promissory estoppel or any kind of estoppel and prevent the respondents from enforcing the said policy during the period for which the policy is enacted.

4. Sec.3(1) of the Act empowers the Central Government to make provisions by publishing an order in the official gazette prohibiting, restricting or otherwise controlling in all cases or in specified classes of cases and subject to such exceptions, if any, as may be made by or under the Order.

(a) the import, export carriage costwise or shipment as ships stores of goods of any specified description.

It is not necessary to refer to the remaining parts of Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.3 of the Act, Sub-sec.(2) of Sec.3 refers to Sec.11 of the Customs Act and declares that all goods to which any order under Sub-sec.(1) applies shall be deemed to be goods of which the import or export has been prohibited under Sec.11 of the Customs Act and all the provisions of that Act shall have effect accordingly. Sub-sec.(3) of Sec.3 contains a non obstante clause and it reads.

"Notwithstanding anything contained in the aforesaid Act, the Central Government, may, by order published in the Official Gazette, prohibit, restrict or impose conditions on the clearance, whether for home consumption or for shipment abroad of any goods or class of goods imported into India."

5. Learned Central Government Standing Counsel contends that when the Central Government exercises its powers under Sec.3 of the Act, it is legislative in character and the import and export policy will be outside the doctrine of promissory estoppel. He placed reliance on the judgment of Full Bench of Delhi High Court in Bengal Exports (P) Limited v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1983 Del. 445. It was held that the doctrine of promissory estoppel can be invoked only against executive actions of the Government, but not against legislature. It was also held that the Export Control Orders issued under Sec.3 of the Act are examples of delegated legislations and they can be amended from time to time and they being legislative in nature, promissory estoppel cannot be pleaded against the provisions of such orders. The Full Bench has referred to the earlier rulings of the Supreme Court and proceeded on the footing that the Supreme Court had held categorically in Union of India v. Anglo Afghan Agencies, A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 718, that the Export Control Orders were Legislative in character.

6. In Union of India v. Anglo Afghan Agencies, A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 718, the Court was concerned with a scheme published by the Textile Commissioner. The scheme was called the Export Promotion Scheme and it provided incentives to exporters of woollen goods. By the scheme as extended to exports to Afghanistan, the exporters were invited to get themselves registered with the Textile Commissioner for exporting woollen goods and it was represented that the exporters will be entitled to import raw materials of the total amount equal to 100 per cent of the f.o.b. value of the exports. Under Clause 10 of the Scheme, the Textile Commissioner had authority, if it was found that a fraudulent attempt was made to secure an import certificate in excess of the true value of the goods exported to reduce the import certificate. The Court held that it could not be assumed merely because the Import Trade Policy was general in terms and dealt with the grant of licences for import of goods and related matters that it was statutory in character. It was held further that even though the case did not fall within the terms of Sec.115 of the Indian Evidence Act, it was still open to a party who had acted on a representation made by the Government to claim that the Government shall be bound to carry out the promise made by it, even though the promise was not recorded in the form of a formal contract as required by Art.299 of the Constitution. The following passage in the judgment is relevant:

"The defence of executive necessity was not relied upon in the present case in the affidavit filed on behalf of the Union of India. It was also not pleaded that the representation to the Scheme was subject to implied term that the Union of India will not be bound to "grant the import certificate for the full value of the goods exported if they deem it inexpedient to grant the certificate. We are unable to accede to the contention that the executive necessity releases the Government from honouring its solemn promises relying on which citizens have acted to their detriment. Under our constitutional set-up, no person may be deprived of his right or liberty except in due course of and by authority of law; if a member of the executive seeks to deprive a citizen of his right or liberty otherwise than in exercise of powers derived from the law-common or statute, the courts will be competent to and indeed would be bound to protect the rights of the aggrieved citizen."

"The orders which the Central Government may issue in exercise of the power conferred by Sec.3 of the Imports and Exports Control Act may be executive or legislative....It cannot be assumed merely because the Imports Trade Policy is general in terms and deals with the grant of licences for import of goods and related matter, it is statutory in character. The Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947, authorises the Central Government to make provisions".

"Prohibiting, restricting or otherwise controlling import, export, carrings etc., of the goods and by the Imports (Control) Order, 1965, dated December 7, 1955 and by the provisions which were sought to be repealed restrictions already imposed. The order was clearly legislative in character. The Import Trade Policy was evolved to facilitate the mechanism of the Act and the orders issued thereunder. Even granting that the Import Trade Policy notifications were issued in exercise of the power under Sec.3 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947, the order as already observed authorised the making of executive or administrative instructions as well as legislative directions. It is not the form of the order, the method of its publication or the source of its authority, but its substance, which determines its true character."

7. In Motilal Padampat Sugar Mills Co. (P.) Ltd. v. State of U.P., (1979)2 S.C.C. 409: 44 S.T.C. 43: (1979)2 S.C.J. 185: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 621, the Apex Court dealt with in detail the doctrine of promissory estoppel and its applicability as against the executive actions of the State. The Court observed:

"It may also be noted that promissory estoppel cannot be invoked to compel the Government or even a private party to do an act prohibited by law. There can also be no promissory estoppel against the exercise of legislative power. The Legislature can never be precluded from exercising its legislative function by resort to the doctrine of promissory estoppel. (State of Kerala v. Gwalior Rayon Silk Manufacturing (Weaving) Company Limited, (1974)1 S.C.R. 671: A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 2734.)

8. A discordant note was struck by a Bench of two Judges of the Supreme Court in M/s. Jit Ram Shiv Kumar v. State of Haryana, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1285. After referring to certain earlier decisions, it was observed that the principle of estoppel was not available against the Government in exercise of legislative, sovereign or executive power. Referring to an earlier judgment in Motilal Padampat Sugar Mills v. State of U.P., (1979)2 S.C.C. 409: 44 S.T.C. 43: (1979)2 S.C.J. 185: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 621, the Bench expressed its disagreement with the principles laid down in that case.

9. The position was clarified by a Bench of three Judges in Union of India v. Godfrey Philips India Limited, (1985)4 S.C.C. 369: (1986)1 Comp.L.J. 46: (1986)59 C.C. 536: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 806. The Bench overrules the earlier judgment of two Judges in M/s. Jit Ram Shiv Kumar v. State of Haryana, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1285, holding that it was not right on the part of the Bench of two Judges to express their dissent with the judgment in the earlier case and they should have referred the matter to a larger Bench, if they wanted to differ. Reiterating the proposition laid down in Motilal Padampat Sugar Mills v. State of U.P., (1979)2 S.C.C. 409: 44 S.T.C. 43: (1979)2 S.C.J. 185: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 621, the Court observed as follows:

"Of course we must make it clear and that is also laid down in Motilal Padampat Sugar Mills v. State of U.P., (1979)2 S.C.C. 409: 44 S.T.C. 43: (1979)2 S.C.J. 185: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 621, that there can be no promissory estoppel against the legislature in the exercise of its legislative functions nor can the Government or public authority be debarred by promissory estoppel from enforcing a statutory prohibition. It is equally true that promissory estoppel cannot be used to compel the Government or a public authority to carry out a representation or promise which is contrary to law or which was outside the authority or power of the officer of the Government or of the public authority to make.

We may also point out that the doctrine of promissory estoppel being an equitable doctrine, it must yield when the equity so requires if it can be shown by the Government or public authority that having regard to the facts as they have transpired, it would be inequitable to hold the Government or public authority to the promise or representation made by it, the Court would not raise an equity in favour of the person to whom the promise or representation is made and enforce the promise or representation against the Government or public authority. The doctrine of promissory estoppel would be displaced in such a case, because on the facts, equity would not require that the Government or public authority should be held bound by the promise or representation made by it. This aspect has been dealt with fully in Motilal Padampat Sugar Mills v. State of U.P., (1979)2 S.C.C. 409; 44 S.T.C. 43; (1979)2 S.C.J. 185; A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 621, and we find ourselves wholly in agreement with what has been said in that decision in this point."

10. In Indian Express Newspapers (Bombay) P.Limited v. Union of India, (1985)1 Comp.L.J. 115; (1985)1 S.C.C. 641; (1985)2 S.C.R. 287; A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 515, a Bench of three Judges considered the validity of a notification under Sec.25 of the Customs Act, observing that it is a piece of subordinate legislation, the court held that such subordinate legislation does not carry the same degree of immunity which is enjoyed by a statute passed by a competent legislature. It was observed that a subordinate legislation may be questioned on any of the grounds on which plenary legislation is questioned and in addition, it may further be questioned on the ground that it was contrary to the provisions of the statute under which it was made and that it was contrary to some other statute and it was unreasonable not in the sense of not being reasonable but in the sense that it is manifestly arbitrary. The following passage in the judgment is relevant for the purpose of this case.

"A distinction must be made between delegation of a legislative function in the case of which the question of reasonableness cannot be enquired into and the investment by statute to exercise particular discretionary powers. In the latter case, the question may be considered on all grounds on which administrative action may be questioned, such as, non-application of mind, taking irrelevant matters into consideration, failure to take relevant matters into consideration, etc., etc. On the facts and circumstances of a case, a subordinate legislation may be struck down as arbitrary or contrary to statute if it fails to take into account very vital facts which either expressly or by necessary implication are required to be "taken into consideration by the statute, or say, the Constitution. This can only be done on the ground that it does not conform to the statutory or constitutional requirements or that it offends Art.14 or Art.19(1)(a) of the Constitution. It cannot, no doubt, be done merely on the ground that it is not reasonable or that it has not taken into account the relevant circumstances which the court considers relevant."

"We do not, therefore, find much substance in the contention that the Courts cannot at all exercise judicial control over the impugned notifications. In cases where the power vested in the Government is a power which has got to be exercised in the public interest as it happens to be here, the court may require the Government to exercise that power in a reasonable way in accordance with the spirit of the Constitution. The fact that a notification issued under Sec.25(1) of the Customs Act, 1962, is required to be laid before Parliament under Sec.159 thereof does not make any substantial difference as regards the jurisdiction of the Court to pronounce on its validity."

11. In Pournami Oil Mills v. State of Kerala, A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 590, Government Order granting package of concessions to new small scale industries in order to boost industrialisation, was issued under the Kerala General Sales Tax Act and the Court held that the Small Scale Units set up in response to the said order and before the passing of a subsequent order withdrawing the concessions, were entitled to raise the plea of estoppel against the Government. In Delhi Cloth and General Mills Limited v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 2414, it was held that for the applicability of the doctrine of estoppel, it was not necessary for the promises to incur damage, prejudice or detriment and prove the same, but it was enough if he had altered his position on the basis of the representation made earlier. In that case, an assurance was given by the railways as regards the charges for carriage of Napptha. When such an assurance was later changed by a subsequent notification, the court held that the principle of estoppel would apply.

12. In a recent case considered by the Apex Court, namely, M/s. Vij Resins Pvt. Ltd. v. State of Jammu and Kashmir, A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1629, the Court has made an observation to the effect that even in cases of legislations, it would be possible to invoke the principle of estoppel. No doubt the observation was obiter in the particular case, because findings on facts were favourable to the premises. The following passage is significant:

"Petitioners in writ petition No.794 of 1986 had claimed that pursuant to the arrangement entered into between them and the State following the invitation by the State they had invested Rs.1.68 crores in shape of plant and machinery and 63 lacs of rupees by way of land and buildings. The petitioner in the other two cases stated that investments had been made by them as well. The petitioners were invited to set up industries by assuring them supply of the raw material. They changed their position on the basis of representations made by the State and when the factories were ready and they were in a position to utilise the raw materials, the impugned Act came into force to obliterate their rights and enabled the State to get out of the commitments. We are inclined to agree with the submissions made on behalf of the petitioners that the circumstances gave rise to a fact situation of estoppel. It is true that there is no estoppel against the legislature and the vires of the Act cannot be tested by "invoking the plea, but so far as the State Government is concerned the rule of estoppel does apply to the precedents of this Court are clear. It is unnecessary to go into that aspect of the matter as in our considered opinion the impugned Act suffers from the vice of taking away rights to property without providing for compensation at all and is hit by Art.31(2) of the Constitution.

13. In so far as High Courts are concerned, it has been consistently held by several Courts that the principle of estoppel would apply to statutory notifications issued by the Government in exercise of powers conferred by statute. A Full Bench of Bombay High Court has in Tapti Oil Industries v. State of Maharashtra, A.I.R. 1984 Bom. 161, held that the scheme announced by the Government to give incentives for establishing industrial units in backward areas, would give rise to principle of estoppel, if the person concerned had taken all steps for obtaining the eligibility certificates and before he could get the same, the Government changes its policy. The Full Bench also adverted to Art.14 of the Constitution of India and observed that the said Article confers a right of equality and violation of the same could always be challenged under Art.226 of the Constitution.

14. In Union of India v. Hindustan Platinum Private Limited, (1989)44 E.L.T. 443 (Bom.), a Division Bench of Bombay High Court applied the principle of estoppel as against the enforcement of a public notice issued by the Central Government, pursuant to the import and export policy framed under the provisions of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 and the Imports (Control) Order, 1955.

15. A Division Bench of this Court has in Union of India v. Chakra Tyres Limited, (1990)45 E.L.T. 3 (Mad.), made a distinction between an enactment passed by the Legislature in exercise of its plenary powers on one hand and a piece of delegated legislation brought into existence by the Government in exercise of the power conferred by a statute on the other and held that a delegated legislation cannot get any immunity from the applicability of the doctrine of promissory estoppel.

16. The Rajasthan High Court has considered the matter in detail in Union of India v. J.K. Industries Limited, (1990)49 E.L.T. 511 and held that the notification issued by the Central Government in exercise of the powers conferred on it by Rule 8(1) of the Central Excise Rules, 1944 is not a legislative act and the Government is bound by the promissory estoppel in respect thereof, where the party has altered its position on the basis of the said notification. The relevant authorities on the subject have been discussed and the principle has been culled out therefrom by the Bench.

17. In Orissa Cement Limited v. Superintendent, Customs and Central Excise, (1992)61 E.L.T. 256, a Division Bench of Orissa High Court has applied the principle of promissory estoppel as against a notification issued under the Customs Act. In Vikrant Tyres Limited v. Union of India, (1992)61 E.L.T. 381, the Karnataka High Court upheld the plea of promissory estoppel as against the notification issued under the provisions of the Central Excise Rules.

18. Thus, it is clear that the uniform view taken by all the High Courts and the Supreme Court is that the doctrine of promissory estoppel will be available as against the Governmental action, though the said action has been taken in exercise of statutory power. There is also no doubt that the principle of estoppel is available against subordinate legislations and delegated legislations which cannot be placed on the same pedestal as an enactment passed by the Legislature in exercise of the plenary powers. In the present case, the petitioner has produced the relevant records to show that it has acted in pursuance of the representations contained in the policy which was announced for the period from 1st April, 1990 to 31st March, 1993 and incurred detriment by borrowing loans from financial institutions. Apart from that the petitioner has already prepared musical instruments, parts by applying the necessary manufacturing process and made them ready for export. At that stage, the policy of the Government is changed and undoubtedly the principle of promissory estoppel would apply against the enforcement of new policy.

19. There is also no doubt in this case that the policy is arbitrary and unreasonable in so far as the goods which are ready for export in the converted form are concerned. In the counter affidavit filed by the respondents it is stated as follows:

"The issue of licence for export of musical instrument parts and koto parts made out of red-sanders wood is not possible as the present policy bans the export of any product made out of red-sanders wood as an ecological conservation measure." (underlining mine)

In the counter it is stated in the same paragraph, namely paragraph 4, that in order to make the conservation measure totally effective, the Government has banned chips and powder of red-sanders wood also. There is nothing on record before me to show that cutting of red-sanders wood has been banned by the Government or any authority at any time. If that has not been done, the imposition of new policy would be like cutting the trunk of a tree while sitting on the branch of the tree. If the cutting of the trees is not banned and the citizens are allowed to manufacture musical instrument parts out of cut trees, there is no substance in the contention that the export of instrument parts of the export of wood in any form has been banned after the trees are cut and converted into parts of musical instruments. In that case, there is no question of maintaining ecological balance or conserving ecological surroundings in the particular area. In the present case, the petitioner has categorically stated in the affidavit that necessary process has already been undergone and the goods are ready for export. The petitioner has also prayed for the issue of a licence on that footing and at this stage, if the export is stopped, it will not help in any way the respondents in maintaining or conserving ecological balance in the area.

20. Learned Standing Counsel for the Central Government refers to the provisions of Sec. 11 of the Customs Act and places reliance on Clause 2(k), (m) and (v) thereof. In the said clause the purposes for which the Central Government is entitled to issue notifications prohibiting import or export of goods are, (1) the protection of human, animal or plant life or health; (2) the conservation of exhaustible natural resources and (3) any other purpose conducive to the interests of the general public. The respondents cannot bring the ban on export of manufactured goods under any of the aforesaid clauses. In the course of arguments, learned Central Government Standing Counsel contended that it is open to the petitioner to sell the goods inside the country and they need not be exported to a foreign country. The said argument only cuts the nose of the respondents themselves. If the export of goods is banned for the purpose of conserving ecological measure, there is no substance in contending that the goods could be sold inside the country. The purpose for which the policy is alleged to have been brought into force will not be served in any manner by the sale of goods inside the country, if the trees are cut and converted into such goods. Thus, the new policy in so far as it prohibits export of goods which are ready for export is unreasonable and arbitrary and it has no nexus whatever with the proclaimed object of the new policy.

21. In the result, the petitioner is entitled to get the relief prayed for in the writ petition, namely, a direction to the respondents to grant a licence for the value of U.S. $ 75,000 as against the letter of credit No. 41-2432445-031. There will be a mandamus directing the respondents to issue a licence for the export of the goods to the value of U.S. $ 75,000 against the aforesaid letter of credit No. 41-2432445-031. The writ petition is allowed to the extent indicated above. There will be no order as to costs.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present: V.Ratnam, Actg.C.J. and Somasundaram, J.

W.A.No.127 of 1993 4th March, 1993.

The Union of India represented by the Secretary, Ministry of Commerce, New Delhi and another
...Appellants

v.

Rizwan International represented by its Managing Partner, M.Moosa ...Respondent.

(A) Evidence Act (I of 1872), Sec.115 - Doctrine of promissory estoppel, if can be applied against enforcement of new policy issued under a statute.

(B) Imports and Exports (Control) Act (XVIII of 1947), Sec.3 - Order under prohibiting export of red sanders wood and its products in any form - Held unreasonable and arbitrary in so far as it prohibits export of finished goods which are ready for export.

The respondent is a recognised exporter, its main products of export being musical instrument parts made out of red sanders wood. It was granted licence to export under the policy prevailing upto March, 1993. But, however in March 1992, the policy was changed suddenly under a new policy for 5 years from 1.4.1992. Under the policy, export of red sanders wood in any form is prohibited. After his representations failed, the respondent filed a writ petition contending that as he has made ready the musical instrument parts, under the existing policy, he would be put to loss due to the new policy, that the authorities were estopped from applying the policy to him and that the policy was arbitrary and unreasonable. In the writ petition it is held that the doctrine of promissory estoppel would apply and that the policy was arbitrary and unreasonable insofar as it prohibited the export of the goods made ready. In appeal, Held: The new policy issued in exercise of the power under Sec.3 of the Act, whether such policy is considered as a Governmental action taken the exercise of the statutory power or as subordinate or delegated legislation, the doctrine of promissory estoppel can be applied against the enforcement of the new policy on the facts and circumstances of a given case. [Para. 15]

It must be pointed out that there is nothing on record to show that cutting of red sanders wood has been banned by the Government or any authority at any time. Therefore, as rightly pointed out by the learned single Judge, if the cutting of the red sanders tree is not banned and the citizens are permitted to manufacture musical instruments parts out of the cut trees, there is no substance in the contention that export of musical instruments parts or the export of red sanders wood in any form has been banned after the trees are cut and converted into parts of musical instruments as an ecological conservation measure. In view of the specific case of the respondent that the necessary manufacturing processes have been completed and that the musical instruments parts made out of the red sanders wood are kept ready for export, it is not known how the refusal to issue licence for the export of the finished goods will help in maintaining or conserving the ecological balance in the area. In the above circumstances, the court has no hesitation in accepting the contention of the learned counsel for the respondent that the new policy in so far as it prohibits export of finished goods which are ready for export is unreasonable and arbitrary and it has no nexus whatever with the proclaimed object of the new policy. Appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the Order of Srinivasan, J., dated 13.11.1992 and made in the exercise of the Special Original Jurisdiction of the High Court in W.P.No.10444 of 1992 presented under Art.226 of the Constitution of India to issue a writ of certiorari calling for the records of the respondents culminating in the communication No.57/1/92EII/ 230 dated 14.5.1992 of the second respondent and to direct the second respondent to grant the licence for the value of U.S.Dollars 75000 against letter of credit No.41-2432445- 031 made available to the petitioner for which the application is pending with the second respondent and for export of musical instrument parts and koto parts in a value of U.S. $ 1,29,000 against pending applications/firm contracts placed by overseas buyers for which ready stock is available.

M.Kalyanasundaram, Additional Central Government Standing Counsel, for Appellant.

P. Krishnamurthy, Senior Advocate for T.B.Ramamurthi, for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Somasundaram, J.: This writ appeal has been filed against the order in W.P.No.10444 of 1992 issuing a writ of mandamus directing the appellants herein to issue a licence for the export of goods to the value of U.S.Dollars 75,000 against the letter of credit No.41-2432445- 031.

2. The respondent, a partnership firm, is recognised exporter. The main products of export is musical instruments parts made out of red sanders wood. The respondent has installed the necessary infrastructures for carrying on its export business by setting up a production facility at No.1, Rizwan Madhavaram. Red sanders wood is widely used by Japanese for making the musical instrument known as "Shamisen". Export of red sanders musical instruments and chips powder and koto-parts had been taking place in the past several years from Tamil Nadu as per the exports and imports policy prevailing up to 31.3.1992. The export of the said products was on the basis of the licence issued by the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports, New Delhi. As a matter of fact, the export and import policy was announced for the period from April, 1990 to March, 1993. But, however, in March, 1992 the export-import policy was suddenly changed and a new policy was framed for 5 years commencing from 1.4.1992 and ending with 31.3.1997. Under the export import policy for the period from 1.4.1992 to 31.3.1997, (hereinafter referred to as new policy) a prohibition is introduced against export of red sanders in any form. The respondent made a representation to the authorities and wanted to know from them as to whether musical instruments and other chips made out of red sanders wood, which was being exported by the respondent, could be exported, even after the coming into force of the new policy. The second appellant sent a reply dated 14.5.1992 stating that the export of red sanders wood in any form is prohibited under the new policy and that the respondent will not be entitled to continue export. Aggrieved by the reply dated 14.5.1992 sent by the second appellant, the respondent filed W.P.No.10444 of 1992 for quashing the said communication dated 14.5.1992 and for the issue of a writ of mandamus directing the appellants herein to grant a licence for the value of U.S. Dollars 75,000 against the letter of credit No.41-2432445 -031. According to the respondent, on the basis of the earlier export and import policy, the respondent had been entering into contract with various buyers for sale of musical instruments parts. Under one such contract, a letter of credit was opened on 21.2.1992 by Sanwa Bank Limited, Osaka, in favour of Indian Overseas Bank, Madras. It is an open irrevocable letter of credit and the amount mentioned in U.S. Dollars 1,00,000. The date of expiry for negotiation was mentioned as 31.7.1992. The period was subsequently extended up to the end of December, 1992. The said letter of credit covers the musical instrument parts made of red sanders as approved by the buyer.

3. The genuineness of the letter of credit or the correctness of the claim made by the respondent that it had entered into contract with a foreign buyer prior to the introduction of the new policy is not in dispute. Sec.3(1) of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 (hereinafter referred to as the Act), empowers the Central Government to make provisions by publishing an order in the Official Gazette prohibiting, restricting or otherwise controlling in all cases or in specified clauses of cases the import, export carriage costwise or shipment as ships stores of goods of any specified description. Sub-sec.(2) of Sec.3 of the Act refers to Sec.11 of the Customs Act and declares that all goods to which any order under Sub-sec.(1) applies shall be deemed to be goods of which the import or export has been prohibited under Sec.11 of the Customs Act and all the provisions of that Act shall have effect accordingly. Sub-sec.(3) of Sec.3 reads thus:

"Notwithstanding anything contained in the aforesaid Act, the Central Government may, by order published in the Official Gazette, prohibit, restrict or impose condition on the clearance, whether for home consumption or for shipment abroad of any goods or class of goods imported into India."

The export and import policy is made in exercise of the power under Sec.3 of the Act. Under the earlier export and import policy for the years 1990 to 1993, export of red sanders wood, was not prohibited. It is only clause 7 of Part I of the Negative List of the new policy which prohibits export of wood and wood products in the form of logs, timber, stumps, roots, barks, chips, powder, flakes, dust, pulp and charcoal. Therefore, under the new policy, even chips, powder of red sanders are prohibited. Serial Number 44 of Part V of the Negative List of the new policy allows export of processed timber alone of all species, excluding sandalwood and red sanders wood.

4. Before the learned single Judge, who heard the writ petition, it was contended on behalf of the respondent herein, that the principle of promissory estoppel would apply to the case of the respondent and the respondent having acted upon the representations made by the appellants in the earlier export and import policy which was to be in force till 31.3.1993 and suffered detriment by availing loans from financial institutions for the purpose of purchasing red sanders and manufacturing parts of musical instruments, it is not open to the appellants to change the export and import policy all on a sudden and prevent the respondent from fulfilling its contractual obligation. It was further contended before the learned single Judge, that the new policy is unreasonable and arbitrary in so far as it relates to red sanders wood already cut and converted into parts of musical instruments. The learned single Judge on a consideration of the entire facts and circumstances of the case, found that the respondent has acted in pursuance of the representations contained in the earlier policy, which was announced for the period from 1.4.1990 to 31.3.1993 and suffered detriment by borrowing loans from financial institutions. The learned Judge also found that on the basis of the earlier policy the respondent has already prepared musical instruments parts by applying the necessary manufacturing process and made them ready for export and at that stage, the export import policy of the Government is changed and therefore, the principle of promissory estoppel would apply against the enforcement of the new policy. The learned Judge further found that the new policy is arbitrary and unreasonable in so far as the goods which are ready for export in the converted form are concerned. Consequently, the learned single Judge held that the respondent is entitled to get the relief prayed for in the writ petition and issued a writ of mandamus directing the appellants herein to issue a licence for the export of the goods to the value of U.S. Dollars 75,000 against the letter of credit No.41-2432445 - 031. This writ appeal is directed against the order of the learned single Judge.

5. Before us, Mr.M.Kalyanasundaram, learned Additional Central Government Standing Counsel, appearing for the appellants, contended that the principle of promissory estoppel will not apply to a legislative action. According to the learned counsel for the appellants, the export and import policy is made in exercise of a legislative function under Sec.3 of the Act and therefore, the doctrine of promissory estoppel cannot be invoked against such legislative action and the appellants cannot be prevented from enforcing the new policy during the period for which the new policy is enacted. In support of this contention, the learned counsel relied on the decision of the Delhi High Court in Bansal Exports (P) Ltd. v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1983 Del. 445. In that decision, it was held that the doctrine of promissory estoppel can be invoked only against executive actions of the Government, but not against legislature. In that decision, the Full Bench of the Delhi High Court further held that the export control orders issued under Sec.3 of the Act are examples of delegated legislation and they can be amended from time to time and they being legislative in nature, the doctrine of the promissory estoppel cannot be invoked against the provision of such orders.

6. Per contra, Mr.R.Krishnamurthy, learned Senior Counsel appearing for the respondent, reiterated the contentions urged on behalf of the respondent before the learned single Judge and submitted that the principle of promissory estoppel will apply to the case of the respondent, because on the representations made by the appellants in the earlier policy, which was to be in force upto 31.3.1993, the respondent suffered detriment by purchasing red sanders wood after taking loans from financial institutions and by manufacturing parts of musical instruments and therefore, it is not open to the appellants to change the policy even before 31.3.1993 and prevent the respondent from fulfilling its pre-ban contractual obligations. The learned counsel for the respondent also contended that the new policy in so far as it prohibits export of goods, which are ready for export, is unreasonable and arbitrary and it has no nexus whatever with the proclaimed object of the new policy.

7. Let us first examine the position of law on the question whether the doctrine of promissory estoppel can be invoked against the Governmental action taken in exercise of statutory power and similarly against subordinate legislations and delegated legislations, before examining the question whether the respondent can invoke the principle of promissory estoppel against the action of the appellants in the present case.

8. In Union of India v. Anglo Afghan Agencies, (1968)2 S.C.R. 366: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 718, in the year 1962 the Central Government promulgated the Export Promotion Scheme providing incentives to exporters of woollen textiles and goods. It provided for the grant to an exporter, certificates to import raw materials of a total amount equal to 100% of the F.O.B. value of his exports. Clause 10 of the Scheme provided that the Textile Commissioner could grant an import certificate for a lesser amount if he is satisfied, after holding an enquiry, that the declared value of the goods exported is higher than the real value of the goods. The Scheme was extended to exports of woollen textiles and goods to Afghanistan. The respondents exported woollen goods to Afghanistan and were issued an Import Entitlement Certificate by the Textile Commissioner not for the full F.O.B., value of the goods exported, but for a reduced amount. The respondents made representations to the Central Government, but the Government confirmed the orders of the Textile Commissioner. The respondents then filed writ petitions in the High Court. The High Court set aside the orders of the Textile Commissioner and Government, and held that the respondents were entitled under the Scheme to obtain import licences for an amount equal to 100% of the F.O.B. value of their exports, unless it was found on enquiry duly made under clause 10 of the Scheme that the respondents had by 'over-invoicing' the goods disintitiled themselves to the import licences of the full value; and that the Textile Commissioner without making any such enquiry, proceeded upon his 'subjective satisfaction' that the respondents had 'over invoiced' the goods exported; and the Government also acted in a similar manner in dealing with the representation of the respondents. In the appeal, before the Supreme Court it was contended inter alia, on behalf of the Union of India that the Export Promotion Scheme was administrative in character, that it contained mere executive instructions issued by the Central Government to the Textile Commissioner and created no enforceable rights in the exporters, who exported their goods in pursuance of the Scheme and that it imposed no obligations upon the Government to issue import certificates. The Supreme Court while repelling the above contention of the appellant, held as follows:

"This case is, in our judgment a clear authority that even though the case does not fall within the terms of Sec.115 of the Evidence Act, it is still open to a party who has acted on a representation made by the Government to claim that the Government shall be bound to carry out the promise made by it, even though the promise is not recorded in the form of a formal contract as required by the Constitution."

In the above decision, the Supreme Court while holding that the Government is not exempt from liability to carry out the representations made by it as to its future conduct and it cannot on some undefined and undisclosed ground of necessity or expediency fail to carry out the promise solemnly made by it, observes thus:

"It cannot be assumed merely because the Import Trade Policy is general in terms and deals with the grant of licences for import of goods and related matters, it is statutory in character. The Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 authorises the Central Government to make provisions prohibiting, restricting or otherwise controlling import, export, carriage, etc. of the goods and by the Imports (Control) Order, 1955, dated December 7, 1955 and by the Provisions which were sought to be repealed restrictions were already imposed. The order was clearly legislative in character. The Import Trade Policy was evolved to facilitate the mechanism of the Act and the orders issued thereunder. Even granting that the Import Trade Policy notifications were issued in exercise of the power under Sec.3 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947, the order as already observed authorised the making of executive or administrative instructions as well as legislative directions. It is not the form of the order, the method of its publication or the sources of its authority, but its substance, which determines its true character."

9. In Indian Express Newspapers (Bombay) Private Ltd. v. Union of India, (1985)1 S.C.C. 641: (1985)2 S.C.R. 287: (1986)159 I.T.R. 856: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 515, the Supreme Court considered the validity of a notification issued under Sec.25 of the Customs Act. The Apex Court, while holding that the notification issued under Sec.25 of the Customs Act, is a piece of subordinate legislation held as follows:

"A piece of subordinate legislation does not carry the same degree of immunity which is enjoyed by a statute passed by a competent legislature, subordinate legislation may be questioned on any of the grounds on which plenary legislation is questioned. In addition it may also be questioned on the ground that it does not conform to the statute under which it is made. It may further be questioned on the ground that it is contrary to some other statute. That is because subordinate legislation must yield to plenary legislation. It may also be questioned on the ground that it is unreasonable, unreasonable not in the sense of not being reasonable, but in the sense that it is manifestly arbitrary. In England, the Judges would say "Parliament never intended authority to make such rules. They are unreasonable and ultra vires."

In paragraphs 76 and 77 of the above judgment, the Supreme Court further observes thus:

"A distinction must be made between delegation of a legislative function in the case of which the question of reasonableness cannot be enquired into and the investment by statute to exercise particular discretionary powers. In the latter case the question may be considered on all grounds on which administrative action may be questioned, such as, non-application of mind taking irrelevant matters into consideration, failure to take relevant matters into consideration, etc. etc. On the facts and circumstances of a case, a subordinate legislation may be struck down as arbitrary or contrary to statute if it fails to take into account very vital facts, which either expressly or by necessary implication are required to be taken into consideration by the statute or, say, the Constitution. This can only be done on the ground that it does not conform to the statutory or constitutional requirements or that it offends Art.14 or Art.19(1)(a) of the Constitution. It cannot, no doubt be done merely on the ground that it is not unreasonable or that it has not taken into account relevant circumstances which the Court considers relevant.

77. We do not, therefore, find much substance in the contention that the courts cannot at all exercise judicial control over the impugned notifications. In cases where the power vested in the Government is a power which has got to be exercised in the public interest as it happens to be here, the Court may require the Government to exercise that power in a reasonable way in accordance with the spirit of the Constitution. The fact that a notification issued under Sec.25(1) of the Customs Act, 1962 is required to be laid before Parliament under Sec.159 thereof does not make any substantial difference as regards the jurisdiction of the court to pronounce on its validity."

10. In Pournami Oil Mills etc. v. State of Kerala, A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 590, the Government by an order deemed to have been made under Sec.10 of the Kerala General Sales Tax Act, granted package of concessions to new Small Scale Industries in order to boost industrialisation in the State of Kerala. On the basis of the said Government Order, several small scale units were set up. Subsequent to the setting up of the small scale units, the Government issued another order withdrawing the concessions granted under the earlier order. The Supreme Court while accepting the case of the small scale units, based on the doctrine of promissory estoppel held as follows:

"It is not disputed that the first order namely, the one dated 11.4.1979 gave more of tax exemption than the second one. The second notification withdrew the exemption relating to purchase tax and confined the exemption from sales tax to the limit specified in the proviso of the notification. All parties before us who in response to the order of April 11, 1979 set up their industries prior to 21.10.1980 within the State of Kerala would thus be entitled to the exemption extended and/or promised under that Order. Such exemption would continue for the full period of five years from the date they started production."

11. In Vij Resins (P) Ltd. v. State of J. & K., (1989) 3 S.C.C. 115: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1629, the Apex Court while dealing with the question whether it is possible to invoke the principle of promissory estoppel against legislature, observed thus:

"25. Petitioners in W.P.No.794 of 1986 had claimed that pursuant to the arrangement entered into between them and the State following the invitation by the State they had invested Rs.1.68 crores in shape of plant and machinery and 63 lacs of rupees by way of land and buildings. The petitioner in the other two cases stated that investments had been made by them as well. The petitioners were invited to set up industries by assuring them supply of the raw material. They changed their position on the basis of representations made by the State and when the factories were ready and they were in a position to utilise the raw materials, the impugned Act came into force to obliterate their rights and enabled the State to get out of the commitments. We are inclined to agree with the submissions made on behalf of the petitioners that the circumstances gave rise to a fact situation of estoppel. It is true that there is no estoppel against the legislature and the vires of the Act cannot be tested by invoking the plea but so far as the State Government is concerned the rule of estoppel does apply and the precedents of this Court are clear. It is unnecessary to go into that aspect of the matter as in our considered opinion the impugned Act suffers from the vice of taking away rights to property without providing for compensation at all and is hit by Art.31(2) of the Constitution."

12. In Union of India v. Chakra Tyres Ltd., (1990) 45 E.L.T. 3, a Division Bench of this Court has taken the view that the theory of promissory estoppel is not applicable only when the power is exercised under plenary power of the Legislature and not when the power is exercised under a delegated legislation.

13. The learned single Judge following the ratio of the decisions of the Apex Court and that of the Division Bench of this Court in Union of India v. Chakra Tyres Ltd., (1990) 45 E.L.T. 3, referred to above and after referring to the principles laid down by; (a) the Bombay High Court in Tapti Oil Industries v. State of Maharashtra, A.I.R. 1984 Bom. 161 (F.B.) and in Union of India v. Hindustan Platinum (P) Ltd., (1989) 44 E.L.T. 443 (D.B.); (b) the Rajasthan High Court in Union of India v. J.K. Industries Limited, (1990) 49 E.L.T. 511 (D.B.); the Orissa High Court in Orissa Cement Limited v. Superintendent, Customs and Central Excise, (1992) 61 E.L.T. 256 (D.B.) and (d) the Karnataka High Court in Vikrant Tyres Ltd. v. Union of India, (1992) 61 E.L.T. 381, correctly summarised the position of law, on the question of promissory estoppel in paragraph 18 of his order in the following terms:

"Thus, it is clear that the uniform view taken by all the High Courts and the Supreme Court is that the doctrine of promissory estoppel will be available as against the governmental action, though the said action has been taken in exercise of statutory power. There is also no doubt that the principle of estoppel is available against subordinate legislations and delegated legislations which cannot be placed on the same pedestal as an enactment passed by the Legislature in exercise of the plenary powers".

14. We fully endorse the above conclusion arrived at by the learned single Judge.

15. In view of the above settled position of law, we are unable to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the appellants that the doctrine of promissory estoppel cannot be invoked against the action of the appellants in the present case, because the export and import policy issued under Sec.3 of the Act has to be taken as a legislative action. The new policy issued in exercise of the power under Sec.3 of the Act, whether such a policy is considered as a governmental action taken in exercise of the statutory power, or as subordinate or delegated legislation, the doctrine of promissory estoppel can be applied against the enforcement of the new policy on the facts and circumstances of a given case.

16. Coming to the facts of the present case, the materials on record go to show that the respondent had acted in pursuance of the representations contained in the earlier export and import policy, which was announced for the period from 1.4.1990 to 31.3.1993 to the effect that the export of red sanders in any form was permitted and entered into contract with foreign buyers for the export of musical instruments parts made out of red sanders wood and under one such a contract entered into by the respondent with a foreign purchaser, products worth U.S. Dollars 1,00,000 were agreed to be exported and for which purpose an open and irrevocable letter of credit No.41-2432445 -031 dated 21.2.1992 was opened, the beneficiary being the respondent herein. The materials on record further disclose that pursuant to the said contract, as part fulfilment of the same, U.S. Dollars 25,000 worth of products which were prepared and kept ready for export against the letter of credit referred to above, were already exported to Japan in March, 1992 after obtaining the necessary export licence. It is also seen from the records that the respondent has suffered detriment by borrowing loans from financial institutions for manufacturing musical instrument parts and for keeping them ready for export and at that stage the export and import policy though was considered to be in force till 31.3.1993, was suddenly changed by framing the new policy for a period of 5 years from 1.4.1992 to 31.3.1997. Under the new policy, the export of red sanders wood in any form is prohibited with effect from 1.4.1992. In the above circumstances, as rightly pointed out by the learned single Judge, it has to be held that the principle of promissory estoppel would apply against the enforcement of the new policy and, therefore, it is not open to the appellants to change the policy even before 31.3.1993 and prevent the respondent from fulfilling its pre-ban contractual obligations.

17. Now, let us consider the other contention of the learned counsel for the respondent that the new policy is unreasonable and arbitrary in so far as it relates to red sanders wood already cut and converted into parts of musical instruments and which are kept ready for export. It is seen from the counter affidavit filed on behalf of the appellants herein in the writ petition that, issue of licence for export of musical instruments parts and koto-arts made out of red sanders wood is not possible as the present policy bans export of any product made out of red sanders wood as an ecological conservation measure. It is further stated in the counter affidavit that in order to make the conservation measure totally effective, the Government has banned the export of chips and powder of red sanders wood also. It must be pointed out that there is nothing on record to show that cutting of red sanders wood has been banned by the Government or any authority at any time. Therefore, as rightly pointed out by the learned single Judge, if the cutting of the red sanders tree is not banned and the citizens are permitted to manufacture musical instruments parts out of the cut trees, there is no substance in the contention that export of musical instruments parts or the export of red sanders wood in any form has been banned after the trees are cut and converted into parts of musical instruments as an ecological conservation measure. In view of the specific case of the respondent that the necessary manufacturing processes have been completed and that the musical instruments parts made out of the red sanders wood are kept ready for export, it is not known how the refusal to issue licence for the export of the finished goods will help in maintaining or conserving the ecological balance in the area. In the above circumstances, we have no hesitation in accepting the contention of the learned counsel for the respondent that the new policy in so far as it prohibits export of finished goods which are ready for export is unreasonable and arbitrary and it has no nexus whatever with the proclaimed object of the new policy. Therefore, the learned Judge is quite right in issuing a writ of mandamus directing the appellants to issue a licence for the export of the goods to the value of U.S. Dollars 75,000 against the letter of credit No.41-2432445 - 031.

18. For all the reasons stated above, we cannot take exception to the view taken by the learned single Judge and we see no infirmity in the order of the learned single Judge warranting interference at out hands in this writ appeal. There is no merit in the writ appeal and it is liable to be dismissed. Accordingly, the writ appeal is dismissed. No costs. We, however, direct the licence to be issued to the respondents on or before 5th April, 1993.

B.S. ----- Appeal dismissed.

O.S.A.No.284 of 1992 7th January, 1993.

V.A.Padmanabhan and others ...Appellants
v.

M.A.Narasimhan and others ...Respondents.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Sec.53-A - Transferee in possession of property in part performance of contract - Rights of - If entitled to injunction on allegation of threat of dispossession.

Possession in part performance of a contract is a right falling under Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act and the transferee in possession of the property in part performance of the contract can defend his possession in case there is any attempt by the transferor or any person claiming through him to dispossess him. That the transferee can do either as a plaintiff or a defendant. Ordinarily, the issue as to possession or any other right under Sec.53-A of the Act shall be consequential or a dependent issue upon the issue of the existence of the contract itself and with the decree for the enforcement of the contract, there can be an order for maintaining the possession of the agreementholder/transferee. In considering, however, whether injunction should be granted on the plea of possession and allegation of threat to dispossession to a person holding the agreement for sale, the rule will be as one reiterated almost in every case that to a plaintiff claiming only an equitable right, the court would not ordinarily grant temporary injunction pending the suit on the basis of Sec.53-A of the Act as mere possession of the plaintiff of the suit property on the date of the suit cannot be taken to enable him to obtain injunction from the Court. The passive equity as provided under Sec.53-A of the Act shall be available as a shield against any interference by the defendant who is either the transferor himself or any other person claiming through the transferor but would not become active equity without there being something more. K.Ravi, for Appellants.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.: The impugned order, according to us, has no infirmity and the appeal deserves to be dismissed in limine. However, since learned counsel for the appellants has persuaded us to consider the appellants' case for injunction, in particular, on the plea of possession as an independent relief of injunction, we have heard him at length and we record our opinion in some detail.

2. According to the plaintiff-appellants, the respondents executed an agreement on 12.3.1981 to sell the suit property for a total consideration of Rs.6,00,000 and received an advance of Rs.1,50,000 from the plaintiffs/appellants by way of part performance of the agreement by the plaintiffs and put them in possession of a portion of the Schedule mentioned property, which was vacant, and further authorised the plaintiffs/appellants to recover vacant possession of the remaining portions occupied by third parties. It was agreed that the sale would be completed within three months after possession of the entire suit property was obtained or within six months from the date of execution of the agreement whichever was later. The plaintiffs who got possession over a portion of the suit property from the defendants-respondents also recovered possession of some more portions, but some portions are still in the occupation of the third parties. In order to evict those persons, the plaintiffs needed authority and money and accordingly they demanded, in writing, execution and registration of the sale deed from the respondents, but the respondents in their reply, without denying the execution of the agreement, raised a demand to a sum of Rs.9,00,000 instead of Rs.4,50,000. The plaintiffs thus moved the Court alleging that the cause of action for the suit arose at Madras on 12.3.1981 where and when the suit agreement was executed, where the suit property is situate and on which date the plaintiffs paid a sum of Rs.1,50,000 to the defendants under the said agreement, and on which date the defendants put the plaintiffs in possession of the vacant portion of the suit property in part performance of the suit agreement, besides other facts.

3. The plaintiffs/appellants then filed an application for an interim injunction seeking to restrain the respondents from intermeddling with in any manner with the corpus of the property mentioned in the schedule to the Judge's summons and from interfering with the appellants' possession and enjoyment of the suit property.

4. The trial court first granted an interim injunction as prayed for on 29-4-1991. After notice and after hearing the respondents the trial court, however, dismissed the application for injunction.

5. The defendants-respondents have accepted the agreement for sale of the suit property for a consideration of Rs.6,00,000 and also admitted that they have received a sum of Rs.1,50,000 as advance from the appellants. They have, however, disputed the appellants' case that they were put in possession of certain portion of the suit land by the respondents. They have stated that the entire property is under the occupation of slum-dwellers. There are more than 50 huts over the suit land. They tried to remove the encroachment, but they could not do so. They then decided to sell the suit land for a consideration of Rs.6,00,000 in the year 1981 to the appellants. After the agreement, the appellants made some attempt to vacate the slum-dwellers by directly dealing with them. This gave rise to civil litigations. Many of them are still pending. The respondents were willing to provide all legal assistance for vacating the slum-dwellers from the suit land provided it was at the cost of the appellants. The appellants could not obtain possession from any of the third parties and they were unable to vacate the persons who were in possession of the suit land. They (appellants) orally said to the respondents that they were not interested in purchasing the suit land. They prevented several prospective purchasers from purchasing the suit property and even instigated the slum-dwellers to deny the title of the respondents and attempted to create a cloud over their title. They have alleged, "even though the agreement was entered into on 12.3.1981, the applicants never performed their part of the contract till now".

6. Learned single Judge has, however, stated in the order:

"According to the plaintiffs, by way of part performance of the contract, they were put in possession by the defendants and, therefore, the defendants should not be permitted to disturb their possession".

But, learned counsel for the appellants has chosen to shift the stand before us and urged on the basis of the pleadings and on the admitted facts as mentioned in the agreement that possession of certain portion of the suit land was delivered by the respondents to the appellants and they obtained possession of some other parts of the suit land from the slum-dwellers, the Court should consider whether there is a prima facie case and balance of convenience for granting injunction.

7. We shall for the reason of the above shift in the contention of the learned counsel for the appellants, proceed first to consider whether as to what may be in a suit for specific performance of a contract of money in which by way of part performance possession is delivered by the defendants to the plaintiffs, a plea to maintain status quo to preserve possession of the agreement-holder and when can such a plea be allowed and then whether independent of a claim of possession in terms of Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act, possession can be taken notice of as good and conclusive for determination of the question as to a prima facie case and balance of convenience. Before we do so, we may take notice of the law on the subject. The Act relating to transfer of property (Transfer of Property Act) has defined 'transfer of property' to mean an act by which a living person conveys property, in present or in future, to one or more other living persons, or to himself, or to himself and one or more other living persons and 'to transfer property' is to perform such act. The word 'living person' in this section, it is explained, includes a company or association or body of individuals, whether incorporate or not. It then says in Sec.6 thereof that the property of any kind may be transferred, except as otherwise provided by this Act or by any other law for the time being in force and enlisted in this such items of property which cannot be transferred. This comprehensive enactment is in Group B and in this group lies the provision as to part performance of a contract to transfer for consideration any immovable property. It is Sec.53-A which reads as follows:

"53-A. Part performance: Where any person contracts to transfer for consideration any immovable property by writing signed by him or on his behalf from which the terms necessary to constitute the transfer can be ascertained with reasonable certainty, and the transferee has, in part performance of the contract, taken possession of the property or any part thereof, or the transferee, being already in possession, continues in possession in part performance of the contract and has done some act in furtherance of the contract, and the transferee has performed or is willing to perform his part of the contract, then, notwithstanding that the contract, though required to be registered, has not been registered, or, where there is an instrument of transfer, that the transfer has not been completed in the manner prescribed therefor by the law for the time being in force, the transferor or any person claiming under him shall be debarred from enforcing against the transferee and persons claiming under him any right in respect of the property of which the transferee has taken or continued in possession, other than a right expressly provided by the terms of the contract:

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect the rights of a transferee for consideration who has no notice of the contract or of the part performance thereof".

8. To raise thus a plea based on possession taken in part performance of the contract against the transferor or any person claiming under him, it is necessary that the possession of the property or any part thereof is taken in part performance of the contract or the transferee, being already in possession, continues in possession in part performance of the contract and the transferee has done some act in furtherance of the contract. This plea will be available against the transferor or any person claiming under him any right in respect of the property of which the transferee has taken or continued in possession other than a right expressly provided by the terms of the contract, a plea which is available to defend or protect the possession obtained or continued in part performance of the contract.

9. Sec.54 of the Transfer of Property Act defines 'sales of immovable property' and also defines 'contract for sale' in these words: 'a contract for the sale of immovable property is a contract that a sale of such property shall take place on terms settled between the parties. It does not, of itself, create any interest in or charge on such property'. Considering these two provisions in the Act, a Bench of this Court, to which one of us was a member, in the case of T.Parameshwari and others v. S.S.Investments Private Ltd., and another, O.S.A.Nos.122 and 123 of 1991 judgment dated 24.10.1991, has stated as follows:

"These two provisions together thus leave no manner of doubt that there is no right under a contract for sale except to see for its enforcement and that possession in part performance of the contract in the hands of the transferee shall also not defeat any transfer to a third party who had no notice of the contract or of the part performance thereof.

Courts in India, have been repeatedly asked to examine the extent of the right under Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act. They have almost on every time reiterated that in legal parlance, this provision cannot be used as a sword. It can be only used as a shield. It cannot be used as a weapon of offence. It can be used only as a shelter of defence under law."

10. A Bench of the Patna High Court in H.P.Thirupathi v. Dayananthi Devi, A.I.R. 1988

Pat. 123 has observed thus:

"The claim of the petitioner in this application is that after the execution of the deed of agreement, he continued to remain in possession not qua tenant but de hors the tenancy in his own right as a transferee. To put it in legal parlance, Sec.53-A of Transfer of Property Act was sought to be used as a sword and not a shield as a weapon of offence rather than a shelter of defence under the law. That is entirely not permissible under the statutory and salutary provisions of Sec.53-A of Transfer of Property Act, which does not envisage eviction under the Rent Control Act to be inhibited by filing of a prior suit by the adversary claiming a title on the basis of an alleged deed of agreement of sale and desirous of getting a decree for specific performance of contract therein. It is well-settled that Sec.53-A of Transfer of Property Act can be used only as a shield and not as a sword."

11. Yet another Bench decision of the Patna High Court has been referred to by the learned Judges of this Court in the case T.Parameshwari and others v. S.S.Investments Private Ltd., and another, O.S.A.Nos.122 and 123 of 1991 Judgment dated 24.10.1991, in which relying upon Kalyanpur Lime Works v. State of Bihar, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 226, it is stated: .

"I do not think that an order of injunction should be granted in order to disturb the status quo. There cannot be any doubt that the appellant has no right to immediate possession, and the appellant's title would accrue after the contract has been specifically performed. In referring to English decisions on the subject, one must bear in mind that the English doctrine of an equitable estate, on a contract for sale does not apply in India, and the law of India does not recognise such equitable estates... I think that the learned Advocate-General is putting his case too high when he contends that where a prima facie case has been made out by showing that there is a fair question for trial, a temporary injunction must follow restraining the contracting defendant from dealing with the property. Where an order of injunction should or should not issue will, in my opinion, depend on the facts of the case, and the court must also consider the questions of irreparable or serious injury and balance of convenience. I do not think that there is any such irreparable or serious injury from which the appellant is required to be saved by an order of injunction in the present case".

"We have also been addressed on the question whether the appellant can be sufficiently compensated by money in respect of any loss suffered before specific performance of the contract. The learned Advocate General has drawn our attention to Sec.12, Explanation and Secs.54 and 56, Specific Relief Act (old Act) Court's comment). He has also drawn our attention to Sec.19, Specific Relief Act, which says that any person suing for the performance of a contract may also ask for compensation for its breach, either in addition to or in substitution for such performance. Personally, I do not see any reason why the appellant cannot be compensated by money for any loss he may suffer, provided the appellant is entitled to compensation in addition to specific performance; under the law, as to which I express no opinion at this stage. If, as I have already stated, there is no question of stopping the quarrying operations during the pendency of the suit for specific performance, the question of compensation will remain whether an order of injunction is or is not passed. It cannot surely be urged that in a suit for specific performance the plaintiff is entitled to ask, during the pendency of litigation, that the defendant in whom the legal title still vests should be restrained from using the property. If the plaintiff were so entitled, then in a suit for specific performance, the defendant would be required to vacate the property which he had contracted to sell or lease. That surely cannot be the law".

This decision of the Patna High Court in the words of the Division Bench of this Court in the case of T.Parameshwari and others v. S.S.Investments Private Ltd., and another, O.S.A.Nos.122 and 123 of 1991 Judgment dated 24.10.1991, is worthy companion of a Bench decision of this Court in Krishnamurthy v. Paramasiva, A.I.R. 1981 Mad. 310. In that case, the law has been stated rather elaborately and for us it is particularly relevant because one question argued by the learned counsel for the appellants has been answered therein. This Court in Krishnamurthy v. Paramasiva, A.I.R. 1981 Mad. 310, has stated:

"Apart from this factual aspect there is one other impediment in the way of the respondent from getting the relief of temporary injunction in his suit for specific performance. Even assuming that the plaintiff was given possession of the suit properties on the date of the agreement of sale by the first defendant, the question still is whether the plaintiff could claim the relief of injunction based on Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act. Admittedly, in this case the plaintiff has not yet got title to the properties. He can get title to the properties only if he succeeds in the suit and obtains sale deed in respect of the properties. It is well-established that an agreement of sale does not create any interest in the property which is the subject matter of the agreement. Therefore, the plaintiff if at all can claim only an equitable right based on Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act. Therefore, the relief of temporary injunction claimed by the plaintiff pending the suit can be taken to have been claimed by the plaintiff only on the basis of Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act as mere possession of the plaintiff of the suit properties on the date of the suit cannot be taken to enable him to obtain injunction from the Court. If that will be the case even a trespasser in possession can approach the court and ask for an injunction to protect his possession. Therefore, we have to treat the plaintiff's application for temporary injunction pending the suit as an application for claiming equitable relief under Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act. If the application for injunction is so treated, then the plaintiff cannot be granted the relief for the reason that Sec.53-A can be used to resist the defendant when he seeks to dispossess the plaintiff. It is well-established that Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act provides for a passive equity and not for an active equity. Therefore, the plaintiff cannot seek his relief of injunction in a court of law based on Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act though he can use Sec.53-A to debar the transferor who has agreed to sell the property from claiming any right in respect of that property. It is well-established that the right conferred by Sec.53-A is a right available to the defendant only to protect his possession and on the basis of that section the defendant cannot claim any title and it merely operates as a bar to the plaintiff to ascertain his title. Though in English law the equity of part performance is an active equity which the plaintiff in possession may enforce in an independent suit or proceeding, such as a suit for specific performance or for an injunction to restrain dispossession, such equity is not available after the amendment of the Transfer of Property Act in the year 1929. In this case, the plaintiff used his right under Sec.53-A not as a shield but as a sword. Hence, the plaintiff is not entitled to the injunction sought for by him".

12. The principle of law in the case of Krishnamurthy v. Paramasiva, A.I.R. 1981 Mad. 310, is a complete answer to the plea of injunction of the appellants and the learned single Judge has made no mistake in this behalf in following the rule that a plea based on possession in part performance of a contract cannot be permitted to be used as a sword to assert a right against the owner of the property as the contract or possession as above in itself creates no interest in or charge on the property.

13. In the case of T. Parameshwari and others v. S.S. Investments Private Ltd. and another, O.S.A. Nos. 122 and 123 of 1991 Judgment dated 24.10.1991, however, this Court has taken notice of the dissent to the view expressed by this Court in Krishnamurthy v. Paramasiva, A.I.R. 1981 Mad. 310, by a learned single Judge of the Bombay High Court in Venkat Dharmaji v. Vishwanatha, A.I.R. 1983 Bom. 413 and Muktalakeshi Dawan v. Haripada Mazumdar, A.I.R. 1988 Cal. 25. The Bombay decision only says that there is no bar under the Civil Procedure Code which can be invoked in support of the proposition that a plaintiff suing for specific performance, cannot obtain any injunction whatsoever and that if there is no bar in the Civil Procedure Code and if the application for temporary injunction is solely governed either by O.39, Rules 1 and 2 or in the alternative by invoking the inherent powers of the Court under Sec.151, C.P.C. there is no justification to treat such an application as an application for relief of injunction as provided by Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act. Having stated so, the learned single Judge of the Bombay High Court has chosen to record his dissent from the view taken by this Court in the case of Krishnamurthy v. Paramasiva, A.I.R. 1981 Mad. 310. But the Bench in deciding the case of T. Parameshwari and others v. S.S. Investments Private Ltd. and another,

O.S.A.Nos.122 and 123 of 1991 Judgment dated 24.10.1991, has commented upon the Bombay High Court's judgment thus:

"But, then there is absolutely no reason stated why the learned Judge thought that he should dissent from the view taken by the Madras High Court. No one can question the jurisdiction of this Court to grant temporary injunction even in a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale. While applying to exercise the discretions, it would necessarily take the Court to the various provisions governing the suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of immoveable property. Presence of power alone is not enough to exercise it. It is the exercise which is controlled by judicial discipline. Courts who always advise that all adjudications must conform to the rules of equity and discretions must always be exercised within the bounds of law, cannot merely because there is no power to do a thing would do that thing. The decision in Kalyanpur Lime Works v. State of Bihar, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 226 and the decision in Krishnamurthy v. Paramasiva, A.I.R. 1981 Mad. 310 would appear to take a principled stand to be applied in determining as to whether there is any balance of convenience in favour of the plaintiff or it is in favour of the defendant. There is no reason why we constituting a co-ordinating Bench do not follow the law stated by this Court in Krishnamurthy v. Paramasiva, A.I.R. 1981 Mad. 310. The Calcutta High Court's view is not essentially in conflict with the view taken by the High Court of Patna and the High Court of Madras. In Muktalakeshi Dawan v. Haripada Mazumdar, A.I.R. 1988 Cal. 25, all that is stated is:

"It is true that the doctrine of lis pendens as enunciated in Sec.52 of the Transfer of Property Act takes care of all pendente lite transfers; but it may not always be good enough to take fullest care of the plaintiff's interest vis-a-vis such a transfer. Where a suit is one for specific performance of sale in respect of the suit property and if the defendant is not restrained from selling the property to a third party and accordingly a third party purchases the same bona fide for value without any notice of the pending litigation and spends a huge sum on the improvement thereof or for construction thereon, the equity in his favour may intervene to persuade the court to decline, in the exercise of its discretion, the equitable relief of specific performance to the plaintiff at the trial and to award damages only in favour of the plaintiff".

This is fully in tune with what this Court has said in the case of T.Parameshwari and others v. S.S.Investments Private Ltd. and another, O.S.A.Nos.122 and 123 of 1991 Judgment dated 24.10.1991, referred supra, that no one can question the jurisdiction of this Court to grant temporary injunction even in a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale. But while applying to exercise the discretions, it would necessarily take the court to the various provisions governing the suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of immoveable property. Presence of power alone is not enough to exercise it. It is the exercise which is controlled by judicial discipline. We, however, regard it to the credit of the learned counsel for the appellants that he has drawn our attention to a Bench decision of this Court in S.F.Munuswami v. Erusa Goundar, A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 25. That case related to immovable properties belonging to one of the parties who entered into a contract with another as the guardian of the plaintiff in the suit and another who were minors for sale of the properties for consideration within two years. Based on the agreement which the plaintiff's father had with the owner, he was put in possession in part performance. The owner, however, transferred the properties to another. The plaintiff then filed a suit for declaration of title and for an injunction from interference. The Trial Court found that there was an agreement of sale and the plaintiff had been put in possession and on that basis granted the prayers asked for in the plaint. The first appellate Court proceeded upon the view that Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act by itself did not confer title on the plaintiff and that, therefore, he cannot raise the claim on the basis of part performance of title. As to possession, it considered that the finding of the trial Court was unnecessary and discharged the finding. When the matter came up in second appeal, a learned single Judge of this Court stated:-

"After going through the documentary and oral evidence in the case, I am of opinion that the appellant continued to be in possession of the suit properties in spite of the sale in favour of defendants 2 and 3 by the 1st defendant".

Relying upon a Judgment of the Andhra Pradesh

High Court in Yenugu Achayya v. Venkatasubba Rao, A.I.R. 1957 A.P. 854, the learned single Judge held that the appeal should be allowed and the trial court's decree should be restored. The Bench in the Letters Patent Appeal said that it seems to us that the judgment in second appeal cannot be supported. There can be no doubt, therefore, as to the ratio of the judgment of the Court that the judgment of the first appellate court correctly decided that a person cannot base his claim on a contract for specific performance or possession delivered in part performance thereof. But there are certain observations in the said judgment which need a little examination. After stating that the judgment in second appeal cannot be supported, the learned Judges have in deciding S.F. Munuswami v. Erusa Goundar, A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 25 have said, Subba Rao, C.J. (as he then was) observed:

"It is settled law that under Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act, no title passes to a transferee. He cannot file a suit for declaration of his title to the property or seek to recover possession of the same on the basis of any title conferred on him".

"Venkatadri, J., was, therefore, not right in allowing the appeal which would mean that he was giving declaration of title sought for. As pointed out in Yenugu Achayya v. Venkatasubba Rao, A.I.R. 1957 A.P. 854, which is representative of a large volume of judicial opinion, Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act does confer some right on the transferee, if the conditions of that section are fully satisfied, and what is that right is also clear from the provisions of Sec.53-A. The right is to have the transferor or any person claiming under him debarred from enforcing against the transferee and persons claiming under him any right in respect of the property of which the transferee has taken or continued in possession. This right can be enforced by the transferee always as a shield and not as an independent claim either in the capacity of plaintiff or defendants, that is to say, he cannot ask for title basing his claim on the fact that he has fulfilled the conditions of Sec.53-A. But he can, as a shield, ask for protection of the right envisaged by Sec.53-A by debarring, in other words, by getting an injunction against the transferor and those claiming under him from interfering with his possession".

There is a more categorical statement than the one in the case of S.F. Munuswami v. Erusa Goundar, A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 25 in the judgment of the Karnataka High Court in Mahadevamma v. B.S. Linga Raju and others, (1981) 2 Karn.L.J. 388 and another of the Sikkim High Court in Tshering Wongdi v. Sonam Pinto, A.I.R. 1981 Sikkim 1. Like the Judgment in the case of S.F. Munuswami v. Erusa Goundar, A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 25, a Division Bench Judgment of this Court, no exception is taken in either of these two judgments to the rule that the equity of part performance under Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act is a passive equity, figuratively expressed as a shield, and not a sword and the person claiming its benefit thus cannot use it as an action to assert a right. What is pointed out in the Karnataka judgment is that the doctrine of part performance in England was an innovation to relieve the hardship of the provisions of the Statute of Frauds which by its 4th section provided that no action could be brought upon a contract for the sale of land unless the contract was in writing and signed by the party to be charged. Answering, however, the question whether a transferee as plaintiff is entitled to invoke Sec.53 of the Transfer of Property Act for the purpose of protecting his possession, the Karnataka High Court has said that a suit by a transferee in possession as part performance under Sec.53-A for the possessory remedy of injunction protecting his possession is a mere defence suit in which the plaintiff is merely using the shield of passive equity and referred to a large number of judgments of different Courts. In the words of the learned Judges,

"We are in respectful agreement with the reasoning of Chief Justice Subba Rao (as he then was) in Yenugu Achayya v. Venkatasubba Rao, A.I.R. 1957 A.P. 854 and of the other decisions which take that view. An action for the possessory remedy of an injunction, by the transferee against the transferor, in protection of the possession, had in part performance of the agreement, is essentially a defensive action in which the transferee merely wields the shield of passive equity. The opposite view taken in Shankargoud's case and in Muniyamma's case in our opinion, cannot be considered to have laid down the correct law."

The Sikkim High Court has in its judgment also proceeded with almost the same reasoning to say “that it is not also correct to say that in a civil suit it is the plaintiff who is the aggressor and has attacked or is trying to attack the defendant and has, therefore, used a “sword” and it is the defendant who only seeks to protect himself against such aggression and attack and, therefore, has used “shield” only. More often than not, a plaintiff comes to the Court for the protection of his rights and not for enforcement, unless, as I sometime feel, every protection of right involves, in some way or other, an enforcement of that right. If a transferee under Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act cannot rely on his rights under that section as a plaintiff, then, as pointed out by Subba Rao, C.J., all that a transferor is required to do in order to get rid of such a transferee is to dispossess him forcefully and forcibly as in such a case the transferee would not be able to enter the portals of the Court as a plaintiff to seek protection of his rights.”

14. The judgment of this Court in the case of S.F. Munuswami v. Erusa Goundar, A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 25 and the Karnataka High Court's decision in the case of Mahadevamma v. B.S. Linga Raju and others, (1981) 2 Karn. 388 as well as the Sikkim Court in Tshering Wongdi v. Sonam Pinto, A.I.R. 1981 Sikkim 1 are all inspired by the judgment of Subba Rao, C.J., in the case of Yenugu Achaya v. Venkata Subba Rao, A.I.R. 1957 A.P. 854. This Andhra Pradesh judgment is categorical on the necessary conditions for the application of Sec.53-A of the Act and says the necessary conditions for the application of the section are: (i) there is a contract to transfer immovable property for consideration, (ii) the contract is signed by or on behalf of the transferor, (iii) the terms can be ascertained with reasonable certainty from the document, (iv) the transferee is put in possession or if he has been already in possession continues in possession, (v) he has done some act in furtherance of the contract, and (vi) the transferee has performed or is willing to perform his part of the contract. If the aforesaid conditions are fulfilled the transferor or any person claiming under him shall be debarred from enforcing against the transferee and persons claiming under him any right in respect of that property.

15. It has been categorically pointed out in this judgment that Sec.53-A does not even if the conditions laid down therein are complied with, convey title to the transferee. Notwithstanding the section, title can be transferred only after the registration of the document. This provision prevents a transferor from enforcing his rights in respect of the property against the transferee but enables him to sue the transferee upon the covenants contained in the document. In short, the mutual covenants will be operative, though title does not pass under the document”. After laying down the law as above it is stated in this judgment that the section does not either expressly or by necessary implication indicate that the rights conferred on the transferee thereunder can only be invoked as a defendant and not as a plaintiff. Under the terms of the section the transferor is debarred from enforcing against the transferee only rights in respect of the property and this bar does not depend upon the array of the parties. The transferee can resist any attempt on the part of the transferor to enforce his rights in respect of the property whatever position he may occupy in the field of litigation. In one sense, it is a statutory recognition of the defensive equity. It enables the transferee to use it as a shield against any attempt on the part of the transferor to enforce his rights against the property. Whether the transferee occupies the position of a plaintiff or a defendant, he can resist the transferor's claim against the property. Conversely, whether the transferor is the plaintiff or the defendant, he cannot enforce his rights in respect of the property under Sec.53-A against the transferee. The utility of the section and of the rights conferred thereunder should not be made to depend on the manoeuvring for positions in a Court of Law, otherwise a powerful transferor can always defeat the salutary provisions of the section by dispossessing the transferee by force and compelling him to go to a Court as plaintiff. Doubtless, the right conveyed under the section can be relied upon only as a shield and not as a sword but the protection is available to the transferee both as a plaintiff and as a defendant so long as he uses it as a shield.

16. What has been culled out by us leaves no manner of doubt that possession in part performance of a contract is a right falling under Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act and the transferee in possession of the property in part performance of the contract can defend his possession in case there is any attempt by the transferor or any person claiming through him to dispossess him. That the transferee can do either as a plaintiff or a defendant. Ordinarily, the issue as to possession or any other right under Sec.53-A of the Act shall be consequential or a dependent issue upon the issue of the existence of the contract itself and with the decree for the enforcement of the contract, there can be an order for maintaining the possession of the agreement-holder/transferee. In considering, however, whether injunction should be granted on the plea of possession and allegation of threat to dispossession to a person holding the agreement for sale, the rule will be as one reiterated almost in every case that to a plaintiff claiming only an equitable right, the court would not ordinarily grant temporary injunction pending the suit on the basis of Sec.53-A of the Act as mere possession of the plaintiff of the suit property on the date of the suit cannot be taken to enable him to obtain injunction from the Court. The passive equity as provided under Sec.53-A of the Act will be available as a shield against any interference by the defendant who is either the transferor himself or any other person claiming through the transferor but would not become active equity without there being something more. The doctrine of lis pendens as enunciated in Sec.52 of the Act and similar other doctrines will take care of all pendente lite transfers. But there may be exceptional cases where the other rules of equity as are noticed in the cardinal principles for grant of injunction will intervene and injunction may be the proper and equitable order. The Bench decision of this Court in the case of T.Parameshwari and others v. S.S.Investments Private Ltd., and another, O.S.A.Nos.122 and 123 of 1991 Judgment dated 24.10.1991, which has been affirmed by the Supreme Court in S.L.P.Nos.17926 and 17927 of 1991, has clearly said that no one can question the jurisdiction of the Court to grant temporary injunction even in a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale. But, while applying to exercise the discretion it would necessarily take the court to the various provisions governing the suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of immovable property as well as other equitable doctrines.

17. When we come to the facts of the instant case, however, there is a vague assertion in the plaint that pursuant to the agreement the defendants delivered possession of a certain portion of the land under the conveyance and that the plaintiffs have come in possession of certain other portions after getting third parties evicted. There is no specific mention on the portions of which the plaintiffs are exercising possession. The agreement is dated 12.3.1981. The suit has been filed in the year 1992. The alleged part performance is of the year 1982, in so far as possession of certain portion delivered by the defendants is concerned and it is not known when and how the plaintiffs obtained possession of the other part of the suit property and what portion is still remaining in the possession of the third parties or in the possession of the defendants. A Court shall allow a passive equity only to a limit and not beyond. It will be necessary in all cases to see if the property is not preserved in a status quo who will suffer greater injury, the plaintiff or the defendant? Learned single Judge has adverted to this aspect of the matter also and said as follows:

"The fact remains that according to sale agreement the defendants put the purchasers/plaintiffs in possession of a portion of the suit land and the possession of the rest of the portions are in the hands of the third parties. Neither the plaintiffs nor the defendants can so far able to evict them. Unless the possession of the entire suit land is obtained the plaintiffs would not come forward to complete their part of the contract. The plaintiffs stated that they have already taken steps to vacate the third parties from the suit land. The defendants who entered into a contract for sale of the suit land with the plaintiffs are also unable to proceed any further. The defendants being the owner of the suit property, they are also having their right over the suit property. The plaintiffs claim their right to be in possession on the basis of part performance of the contract under Sec.53-A of the Transfer of Property Act, and if there is any threat to their possession, their possession would be safeguarded. Considering all these points, I am of the opinion that the prima facie case and the balance of convenience are not in favour of the plaintiffs/applicants".

18. Learned counsel for the appellants has tried to persuade us to imagine that the transferor and/o others claiming through him have intended to dispossess the plaintiffs. He has also tried to persuade us to hold that even though there are no specific specifications of the land in possession of the plaintiffs available, the defendants know about it and the third parties in possession also are full aware of it. The Court should order maintenance of status quo which, according to learned counsel for the appellants, would serve the ends of justice. We are, however, unable to accept this extreme contention. We have no material before us to hold that plaintiffs are in possession of any portion of the suit property. Learned counsel for the appellants/plaintiffs has tried to show to us the mention of possession of a certain portion delivered to the plaintiffs by the defendants as part performance of the contract. But the defendants have denied any such possession by the plaintiffs, in the written statement that they have filed in the suit. It is not a fit case, in our opinion, for any interference with the impugned order. The appeal is dismissed. No costs.

Ramaswami and others ...Appellants
v.

C.S.Venkitasubramania Iyer ...Respondent.

Tamil Nadu Agriculturists Relief Act (IV of 1938) (as amended by Act VIII of 1973), Secs.8 and 10(2)(ii) - Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Sec.55(4)(b) - Property sold by plaintiff to defendants for Rs.40,000, Rs.20,000 paid in cash - For balance of Rs.20,000, mortgage created in respect of the same property - Suit on foot of mortgage - Amount due whether can be scaled down.

The plaintiff sold the suit properties to the defendants 1 and 2 and their father for Rs.40,000. A sum of Rs.20,000 was paid in cash and for the remaining Rs.20,000, a mortgage deed Ex.A-1 mortgaging the same property was executed as per which the amount shall be paid with interest at 15% per annum within one year. The amount not having been paid, a suit for recovery of the amount was filed. The defendants pleaded that the amount due under the mortgage stood discharged or must be scaled down as per the provisions of the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Acts. The trial Court held that the mortgage had been executed as security for the unpaid balance purchase money and that therefore under Sec.55(4)(b) of the Transfer of Property Act, the plaintiff had a charge over the suit property and that such liability was excepted under Sec.10(2)(ii) of the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act IV of 1938. In appeal, Held: There is absolutely nothing to suggest that the mortgage deed Ex.A-1 contains terms that constitute a contract to the contrary so as to exclude the charge under Sec.55(4)(b) of the Transfer of Property Act. The court is clearly of the view that the money due under the mortgage must be considered as unpaid purchase money and therefore it is subject to a charge under Sec.55(4)(b) of the Transfer of Property Act and hence, in view of Sec.10(2)(ii) of Act IV of 1938 the mortgage amount is not liable to be scaled down under Sec.8 of the Act (IV of 1938).

V.Narayanaswami, for Appellants.

A.K.Kumarasamy, for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Bellie, J.: The only question that arises for consideration in this appeal is whether the amount claimed as mortgage amount due is liable to be scaled down under Sec.8 of the Tamil Nadu Agriculturists Relief Act, IV of 1938. This question has been answered by the trial court in the negative.

2. The suit properties were sold by the plaintiff to the defendants 1 and 2 and their father Appichi Gounder for a sum of Rs.40,000. A sum of Rs.20,000 was paid in cash and for the remaining Rs.20,000 a mortgage deed mortgaging the same property was executed as per which the amount shall be paid with interest at the rate of 15% per annum within a period of one year. Alleging that the mortgage amount is due the suit has been filed.

Appichi Gounder died and his wife has been impleaded as the third defendant on the allegation that she is also liable to pay the mortgage amount from out of the properties left by Appichi Gounder.

3. The defendants pleaded that they have paid a sum of Rs.3,000 towards interest which has not been given credit to in the suit. They further pleaded citing a number of Debt Relief Act that the amount due under the mortgage stands discharged or must be scaled down as per the provisions of the said Acts.

4. The trial court held that it is true that an amount of Rs.3,000 has been paid by the defendants towards interest and therefore it has to be given credit to. As regards the other contentions raised by the defendants the trial court rejected them. As regards the contention raised by the defendants that the mortgage amount is liable to be scaled down under Act 4 of 1938 as amended by Act 8 of 1973 the trial court held that the mortgage has been executed as security for the unpaid balance purchase money and therefore under Sec.55(4)(b) of the Transfer of Property Act, the plaintiff has a charge over the suit property and under Sec.10(2)(ii) such a liability is excepted from scaling down and as such the defendants will have no remedy under Act 4 of 1938. In the result the trial court passed a preliminary decree for the suit amount less Rs.3,000.

5. In the appeal by the defendants Mr. V. Narayanasamy, learned counsel appearing for them submits that the mortgage amount is liable to be scaled down under Act IV of 1938 as amended by Act VIII of 1973 and the finding of the trial court to the contrary is erroneous.

6. Now, as seen above, for the sale consideration of Rs.40,000 Rs.20,000 was paid in cash and for the balance amount of Rs.20,000 due to the plaintiff the suit mortgage was executed mortgaging the same property sold. Clearly the mortgage was executed as security for payment of the balance amount. However, Mr. Narayanasamy would argue that by execution of the mortgage deed the balance of sale consideration would stand discharged and therefore there is no question of there being a charge over the property under Sec.55(4)(b) of the Transfer of Property Act as held by the trial court and hence Sec.10(2)(ii) of Act IV of 1938 is not attracted. In support of this contention the learned counsel relies on a Division Bench decision in Krishnaswami Aiyangar and another v. Subramania Ganapatigal and another, 35 M.L.J. 304: 7 L.W. 210, from which the following proposition emerges:

"It is open to a vendor to accept a security from the vendee for part of the purchase money in lieu of cash and thus lose his lien for the unpaid purchase money. But whether he actually does so or whether he accepts the agreement merely as collateral security for future payment is question of the intention of the parties. The intention of the parties must be inferred from the documents of sale itself and the surrounding circumstances giving due weight to the fact, that the vendor has a statutory lien for unpaid purchase money which he can enforce in the absence of an agreement to the contrary".

7. In the instant case the Sale Deed has not been filed. A reading of mortgage deed Ex.A-1 also does not show that the parties had the intention that the execution of the mortgage deed shall be in lieu of the cash consideration, and on account of that the seller-mortgage has lost his lien for the unpaid purchase money. Therefore the said decision cited by the learned counsel does not help him much.

8. There is a later Division Bench decision in K.G. Lakshmana Aiyar and another v. Ramaswami Naicker and others, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 827, wherein the vendees of some property executed a mortgage in favour of the vendors for the full amount of the sale price giving as security not only the property sold but also some other property. The principal was repayable after five years but was to carry interest from the date of the bond. In an application to scale down the decree passed in a suit on the mortgage it was held that the terms of the mortgage do not constitute a contract to the contrary so as to exclude the statutory charge under Sec.55(4)(b) of the Transfer of Property Act, and by reason of Sec.10(2)(ii) of Act IV of 1938 to debt is excluded from the scaling down provisions. In this decision the earlier decision in Krishnaswami Aiyangar and another v. Subramania Ganapatigal and another, 35 M.L.J. 304: 7 L.W. 210, has been referred to.

9. There is absolutely nothing to suggest that the mortgage deed Ex.A-1 contains terms that constitute a contract to the contrary so as to exclude the charge under Sec.55(4)(b) of the Transfer of Property Act.

10. In another later judgment rendered by a single judge in Athiyappa Goundan v. Ramanathan Chettiar, (1940)1 M.L.J. 367, a mortgage deed was executed for Rs. 7,000 on the 4th November, 1914, the whole of the mortgage debt being the price payable by the mortgagors for lands purchased by them from the mortgagees and subsequent to the mortgage there was a partition among the mortgagors and after the partition the mortgage debt was split up and a subsequent mortgage for Rs. 2,500 of other ancestral properties was executed by the new mortgagor for the portion of the debt that fell to him and a decree was passed on that mortgage. When it was sought to be scaled down under Sec. 19 of the Act IV of 1938 it was held that Sec. 10(2) (ii) of Act IV of 1938 is a sufficient answer to the petition for scaling down. In view of the scheme of the Act and in view of the wording of the clause the giving of other property as security did not affect the applicability of the clause in Sec. 10 as to the lien for unpaid purchase money. 11. The facts in the present case are more in favour of the plaintiff than those in the said latter two decisions K.G. Lakshmana Aiyar and another v. Ramaswami Naicker and others, (1940)2 M.L.J. 827 and Athiyappa Goundan v. Ramanathan Chettiar, (1940)1 M.L.J. 367, inasmuch as wherein the present suit the very same property has been mortgaged, in the first of the said two decisions besides the property sold some other property also has been mortgaged, and in the second decision entirely different property has been mortgaged.

12. Considering all these we are clearly of the view that the money due under the mortgage must be considered as unpaid purchase money and therefore it is subject to a charge under Sec. 55(4)(b) of the Transfer of Property Act and hence in view of Sec. 10(2)(ii) of Act IV of 1938 the mortgage amount is not liable to be scaled down under Sec. 8 of Act IV of 1938.

13. We thus find no merit in the appeal. Apparently, it is dismissed with costs.

(A) Motor Vehicles Act (IV of 1939), Sec. 110-A - Motor accident - Number of persons dying or sustaining injuries - Number of petition for compensation filed - Claim petitions need not be considered independently.

Though all the claim petitions arose out of the accident, the tribunal proceeded to consider the claims for compensation independently, examining the same persons in different claim petitions which could have well been avoided. [Para 4]

(B) Motor Vehicles Act (IV of 1939), Sec. 110-A - Motor Accident - Heavy rain - Trees falling across road - Warning to bus driver at bus-stand - Driver fully aware of weather conditions - Driving bus over narrow bridge - Water was overflowing the bridge - Driver of bus prevailing upon passengers not to get down from bus - Driver held to be rash and negligent.

In this case, the driver of the bus TML.8364 was fully aware of the weather conditions even as he drove upto Tindivanam and as a prudent, careful and cautious driver, he should have watched out before venturing on to a narrow Tondiyar bridge. Indeed, the driver should not have gone over the narrow bridge at all after having observed that the weather conditions were not favourable and that water was overflowing the bridge. The evidence also discloses that the water was flowing below and over the bridge and was knee deep over the bridge and that certainly would not have given any indication to the driver of the bus that he can safely cross the bridge. The evidence also discloses that the driver of the bus had prevailed upon the passengers not to get down from the bus. Thus, the driver of the bus ignoring the warning administered about heavy rain and gale, had made bold to take the bus across the narrow bridge over which water was flowing. In doing so, the driver ignored the duty cast on him for the care and safety of the passengers. It is common knowledge that it is dangerous to cross the bridge or a cause-way which is submerged. In this case, the evidence clearly establishes that water was flowing over the bridge by about 2 feet or so and the water was also rising and in such a situation, to drive the bus over the bridge was an extremely dangerous and hazardous operation on the part of the driver. Even before approaching the bridge, the driver having regard to what he observed on the way, viz. heavy rain gale and fallen trees and also the overflow of water on the bridge, ought to have stopped before entering the bridge. There was thus a breach of duty which the driver of the bus owed to the passengers. That the driver proceeded to drive the bus on such a narrow bridge with overflowing of water is by itself an act of negligence and having regard to the available evidence that the bus stopped on the bridge and the passengers were not even allowed to get down from the bus, it is clear that it was only the rash act of the driver in driving the bus and his negligence in not having bestowed care and caution on the safety of the passengers that had caused the accident. [Para. 7]

(C) Pleadings - Motor accident case - Transport Corporation putting forward plea of act of God - Issue tried as preliminary issue and adverse finding given - Finding becoming final - Corporation, if can re-agitate the plea in appeal proceedings.

It is not in dispute that even prior to the disposal of the claim petitions by the tribunal, at the instance of the Corporation, the issue, whether the accident was an act of God or was due to the rash and negligent driving of the bus TML. 8364 by its driver was tried as a preliminary issue and a finding adverse to the Corporation had been rendered. That finding had been allowed by the Corporation to become final and not having been challenged in a manner known to law, the Corporation cannot again re-agitate that question in the course of the present proceedings. [Para. 9]

(D) Motor accidents - Corporation - Quantum - Payment made to claimants on the death of person as ex-gratia - Amount, if can be deducted from amount of compensation payable to them.

The payment made to the appellants on the death of 'S' was ex-gratia and not referable to any claim as such under the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act. The tribunal was to error in deducting a sum of Rs.5,000 from out of the compensation amount of Rs.20,000 determined by it.

The Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT: These appeals and revisions, at the instance of Thanthai Periyar Transport Corporation Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as 'the Corporation') as well as another appeal and Memorandum of Cross objections at the instance of the claimants, have been preferred against the awards of the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal (Sub Court) Tindivanam, in M.C.O.P.Nos.65, 17, 69, 201, 58, 117, 55, 159, 17, 54, 141, 292, 294, 304, 16, 59 and 56 of 1986 respectively. In the appeals and revisions filed by the Corporation it has challenged the awards of the tribunal on its conclusion on the question of the negligence of the driver of the bus TML.8364, which plied on the route Madras to Tiruvannamalai on 12.11.1985 and met with an accident resulting in the death of several passengers in the bus. In C.M.A.No.419 of 1990 and the Memorandum of Cross objection Nos.119 of 1992, 138 of 1991, 59 of 1992 and 148 of 1991 in C.M.A. Nos.332, 344, 597 and 798 of 1990 respectively the claimants have challenged the propriety of the amount of compensation awarded and have prayed for the award of higher compensation.

2. Briefly stated, the facts giving rise to these proceedings are as follows: On 12.11.1985, while the bus TML.8364 belonging to the Corporation and plying on route No.122 between Madras and Tiruvannamalai was proceeding between Kona-kampattu and Vallam villages over Tondiyar bridge, the bus was washed away from the bridge by floods and in that, several persons, who were passengers in the bus, lost their lives. The accident, according to the claimants, took place on account of the rashness and negligence of the driver of the bus TML.8364 belonging to the Corporation. In respect of the death of the passengers who travelled by that bus and also the injuries sustained by some, the claimants prayed for the award of compensation in different amounts.

3. These claims for compensation were resisted by the Corporation, while accepting the accident, on the ground that the accident took place on the Deepavali day, as the passengers asked the driver to drive over the bridge overflowing with water and though the bus was stopped on the bridge, it could not be moved further nor could it be moved backwards because of a lorry TMW.9509 behind and another bus and the engine of the bus had also stopped and at that time, the bridge gave way and the bus TML.8364 as well as the lorry TMW.9509 were swept away and the accident thus took place on account of an act of God and unexpected forces which could not be reasonably anticipated by human agency. Referring to the ex-gratia payment of Rs.5,000 made by the Corporation to the dependants of the deceased persons and others, the Corporation also put forward the plea that the compensation claimed was excessive and exorbitant.

4. Though all the claim petitions arose out of one accident, the tribunal proceeded to consider the claims for compensation independently after examining the same persons in different claim petitions, which could have well been avoided. Considering the oral as well as the documentary evidence so let in in the claim petitions, the tribunal found that the rash and negligent driving of the bus TML.8364 over the bridge by its driver, despite the water flowing over the bridge and below it and knowing that the bridge was likely to be washed away and by not even allowing the passengers to get down from the bus, had caused the accident. Referring to the plea that the accident was an act of God, the tribunal took the view that having regard to the weather conditions that prevailed on the day of the accident, the driver of the bus TML.8364 should not have ventured to proceed over the narrow bridge on Tondiyar river and that the Corporation was also further precluded from raising the plea of act of God in view of the finding given by the tribunal on a preliminary issue on that point in the interlocutory proceedings, which had also become final and in that view, negatived the plea of act of God. In regard to the compensation awardable, the tribunal, on a consideration of the available evidence, determined it as under:

It is the correctness of the awards so passed by the tribunal that is questioned in the appeals preferred by the Corporation, while in one appeal as well as Memoranda of Cross-Objections, the claimants have prayed for enhancement of compensation as indicated earlier.

5. Mr.R.Krishnamurthi, learned counsel for the Corporation, contended that the accident which took place on 12.11.1985 in which the bus TML.8364 belonging to the Corporation was washed off Tondiyar bridge was an act of God. Elaborating this, learned counsel submitted that the evidence of Annadurai, examined as R.W.2 in M.C.O.P. No.16 of 1986, the conductor of another bus TML.8363, showed that the bridge was safe till about 4.15 p.m. on the day of the accident and the fact that other vehicles had followed the bus TML.8364 established that the bridge was safe and there was therefore, no rashness, or negligence on the part of the driver of the bus TML.8364.

The bridge over Tondiyar river breached on account of heavy and unprecedented floods and that, according to learned counsel, was an act of God. Reference was also made by learned counsel to the decisions reported in Province of Madras v. I.S. and C.Machado, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 519 and S.Vedanthacharya v. Highways Department, 1987 A.C.J. 783 (S.C.). On the other hand, Mr.K.Ranganathan, who appeared on behalf of most of the claimants, submitted that the evidence disclosed that there had been heavy and unusual downpour resulting in the falling of the trees across the road and overflow of water on the bridge and in spite of it, the bus TML.8364 was driven over the narrow bridge and that was so done despite the warning about the bad weather made available at Tindivanam. The further submission of learned counsel was that the driver of the bus did not even allow the passengers to get down on the ground that the bus may not be swept off, if passengers remained in the bus and that certainly was not a prudent act on the part of the driver and that clearly established negligence and want of care and caution on his part and the accident was thus not the outcome of any act of God. Reference in this connection was made by learned counsel to the decision reported in M/s. Chaurasiya and Company v. Smt. Pramila Rao, 1974 A.C.J. 481.

6. Before proceeding to consider the question whether the accident involving the bus TML.8364 belonging to the Corporation in which several passengers lost their lives was due to an act of God or not, it would be necessary to make a reference to the evidence regarding the prevalent weather conditions on the date of the accident as well as the manner in which the accident took place. Gunasekaran, examined as P.W.1 in M.C.O.P. Nos.16 and 17 of 1986, is one of the passengers in the bus TML.8364 which met with the accident and who survived. As P.W.1 in M.C.O.P.No.17 of 1986, he stated that on Deepavali New Moon Day, he boarded the bus TML.8364 at Tindivanam and there was tom tom regarding the worsening weather condition and that as he was informed by the conductor and the driver of the bus that the bus will proceed, he and his wife got into the bus and the bus started at 5 p.m. when it was raining heavily and there was gale as well. He also stated that the passengers requested that the bus need not proceed, but the conductor and driver assured them that they need not be anxious. P.W.1 referred to the heavy rain, gale and also the water overflow on the road at the time when the bus was nearing Konakkampattu and stated that the driver was asked to stop the bus, but he drove ahead without paying any heed to the requests so made. The bus according to P.W.1, had crossed three-fourths of the bridge and was stopped, as there was a depression ahead, and the bus was parked in the middle of the bridge and on account of the raising water, the bus was washed away and he was also carried by the floods for about a mile and that after clinging on to a tree, he survived. In his cross-examination, P.W.1 stated that several lakes had breached and there was sudden and heavy floods in the river and that the parapet walls of the bridge were washed away and the bridge also collapsed when the bus was swept away. P.W.1 admitted, however, that he did not file any document to show the warning issued by the Municipality at Tindivanam regarding the inclement weather. P.W.1 also added that the bus was washed away after about 15 minutes after it had stopped in the bridge. A suggestion that owing to natural causes and an act of God, the accident took place, was denied by him. Yet another survivor, Renu, has been examined as P.W.1 in M.C.O.P.No.64 of 1986. According to him, he and his wife, his brother and his wife and children and others boarded the bus at Tambaram at about 10 a.m. and by the time they reached Tindivanam, it was about 6 p.m. Resuming the onward journey from Tindivanam to Tiruvannamalai, the bus, according to this witness, stopped at the middle of Tondiyar bridge and water was overflowing and when they got down, the water was flowing upto their knees. He had also referred to a lorry and another Corporation bus behind the bus TML.8364. The further evidence of P.W.1 is to the effect that they requested the driver of the Corporation bus behind TML.8364 to move backwards, but he refused on the ground that the bus TML.8364 can proceed forward and the bus behind TML.8364 could not, therefore, be moved. The driver of the bus TML.8364, according to this witness, asked the passengers to remain in the bus stating that the bus will not be washed away, if the passengers remained therein and despite the requests of the passengers to get down, the driver did not allow them to do so and they remained in the bus for nearly half an hour, by which time, the flow of water increased and the bus was washed away. P.W.1 had clearly stated that the cause of the accident was only the driver of the bus TML.8364. In his cross-examination, P.W.1 referred to the bus remaining on the bridge for nearly half an hour and stated that they could have, if they had been allowed to get down, waded through the knee deep water and reached a safe place, but the driver prevented them from getting down. One Ponuswamy, examined as P.W.2 in M.C.O.P.No.58 of 1986, in his evidence stated that he and some other persons were proceeding in the bus TML.8364 from Tambaram to Tiruvannamalai and the bus left Tambaram at 10 a.m. and there was heavy rain and gale and that led to the bus reaching Tindivanam at about 6 p.m. Referring to the onward journey of the bus from Tindivanam to Tiruvannamalai P.W.2 stated that the bus stopped on Tondiyar bridge where water upto knee was overflowing and the driver was asked to move the bus for which the driver stated that the vehicle behind must be moved and that the driver of that bus agreed to move the bus, if the other driver gave it in writing and that again, the driver of the bus TML.8364 was asked to move the bus, but he did not allow anybody to get down and stated that they would wait for the floods to recede and that led to the passengers remaining within the bus, as, according to the driver, without the passengers, the bus would be swept away, P.W.2 had also stated how the bus was washed away and he fell into the water and swam for a distance of nearly two furlongs and how he survived by catching hold of a casuarina tree and reached the shore at 6 a.m. the next day. The accident, according to P.W.2, took place only on account of the negligence of the driver of the bus TML.8364 as well as the driver of the bus behind. In his cross-examination, P.W.2 stated that he gave the first information report and he denied the suggestion that he did not travel in the bus. Referring to the stopping of the bus on the Tondiyar bridge, he stated that it was stopped for nearly two hours and the driver did not allow the passengers to get down and for nearly two hours, they had remained so between 7.30 p.m. and 9.30 p.m. P.W.2 also stated that the bus was washed away while he was within it and that he escaped and subsequently survived, but that others were washed away by the floods. R.W.1 in M.C.O.P.No.16 of 1986 was the Tahsildar at Gingee on the day of the accident and he had inspected the scene of the accident and had also prepared a report. In his cross-examination, he stated that on 7.11.1985, flood warning had been received and he had informed the village officers about the precautions to be taken and also to inform the villagers by tom tom. R.W.1, however, stated that he did not inform the Transport Department, as it was not necessary to do so. R.W.2 in M.C.O.P.No.16 of 1986 is the conductor of the bus TML.8363, which was proceeding in route No.122 from Tiruvannamalai to Madras. His evidence shows that the bus left Tiruvannamalai at 2.15 p.m. to proceed to Madras, but on reaching Tindivanam, it was realised that the bus could not proceed further and the bus was, therefore, driven back to Tiruvannamalai and after removing a fallen tamarind tree near Salai village, the bus reached Tondiyar bridge, when the bus TML.8364 was standing on the bridge and behind that a lorry the bus TML.8364 and his bus stood and there were also several other vehicles behind.

R.W.2 stated that it was about 8 p.m. and water was flowing in front of the bus TML.8364 and below the bridge as well and the bus could not proceed towards west. R.W.2 also stated that he had enquired Sadanandam, the driver of the bus TML.8364 as to why the bus stopped and that he replied that as water was overflowing the bridge, the bus could not proceed and the bus could be moved only if the floods receded. Referring to the attempts to reverse the bus TML.8363 and its wheel being caught in a depression. R.W.2 stated that the water flow increased and the engine of his bus also stopped and as the bridge was narrow, the bus and the lorry ahead could not come back and some of the passengers in TML.8364 were in the bus, though some others walked. The driver of the bus TML.8364, according to R.W.2, did not ask the passengers not to get down, but that he on his part took the passengers in his bus to a safe place and that was at about 10.30 p.m. R.W.2 referred to the increasing floods thereafter and stated that the distance between the place where he stood and the bus TML.8364 and the lorry standing behind was about one furlong. A suggestion that the driver of the bus TML.8364 was responsible for the accident, was denied by him. In his cross-examination, R.W.2 stated that the day on which the accident took place was a New Moon Day and the bus TML.8364 was on the bridge. He had also stated that he moved his bus in the reverse covering a distance of nearly one furlong and that he observed what was going on. He also accepted that the bridge near Konakkampattu was very narrow. Referring to his crossing the bridge at about 3.20 p.m. R.W.1 stated that at that time, water did not overflow the bridge. R.W.2 added that it was about 4.15 p.m. when he returned from Tindivanam to Tiruvannamalai after securing advice from the bus-stand, though there was nothing in writing to show the same. R.W.2 frankly admitted that there was no document produced by him to show that he was working as conductor in the bus on the day of the accident, but that he got information to depose. Referring to the rescue of the passengers in his bus, R.W.2 stated that after 8.30 p.m. the bus was moved by about a furlong and on the right side of the river water upto a height of 10 to 12 feet was flowing and that by struggling for nearly two hours, the bus was taken to a safe place and it was raining even then. R.W.2 also stated that he did not know that the bus TML.8364 was washed away in the floods. R.W.2 also stated that he did not know about the storm warning given.

7. From the evidence referred to above, it is clearly established that the bus TML.8364 had taken an unusually long time to reach Tindivanam from Madras or even Tambaram and that was only on account of unfavourable weather conditions. The rain was heavy and trees had fallen across the road, as seen from the evidence and that should have put the driver of the bus TML.8364 on notice of adverse weather conditions. The evidence referred to also discloses that warning at Tindivanam bus-stand should have been made available to the drivers of the buses in order to enable them either to proceed or to stop the buses in order to ensure safety to the travelling public. In this case, the driver of the bus TML.8364 was fully aware of the weather conditions even as he drove upto Tindivanam and as a prudent, careful and cautious driver, he should have watched out before venturing on to a narrow Tondiyar bridge. Indeed, the driver should not have gone over the narrow bridge at all after having observed that the weather conditions were not favourable and that water was overflowing the bridge. The evidence also discloses that the water was flowing below and over the bridge and was knee deep over the bridge and that certainly would not have given any indication to the driver of the bus TML.8364 that he can safely cross the bridge. The evidence also discloses that the driver of the bus TML.8364 had prevailed upon the passengers not to get down from the bus. Thus, the driver of the bus TML.8364, ignoring the warning administered about heavy rain and gale, had made bold to take the bus across the narrow bridge over which water was flowing. In doing so, the driver ignored the duty cast on him for the care and safety of the passengers. It is common knowledge that it is dangerous to cross a bridge or a cause-way which is submerged. In this case, the evidence clearly establishes that water was flowing over the bridge by about 2 feet or so and the water was also rising and in such a situation, to drive the bus over the bridge was an extremely dangerous and hazardous operation on the part of the driver. Even before approaching the bridge, the driver having regard to what he observed on the way, viz., heavy rain gale and fallen trees and also the overflow of water on the bridge, ought to have stopped before entering the bridge. There was thus a breach of duty which the driver of the bus TML.8364 owed to the passengers. The available evidence, viz., that of Gunasekaran (P.W.1 in M.C.O.P.No.17 of 1986) Renu (P.W.1 in M.C.O.P.No.64 of 1986 and Ponnuswamy P.W.2 in M.C.O.P.No.58 of 1986) clearly established want of care and caution on the part of the driver of the bus TML.8364 while attempting to cross the bridge. The evidence of R.W.1 in M.C.O.P.No.18 of 86 does not throw any light regarding the manner in which the accident took place. No reliance could be placed upon the evidence of R.W.1 for it is difficult to believe that he could have observed anything between 8.30 p.m. and 10.30 p.m. Obviously, R.W.2 has been examined to support the case of the Corporation that it was an act of God. When even according to R.W.2 he was able to remove the bus behind by one furlong also the passengers to a place of safety, it is difficult to believe that it was not so possible at all for the driver of the bus TML.8364 to do so and that would only establish that the evidence of the claimants, that the passengers were not allowed to get down from the bus is true. The evidence of R.M.2 contra in M.C.O.P.16 of 86 cannot therefore, be accepted. The admission of R.W.2 that he did not produce any document to show that he was on duty as the conductor in the bus is also significant. Likewise, his evidence that he received intimation to give evidence, but he did not go to the office would also show that he is an unreliable witness and his evidence cannot be accepted at all. Therefore the evidence of R.W.2 that the bridge was safe till about 4.15 p.m. cannot be accepted as true. Even assuming that the bridge was safe till 4.15 p.m. having regard to the heavy rains and gale and the falling of the trees, the driver of the bus TML.8364 could not have just taken it for granted that the bridge was safe even when that bus came to cross the bridge. That there were other vehicles which followed the bus TML.8364 is again no indication that the bridge was safe. It is common knowledge that when one vehicle proceeds ahead, other vehicles following it also follow suit and the fact that other vehicles follows the bus TML.8364 and were not involved in any accident, is not a clear pointer that the bridge was all right. It is significant that in this case the evidence of R.W.2 is to the effect that the bus in which he was working as a conductor had been reversed for about one furlong. Obviously, therefore, realising that the driver of his bus had committed a mistake in following the vehicles ahead, that bus had been reversed and, therefore, from the circumstance that other vehicles had followed the bus TML.8364 it cannot be assumed that everything was clear and safe. It had earlier been pointed out that the driver of the bus TML.8364, before entering the bridge, ought to have exercised reasonable care and caution and also should not have entered the narrow bridge after seeing the flow of water below as well as over the bridge. It is further seen from the evidence that five days prior to the accident, i.e. on 7.11.1985 itself, the weather had worsened and warning had been issued and it is difficult to believe that the Transport Department and through that the drivers and conductors did not know about the deteriorating weather conditions. That the driver proceeded to drive the bus on such a narrow bridge with overflowing of water is by itself an act of negligence and having regard to the available evidence that the bus stopped on the bridge and the passengers were not even allowed to get down from the bus, it is clear that it was only the rash act of the driver in driving the bus and his negligence in not having bestowed care and caution on the safety of the passengers that had caused the accident.

8. It now remains to refer to the decisions relied on by counsel on both sides. In Province of Madras v. I.S. and C. Machado, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 519, the Division Bench referred to what constitutes an act of God and it was found on the evidence that there was nothing overwhelming or could not have been anticipated in relation to the loss sustained and, therefore, the claim for the value of the rice bags lost was quite in order. This decision does not in any manner assist the Corporation, for, it has been found on an appreciation of the evidence relating to the manner in which the accident took place that there was lack of care and caution on the part of the driver of the bus TML.8364 and the accident could be regarded as one which had taken place as a result of the operation of the natural forces which no human foresight can provide against and of which prudence is not bound to recognise the possibility. Indeed, it can be said in this case that but for the act of the driver of the bus TML.8364 in driving across the submerged bridge, there would have been no accident whatever from act of God. Likewise, the decision in S. Vedanthacharya v. Highways Department, 1987 A.C.J. 783 (S.C.), also does not assist the Corporation. In that case, a transport vehicle plunged into a stream as the culvert on which it was passing collapsed and in the suit filed by the parents of the deceased claiming Rs.25,000 by way of damages against the owner of the vehicle and the insurance company as well as the Highways Department, the owner of the vehicle and the insurance company were absolved of their liability, but the Highways Department alone was held liable as the collapse of the culvert raised a presumption of negligence. On appeal by the Government on behalf of the Highways Department, the High Court took the view that the culvert collapsed because of the heavy down-pour of rain and also the breach of a small tank and that justified the deletion of the liability on the Highways Department. On further appeal to the Supreme Court, the Court pointed out that merely because the cause of the accident was heavy rain and floods, the Highways Department could not be absolved of its liability, unless something further is indicated that necessary preventive measures had been taken in anticipation of such rain and floods and in its absence, the High Court was not justified in dismissing the suit. This decision also, in my view, does not assist the Corporation in any manner, as, it has earlier been found that the driver of the bus TML.8364 had not observed care and caution for the safety of the passengers, but had rashly driven the bus across the submerged bridge and that eventually led to the bus being washed off and the passengers losing their lives. It will be useful in this connection to refer to the decision relied on by learned counsel for the claimants in M/s. Chaurasiya and Company v. Smt. Pramila Rao, 1974 A.C.J. 481. At page 484, it has been observed as follows:

"The question then is whether the driver was negligent and whether his negligence caused the death of the passengers. It cannot be doubted that the driver owed a duty of care for the safety of the passengers. It is a matter of common experience that when a causeway or a bridge gets submerged, it is very risky to cross it on a motor vehicle. In the instant case the water over the cause-way was about two feet; even the stones embedded on the sides were completely submerged and were not visible. Further, the water was rising. In such a situation, it was extremely dangerous for the safety of the passengers to drive the bus over the cause-way. The driver should have waited till the water receded and he should not have attempted to cross the cause-way. The driver was clearly in breach of his duty which he owed to the passengers and was, therefore, negligent.....”

The aforesaid observations are clearly applicable to these cases as well in view of the finding on the question of negligence rendered earlier on a consideration of the evidence, negating the claim of the Corporation that the accident arose out of an act of God. It would also be appropriate to point out that now the defence based on act of God has undergone a total change in approach as a result of considerations of foreseeability of harm.

9. There is also yet another aspect which would preclude the Corporation from putting forward the plea of act of God. It is not in dispute that even prior to the disposal of the claim petitions by the tribunal, at the instance of the Corporation, the issue whether the accident was an act of God or was due to the rash and negligent driving of the bus TML.8364 by its driver was tried as a preliminary issue and a finding adverse to the Corporation had been rendered. That finding had been allowed by the Corporation to become final and not having been challenged in a manner known to law, the Corporation cannot again re-agitate that question in the course of the present proceedings. Viewed, therefore, from any point of view, the tribunal was quite justified in its conclusion that the rash and negligent driving of the bus TML.8364 by its driver caused the accident on 12.11.1985, in which a number of people lost their lives and some had also sustained injuries. The tribunal was, therefore, right in its conclusion in this regard.

10. On the question of compensation, Mr.R. Krishnamurthi very fairly stated that it is difficult to question the amount of compensation awarded to the claimants, as, in most of the cases, the compensation awarded by the tribunal was less than the compensation awardable on the principle of no fault. However, the claimants in C.M.A.No.410 of 90 and the cross objection Nos.119 of 1992, 138 of 1991, 59 of 1992 and 148 of 1991 in C.M.A.Nos.332, 344, 597 and 798 of 1990 respectively have prayed for enhanced compensation.

11. In C.M.A.No.410 of 1990 arising out of the award in M.C.O.P.No.17 of 1986, the claimants have prayed for the award of additional compensation in a sum of Rs.35,000 restricting the total amount of compensation to Rs.50,000 against Rs.1,00,000 claimed in the claim petition. The deceased in that case was one Sornammal, wife of the first appellant and mother of appellants 2 to 6. Though it was claimed that the deceased was aged about 38 years at the time of her death and she was also contributing Rs.1,000 per mensem, the appellants did not place any reliable or acceptable evidence in support of the same. The tribunal proceeded to determine the compensation awardable in a sum of Rs.20,000 but deducted Rs.5,000 representing the ex-gratia payment made by the Government and ultimately awarded to the appellants in C.M.A.No.410 of 90 compensation in a sum of Rs.15,000 together with interest at 12 per cent per annum from 10.1.86. Mr.A.K. Kumaraswami, learned counsel for the appellants in C.M.A.No.410 of 1990 first contended that the deduction by the tribunal of a sum of Rs.5,000 from the compensation awardable in a sum of Rs.20,000 was not justified at all. Reliance was also placed upon the decisions reported in A.P.Dorairaj v. State of Madras by Commissioner of Police, 1974 A.C.J. 174 and K.Vasantha and 3 others v. Venugopal Achari and 2 others, 1987 T.L.N.J. 196.

12. In so far as the deduction of Rs.5,000 from out of the amount of compensation awardable to the claimants is concerned, the tribunal fell into an error. The payment made to the appellants on the death of Sornammal was ex-gratia and not referable to any claim as such under the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act. It is in this context that the decisions relied on by learned counsel are relevant. In A.P.Dorairaj v. State of Madras by Commissioner of Police, 1974 A.C.J. 174 at 180, it has been clearly laid down that the law is quite clear that gratuitous payment should not be taken into consideration in assessing the compensation awardable. Again in K.Vasantha and three others v. Venugopal Achari and two others, 1987 T.L.N.J. 196, it was reiterated that amounts paid towards family benefit could not be deducted and in so holding, reference has been made to a decision of an earlier Division Bench to the effect that an ex-gratia payment made by the Government should not be taken into account in calculating the compensation payable, which is on different principles. In view of the principles referred to above, the tribunal was in error in deducting a sum of Rs.5,000 from out of the compensation amount of Rs.20,000 determined by it. It is further seen that the first appellant had lost, by reason of the death of Sornammal, the love and affection of his wife as well as the consortium and the children have lost for ever the kindness, love and affection of the mother, besides the benefit of her service till they attain a footing in life. Taking into account these aspects, it would be just, fair and reasonable to award to the appellants in C.M.A.No.410 of 1990 a total compensation in a sum of Rs.30,000 in respect of the death of Sornammal, together with interest at 12% per annum from 10.1.1986 till the date of payment, credit being given to payments, if any made meanwhile. Out of the amount of Rs.30,000 each of the six appellants would be entitled to Rs.5,000 together with interest as stated earlier and the share of minor appellants 4 to 6 will remain invested as a Fixed Deposit in a nationalised or scheduled bank on cumulative basis till such time as each of the minors attains majority. The award in M.C.O.P.No.17 of 86 will, therefore, stand modified as indicated earlier.

13. In cross objection No.119 of 1992 in C.M.A.332 of 1990, the claimant has prayed that an additional compensation in a sum of Rs.5,000 should be awarded to him. The cross objector had lost his son aged about one year in the accident that took place on 12.11.1985 and had claimed Rs.15,000 by way of compensation. The tribunal had, however, awarded compensation in a sum of Rs.10,000 together with interest at 12% per annum from 5.2.1986. The accident having been taken place on 12.11.1985, long after 1.10.1982, when the compensation for death, even on the principle of no fault was Rs.15,000 the tribunal was not justified in not awarding to the cross-objector, compensation as claimed by him in a sum of Rs.15,000. On the materials available, there is no justification whatever for reducing the amount of compensation. The award of the tribunal in M.C.O.P.No.55 of 1986 will stand modified in that the claimant therein will be entitled to recover compensation in a sum of Rs.15,000 together with interest thereon at 12% per annum from 5.2.1986 till the date of payment, credit being given to payments, if any, made meanwhile.

14. In regard to Cross Objection No.138 of 1991 in C.M.A.No.344 of 1990, it is seen that the mother of the cross objector had lost her life in the accident, in respect of which compensation in a sum of Rs.50,000 was prayed for. The tribunal however, had awarded compensation in a sum of Rs.15,000 together with interest at 12% per annum from 23.4.1986. The Cross Objector has prayed that additional compensation in a sum of Rs.35,000 should be awarded to her. According to the case of the cross-objector, at the time of her death her mother was aged about 44 years and was earning daily on an average Rs.20 to Rs.40 by vending vegetables. Though there is no acceptable evidence to show the age of the deceased or her earning even by doing work, the deceased would have been in a position to earn at least Rs.10 per day or Rs.300 per mensem. The cross-objector is the only daughter of the deceased as per evidence. Though she might have been married and in that sense not wholly dependant upon the earnings of her mother, it is not uncommon for mothers to lavish their love and affection on their only child, as in this case, and whatever earnings the deceased could have saved, would, in the normal course have been made available to the cross-objector, had the mother been alive. Considering the age of the claimant, the deceased should have been about 50 years at the time of her death and at best, she could have lived for 15 more years taking the average longevity as 65 and would have contributed not less than Rs.27,000 after meeting her own expenses out of her earnings and that had been lost to the cross-objector as a result of the sudden demise of her mother. Making a provision for other uncertainties in life and also taking into account the lumpsum payment to the cross-objector, it would, in my view, be just, fair and reasonable to award to her compensation in a sum of Rs.25,000 together with interest at 12% per annum from 28.4.1986 till the date of payment, credit being given to payments, if any, made meanwhile. The award of the tribunal in M.C.O.P.No.159 of 1986 will stand modified as indicated earlier.

15. In regard to Cross Objection No.59 of 1992 in C.M.A.No.597 of 1990 it is seen that the cross-objector had lost her mother in the accident that took place on 12.11.1985 and in respect of that, award of compensation in a sum of Rs.15,000 had been prayed for. The tribunal had awarded compensation in a sum of Rs.10,000 together with interest thereon at 12% per annum from 5.2.1986. The claimant, in this cross-objection has prayed for the award of additional compensation in a sum of Rs.5,000. It is seen that having regard to the date of the accident, even on the application of the principle of no liability, the claimant would be entitled to payment of compensation in a sum of Rs.15,000. It is true that there is no evidence to show that deceased Anjalai was supporting the cross-objector's family. However, on the application of the principle of no fault, the cross-objector should have been awarded compensation in a sum of Rs.15,000 together with interest thereon at 12% per annum from 5.2.1986 till the date of payment, credit being given to payments, if any, made meanwhile. The amount awarded, as directed by the tribunal, will be invested in a nationalised or scheduled bank. The award of the tribunal in M.C.O.P. No.54 of 1986 will stand modified as indicated earlier.

16. Regarding Cross Objection No.148 of 1991 in C.M.A.No.798 of 1990, it is seen that the cross-objector had prayed for the award of compensation in a sum of Rs.50,000, but the tribunal had awarded Rs.15,000. The disallowed portion of compensation in a sum of Rs.35,000 forms the subject-matter of the cross-objection. The son of the cross-objector, his daughter-in-law and two grand-children were washed away in the floods as a result of the accident to the bus and the entire family of the cross-objector has thus been wiped out. In that context, the cross-objector would naturally have to depend on others for the rest of his lifetime for comfort and support and the compensation awardable should be such as to secure to him for the rest of his lifetime the minimum comforts and in that view, the compensation awarded by the tribunal cannot be said to be adequate. Further, the age of the cross-objector has also to be taken into account and that was stated to be 65 and considering the loss of the entire family, the affection of the son, daughter-in-law as well as that of the grand-children in old age and the need to depend on others for his daily needs, as some solace and comfort to the claimant, it would be, in my view, fair, just and reasonable to award to the cross-objector compensation in a sum of Rs.25,000 together with interest at 12% per annum from 16.6.1986 till the date of payment, credit being given to payments, if any, made meanwhile the award of the tribunal in M.C.O.P.No.304 of 1986 will stand modified as indicated earlier.

17. In the result, C.M.A.Nos.199, 243, 244, 246, 305, 307, 332, 344, 597, 599, 796, 797 and 798 of 1990 and C.R.P.Nos.847, 849 and 1232 of 1990 will all stand dismissed, while C.M.A.No.410 of 1990 and Cross objection Nos.138 and 148 of 1991 in C.M.A.Nos.344 and 798 of 1990 will stand allowed.

in part and the awards of the tribunal in M.C.O.P.Nos.17, 159 and 304 of 1986 will stand modified as indicated earlier. Cross Objection Nos.119 and 59 of 1992 in C.M.A.Nos.332 and 597 of 1990 will stand allowed and the awards of the tribunal in M.C.O.P.Nos.55 and 54 of 1986 will stand modified as indicated earlier. There will be, however, no order as to costs either in the appeal revisions or in the memoranda of cross-objections.

B.S --- Petitions and Appeals ordered.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present: Abdul Hadi, J.

C.R.P.No.2504 of 1992 17th December, 1992

A.Mani ...Petitioner
v.

A.Chandranath ...Respondent.

(A) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.21, Rule 37(1), (2) - Petition for arrest and detention - Judgment-debtor appearing before executing court and filing counter - Paying several amounts towards decree - Not appearing before court on one day and not paying amount directed to be paid by him on that day - Decree-holder filing affidavit stating that judgment-debtor had means to pay - Court satisfied with the affidavit - Ordering arrest of the judgment-debtor - Order whether legal.

(B) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), Sec. 51, proviso and O.21, Rules 37(1), (2), 40(3) and 40(4) - Arrest of judgment-debtor for non-payment of decree amount when can be ordered - Court should give a finding that reason for such order exists - Nature of enquiry to be held.

Pursuant to a notice under O.21, Rule 37, Criminal Procedure Code, the judgment-debtor appeared before the executing court and filed his counter to the execution petition for his arrest and detention in prison. He was paying several amounts towards the decree amount on different dates on which the execution petition was posted. But on 2.12.1991, he did not appear before court and he did not pay a sum of Rs.6,000 which he was directed to pay in the preceding hearing date. Therefore, he was set ex parte and the execution court ordered his arrest by 31.12.1991. Observing that from the petitioner's affidavit, it had been proved that the judgment-debtor had the means to pay the amount. This order was challenged contending that the court ought to have proceeded to hear the decree-holder and take such evidence as might be produced by him and then given the petitioner an opportunity of showing cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison.

In the present case, even though originally the petitioner-judgment-debtor appeared before court and filed counter, he did not appear on 2.12.1991 and the court below passed the order of arrest on the ground that the decree-holder's affidavit proved that the judgment-debtor had means to pay the decree amount. Therefore, it cannot be said that the impugned order was without jurisdiction as it could fall under O.21, Rule 37(2), Civil Procedure Code.

It must be noted that O.21, Rule 37(1) will apply as per the very words used therein, only where the application is for the execution of a money decree by arrest and detention of a judgment-debtor who is liable to be arrested in pursuance of the application. So notice under O.21, Rule 37(1), Civil Procedure Code cannot be issued to the judgment-debtor if he is not 'liable to be arrested'. While dealing with execution of money decrees by arrest and detention four situations are expressly and specifically mentioned in the Civil Procedure Code, where the execution court could order arrest and, even in those situations, it has to be seen whether the judgment-debtor is actually, 'liable to be arrested'. The first such situation is indicated in the proviso to O.21, Rule 37(1), Civil Procedure Code that is where the court is satisfied by affidavit or otherwise that with the object or effect of delaying the execution of the decree, the judgment-debtor is likely to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court. In such a case, without issuing the notice under O.21, Rule 37(1), Civil Procedure Code, straightaway the court can order arrest. The second situation is provided in O.21, Rule 37(2) as indicated above, that is, where appearance of the judgment-debtor is not made in obedience to the notice of the court under

O.21, Rule 37(1), Civil Procedure Code and the decree-holder requires issuance of a warrant for the arrest. The third situation is under O.21, Rule 40(3), Civil Procedure Code, that is, after the conclusion of the enquiry under O.21, Rule 40(1), Civil Procedure Code for detention in prison and subject to Sec.51, Civil Procedure Code an order for detention is passed. In such an event, the court can also pass an order of arrest if the judgment-debtor is not already under arrest. The fourth situation is mentioned in O.21, Rule 40(1), Civil Procedure Code which says that a judgment-debtor released under Rule 40 may be re-arrested. Even in the abovesaid four cases, before arrest order could be passed, the court should find that any one of the reasons mentioned in the proviso to Sec.51, Civil Procedure Code exists, in the light of the construction placed by the Supreme Court in Jolly George Varghese v. Bank of Cochin, (1980)2 S.C.C. 360, on Sec.51, Civil Procedure Code. No doubt in such a case, the said proof need not necessarily be in an enquiry as contemplated under O.21, Rule 40, Civil Procedure Code that is, by taking evidence as may be produced by the decree-holder etc. That is so because O.21, Rule 37(2), does not provide for any particular mode of enquiry. In other words, even by affidavit evidence, the execution court could come to the conclusion that the necessary proof is there for ordering arrest of the judgment-debtor.

Petition under Sec. 115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Krishnagiri, dated 2.12.1991 and made in R.E.P.No.172 of 1990 in O.S.No.44 of 1986.

S.M. Abdul Wahab, for Petitioner.

V. Raghoevachari, for Respondent.

The Court made the following

ORDER: This civil revision petition by the judgment-debtor-respondent in R.E.P.No.172 of 1990 on the file of the Subordinate Judge's Court, Krishnagiri, is against the order dated 2.12.1991 in the said petition for his arrest.

2. Admittedly, pursuant to notice under O.21, Rule 37, C.P.C. the judgment-debtor appeared before the executing court and filed his counter to the said execution petition for his arrest and detention in prison. No doubt the petitioner was paying several amounts towards the decree amount on different dates, on which the execution petition was posted. But, on the abovesaid date 2.12.1991, he did not appear before court and he did not also pay a sum of Rs.6,000 which he was directed to pay in the preceding hearing date. Therefore, he was set ex parte by the impugned order and the execution court below, observing ordered arrest by 31.12.1991.

3. The learned counsel for the petitioner submits that this order is against the procedure prescribed under O.21, Rule 40, C.P.C. According to the said provision, when the judgment-debtor appears before court, pursuant to notice under O.21, Rule 37, C.P.C., “the court shall proceed to hear the decree-holder and take all such evidence as may be produced by him in support of his application for execution and shall then give the judgment-debtor an opportunity of showing cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison.” The contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner is that the execution court has erred in not conforming to this provision by proceeding to hear the decree-holder and take such evidence as may be produced by him and then give the petitioner an opportunity of showing cause why he should not be committed to civil prison, and in ordering straightaway arrest simply stating that by way of affidavit of the decree-holder, the means of the judgment-debtor have been proved. As against this contention, the learned counsel for the respondent-decree-holder submits that the impugned order could be justified pursuant to what is contained in O.21, Rule 40(2), C.P.C. or under O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C.

4. But, O.21, Rule 40(2), C.P.C., inter alia only says pending conclusion of enquiry under sub-rule (1), the court may, in its discretion, order the judgment-debtor to be detained in the custody of an officer of court. This sub-rule (2) of Rule 40 does not at all provide for order of arrest. However, it has to be seen whether in the light of what is laid down in P.G.R. Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973) 2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.), the impugned order could be sustained under O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C. O.21, Rule 37(1) and (2) run as follows:

“37. Discretionary power to permit judgment-debtor to show cause against detention in prison:

(1) Notwithstanding anything in these rules, where an application is for the execution of a decree for the payment of money by the arrest and detention in the civil prison of a judgment-debtor who is liable to be arrested in pursuance of the application, the court shall, instead of issuing a warrant for his arrest, issue a notice calling upon him to appear before the court on a day to be specified in the notice and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison:

Provided that such notice shall not be necessary if the court is satisfied, by affidavit, or otherwise that, with the object or effect of delaying the execution of the decree, the judgment-debtor is likely to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court.

(2) Where appearance is not made in obedience to the notice, the court shall, if the decree-holder so requires, issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor".

The abovesaid Division Bench case is also similar to the present one. There too, the executing court has notice under O.21, Rule 37(1), C.P.C. to the judgment-debtor and he appeared before the court and filed a counter. However, the judgment-debtor offered to pay the decree amount and the executing court gave him time for payment. On the adjourned date, no payment was made and that is why the executing court passed the order of arrest, which was challenged before the Division Bench. In that context, the Division Bench upholds the order of arrest, inter alia observing as follows:

"This order can only be under O.21, Rule 37(2). The judgment-debtor had no doubt appeared in court in obedience to the notice sent under Rule 37(1), but on the adjourned date he defaulted. As already noticed though he had originally offered to pay the decree amount, he had failed to pay the same and there is nothing to show that the judgment-debtor was bodily present in the court on the date on which the order now in appeal was passed. Therefore, even though the judgment-debtor had originally appeared in court in obedience to the notice issued under Rule 37(1) on the date on which the order of arrest was passed, it must be deemed that the judgment-debtor had disobeyed the notice."

Therefore, what the Division Bench has held is that even though the non-appearance of the judgment-debtor is on an adjourned date of hearing after his original appearance pursuant to the notice under O.21, Rule 37(1), C.P.C., it must be deemed that the judgment-debtor had disobeyed the said original notice, by his such non-appearance in a subsequent hearing. In the present case also even though originally the petitioner-judgment-debtor appeared before court and filed counter, he did not appear on the abovesaid date 2.12.1991 and the court below passed the abovesaid Order of arrest on the ground that the decree-holder's affidavit proved that the judgment-debtor had means to pay the decree-amount. Therefore, it cannot be said that the impugned order was without jurisdiction, as it could fall under O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C. Apart from the abovesaid Division Bench decision in Madhusudan v. Trimbak, A.I.R. 1961 Bom. 23 also it was held so. The relevant observation therein is as follows:

"It may be that the petitioner was present on the date originally mentioned in the notice and actually filed his written statement on that day but the matter was not taken up by the court on that day but on a subsequent day. Therefore, it was obligatory upon the petitioner to remain present on that date. By his failure to do so he brought upon himself the consequences provided by sub-rule (2) of Rule 37 of O.21."

In a similar situation in K.N.Gangappa v. A.M.Subramanya Mudaliar 100 L.W. 306, also order of arrest was upheld by this court, though the said decision does not particularly refer to O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C. The learned counsel for the petitioner could not cite any decision contra on this point. At any rate, in view of the fact that the above referred to P.G.R.Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973) 2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.), is a Division Bench judgment, I am bound by it in so far as the aforesaid view held by it.

5. Thus, even though the executing court has got jurisdiction to pass an order of arrest in the above situation, the further question to be decided is whether before passing such an order of arrest, the court should give reasons therefor and in particular, whether the court should give necessarily a finding on any one of the reasons mentioned in the proviso to Sec.51, C.P.C. One of the said reasons is that the judgment-debtor has or has had since the date of the decree, the means to pay the amount of decree or some substantial part thereof and refuses or neglects or has refused or neglected to pay the same. In the present case, no doubt the impugned order, as already stated, observes that from the affidavit of the decree-holder it is proved that the judgment debtor had the abovesaid means. But, the learned counsel for the petitioner submits that the executing court cannot merely go by what is contained in the abovesaid affidavit, but it should hold enquiry as enjoined in O.21, Rule 40(1), C.P.C. and come to the necessary conclusion and thereafter may pass an order of detention in prison, as well as order of arrest, as prescribed under O.21, Rule 40(3), C.P.C. The said learned counsel for the petitioner further points out that as on 2.12.1991 admittedly no such enquiry was held and that if at all such enquiry was sought to be made only subsequently on 6.3.1992. Therefore, according to the said counsel, the impugned order is illegal. O.21, Rule 40(1) and (3) no doubt runs as follows:

“40 Proceedings on appearance of judgment-debtor in obedience to Notice or After Arrest.

(1) When a judgment-debtor appears before the court in obedience to a notice issued under Rule 37, or is brought before the court after being arrested in execution of a decree for the payment of money the court shall proceed to hear the decree-holder and take all such evidence as may be produced by him in support of his application for execution, and shall then give the judgment-debtor an opportunity of showing cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison.

(3) Upon the conclusion of the inquiry under sub-rule (1) the court may, subject to the provisions of Sec.51 and to the other provisions of this Code, make an order for the detention of the judgment-debtor in the civil prison and shall in that event cause him to be arrested if he is not already under arrest”.

However, the learned counsel for the respondent argues that the proviso to Sec.51 will apply only to order for detention in civil prison and not for order for arrest and that therefore, in the case of order for arrest, the court need not give any reason and in particular, the court need not find that the judgment-debtor refused or neglected to pay the decree-amount despite having means. In this connection, she cited another ruling in the above referred to P.G.R. Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973) 2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.), itself. In the said Division Bench decision, it has also been held thus:

“The provisions of the Code make a distinction between an order of arrest and an order of detention. There is nothing in Sec.51 or in any other provisions of the Code that even before ordering arrest of the judgment debtor, the executing court should give him an opportunity to show cause against such an order and also record its reasons in support of its order. Such procedure is contemplated as per the proviso to Sec.51, only before ordering the detention of the judgment-debtor in civil prison..... Whether the executing court issues a warrant of arrest without notice or whether it issues such a warrant under sub-rule (2) of Rule 37, the Code does not contemplate the court recording any reason in support of such an order of arrest.”

6. But, in view of a subsequent Supreme Court decision, viz., Jolly George Varghese v. Bank of Cochin, (1980) 2 S.C.C. 360, with due respect to the said Bench, I have to hold that the said Division decision is no longer good law, in so far as it decides that the judgment-debtor's means to pay the decree debt need not be gone into before ordering arrest and that for that matter no reason need be given at all before ordering arrest. In the said Supreme Court case in execution of a money decree, a warrant for arrest was made by the execution court on the ground that on an earlier occasion also, a similar warrant had been issued. The High Court in a short order, had summarily dismissed the revision filed by the judgment-debtors against the order of arrest. In that context the question before the Supreme Court was, whether the personal freedom of the judgment-debtors could be held in ransom until the repayment of the debt and if Sec.51 read with O.21, Rule 37, C.P.C. did warrant such a step, whether the provision of law was constitutional and in conformity with the inherent dignity of human person in the light of Art.11 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. While dealing with this question, the Supreme Court set aside the judgment of the High Court and directed the executing court to decide de novo the means of the judgment-debtors to discharge the decree in the light of its interpretation placed on the abovesaid relevant provisions. In this context, the Supreme Court approved a Kerala decision in Xavier v. Canara Bank Ltd., 1969 K.L.T. 927 and the following observation therein:

“Art.11 grants immunity from imprisonment to indigent but honest judgment-debtors.... viewed in this progressive perspective we may examine whether there is any conflict between Sec.51, C.P.C. and Art.11 of the International Covenants quoted above. As already indicated by me, this latter provision only interdicts imprisonment if that is sought solely on the ground of inability to fulfil the obligation. Sec.51 also declares that if the debtor has no means to pay he cannot be arrested and detained. If he has and still refuses or neglects to honour his obligation or if he commits acts of bad faith, he incurs the liability to imprisonment under Sec.51 of the Code, but this does not violate the mandate of Art.11. However, if he once had the means but now has not or if he has money now on which there are other pressing claims, it is violative of the spirit of Art.11 to arrest and confine him in jail so as to coerce him into payment....." [emphasis supplied]

Further, after quoting extensively from the abovesaid Kerala decision, the Supreme Court observes as follows:

"Indeed, the Central Law Commission, in Its Fifty-fourth Report, did cognise the covenant, while dealing with Sec.51, C.P.C.:

The question to be considered is, whether this mode of execution should be retained on the statute book, particularly in view of the provision in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights prohibiting imprisonment for a mere non-performance of contract.

The Law Commission in its unanimous report, quoted the key passages from the Kerala ruling Xavier v Canara Bank Ltd., 1969 K.L.T. 927, 931, 933 referred to above and endorsed its ratio. 'We agree with this view' said the Law Commission and adopting that meaning as the correct one did not recommend further change on this face of the Section. It is important to notice that, interpretationally speaking, the Law Commission accepted the denamice of the changed circumstances of the debtor:

However, if he once had the means but now has not, or if he has money now on which there are other pressing claims, it is violative of the spirit of Article 11 to arrest and confine him in jail so as to coerce him into payment.... We concur with the Law Commission in its construction of Sec.51, C.P.C. It follows that quondam affluence and current indigence without intervening dishonesty or bad faith in liquidating his liability can be consistent with Art.11 of the Covenant, because then no detention is permissible under Sec.51, C.P.C. Equally meaningful is the import of Art.21 of the Constitution in the context of imprisonment for non-payment of debts... To be poor, in this land of Daridra Narayana, is no crime and to recover debts by the procedure of putting one in prison is too flagrantly violative of Art.21

- unless there is proof of the minimal fairness of his wilful failure to pay in spite of his sufficient means and absence of more terribly pressing claims on his means such as medical bills to treat cancer or other grave illness. Unreasonableness and unfairness in such a procedure is inferable from Art.11 of the Covenant. But this is precisely the interpretation we have put on the proviso to Sec.51, C.P.C. and the lethal blow of Art.21 cannot strike down the provision, as now interpreted."

7. In this connection I have to point out that the abovesaid Xavier v. Canara Bank Ltd., 1969 K.L.T. 927, which was approved by the Supreme Court was also referred to in the above referred to P.G.R.Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973)2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.). But, it was held that the said Kerala case is a case of an order of detention and not merely an order of arrest. But, I may respectfully state that it is not difficult to gather from the above referred to observations in the Kerala decision that those observations would apply to a case of arrest also. In fact, as indicated above, the abovesaid extracted observation refers to order of arrest also along with order of detention. Anyway, in view of the above referred to principles enunciated in the above referred to Supreme Court decision., I am bound to follow the Supreme Court decision, rather than the abovesaid P.G.R.Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973)2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.), so far as this aspect is concerned, (though as already indicated, I follow another reasoning of P.G.R.Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973)2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.), in relation to the interpretation to be put to O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C. since that reasoning does not conflict with the above referred to Supreme Court decision). I may also add that the said Supreme Court decision was also relied on in Alagappan v. Rajaguru and Co., (1985)1 M.L.J.331 and this court set aside the order of arrest passed by the execution court since it was silent about the means of the judgment-debtor to pay or about himself wilfully evading to pay the decree amount.

8. In this connection I may also point out that Londa Abbayee of Pithapuram v. Badam Suryanarayana and others, (1947)1 M.L.J. 246: A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 9(1) (Horwill, J.), B.K.Puttaramiah v. H.I.E. & Sons, A.I.R. 1959 Mys. 94 (D.B.), Namachivaya Mudaliar v. P.J.A.Manickavelu, (1972)2 M.L.J. 78: A.I.R. 1972 Mad. 292 and Soundararajan v. Saiyee Finance, (1986)1 M.L.J. 214 have also expressed similar view as that of P.G.R.Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973)2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.), regarding the applicability of the proviso to Sec.51 to arrest orders. Therefore, with due respect, I state that those decisions also are no longer good law in view of the above referred to Supreme Court decision. On the other hand, I may also point out that there were also other decisions of this court and other courts holding a contrary view which would accord with the above referred to principles enunciated in the Supreme Court decision. Some of them are, T.Kunhiraman v. Madhavan Nair, (1957) 2 M.L.J. 28; A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 761, N.Ramachandra Iyer v. Thomas Mathai, A.I.R. 1966 Ker. 65 and Firm Prabhu Dyal v. Bhondu Mal, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 692. To illustrate in T.Kunhiraman v. Madhavan Nair, (1957) 2 M.L.J. 28; A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 761, Panchapakesa Ayyer J. has observed thus:

"The arrest of a citizen of the Indian Republic is a grave matter involving his fundamental rights Sec.51, C.P.C. has clearly stated, among other things, that a judgment-debtor should not be ordered to be arrested unless the court holds that he has had, since the decree, the means to pay the amount of the decree or some substantial part thereof and refuses or neglects to pay the same. This court has held that the mandatory provisions of Sec.51, C.P.C. must be complied with before arrest is ordered. The lower court does not say that in its opinion the judgment-debtor has had, since the date of the decree, the means to pay the amount of the decree or some substantial part thereof and has refused or neglected to pay the same.

The order of arrest is therefore illegal and has to be set aside. It is phenomenally brief and runs: "Respondent called. Absent. Vakil reports no instructions. Arrest by "16.7.1955." No reason whatever is given as to why arrest is ordered, and the mandatory provisions of Sec.51, C.P.C. have been ignored. Mr.Sesha Aiyar says that as the petitioner was ex parte, reasons need not be given. I am afraid I cannot agree. Under our law ex parte orders of arrest and orders of arrest after contest are exactly on the same footing, and Sec.51, C.P.C., makes no difference whatever between the two cases. Arrest after contest or ex parte involves the same painful consequences to the man arrested."

In N.Ramachandra Iyer v. Thomas Mathai, A.I.R. 1966 Ker. 65 also, the relevant observation is as follows:

detention is possible any more than there can be attachment in execution where no sale is possible. I have never heard of an application for more arrest in execution without detention; and if one were made I should think it would forthwith be thrown out for the absurdity that it is. What is to be done with the judgment-debtor after he has been arrested if he cannot be detained? Released forthwith? And then the same game again and again ad libitum?"

9. It must also be noted that O.21, Rule 37(1) will apply as per the very words used therein, only where the application is for the execution of a money decree by arrest and detention of "a judgment-debtor who is liable to be arrested in pursuance of the application." So, notice under O.21, Rule 37(1), C.P.C. cannot be issued to the judgment-debtor, if he is not "Liable to be arrested." So far as I could see, while dealing with execution of money decree by arrest and detention, four situations are expressly and specifically mentioned in the Civil Procedure Code, where the execution court could order arrest and, even in these situations it has to be seen whether the judgment-debtor is actually "liable to be arrested". The first such situation is indicated in the proviso to O.21, Rule 37(1), C.P.C. that is, where the court is satisfied by affidavit or otherwise that, with the object or effect of delaying the execution of the decree, the judgment-debtor is likely to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court. In such a case, without issuing the notice under O.21, Rule 37(1), C.P.C., straightaway the court can order arrest. The second situation is provided in O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C., as indicated above, that is where appearance of the judgment-debtor is not made in obedience to the notice of the court under O.21, Rule 37(1), C.P.C. and the decree-holder requires issuance of a warrant for the arrest. The third situation is under O.21, Rule 40(3), C.P.C. that is, after the conclusion of the enquiry under O.21, Rule 40(1), C.P.C. for detention in prison and, subject to Sec.51, C.P.C. an order for detention is passed. In such an event, the court can also pass an order of arrest, if the judgment-debtor is not already under arrest. The fourth situation is mentioned in O.21, Rule 40(4), C.P.C., which says that a judgment-debtor released under Rule 40 may be re-arrested. Even in the abovesaid four cases, before arrest order could be passed, the court should find that any one of the reasons mentioned in the proviso to Sec.51, C.P.C. exists, in the light of the construction placed by the Supreme Court in the abovesaid Jolly George Varghese v. Bank of Cochin, (1980)2 S.C.C. 360, on Sec.51, C.P.C.

10. In the light of the abovesaid discussion and conclusions I must also state that an observation in my own judgment in Gokuldass v. Appandantha Nainar, 1990 T.L.N.J. 25, requires a modification. In that case, the execution court below had ordered arrest by simply saying "no substantial payment, arrest J.D." In the said judgment, I set aside the order of arrest. No doubt, the said final decision in the said case is correct since it is clear from the above discussions that by a mere finding of no substantial payment, arrest order could not be passed. However, the following observation there, "after the respondent has appeared before the court and has been also making several payments as stated above, no order of arrest could be made", is not quite correct, since I have now held, following P.G.R.Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973)2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.), that such an order of arrest could be passed under O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C., even if on any adjourned date of hearing, the judgment-debtor is not bodily present in the court and his such absence in court should be deemed to be disobedience of the original notice issued under O.21, Rule 37(1), C.P.C.

11. Likewise, in my another decision in Ismail Bai v. M.Chinniah, (1990)1 L.W. 155, also a similar modification of a similar observation found therein is required. There, I also relied on the above referred to decision in Soundararajan v. Sayee Finance, (1986)1 M.L.J.214, which in turn relied on the abovesaid P.G.R.Padayachi v. Mayavaram Financial Corporation, (1973)2 M.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 1 (D.B.), to conclude that no reason need not be given while ordering arrest. I have already pointed out that the said ruling that no reason need be given while ordering arrest, is also not correct in the light of the abovesaid Jolly George Varghese v. Bank of Cochin, (1980)2 S.C.C. 360.

12. I have already pointed out in page 20 supra that even in a case where order of arrest is passed under O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C. anyone of the reasons mentioned in proviso to Section 51 has to be proved. No doubt in such a case the said proof need not necessarily be in an enquiry as contemplated under O.21, Rule 40, C.P.C., that is, by taking evidence as may be produced by decree-holder etc. That is so, because O.21, Rule 37(2), C.P.C. does not provide for any particular mode of enquiry. In other words, even by affidavit evidence, the execution court could come to the conclusion that the necessary proof is there for ordering arrest of the judgment-debtor. In the present case, the execution court below has found that from the decree-holder's affidavit, the means of the judgment-debtor have been proved. No doubt it also finds that the sum of Rs.6,000 which the judgment-debtor was earlier directed to pay to the decree-holder, was not paid and that the judgment-debtor failed to appear before the court resulting in himself being set ex parte. But, yet there is no finding by the court below, as required under the proviso to Sec.51, that there was also a refusal or neglect to pay the decree amount. Not can I conclude, merely because of the absence of the judgment-debtor on 2.12.1991 or his non-payment of the abovesaid Rs.6,000, there was such refusal or neglect, particularly because admittedly the judgment-debtor in the present case had already paid in several instalments a substantial amount of the decree amount. Further, the Supreme Court has also observed in the abovesaid Jolly George Varghese v. Bank of Cochin, (1980)2 S.C.C. 360, thus:

"The provision emphasises the need to establish not mere omission to pay, but an attitude of refusal on demand, verging on dishonest disowning of the obligation under the decree."

13. Further arrest under Rule 37(2) can be passed only "if the decree holder so requires". That is even though the E.P. itself is for arrest and detention before passing order under Rule 37(2), the court should once again ascertain from the decree holder whether he actually requires arrest. But on the present case, there is nothing to show about the said ascertainment and there is no finding to that effect.

14. The learned counsel for the respondent also brought to my notice, the following facts that have happened subsequent to 2.12.1991 order: The judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the court and he also made some more payments towards the decree amount and subsequently he was released. Then, P.W.1, the decree-holder was examined and a second order of arrest was made on 6.3.1992, when also, the judgment-debtor remained ex parte. So, according to the learned counsel for the respondent, the earlier order dated 2.12.1991 has worked itself out and on that ground, the civil revision petition has to be dismissed. But, on the other hand, the learned counsel for the petitioner argues that the order dated 2.12.1991 was an illegal order and if this Court declares it illegal, then the judgment-debtor could sue the respondent for damages for illegal arrest pursuant to 2.12.1991 order. So, according to the learned counsel for the petitioner, the civil revision petition cannot be disposed of as infructuous in view of what has happened subsequently. I think there is some force in this argument of the learned counsel for the petitioner, though my such an observation should not be taken as my opinion, any way in favour of the petitioner with reference to any such suit. At any rate, I do not think that simply because pursuant to the order dated 2.12.1991, the judgment-debtor had been actually arrested subsequently or even because of the abovesaid subsequent events, the civil revision petition could be described as having become infructuous. This order no doubt will not affect the abovesaid subsequent order of arrest dated 6.3.1992.

15. The net result is, the impugned order of arrest dated 2.12.1991 is hereby set aside and this civil revision petition is allowed. However, in the circumstances of case, there will be no order as to costs.

Tamil Nadu Cultivating Tenants' Protection Act (XXV of 1955), Sec.3(4)(b) - Default in payment of rent - Eviction on ground of - Revenue Court not giving time to tenant to deposit rent - Order, if can be sustained.

According to Sec.3(4)(b) of the Tamil Nadu Cultivating Tenants' Protection Act, 1955, after ascertaining the arrears of rent, a duty is cast upon the Revenue Court to grant time to the tenant to deposit the rent. This was not done by the Revenue Court in this case. Therefore, the order passed by the Revenue Court is hit by Sec.3(4)(b) of the Act. The order of eviction is set aside on this ground. [Para. 10]

Case referred to:

Ayyanmal v. M.Venkataraman, (1982)2 M.L.J. 432 [Para. 10]

K.Mohanram, for Petitioner.

T.R.Rajagopalan, for Respondent.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The landlady filed a petition for eviction under Sec.3(4) (a) (b) of the Tamil Nadu Cultivating Tenants Protection Act, Act 25 of 1955 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'). The petitioner herein is the tenant under the respondent herein in respect of the land belonging to the respondent in Survey No.505/92. The tenant had taken the land on lease from the Predecessor-in-interest of the present landlady for agricultural purpose, particularly, for cultivation of paddy. The present annual rent payable by the tenant to the landlady is Rs.2,500 and six salugais of paddy. According to the landlady, the rent is payable in every month of Thai. On 4.2.1987 the tenant sent a draft for Rs.3,500 to the landlady along with a letter. In the letter it was stated that the rent of Rs.3,500 was sent to the landlady, but the landlady refused to receive the same and returned the draft along with her letter. In the said letter, she has stated that two years rent is due from the tenant for the period 14.4.1985 to 13.6.1986 and since the tenant has sent only Rs.3,500 the same was returned back. It was, therefore, pleaded that the tenant committed default in payment of rent and thereby rendering himself liable to be evicted under Sec.3(2)(aa) of the Act.

2. The landlady further stated that the land was leased to the tenant for the purpose of cultivation, but the tenant used the land and continues to use it for a purpose which is neither agricultural nor horticultural coming within the meaning of Sec.3(2)(b) & (c) of the Act.

3. According to the landlady, there was only a small tiled shed in the demised land by the side of the well. Last year, the tenant had constructed a tiled office room and several water tanks inside the original shed for the purpose of storing water and wetting the yarn, and also constructed a big tiled shed for the purpose of drying yarn and put up new oven in the original shed for dyeing and bleaching the yarn and has been running a yarn dyeing factory there under the name and style of 'Vijayakumar Saya Salai'. The tenant has also dismantled the new shed put up by him and used the space for drying the yarn. The tenant has done all these acts without the knowledge and consent of the landlady unauthorisedly and illegally. The tenant misused the agricultural electric service connection and continues to misuse the same for the purpose of running the aforesaid dyeing industry unauthorisedly. Thus the tenant has unauthorisedly and illegally converted a portion of the demised agricultural land for industrial purposes, which was entirely alien to the agricultural tenancy. Therefore, the tenant is liable to be evicted under Sec.3(4)(a) and (b) of the Act.

4. The tenant filed a counter: The case put forward by the tenant is as under:

It is false to state that the annual rent is Rs.2,500 and six salugais of paddy. On the contrary, the annual rent is Rs.2,500 including six salugais of paddy. The tenant has not committed any default in payment of rent. When the rent was sent by draft, the landlady refused to receive the same. The tenant did not convert the agricultural land for any industrial purpose. The land was put into use only for agricultural purpose. The electric connection was obtained by the tenant with his own funds. The tenant deepened the well and using the water, for agricultural purposes. The tenant raised sugarcane crops in the demised land.

The shed which has been built by the tenant is in existence for a long time. It is not correct to state that the shed has been built for drying the yarn. There is no such bleaching operation as alleged by the landlady. There is no dyeing factory under the name and style of 'Vijayakumar Saya Salai' as alleged. Therefore, the petition for eviction filed by the landlady is liable to be dismissed.

5. The landlady examined three witnesses. The tenant examined himself as R.W.1. The tenant also examined one Sundaram as R.W.2. The landlady filed 17 documents and the tenant filed 7 documents. Ex.C-1 and Ex.C-2 are the inspection report and plan filed by the Assistant Tahsildar.

6. Considering the facts arising in this case, the Revenue Court held that the tenant committed default in payment of rent and the tenant also put in use the agricultural land let out to him for the purpose other than for which it was let out. Accordingly, eviction was ordered on both these grounds. It is against this order, the tenant is in revision before this Court.

7. The learned counsel appearing for the tenant/petitioner herein submitted as under:

The Revenue Court was not correct in holding that the rent is Rs.2,500 and six salugais of paddy every year. The tenant is not in arrears of rent as alleged by the landlady. The Revenue Court overlooked the payments made by the tenant's counsel to the landlady's counsel of a sum of Rs.2,500 on 30-11-1987 and a sum of Rs.5,000 on 29-7-1988. The revenue court has committed an error of law in not granting time to the tenant as per Sec. 3(4) (b) of the Act so as to enable the tenant to pay the arrears of rent and as such the order is liable to be set aside.

8. The tenant has not used the agricultural land for the purpose of dyeing yarn. P.W.1 in his evidence stated that originally there was a tiled shed and later on it was extended for the manufacture of jaggery. Further, the tenant put up an oven and a tank in the above said shed for the purpose of manufacture of jaggery. P.W.1 admitted that for crushing the sugarcane and for the manufacturing of jaggery a shed is necessary and a room is also necessary for storing the jaggery. Therefore, it is not correct to state that the tenant started a dyeing factory. No dyeing factory can be run without obtaining a licence. No licence was produced to show that the tenant was running a dyeing factory. There is no notice from the landlady of objecting to the running of the dyeing factory. P.W.1 had admitted the existence of thrashing floor. There is no evidence on record to show that the tenant committed acts of waste. Even assuming if a dyeing factory had been running the shed put up in the thrashing field, that will not constitute an act of waste. In the Tahsildar's report the exact extent of land used for dyeing factory is not mentioned. The penalty levied for the use of the agricultural service connection for non-agricultural purpose by itself would not be sufficient to establish that the petitioner was running a dyeing factory. The penalty was paid by the tenant to restore the pumpset connection to save the standing sugarcane crops. In Ex.C-1 and C-2, the Assistant Tahsildar has not got the signature of the village Administrative Officer who was allegedly present at the time of inspection. No chemical waste were let out to the land. Ex.P-11 to Ex.P-17 relates to service connection sought for the land in Survey No.502/2 and not for 505/2. It was, therefore, pleaded that the revenue court was not correct in ordering eviction on both these grounds. The learned counsel for respondent while supporting the order passed by the Revenue Court reiterated the arguments advanced before the revenue court.

9. I have heard the rival submissions.

10. The petitioner herein is the tenant that the landlady, who is respondent herein, in respect of agricultural land of an extent of 2,038 sq.ft. in Survey No.505/2. According to the landlady, the rent is Rs.2,500 and six salugais of paddy payable every year in the Tamil Calendar month of Thai. The landlady stated that the tenant failed and neglected to pay the arrears of rent for the period of two years from 14.4.1985 to 13.6.1986. According to the tenant, he sent the rent by Money Order, which was refused by the landlady. According to the tenant he sent Rs.3,500 by way of draft along with a letter stating that this amount was sent towards the rent payable by him. Since two years rent works out of Rs.5,000 and since the tenant sent only Rs.3,500, the landlady refused to receive the same. Ex.B-5, dated 4.2.1987 is the demand draft sent by the tenant to the landlady for Rs.3,500. Ex.B-4 is the letter sent by the tenant along with the demand draft. In the said letter there is no mention as to the amount sent by the tenant is relating to which year. The landlady refused to receive the same and sent back this demand draft along with the letter (Ex.A-6). In spite of the fact that the landlady refused to receive the rent, the tenant did not make any attempts to deposit the same in court. Before the Revenue Court the tenant stated that the rent is only Rs.2,000 and the value of six salugais of paddy would be Rs.500 and, therefore, the total rent is Rs.2,500. In the lease agreement dated 6.6.1985 the tenant agreed to pay Rs.2,500 as rent and six salugais of paddy every year. Under such circumstances, the Revenue Court came to the conclusion that the tenant is in arrears of rent. Accordingly, the Revenue Court ordered eviction. But this order is not in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Act. According to Sec.3(4)(b) of the Act after ascertaining the arrears of rent, a duty is cast upon the Revenue court to grant time to the tenant to deposit the rent. This was not done by the Revenue Court in this case. Therefore, the order passed by the Revenue Court is hit by Sec.3(4)(b) of the Act. This was the view taken by this Court in the case of Ayyammal v. M.Venkataraman, (1982)2 M.L.J. 432. In view of the abovesaid legal position, the eviction order passed by the Revenue Court on the ground of arrears of rent is not in order. Therefore, I set aside the order of eviction passed by the Revenue Court on this ground.

11. The next ground in this revision relates to eviction sought for under Sec.3(2)(b) of the Act. According to the landlady, the land was leased out to the tenant for the purpose of carrying out the agricultural operations. But according to the landlady the tenant was guilty of negligence in destructing the land, etc., and the land was used for non-agricultural purposes. The landlady submitted that the tenant started a yarn dyeing factory in the demised land under the name and style of 'Vijayakumar Saya Salai' and recently the tenant had dismantled the new shed put up by him and used the space for drying the yarn. It was further pleaded that the tenant has done all these acts without the knowledge and consent of the landlady and therefore he is liable to be evicted for using the land for the purpose other than for which it was let out. On the other hand, the tenant submitted that he did not run any dyeing factory as alleged by the landlady. The shed was used for manufacturing jaggery. Therefore, according to the tenant the landlady was not correct in saying that a portion of the land was converted for industrial purpose. The landlady filed a petition before the Revenue Court requesting the court to inspect the land personally. But that petition was dismissed. As against this order, C.R.P.No. 2256 of 1988 was filed before this Court. The said revision was also dismissed on 26.8.1988. However, the land was inspected by the Assistant Tahsildar. After his inspection, the Assistant Tahsildar filed his report dated 30.8.1986. The inspection was made in the presence of the tenant and other persons. The Assistant Tahsildar, who conducted the inspection was also examined as C.W.1. In his report, the Assistant Tahsildar stated that in a portion of the demised land a dyeing factory was running under the name and style of 'Vijayakumar Saya Salai'. He has also stated that caustic soda was kept in that place. The landlady made a complaint to the Engineer, Coimbatore Municipality. The Assistant Engineer visited the spot. By using the agricultural service connection the tenant drew water from the well for the purpose of his dyeing factory. This was shown in Ex.B-3 and Ex.B-7. Since the tenant used this service connection, which was meant for the agricultural purposes, in order to draw water for industrial purpose, a penalty of Rs.10,270.75 was levied by the Electricity Department against the tenant and the power was also disconnected. It is the contention of the landlady that the waste water after dyeing the yarn was used to be let out in the agricultural land, which is injurious to the agricultural soil. This was accepted by the Revenue Court. The tenant said the shed was used for the purpose of manufacturing jaggery. But no evidence was adduced to support this version. The tenant applied for service connection to the demised land in order to get electric current for commercial purposes. The tenant said that in the application he has given the survey number as 502/2 and, therefore, service connection was not applied for the demised land for which the Survey No. is 505/2. Admittedly, the tenant has no connection with the land in Survey No.502/2. Further, he is also not the owner of any other hand. It was stated that in the demised land two water tanks were constructed by the tenant. The tenant has also constructed a big shed. In the centre of the shed there were two water tanks. There were two ovens inside the shed. By the side of these tanks, on a bench three bags of caustic soda were kept. On the front side of the door a board displaying 'Vijayakumar Saya Salai' was hanging. These are all the facts found by the Assistant Tahsildar who inspected the demised land.

The tenant did not produce any evidence to controvert to report filed by the Assistant Tahsildar. The landlady examined her husband, one Mr.Ramalingam, Assistant Engineer in the Electricity department and one Mr. Kuppuraj, Accountant who is also in the Electricity Department in order to prove her case. The Assistant Tahsildar, Kovai was examined as C.W.1. Considering the facts arising in this case, both oral and documentary, the Revenue Court came to the conclusion that the tenant used a portion of the agricultural land for the purpose of running his dyeing factory. Therefore, eviction was ordered since the tenant was guilty of negligence in the destruction of the land etc. and for using the land for non-agricultural purposes as contemplated under Sec.3(2)(b) and (c) of the Act.

12. On a careful consideration of the facts arising on this aspect, I am of the opinion that the Order passed by the Revenue Court on this aspect is in order since on facts, the landlady proved her case that the tenant conducted his dyeing factory in a portion of the demised land. Since the order of eviction passed by the Revenue Court under Sec.3(2)(b) and (c) of the Act is in order, I am not inclined to interfere with the same. Therefore, the tenant is liable to be evicted under Sec.3(2)(a) and (b) of the Act. Since the order of eviction passed by the Revenue Court on one of the grounds was upheld in this revision, I consider that the petition filed on the ground of arrears of rent need not be remitted back for fresh disposal in accordance with the decisions of this Court cited supra.

13. Accordingly, this revision is dismissed. However, there will be no order as to costs.

Petition dismissed.

O.S.A.Nos.64 and 65 of 1986 20th October, 1992.

M/s. Gold Star Line Ltd. ...Appellant
v.

Bafna Brothers herein represented by their Power of Attorney Agent and others ...Respondents.

Madras Port Trusts Act (II of 1965), Sec.39(3) and Major Port Trusts Act (XXXVIII of 1963), Sec.42 - Gratulatory immunity under Sec.39(3) - Ship owner delivering goods to the Port Trust - If absolved of liability to the consignee.

Held: If goods are delivered to the Port Trust in accordance with the contract, the carrier is absolved of any liability. If, however, it is not so delivered, notwithstanding Sec.39(3) of the Madras Port Trusts Act or Sec.42 of the Major Port Trusts Act, the carrier shall continue to be answerable and liable under his contract. In the instant case, the learned single Judge has taken the correct view of the law on the facts of the case as above when it is admitted that goods were not delivered in full and in accordance with the contract with the first defendant, its liability did not cause on delivery of goods to the Port Trust.

Appeals under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the Order of Singaravelu, J., dated 22.9.1983 and made in the exercise of the Ordinary Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court in C.S.Nos.209 and 210 of 1980.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.: It would have been more in order had these appeals been heard by the same Bench which heard O.S.A.Nos.181 and 182 of 1985 filed on behalf of the Port Trust against the impugned judgment, but these appeals by the first defendant/Carrier, have been listed after the said two appeals have been heard by another Bench (Mishra, J. and Padmini Jesudurai, J.). We are informed that judgment in the said two appeals has not yet been delivered.

2. The two plaintiffs, viz. the consignee represented by their power of Attorney Agent and National Insurance Company Limited have filed the suits C.S.Nos.209 and 210 of 1980, alleging inter alia that the first defendant/Carrier, or the ship known as M/s. Gold Star Line Limited, incorporated in Hongkong, carried consignments of a merchant at Bangkok to the first plaintiff, they being 4,000 bags of greengram and another 2,000 bags of greengram, to the same destination, Madras. The consignments were insured with the second plaintiff National Insurance Company Limited. The vessel 'M.V. Gold Leaf' carrying the two consignments arrived at Madras on 26.8.1979. The landed cargo was not stacked markwise and the marks were also missing on number of bags and, therefore, the consignment could not be delivered in full. The 1st plaintiff in C.S.No.209 of 1980 was given delivery of 2,207 out of 4,000 bags, leaving a shortage of 1,793 bags. The 1st plaintiff in C.S.No.210 of 1980 was given delivery of 1,340 out of 2,000 bags, leaving a shortage of 660 bags.

3. On complaint the first defendant-carrier alleged that they had landed the entire manifested quantity and that it was in the custody of the second defendant, Madras Port Trust, which could not deliver the goods according to the marks. On claim by the first plaintiff, the second plaintiff as insurer has settled the claim for Rs.3,26,830.50 being the value of the goods short delivered. In view of the subrogation, the suits are filed by both the plaintiffs, claiming the invoice value of the goods with interest.

4. The first defendant, who is common in both the suits, filed a written statement, stating that the Carrier was not aware of the condition and the quantity of the cargo entrusted at the Bangkok Port, that the cargo was duly discharged at Madras to the custody of the second defendant, Madras

Port Trust, who issued tally receipts, and that, therefore, the liability, if any, of the Carrier had come to an end once the cargo is discharged from the vessel. It denied any short-landing and stated that if there was any shortfall, it was perhaps due to the cross-deliveries effected by the second defendant.

5. The second defendant filed a written statement alleging that though the goods were shown as landed in the tally sheets, the quantity that was actually lying under the marks was much less. The black and green grams were not landed mark wise and all the bags were landed in a mixed up condition. Further, the goods were in bad condition, and were packed in a single gunny and, therefore, there was heavy spillage at the time of landing. The first plaintiff refused to take delivery of the heap shown to them and therefore, the same was out turned as excess landed and a 'B' certificate was issued to the plaintiff.

6. D.W.1, the agent of the first defendant carrier, in his deposition stated that the goods quantity wise landed at Madras Port completely and that most of the cargo were mentioned under marks, but in specific cases, a large number of bags have been mentioned under 'various' marks; the mark 'various' means that several marks of the items landed together which were not segregated separately and that is why they were classified so. He stated that the segregation was done by the Port labourers at the cost of the shipper and the goods were discharged markwise, but the second defendant had carried it under 'various' mark. It is on record that the first plaintiff's agents requested the Shipper to cause a survey of the goods landed under 'various' mark since they were in a damaged condition in the sheds. The first defendant did not make any survey though admittedly it was a part of its duty (vide, the admission of B.W.1). The evidence of this witness is significant with respect to the goods landed in so far as he has admitted that the cargo landed in a mixed up condition and on landing those goods which did not have specific marks were branded as 'various' and as per the out-turn statement Ex.D-5 issued by the Port Trust, the contents of 2,453 bags were lying in one lot as a heap under 'nil' mark. Since the tally statement and the out-turn statement contradicted each other, the Port Trust issued 'B' certificate as if the cargo had short landed.

7. The Ship Master at Madras Port Trust was examined as D.W.2 and he stated that the manifested quantity that arrived through the vessel on 26.8.1979 was 52,100 bags out of which the second defendant had delivered a total quantity of 49,647 bags. He stated that the consignor used only one single gunny bag and that some of the bags arrived in torn condition. Referring to Ex.D-9, he stated that the goods were received in mixed up condition 'cover torn and contents falling out'. Goods marked 'various' also landed. He stated that 3,797 bags under 'various' mark and 1,898 bags under 'nil' mark were annotated as 'cover torn and contents falling out'. According to him, the steamer agent stacked it in a mixed up condition and was liable for it and the agent of the first defendant was also a party to the tally sheet which recites that the goods landed in a mixed up and damaged condition with cover torn, etc. The carrier took the goods from the wharf to the shed by their own transport utilising their own men and labour for unloading etc. Because the steamer agent stacked it in a mixed up condition, the first plaintiff could not identify the goods and, therefore, according to D.W.2 the goods were not removed.

8. On the basis of the above and on the consideration of the other evidence on record, a learned single Judge of this Court has found as follows:

"...in the face of the evidence on record, there is no difficulty in finding that the 1st defendant had not delivered the entire cargo in apparent good condition in conformity with the Bill of Lading and consequently the liability of the 1st defendant does not come to an end once the cargo is discharged from the vessel. The evidence also clearly establishes that the specific marks in the manifest were absent when the goods were tendered for delivery. There is also discrepancy between the tally sheet and the out-turn statement. We have already found that the annotation in the tally sheet is 'cover torn and contents falling down'. The tally sheet itself is prepared by the Port Trust in the presence of the 1st defendant's agent and it is an internal arrangement between the defendants. The consignee does not at all come into the picture at that stage. It would appear that for the sake of easy and quick disposal of the enquiry, the Port Trust more often issues 'B' Certificate as if the goods short landed and they show it as 'Excess landing' when the landed goods do not conform to the description in the invoices or in the Bill of Lading. The issue of 'B' Certificate is perhaps the easiest way by which the Port Trust seeks to avoid the liability or the claim by the consignee. On the other hand, by showing 'excess landing' under the 'B' certificate, the Port Trust stands to gain since it sells the claimed goods and appropriates the same for itself. In my opinion, the issue of 'B' certificate by the 2nd defendant was not at all justified as it is clear from the evidence that there was no short landing or even excess landing. The consigned goods arrived in full. But, some of them did not conform to the description or did not contain the marks or arrived in a damaged condition. It is also clear from the evidence that there was mixing up of green gram and black gram and the 'markings' also did not tally. This is clearly due to the negligence or misconduct on the part of the workers and the lower officials in the Port Trust on the spot, who actually supervise the unloading and stocking of the goods. For no fault of his, the consignee is now put to loss and admittedly these two quantities of short deliveries cannot at all be denied. The consignee cannot be compelled to take whatever is offered to him in whatever condition. I am satisfied that the short delivery is on account of the negligence and misconduct on the part of the agents and servants of both the defendants".

It is on the basis of the finding that the issue of 'B' certificate by the second defendant was not at all justified that the learned single Judge found that there was no short landing or even excess landing and that the goods arrived in full.

9. Learned counsel for the appellant has contended that the learned single Judge has committed an error of law in holding the carrier responsible for loss to the consignee. He has drawn our attention to Sec.39(3) of the Madras Port Trust Act as well as Sec.42(7) of the Major Port Trusts Act to contend that the ship owner's liability ended with delivery of goods in full with the Port Trust, an argument which was advanced with vehemence before the learned single Judge but negated in these words:

"The law on this aspect is well-settled by a Division Bench of our High Court in Union of India v. M/s. Ralli Bros. Ltd., (1968) 2 M.L.J. 199, wherein it has been held that 'the responsibility of the carrier for the goods does not cease merely by the technical discharge of the goods from the ship, but continues up to their delivery in accordance with the terms of the bill of lading'. The decision in Steel Authority of India v. Indian Steam Ship Co. by Agent, 1979 T.L.N.J. 196, was also placed before me for the proposition that the mere issue of tally certificate does not absolve the liability of the carrier and that the 'markings' on the goods are necessary for their identification. In the second cited decision, Padmanabhan, J., held that 'the issue of tally sheet by the Port Trust to the ship owner is a matter of internal checking between the ship owner and the Port Trust and it does not bind the consignee and that the fact that the ship owner has obtained a certificate from the Port Trust under Sec.39(3) of the Port Trust Act will not amount to an absolute discharge of the ship owner of his liability to deliver the cargo to the consignee. It was further held that the consignee was given a 'B' certificate will be conclusive proof that the goods conforming to the Bill of Lading had not been landed at the Madras Port. In the face of these decisions and in the face of the evidence on record, there is no difficulty in finding that the 1st defendant had not delivered the entire cargo in apparent good condition in conformity with the Bill of Lading and consequently the liability of the 1st defendant does not come to an end once the cargo is discharged from the vessel".

At another place while dealing with issue of 'B' Certificate, the learned single Judge has observed: "The consigned goods arrived in full. But, some of them did not conform to the description or did not contain the marks or arrived in a damaged condition".

10. In a Division Bench judgment of this Court in Union of India v. M/s. Ralli Bros. Ltd., (1968) 2 M.L.J. 199, the facts were as follows:

"The first defendant in the suit chartered the ship on the 4th April, 1955 (Ex.D-1) as the charter party specifically for a full complete cargo of refined sugar in bags not exceeding 9,450 long tons, not less than 9,000 long tons nett for carriage to Madras. On the very day the third defendant in the suit, the shippers, sub-chartered the ship for the carriage of the sugar. The goods were taken aboard at London on 22nd September, 1955, Ex.D-3 being the relative bill of lading. The ship arrived at Madras on 19th October, 1955 and it commenced to discharge the cargo on 27th October, 1955, and the discharge of the cargo was completed, it is stated on 8th November, 1955. According to the plaintiff, there was short landing of 414 bags of sugar weighing 1.41.8.0.0 as per bill of lading. The plaintiff also complained that 6,807 bags were discharged in a bad, slack, cut and torn condition and 747 bags of sugar were sweat-stained and damaged making the sugar unfit for use. The shortage in the weight in respect of the slack, cut and torn and sweat-stained bags was estimated at 1.86.13.3.4. There was a survey with reference to the 7,554 bags in slack, cut and torn condition or sweat-stained and as against this it was stated, there were available 420 bags of ship-sweepings and 521 bags of shad-sweepings giving a weight of 1.76.12.2.25".

On the merits while holding that 414 bags had not been delivered to the plaintiff by the Port Trust, the learned single Judge of the Court was of the view that this was not a case of short-landing, as tally-sheets issued by the Port Trust showed the entire quantity of cargo as discharged and the Assistant Traffic Manager of the Port Trust admitted that the entire quantity was landed and that the tally-sheets were correct. The learned single Judge proceeded in the view that the Port Trust, by operation of law was made to accept the goods as bailee of the consignee, when it took charge of the goods from the ship and that the delivery of the goods to the Port Trust must be held to be delivery to the consignee. In taking this view, the learned Judge in the words of the Division Bench 'purported' to follow certain earlier decisions of this Court'. The Bench upon that said:

"Now this view of the jural position of the Port Trust cannot be maintained after the decision of the Supreme Court in The Trustees of the Port of Madras by its Chairman v. K.V. Shaik Mohammed Rowther and Co., (1963) 2 S.C.R. (Supp.) 915. The legal relationship between

- the shipowner and the shipper or the consignor and the consignee is thus enunciated in the said decision:

'There is no doubt that the ship-owner is the bailee of the shipper, the consignor and that he is responsible for the delivery of the goods to the consignee or a transferee according to the terms of the bill of lading. This duty the ship-owner discharges only when he has delivered the goods to the consignee or such person who be entitled to take delivery in accordance with the endorsements on the bill of lading. Delivery to the Board is not delivery to the consignee or person both because the delivery is to be on the presentation of the bill of lading and because the Act contains no provision which would constitute the Board an agent of the consignee for the purpose of taking delivery of the goods.... It is true that on the Board's taking charge of the goods and giving a receipt about it to the ship-owner, the master or the owner of the vessel is absolved from liability for any loss or damage which may occur to the goods which had been landed, but this provision by itself does not suffice to convert the receiving of the goods by the Board after they had been landed by the ship-owner to the Board's taking delivery of those goods on behalf of the consignee. The Board simply takes charge of the goods on being required by the steamer-agent to take charge of it.... It is clear therefore that when the Board takes charge of the goods from the ship-owner, the ship-owner is the bailor and the Board is the bailee and the Board's responsibility for the goods thereafter is that of a bailee. The Board does not get the goods from the consignee..." Lower down their Lordships pointed out:

"The responsibility of the carrier for the goods does not cease merely by the technical discharge of the goods from the ship, but continues upto their delivery in accordance with the terms of the bill of lading".

In The Madras Port Trust v. K.P.A.T. Annamalai Nadar, (1967) 2 M.L.J. 594: I.L.R. (1966) 1 Mad. 164, following the above decision of the Supreme Court, we have ourselves considered the relative positions of the ship-owner, the Port Trust and the consignee and the effect of the tally-sheet. It follows that the whole matter and the relative liabilities of the parties in this case will have to be examined afresh in the light of the above decisions".

The Bench, however, found that the learned single Judge in the view he had taken on the legal issues had not referred to all the available evidence on the matter and the several aspects which did call for consideration, if the liability has to be definitely fixed, and observed:

"True, some damage could have occurred in the premises of the Port Trust after landing. A question will arise whether notwithstanding Sec.39(3), the ship-owner or carrier could be made liable for the same. We need not go into these questions now and here. That there has been carelessness in the handling of the goods on board and after landing is apparent from the records. It is unfortunate that even formally the Port Trust has not been made a party to this suit and the claim against it has been allowed to get barred by limitation in endless correspondence. It may be that the Port Trust is a statutory Corporation, but that does not absolve it from liability for the loss if any for which it is answerable to the Union Government".

The Bench remanded the case to the trial court for determination of the damages on the basis of the evidence notwithstanding the rule as found in Sec.39(3) of the Madras Port Trust Act.

11. In Steel Authority of India v. India Steam Ship Co. by Agent, 1979 T.L.N.J: 196, a learned single Judge of this Court was dealing with a case in which the vessel at Madras Port discharged part of the cargo, which on inspection by the Customs Authorities was found to be without labels and the markings were not according to the specifications. In some cases, there were no markings at all and in some, the destination was shown as Bombay. The Port Trust issued a 'B' certificate stating that the 36 parcels shown in the Bill of Lading were not landed by the vessel which arrived in Madras. One of the contentions before the learned single Judge was with respect to the legal effect of Sec.39(3) of the Port Trust Act. After referring to the earlier decisions of this Court, the learned Judge stated the law in these words:

"What can be deduced from the above decision is that the issue of tally sheet by the Port Trust to the ship owner is a matter of internal checking between the ship-owner and the Port Trust and it does not bind the consignee. The fact that the ship-owner has obtained a certificate from the Port Trust under Sec.39(3) of the Port Trust Act will not amount to an absolute discharge of the ship owner of his liability to deliver the cargo to the consignee. In other words, a delivery to a wharfinger or to a dock authority is not in itself sufficient unless the contract provides for such delivery or unless there is a custom to that effect. The responsibility of the carrier for the goods does not cease merely by technical discharge of the goods from the ship and obtaining a certificate from the Port Trust under Sec.39(3) of the Port Trust Act, but continues up to the delivery in accordance with the Bill of Lading. Further, the fact that the consignee had given a 'B' Certificate to the Port Trust will be conclusive proof that the goods conforming to the Bill of Lading had not been landed at the Madras Port".

12. Of the three decisions that learned counsel for the appellant has cited, one that has been relied upon most is the judgment by a learned single Judge of this Court in M/s. United Bleaders v. South East Asia Shipping Company (P.) Ltd., 1978 T.L.N.J. 35, in which it was held that it was wrong to contend that the liability of the ship owner would extend right upto the time of the actual delivery of the goods to the consignee and that the statutory interposition of the Port Trust between the landing of the goods and their delivery would not absolve the ship owner of his liability. The learned single Judge has in this behalf entered into a discussion of law and observed:

"...for this purpose certain passages from the decisions of the Supreme Court in the The Trustees of the Port of Madras by its Chairman v. K.V. Shaik Mohammed Rowther and Co., (1963)2 S.C.R. (Supp.) 915, were relied on. The learned counsel for the respondent relied on Sec.39(3) and also certain other decisions of the Supreme Court as supporting his stand that the carrier was absolved of his liability as soon as he delivered the goods to the Port Trust.

It would be seen that the Supreme Court was concerned with finding out whether the charges could be levied on the ship-owner or on the consignee. It is only in that context that the Supreme Court went into the various provisions to examine whether the Madras Port Trust has been constituted as the agent of the consignee. It was held that the Port Trust was not the agent of the consignee and that the Port Trust did not receive the goods on behalf of the consignee. It does not appear to be proper to take these passages as if they determined the liability of a ship owner when that matter was not and could not have been in issue in that case vis-a-vis the consignee.

In The Madras Port Trust v. K.P.A.T. Annamalai Nadar, (1967) 2 M.L.J. 594: I.L.R. (1966) 1 Mad. 164, a case somewhat similar to the one here arose. It was held that under Sec.39(3) once a receipt was given that a particular consignment had been taken charge, a complete discharge was given to the ship-owner and that the Port Trust was rightly held liable. Consistently with this decision the ship-owner cannot be held liable in this case. There is another decision of this Court in Union of India v. M/s. Ralli Bros, (1968) 2 M.L.J. 199. The Andhra Pradesh High Court in The Shipping Corporation of India Ltd., Bombay v. The Union of India, A.I.R. 1976 A.P. 261, dealing with a parallel provision of Sec.42 of the Major Port Trust Act, 1963 took the same view. It was held that from the moment the receipt was given to the shipper/carrier by the Board, it was the Board that became responsible for the loss of the goods".

13. In the above view of the principles of law, according to learned counsel for the appellant, the instant case is one in which the Port Trust alone could be held liable, as the ship had delivered the goods to it under Sec.39(3) and the Port Trust had issued a certificate of discharge to the consignee, with respect to which learned single Judge has to say, the "the consigned goods arrived in full".

14. In M/s. United Bleaders v. South East Asia Shipping Company (P.) Ltd., 1978 T.L.N.J. 35, cited supra, the learned single Judge was dealing with a case in which the carrier had delivered all the eight bales consigned safely to the Port Trust and the Court below had held that there was no short-landing. After stating as stated above, the learned Judge has said:

"....But as soon as the proper goods were delivered to the statutory authorities interposed between the ship-owner and the consignee, then the delivery to the statutory authorities would absolve the ship-owner of his liability. The question whether the statutory authority is the agent of the ship-owner or of the consignee is not relevant. The statutory immunity given under Sec.39(3) is absolute in its terms and is not dependent on the Port Trust being the agent of the consignee. Having regard to the statutory provisions which confer immunity on the ship-owner, it is not possible to hold that the ship-owner continues to be liable notwithstanding the fact that he has delivered the proper goods in their entirety to the Port Trust. If the appellants' contention were to be accepted, then Sec.39(3) would be practically rendered nugatory, as cannot apply to any conceivable situation. In the present case, it is clear from the records that the tally sheets issued to the Master of the ship confirmed the delivery of the 8 bales. The Port Trust delivered to the first only two bales. If there was a short delivery to the consignee, in these circumstances, the ship-owner cannot be blamed thereafter".

15. Learned counsel for the appellant drew our attention to the following passage in Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 3 (Shipping and Navigation), paragraph 639, page 450:

"The ship-owner remains liable under his contract until he has made delivery to a person entitled thereto. A delivery to a wharfinger or to a dock authority is not, in itself, sufficient, unless the contract provides for such delivery, or unless there is a custom to that effect".

16. We are in complete agreement with the view expressed by the learned single Judge in M/s. United Bleaders v. South East Asia Shipping Company (P.) Ltd., 1978 T.L.N.J. 35, referred to above, that if goods are delivered to the Port Trust in accordance with the contract, the Carrier is absolved of any liability. If, however, it is not so delivered, notwithstanding Sec.39(3) of the Madras Port Trust Act or Sec.42 of the Major Port Trusts Act, the Carrier shall continue to be answerable and liable under his contract.

17. In the instant case, learned single Judge has taken the correct view of the law on the facts of the case as above when it is admitted that goods were not delivered in full and in accordance with the contract with the first defendant, its liability did not cease on delivery of goods to the Port Trust. We have refrained from making any observations on the liability of the Port Trust, besides that of the appellant herein, for the reason of the matter being in appeal in O.S.A.Nos.181 and 182 of 1985. Since we have found no error in the judgment of the learned single Judge, these appeals must fail and the appeals are accordingly dismissed. On the facts of these cases, however, there shall be no

Seethalakshmi Ammal ...Appellant
v.

T.P.Srinivasa Naicker ...Respondent.

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), Sec.87 - Material alteration - Endorsement of repayment on promissory note - If a negotiable instrument - Material alteration in endorsement - If material alteration of the negotiable instrument.

A reading of Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act would show that to attract that action, the material alteration must be of the Negotiable Instrument. The question is whether the endorsement which has been altered is negotiable instrument. The court is of the view that an endorsement of repayment on the promissory note cannot be said to be a negotiable instrument. A negotiable instrument has already come into being with the execution of it by the defendant. That is the body of the promissory note containing the names of the parties and the terms before any endorsement of repayment is made thereon. Such endorsement only relates to repayment and not to any terms of the promissory note as such. Therefore, by no stretch of reasoning an endorsement of repayment made on the promissory note can be said to be a negotiable instrument or part thereof. Hence, it follows that there is no material alteration of the promissory note. [Para. 8]

R.G.Rajan, for Appellant.

N.Rosi Naidu, for Respondent.

The Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT: The plaintiff Seethalakshmi Ammal is the appellant whose suit has been dismissed with costs.

2. The plaintiff filed the suit for recovery of a sum of Rs.12,712.50 said to be due on a promissory note executed by the defendant Srinivasa Naicker. The plaintiff's case is that the defendant borrowed a sum of Rs.15,000 from the plaintiff on 14.9.1964 and executed the suit promissory note Ex.A-1 agreeing to repay the said amount with interest at 12% per annum. The defendant paid a sum of Rs.1,000 on 10.11.1966, a sum of Rs.2,200 on 4.11.1969 and Rs.1,000 on 3.1.1972 and made endorsements in his own handwriting on the reverse of the suit promissory note. In spite of several demands by the plaintiffs the defendant has not paid the balance amount. Therefore the suit. The further case of the plaintiff is that since the defendant is an agriculturist he is entitled to the benefits of Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act 4 of 1938 as amended by Act 8 of 1973 and therefore interest is claimed as per that Act.

3. The defendant resisted the suit contending that on 3.1.1972 he made a payment of Rs.6,000 and made an endorsement thereof and not only Rs.1,000 as alleged in the plaint, but on inspection of the promissory note the defendant found that 6,000 has been corrected into 1,000 and the portion covering the words "six thousand" has been torn off. Therefore the promissory note has been materially altered and therefore is hit by Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, and hence the suit is liable to be dismissed. It is further contended that the entire interest has been paid up to 3.1.1977 and as per the provisions of Act 4 of 1938 as amended by Act 8 of 1973 that amount has to be adjusted towards the principal and if it is done so there would be no amount liable to be paid, and on this ground also the suit cannot stand.

4. The trial court on consideration of the evidence held that on 3.1.1972 the defendant as contended by him has paid a sum of Rs.6,000 and not Rs.1,000 only as is pleaded by the plaintiff and in the endorsement made therefor on the back of the promissory note the plaintiff has made alterations and this would amount to material alteration of the promissory note and hence it is hit by Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. The trial court further found that as contended by the defendant the entire interest amount has been paid up to 3.1.1972 and if that amount is adjusted towards the principal as provided under Act 4 of 1938 as amended by Act 8 of 1973 there would be no amount payable by the defendant. On these findings the trial court dismissed the suit.

5. Now in the appeal Mr.R.G.Rajan, learned counsel appearing for the appellant-plaintiff contends that the finding of the trial court that on 3.1.1972 a sum of Rs.6,000 was paid as contended by the defendant and not Rs.1,000 as pleaded by the plaintiff is not correct, and that even if that finding is correct the further finding of the trial court that there is material alteration is erroneous. He also contended that the trial court is in error in holding that the defendant has paid the entire interest due on 3.1.1972. These are the points to be considered in the appeal.

6. Even from the very look at Ex.A-1 suit promissory note it is apparent that the defendant should have paid a sum of Rs.6,000 on 3.1.1972 and made an endorsement thereof and that has been altered into Rs.1,000 by the plaintiff. Besides the defendant (D.W.1) he has also examined one Thiruvengkatappa Naicker as D.W.2 who is admittedly an attester to the disputed endorsement, and he has testified that the defendant did pay Rs.6,000 on 3.1.1972 as found by the trial court he appears to be a well-to-do person and no reason whatsoever has been alleged by the plaintiff as to why he should give false evidence. Thus there is nothing to discredit his evidence.

7. To the naked eye it is clear that the figure 1,000 in the endorsement must be an alteration for some other figure and that could be 6,000. The portion containing the words of the amount paid has been torn off. The reason given by the plaintiff's husband as P.W.1 is that his grand-daughter pulled off that portion. Even if that is true, as rightly said by the trial court the plaintiff could have preserved that portion torn off and shown to the defendant and he could have obtained another endorsement. That he has not done. His plea that the torn off portion were in bits is unbelievable. And even then nothing prevented the plaintiff from informing the defendant of the same. Therefore I quite agree with the finding of the learned trial court that on 3.1.1972 the defendant has paid a sum of Rs.6,000 and made an endorsement to that effect.

8. There is no doubt that this endorsement has been an alteration by the plaintiff without the consent and knowledge of the defendant. Then the question is whether this amounts to material alteration so as to attract Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. A reading of Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act would show that to attract that section the material alteration must be of the Negotiable Instrument. The question is whether the endorsement which has been altered, is negotiable instrument. I am of the view that an endorsement of repayment on the promissory note cannot be said to be a negotiable instrument. A Negotiable Instrument had already come into being with the execution of it by the defendant. That is the body of the promissory note containing the names of the parties and the terms before any endorsement of repayment is made thereon. Such endorsement only relates to repayments and not to any terms of the promissory note as such. Therefore by no stretch of reasoning an endorsement of repayment made on the promissory note can be said to be a negotiable instrument or a party thereof.

9. Here it may be useful to refer to a decision by V.S.Malimath, J., as he then was of Mysore High Court in Shivalingappa v. P.B.Putappa, A.I.R. 1971 Mys. 273. The learned Judge has said:

"The endorsement which is alleged to have been made on the backside of the pronote does not form part of the negotiable instrument. It is an independent transaction, unconnected with the negotiable instrument in question. The alleged endorsement could as well have been made on an independent piece of paper and not on the back side of the pronote. Merely because an endorsement has been made on the back side of the pronote, it does not become part of the pronote. As the endorsement in question is not a part of the negotiable instrument, any alteration in the said endorsement does not attract the penal provisions of Sec.87 of the Indian Negotiable Instruments Act."

I entirely agree with this judgment. It appears this judgment has been quoted before the trial Judge, but he was not prepared to rely on it stating that what is stated there is only an obiter.

10. Instead the trial court seems to have relied on a Judgment of this Court in Krushna Charana Padhi v. Gourochandro Dyanò Sumantto, (1939)2 M.L.J. 686. But in that case there was an alteration in the date of promissory note itself and also in the endorsement. Therefore that decision will not help to decide the point whether the alteration made in the endorsement amounts to material alteration or not. Hence it follows that there is no material alteration of the promissory note.

11. On the question whether the defendant has paid the entire interest due till 3.1.1972 a reading of the endorsement dated 3.1.1972 in my view would clearly mean that the entire interest amount due till then has been paid. The relevant words are:

“வட்டிக்காக நாளது தேதிவரை செல்லானது போக அசலுக்காக வரவு ரூ.1,000/-

This would only mean that the entire interest due till that date has been paid. Mr.R.G.Rajan would however argue that this would only mean that ‘apart from the amount paid towards interest till that date’ and not that the ‘entire amount of interest due till that date has been paid’. I am not able to accept this contention. When interest is due on the promissory note and the promisor pays any amount the promisee will adjust that amount paid only towards interest due first and he will not adjust that amount towards principal. Hence I agree with the trial court that the interest due till 3.1.1972 has been paid.

12. Then the further question arises, even if the entire interest due till 3.1.1972 has been paid, will it be sufficient to wipe off the entire amount due under the promissory note as per the provisions of Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act 4 of 1938 as amended by Act 8 of 1973. In this connection the learned counsel appearing for the respondent-defendant submitted a calculation memo as per which there will be a balance amount of Rs.2,700 due. This appears to be correct.

13. In the result, therefore, the appeal is allowed in part, and there will be decree for a sum of Rs.2,700 with subsequent interest at 6 1/2% per annum from 1.3.1972 to 31.12.1972 and thereafter at 6% per annum till date of payment. There will be no order as to costs throughout.

Janaki and others ...Respondents.

Practice and procedure - Will - Genuineness of, in question - Evidence in piecemeal, if can be allowed. When the genuineness of an alleged Will is in question and the evidence has to be let in by the plaintiff, it would be just and necessary that all the witnesses who would speak as to the genuineness of the Will should be examined on the same day.

[Para. 3]

Petition under Sec.115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the Order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tirunelveli dated 9.11.92 and made in I.A.No (unregd. G.L. 10255) of 1992 in O.S.No.17 of 1987.

T.R.Rajaraman, for Petitioner.

The Court made the following

ORDER: This civil revision petition is preferred against an order dismissing the plaintiff's application before the trial court to reopen the case.

2. It appears the dispute in the case relates to an alleged will. The court informed the counsel for the plaintiff that for proof of the Will all the witnesses shall be examined on the same day. The counsel for the plaintiff examined one attester to the Will and made an endorsement on the plaint that the evidence for the plaintiff is closed. But after a week a petition has been filed on behalf of the plaintiff stating that the counsel has made the said endorsement inadvertently and that the plaintiff has to examine another attesting witness and the scribe and therefore the case may be reopened. This petition was dismissed. Hence this revision.

3. I do not think that the order of the trial court can be interfered with. When the counsel has made the endorsement he knew all the implications thereof. Therefore there is no point in saying subsequently after a week that it is necessary that two more witnesses have to be examined. It is stated that the endorsement was made inadvertently. It cannot be believed. The counsel has not filed any affidavit stating so. The petitioner is rather incompetent to say that. Then the genuineness of an alleged Will is in question and the evidence has to be let in by the plaintiff it would be just and necessary that all the witnesses who would speak as to the genuineness of the will should be examined on the same day as in this case the learned trial Judge has told the counsel for the plaintiff.

4. If one witness was examined and the counsel has made an endorsement stating that the plaintiffs' side is closed the plaintiff shall stand by that. Merely because the plaintiff states that it was due to inadvertence the counsel made the endorsement the case cannot be reopened. It is stated that by reopening the case the opposite side will not be prejudiced. It is not correct. When the first witness has been examined as to the genuineness of the Will he will know the line of the cross examination by the opposite side. If the next witness is to be examined not on the same day, but subsequently that witness will know as to what questions would be put to him in the cross examination. Therefore naturally the cross-examination will not be effective. This is how the other side would be prejudiced.

5. In the circumstances of the case, I do not think this is a fit case that the case shall be reopened as prayed for by the plaintiff. Thus I find no merit in the civil revision petition. Accordingly it is dismissed.

v. Yamuna Bai and others ...Respondents.

Specific Relief Act (XLVII of 1963), Secs.9 and 10 - Suit for specific performance of agreement - Un explained silence and wanton delay in approaching court - Plaintiff, if disentitled to relief - Plaintiff's witnesses not speaking truth before court - Relief, if can be refused.

Held: There is no explanation as to why the society waited for nearly a year after issuing every notice. Once it was made clear to the society that the defendants would not execute a sale deed as claimed by them, they should have proceeded to enforce specific performance. But they did not do so. They issued a notice again after a year and filed a suit after expiry of a further year. In the absence of any explanation for this inordinate delay in approaching the court, it can be inferred that the society has waived the performance of contract and abandoned the same. This is a case of unexplained silence and wanton delay and the society cannot escape the consequence of the same by saying that mere delay in seeking specific performance would not disentitle them to get the relief. In the present case, it is clear from a reading of the evidence of P.Ws.1 and 2 that they are not willing to speak the truth before the court. It is obvious that they are cancelling the facts from the court and their evidence is false. Even that is sufficient to refuse the relief to the plaintiff. [Paras. 9 & 10]

V.Chandranathan, for Appellant.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Srinivasan, J.: The plaintiff, which is a co-operative society has filed this appeal. The suit is one for specific performance of an agreement dated 26.10.1976 under Ex.A-1 entered with the plaintiff by one Radhakrishnan. Under the terms of the agreement, the consideration—was fixed as Rs.1,04,000 and an advance of Rs.5,000 is said to have been paid. The time for completion of the transaction was agreed to be three months. In other words, it was to be completed before 25.1.1977. On 16.11.1976, the said Radhakrishnan gave a letter to the plaintiff stating that he signed the agreement without knowing the contents when the members of the society compelled him to sign the same. According to him, he was not having a steady mind at that time and after he returned to his house, the members of his family expressed the dissent to the transaction. He prayed for cancellation of the agreement.

2. On 20.11.1976, the Board of Directors passed two resolutions, one deciding to apply for sanction to purchase the property to the concerned authority viz., The Director of Handlooms and Textiles and the other to apply for loan from the Provident Fund kept in deposit with the Central Co-operative Bank, Kancheepuram. Radhakrishnan wrote another letter on 7.12.1976 marked as Ex.B-2 on the same lines as Ex.B-1. There was a reply by the Society to Radhakrishnan on 17.1.1977 through its lawyer. It was stated in the reply that the Society was ready and willing to have the sale deed completed and pay the balance of the sale price. He was called upon to fix and intimate a date to the society for the execution and registration of the sale deed. Radhakrishnan sent a reply in Ex. A-4 on 28.1.1977 stating that the agreement was executed when he was not sober. He stated that the agreement could not be completed and he would not execute a sale deed. The society kept quiet after receiving the said reply.

3. Radhakrishnan died on 23.7.1977. The society sent notices to the legal representatives on 13.8.1977 under Ex.A-5 and Ex.A-6 calling upon them to execute a sale deed as per the agreement referred to earlier. A reply was sent by the legal representatives who are the defendants herein on 22.8.1977 under Ex.A-7 in which they stated categorically that the sale deed would not be executed and the society was not entitled to call upon them to specifically perform the agreement. Nearly a year lapsed before the society issued another notice under Ex.A-7 dated 28.6.1978 again calling upon the defendants to execute the sale deed. There is no explanation in the notice as to why the society kept quiet after receiving the earlier reply notice dated 22.8.1977. There was a reply by the defendants on 9.7.1978 under Ex.A-9 once again reiterating their stand. Again, the society kept quiet till 5.6.1979, when a registered notice was issued by the society's lawyer under Ex.A-10. Then the suit was filed on 18.6.1979 by the society for specific performance. It is averred in the plaint that the society is ready and willing to deposit the sum of Rs.99,000 under directions of the Court out of which amount, the amount necessary to obtain Income Tax Clearance Certificate under Sec.230-A of the Income Tax Act may be directed to be paid to the authorities by the court and the same adjusted against the price of the suit property. There is no explanation in the plaint as to why the Society kept quiet for nearly three years after the date of the agreement in spite of being aware of the stand taken by Radhakrishnan and his legal representatives. There is also no explanation as to why the society waited for more than a year after issuing the so-called final notice under Ex.A-6 to the defendants.

4. The defendants raised several contentions. The main contention was that the agreement was not entered into voluntarily by Radhakrishnan and at the time of agreement, he was under the influence of alcohol and his senses were not in his control. It was also alleged that he was steeped in debts and owing to pressure of debts and unhappiness, he became an addict to drinks. It was further alleged that the office-bearers of the society compelled him to execute the agreement and the property was worth much more than the consideration stated in the agreement. The entitlement of the plaintiff to the relief of specific performance was also challenged on the ground that the plaintiff was not ready and willing to perform its part of the contract and had abandoned the contract.

5. The trial court framed nine issues. The trial court found against the plea of the defendants that the agreement was executed by Radhakrishnan at the time when he was not fully conscious or when he was under the influence of drinks. It also found that the plaintiff society had sufficient money to be drawn for the purpose of paying the balance of consideration. However, the trial court found that the plaintiff was not ready or willing to perform the contract and it had not even obtained the sanction from the Director of Handlooms as required by law. It was also found that the plaintiff was guilty of laches and abandonment of the contract. Consequently, the suit was dismissed by the trial court. Incidentally, it should be mentioned that defendants 4 and 5 who were impleaded in the suit were tenants in the property and it was found by the trial court that they were necessary parties. But, when the appeal was pending in this Court, an endorsement was made by the appellant's counsel that the appeal was not pressed as against defendants 4 and 5. Consequently, the appeal was dismissed against respondents 4 and 5.

6. Learned counsel for the plaintiff/appellant contends that the documents produced by the plaintiff and the oral evidence, adduced on the said of the plaintiff proved beyond doubt that it was always ready and willing to perform its part. According to learned counsel, once it is found that the contract is not vitiated by fraud, coercion or undue influence, the court is bound to grant specific performance, particularly when it is found that the society had sufficient funds to perform its part of the contract.

7. The evidence adduced by the plaintiff is discrepant. It is not necessary for us to consider all the questions raised in the court below. Suffice it to point out that the finding of the court below that the plaintiff was not ready and willing to perform its part of the contract is acceptable and cannot be interfered with. No doubt, the correctness of the finding of the court below on the question as to whether Radhakrishnan executed the contract when he was sober and steady is open to doubt. There are reasons to hold otherwise, but we do not propose to do so as the evidence is not sufficient therefor. The learned trial Judge has chosen to disbelieve the version of D.W.1, the wife of Radhakrishnan on the ground it is unnatural. According to him, she has repeated what is contained in Exs.B-1 and B-2 the letters written by Radhakrishnan to the Society. That is hardly a ground for rejecting the evidence of D.W.1. A perusal of her evidence shows that it is natural and she has only spoken what happened in the house when Radhakrishnan informed the family of his signature having been taken on some papers by the society. She has given evidence that Radhakrishnan was always under the influence of drinks on account of pressure and tension. She has also stated that the property was worth more than Rs.2,00,000 at the time of the agreement. There is no necessity to reject her evidence. We accept her evidence. But, that is not sufficient for us to give a finding that the agreement was executed by Radhakrishnan at a time when he was under the influence of drinks. None who was present at the time of agreement has been examined. The first defendant has not examined any other third party to prove that Radhakrishnan was always under the influence of drinks. She has not also proved the existence of debts which pressurised Radhakrishnan. She has not let in evidence to prove the value of the property at the time of agreement. Hence, we are not in a position to accept the defence fully though we find no reason to reject her evidence as such which in our opinion is not sufficient to give a finding in her favour.

8. As regards the readiness and willingness of the plaintiff society, it is not in dispute that the society has to obtain sanction of the Director for purchasing immovable property. The resolution was passed only on that basis on 20-11-1976 by the Board of Directors. It was decided that an application should be made to the Director of Handlooms and Textiles for sanction of the purchase for a consideration of Rs.1,04,000. In the same meeting, another resolution was also passed that loan would be obtained from out of the Provident Fund on an application made to the Bank. Having passed such resolutions, the society has admittedly failed to make application either to the Director of Handlooms or to the Bank. It is sought to be projected in the evidence that a sum of Rs.2,00,000 was available in the building fund of the society in 1976-77 and there is no necessity to borrow money. Ex.A-2, a report of the Auditor of the society has been filed. It is seen from an entry in Ex.A-2 that a sum of 2,12,531 was available as on 30.6.1977 under the building fund and earlier a sum of Rs.1,82,395 was available on 30.6.1976 under the same fund. But, the resolution passed is to the effect that they should borrow from the provident fund. If really a sum of Rs.2,00,000 and odd was available at the time of the agreement, it is not known why the resolution was passed to borrow from the provident fund. There is no explanation therefor. P.W.2 one of the Directors, who took part in the meeting and a signatory to the resolution denies passing of such a resolution. According to his evidence, it was not decided to borrow loan from the provident fund. He has also stated that the resolution was erroneous and there was no application at all for loan. If his version in the box is correct, there is no explanation as to how the minutes book contains such entries evidencing resolutions having been passed. P.W.2 has also admitted that there was no sanction from the Director of Textiles for the purchase of the property. He has admitted that it is open to the Director to either reject or accept their application. P.W.1 also admits that it is necessary to obtain sanction of the Director. But, P.W.1 adds that it is usual to complete the transaction and later apply for ratification. But, that is not evident from any of the documents. That also runs counter to the resolutions passed as well as the evidence of P.W.2. The evidence of P.Ws.1 and 2 shows that it was necessary to obtain sanction before making the purchase. Admittedly such sanction has not been obtained. Hence, it cannot be said that the plaintiff was always ready to perform its part of the contract. When in the eye of law, the plaintiff could not have performed its part of the contract, it cannot claim that it was ready to perform the same. The willingness cannot also be said to have been established when there is material discrepancy in the matter of drawing of funds. It may be that the society had more than Rs.2,00,000 in the building fund. But, the resolution passed by the Board of Directors is not to draw from the building fund. It is only to apply for a loan from the bank and admittedly no such application was made. Hence, it cannot be contended that the society has proved its willingness to perform its part of the contract.

9. We have already referred to the notices issued by the society once a year. There is no explanation as to why the society waited for nearly a year after issuing every notice. Once it was made clear to the society that the defendants would not execute a sale deed as claimed by them, they should have proceeded to enforce specific performance. But, they did not do so. They issued a notice again after a year and filed a suit after expiry of a further year. In the absence of any explanation for this inordinate delay in approaching the court, it can be inferred that the society has waived the performance of contract and abandoned the same. This is a case of unexplained silence and wanton delay and the society cannot escape the consequence of the same by saying that mere delay in seeking specific performance would not disentitle them to get the relief. See: Kantilal Sahah v. A.C. Devarajulu Reddiar, (1977) 2 M.L.J. 484 (D.B.).

10. Reliance is placed on the judgment in Easwari Amma v. M.K. Korah, (1972) 1 M.L.J. 218. A Division Bench of this Court has held that mere delay will not preclude the plaintiff for obtaining specific performance if the suit is otherwise in time. It has also been pointed out by the Bench that the delay must not be such from which it may be properly inferred that the plaintiff has abandoned his right or on account of the delay there must have been such a change of circumstances that the grant of specific performance would prejudice the defendant. The Bench has referred to a judgment of the Supreme Court in Satyanarayana v. Vellohi Rao, (1965) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 145 (1965) 2 An.W.R. (S.C.) 145; (1965) 2 S.C.J. 678; A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 1405. The Apex Court has pointed out that the grant of relief of specific performance is discretionary though not arbitrary and it should be guided by judicial Principles. Reference has also been made to an earlier judgment of another Bench in Subbarayalu v. Tatayya, 1937 M.W.N. 1158. In the earlier case, the Division Bench of this court refused specific performance on two grounds, (1) the plaintiff had given false testimony in the witness box and (2) granting specific performance would be doing injustice to the respondent. In the present case, it is clear from a reading of the evidence of P.Ws.1 and 2 that they are not willing to speak the truth before the court. It is obvious that they are concealing the facts from the court and their evidence is false. Even that is sufficient to refuse the relief to the plaintiff. In addition to it, the delay on the part of the plaintiff is not explained at all.

11. Learned counsel referred to a judgment of V. Sethuraman, J. in Alagammal v. Rajagopala Servai, (1976) 2 M.L.J. 397. The learned Judge held in that case that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to actually tender the money or deposit the same in court except when the court directed the same. According to that judgment, it is sufficient if the plaintiff avers readiness and willingness to perform the contract according to its true construction. That ruling will have no bearing on the present case. No doubt, there is an averment in the plaint that the plaintiff is ready and willing to perform its part. We have already referred to the evidence on record which disproves the averments of the plaintiff. The plaintiff has miserably failed to prove in this case readiness and willingness to perform the contract.

12. In the circumstances, we are entirely in agreement with the findings of the lower court that the plaintiff is guilty of laches and abandonment of the contract. In any event, we refuse to exercise our discretion in favour of the plaintiff and grant specific performance as prayed for. Hence, the appeal fails and it is dismissed. As the respondents have not entered appearance in this appeal, we make no order as to costs.

V.G.Shyamsundar Sah Appellant
v.
Sumitra Bai ...Respondent.

Hindu Marriage Act (XXV of 1955), Secs.5(iii) and 11 - Marriage of minor girl - Not made void under statute - Courts, if can hold such marriage void.

Under Sec.11 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, any violation of Sec.5(iii) is not included as a void marriage, while so, there is no point in saying that there is no lacuna in the Hindu Marriage Act and courts have to decide that aspect that the marriage is void or voidable. It is not for the courts to intervene. It is the function of the legislature. Courts are always anxious to keep the marriage intact. While so, when the statute does not provide for nullity of a marriage or voidability of a marriage on such a ground, courts will not go to the extent of holding the marriage void on this ground.

S.D.N.Vimalanathan, for Appellant.

JUDGMENT: This appeal is against the judgment in C.M.A.No.22 of 1988, in which the learned District Judge, Chengalpet, has reversed the finding of the trial court in H.M.O.P.No.53 of 1986 on the file of the Subordinate Judge, Kancheepuram. 2. The short facts of the case are as follows: The petitioner had filed a petition under Secs.5(iii), 11 and 12(1)(i) of the Hindu Marriage Act, seeking a declaration that the marriage between the parties is null and void on the ground that the respondent was a minor on the date of marriage, that the consent of the guardian was not obtained and on the ground that the respondent was an impotent person at the time of marriage. The petition was opposed by the respondent and after enquiry, the learned Subordinate Judge has allowed the petition. Aggrieved by the same, the respondent has filed C.M.A.No.22 of 1988 before the learned District Judge, Chengalpet. On a consideration of the materials before him, the learned District Judge has found that none of the grounds on which the declaration is sought for are made out and dismissed the petition. Aggrieved by the same, the petitioner has come forward with this second appeal.

3. Mr. Vimalanathan, learned counsel appearing for the appellant, would submit that regarding impotency, the evidence of the Doctor is not helpful, that at an earlier point of time the petitioner sought for medical examination of the respondent, but because of the unwillingness expressed by the respondent, she was not sent for medical examination and that circumstance has not been taken proper note by the lower appellate court and the examination of the Doctor was done only after 7 years after the filing of the petition disproving impotency. He further submits that the Doctor who had conducted the scan on the respondent was not examined. Regarding the void or voidable nature of the marriage, the learned counsel would submit that as per the Hindu Marriage Act, the minority of any one of the parties to the marriage was either void or voidable and there is a lacuna in the Act and it is for the courts to interpret and fill up the lacuna. He would further submit that because of the amendment of Child Marriage Act, the question of getting consent of the guardian did not arise under that Act, and after the amendment repealing the section in the Child Marriage Act, no corresponding enactment has been made in the Hindu Marriage Act. It is his submission that thus the question of law arises in this regard.

4. I have carefully considered the submissions made by the learned counsel and I find none of the grounds can be sustained. Regarding impotency, Dr. Bhagyavathi who had examined the respondent has given a clear and categorical opinion that Sumitra Bai, namely, the respondent herein is capable of having sexual intercourse. The medical report given by her has also been marked in this case. In the report the Doctor has stated that Sumitra Bai was maintaining normal health and normal figure. Her breast was normal commensurate to her figure and her uterus was also normal and the ovaries are also normal. The Doctor has very fairly pointed out that there was abnormal hair growth over chin, 2 cheeks in his report marked as exhibit. From the existence of some hair in those places, one cannot straightaway come to a conclusion that she must have been impotent and not capable to have sexual intercourse. No doubt, she was examined in 1992, but there is no evidence that she must have been impotent at an earlier point of time and only at a later point of time she must have become potent. No medical evidence is produced to prove the same.

5. Regarding the non-examination of the Doctor who had conducted the scan, I do not find any relevance. In a well considered judgment the trial court has dealt with this aspect of the case and decided against the petitioner. I do not find any ground whatsoever to interfere in this regard.

6. Regarding the void or voidable nature of the marriage, because the respondent was a minor at the time of marriage, the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act do not provide to hold such marriage as void or voidable. As per Sec.5 which stipulates the conditions for a marriage, a marriage may be solemnized between any two Hindus, if the following conditions are fulfilled, namely,

“(iii) the bridegroom has completed the age of (twenty-one years) and the bride the age of (eighteen years) at the time of the marriage.”

Under Sec.11, any violation of Sec.5(iii) is not included as a void marriage, while so there is no point in saying that there is lacuna in the Hindu Marriage Act and courts have to decide that aspect that the marriage is void or voidable. It is not for the courts to intervene. It is the function of the legislature. Courts are always anxious to keep the marriage intact. While so, when the statute does not provide for nullity of a marriage or voidability of a marriage on such a ground, I am clear that courts will not go to the extent of holding the marriage void on this ground. The learned counsel appearing for the appellant would place reliance upon the view of the learned author Ramesh Chandra Nagpal in his book ‘Modern Hindu Law’ published by Eastern Book Company, at page 116:

“Kinds of Marriages: There are three types of marriages under this Act, (i) valid, (ii) void and (iii) voidable. Section 11 deals with void marriages and Sec.12 with the voidable ones. But all other marriages which are not covered by these two sections are not valid. The drafting of the Act, from this point of view, is indeed defective. The violation of Secs.7 and 15 also renders a marriage void or non-existent but neither those sections nor Secs.11 and 12 guide us explicitly as to this effect of the violation of the provisions of those sections.”

I do not agree with the learned author for the reasons stated above.

7. In view of the above, I do not find any question of law involved in this second appeal and hence it deserves to be dismissed and shall stand dismissed.

v.

The Regional Transport Authority, Madras
...Respondent.

Practice and Procedure - Learned Judge of High Court laying down a principle in law - Principle held - Applicable to cases of similar nature - Respondent expected to have understood the provision of law and implication of the order.

The petitioners applied to the Regional Transport Authority, Madras, for the grant of two contract carriage permits basing on the principle of law laid down by a learned Single Judge in W.P.No.1779 of 1992 on 19.11.1992, that the Regional Transport Authority was the proper authority to grant permits in such cases. The respondent returned the petitions on the ground that the order of the court would apply to the petitioner therein alone. They filed writ petitions to direct the respondent to dispose of the applications.

Held: When a learned Judge of this Court has laid down a principle in law, it is applicable to cases of similar nature under the Motor Vehicles Act. Hence, the respondent has to take up the applications or file and dispose them of on merits and according to law. It is very unfortunate that the Regional Transport Authority is ignorant of the implication of court's order wherein the learned single Judge of this Court has laid down a proposition on a question of law in explicit terms as to who is the proper authority in granting permits. As a public authority the respondent is expected to have understood the provision of law and in implication of the order of the learned single Judge. If he has any doubt, he should have asked the Law Officers of the State. [Paras. 4 & 5]

Petitions under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein, and in the respective affidavits filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue writs of mandamus directing the Regional Transport Authority, Madras Central, Madras-31 to consider and dispose of the application of the petitioner in each of the petitions for the grant of two contract carriage permits on the application dated 13.11.1992 forthwith.

Dr.V.Subrahmanyam, for Petitioners.

M.M.Sundaresh, Government Advocate, for Respondent.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The prayers in all these writ petitions are one and the same, viz., for a direction to the respondent to dispose of the applications of the petitioners for the grant of two contract carriage permits dated 13.11.1992.

2. Learned counsel for the petitioners contends that the applications submitted by the petitioners to the respondent had been returned on the ground that the order of this court passed by Srinivasan, J., in W.P.No.17779 of 1992 on 19.11.92 will apply to the petitioner therein alone. According to the learned counsel the respondent has not applied its mind and it ought to have passed orders on merits as held by Srinivasan, J. in the application submitted by the petitioners.

3. Learned Government Advocate takes notice.

4. After going through the endorsement of return made by the respondent and on going through the affidavit filed in support of the writ petition, I am of the view that the respondent has understood the implication of the order passed by this Court in W.P.No.17779 of 1992, wherein Srinivasan, J. has held that the Regional Transport Authority is the proper authority to grant permit in such cases. Then a learned Judge of this Court has laid down a principle in law, it is applicable to cases of similar nature under the Motor Vehicles Act. Hence I am of the view that the respondent has to take up the applications on file and dispose them of on merits and according to law within two weeks from the date of receipt of a copy of this order. The writ petitions are allowed. No costs.

5. It is very unfortunate that the Regional Transport Authority is ignorant of the implication of court's order wherein the learned single Judge of this Court has laid down a proposition on question of law in explicit terms as to who is the proper authority in granting permits. As a public authority, the respondent is expected to have understood the provision of law and the implication of the order of the learned single Judge. If he has any doubt he should have asked the Law Officers of the State and to return the said applications with such endorsement on such ground is bordering on contempt. It is expected of the respondent, atleast in future he will be more careful when construing an order of this Court, especially when it is given on a question of law.

Tamil Nadu Electricity Board represented by its Chairman and another

...Respondents.

Tamil Nadu Electricity Board Employees Discipline and Appeal Regulations, Regulation 8(f) - Initiation of disciplinary action against any employee by any officer in Class I or Class II without authorisation of competent authority - Effect - Entirety of proceedings, if vitiated.

Regulation 8(f) of the Tamil Nadu Electricity

Board Employees' Discipline and Appeal Regulations prescribes that the competent authority may authorise any officer in Class I or Class II service superior in the rank to the employee to initiate departmental proceedings and to hold enquiry against the employee. On the findings of that Officer, the competent authority may award punishment or otherwise give a decision. On the face of Regulation 8(f), it goes without saying that the initiation of the departmental proceedings and holding of inquiry thereof against any employee by any officer in Class I or Class II are not permissible except authorised by the competent authority. There is no pale of controversy that no authorisation had been issued by respondent, Board for initiation of departmental proceedings and holding of an enquiry against the petitioner-delinquent who is a Class II officer either to the Superintending Engineer, Rural Electrification or to the Superintending Engineer, Chengalpattu Electricity System, Kancheepuram or to the Chief Engineer (Inquiry Officer-Respondent 2). As such the initiation of the disciplinary proceedings and holding of inquiry as against the delinquent petitioner by all those authorities, as stated above is not warranted by any of the provisions adumbrated under the Regulations. In this view of the matter, to say that the the initiation of the disciplinary proceedings by the incompetent authorities is not vitiating the entirety of the proceedings cannot at all be countenanced, the consequence of which is that there is no other for this Court except to quash the impugned proceedings on this ground alone. [Para. 6]

Case referred to:

Union of India v. Mohd. Ramzan Khan, A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 471. [Para. 7]

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein, and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorarified mandamus calling for the entire records in B.P.MS.(FB) No.1 (Administrative Branch), dated 20.1.1984 on the file of the 2nd respondent herein and quash the same by directing the respondents herein to reinstate the petitioner in the service of the 1st respondent-Board with full backwages and all other accrued benefits including seniority, promotion etc.

Peppin Fernando, for Petitioner.

C.S.Krishnamoorthy, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The petitioner P.J.Vincent, it is said, was functioning as Assistant Divisional Engineer in the services of the Tamil Nadu Electricity Board (respondent 1). While so functioning, he was served with a Memo No. SE/RE/ST/Cenfl. 20/82, dated 30.6.82 issued by the Superintending Engineer/Rural Electrification, Madras for initiation of disciplinary proceedings cataloguing various charges framed against him. Likewise the Superintending Engineer, Chengalpattu Electricity System Kancheepuram served a memo No. SEC/Adm.2/J A.1/DP.PJV/PR.448/83, dated 5.4.1983 on him cataloguing various charges.

2. Two set of charges, if proved are liable to be visited with penalty of removal or dismissal from service as stated above, were inquired into by the Chief Engineer Personnel, Tamil Nadu Electricity Board, Madras-600 002 (respondent 2) and after the conclusion of the inquiry, he submitted a report to respondent-Board holding the petitioner guilty of certain grave charges, though in respect of certain other charges, he held as not proved.

3. Respondent 1-Board, even without furnishing copy of the inquiry report to the delinquent - petitioner, dismissed him from service, accepting the findings of the Inquiring Officer by order in BP.Ms.(FB) No.1 (Administrative Branch) dated 20.1.1984. The operative portion of the order of the Board is couched in the following terms:

"The Tamil Nadu Electricity Board after careful consideration of the case with the connected records comes to the conclusion that he may be dismissed from the service of the Board. Accordingly, the Tamil Nadu Electricity Board hereby directs that Thiru P.J.Vincent, Assistant Divisional Engineer/Electrical be dismissed from the service of the Board from 28.12.83 FN., i.e. the date from which he has been continuously absent from duty unauthorisedly. 13. He is directed to acknowledge receipt of this Board Proceedings"

This order of the Board was stated to have been signed by respondent 2, Chief Engineer/Personnel (Inquiry Officer) by order of the Board, respondent 1, and thereafter communicated to the petitioner. The petitioner, aggrieved by the said order, resorted to the present action praying for issue of a writ of certiorarified mandamus to quash the said order and direct the respondents to reinstate him in service with full backwages and attendant benefits therefor.

4. Learned counsel appearing for the petitioner would raise two contentions:

(1) Neither the Superintending Engineer/Rural Electrification, Madras, who issued the first set of charges; nor the Superintending Engineer, Chengalpattu Electricity System, Kancheepuram, who issued the second set of charges, to the delinquent petitioner, in their respective memos; nor respondent 2-Chief Engineer/Personnel, Tamil Nadu Electricity Board, Madras-600 002-Inquiry Officer had been authorised by respondent 1-Board either for framing of charges or for holding an inquiry-the various steps in the initiation of the disciplinary proceedings as against the delinquent petitioner and consequently such initiation of the disciplinary proceedings by such incompetent authorities vitiated the entirety of the proceedings and therefore, the impugned proceedings are liable to be quashed.

(2) The non-furnishing of the copy of the inquiry report to the delinquent petitioner before ever the final order of dismissing him from service by the Board was passed would tantamount to violating the principles of natural justice, in the sense of his not having been given adequacy of opportunity to rebut the findings of the Inquiry Officer and on this ground also, the impugned order is liable to be quashed.

5. Learned counsel appearing for the respondents would however admit that there was no authorisation by respondent 1-Board either to the Superintending Engineer/Rural Electrification, Madras or to the Superintending Engineer, Chengalpattu Electricity System, Kancheepuram to frame charges against the delinquent petitioner by serving memos; nor was there any authorisation to respondent 2-Chief Engineer/personnel by the Board to hold an inquiry into the various charges as framed against him by the aforesaid officers. But nonetheless, he would say that the impugned order is not at all liable to be quashed.

6. Regulation No.6 of Tamil Nadu Electricity Board Employees Discipline and Appeal Regulations (for short 'Regulations') prescribes authorities who may impose penalties on various classes and categories of employees of the Board. The employees of the Board under these Regulations had been classified into four classes. The Assistant Divisional Engineer like the petitioner is an officer under Class II (C). For such an officer, the competent authority, who can inflict the punishment of dismissal from service is the Board. If the authority imposing the punishment happens to be the Board, there is no further appeal to the Appellate Authority, the reasons being the Board itself is the appellate authority. In all these cases, where punishment is imposed by any authority, other than the Board, it is appealable to the appellate authority, namely, the Board. Regulation 8(f) prescribes that the competent authority may authorise any officer in Class I or Class II service superior rank to the employee to initiate departmental proceedings and to hold enquiry against the employee. On the findings of that Officer, the competent authority may award punishment or otherwise give a decision. On the face of Regulation 8(f), it goes without saying that the initiation of the departmental proceedings and holding of inquiry thereof against any employee by any officer in Class I or Class II are not permissible except authorised by the competent authority. There is no pale of controversy that no authorisation had been issued by respondent-1, Board for initiation of departmental proceedings and holding of an enquiry against the petitioner-delinquent who is a Class II officer either to the Superintending Engineer, Rural Electrification or to the Superintending Engineer, Chengalpattu Electricity System, Kancheepuram or to the Chief Engineer (Inquiry Officer-Respondent 2). As such the initiation of the disciplinary proceedings and holding of inquiry as against the delinquent petitioner by all those authorities, as stated above is not warranted by any of the provisions adumbrated under the Regulations. In this view of the matter, to say that the initiation of the disciplinary proceedings by the incompetent authorities is not vitiating the entirety of the proceedings cannot at all be countenanced, the consequence of which is that there is no other go for this Court except to quash the impugned proceedings on this ground alone.

7. As respects the submission revolving on the question of non-furnishing of the inquiry report of respondent 2-Inquiry Officer to the delinquent petitioner, learned counsel for the petitioner placed implicit reliance upon the decision of the Supreme Court in Union of India v. Mohd. Ramzan Khan, A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 471. The Bench of the Apex Court consisting of their Lordships Ranganath Mishra, C.J. P.B.Sawant and K.Ramaswamy, JJ., in a scintillating fashion, expressed their views on a similar question now posed in the case on hand in paragraphs 15 and 17:

“15. Deletion of the second opportunity from the scheme of Art.311(2) of the Constitution has nothing to do with providing of a copy of the report to the delinquent in the matter of making his representation. Even though the second stage inquiry in Art.311(2) has been abolished by amendment, the delinquent is still entitled to represent against the conclusion of the Inquiry Officer holding that the charges or some of the charges are established and holding the delinquent guilty of such charges. For doing away with the effect of the enquiry report or to meet the recommendations of the Inquiry Officer in the matter of imposition of punishment, furnishing a copy of the report becomes necessary and to have the proceeding completed by using some material behind the back of the delinquent is a position not countenanced by fair procedure. While by law application of natural justice could be totally ruled out or truncated, nothing has been done here which could be taken as keeping natural justice out of the proceedings and the series of pronouncements of this Court making rules of natural justice applicable to such an inquiry are not affected by the 42nd amendment. We, therefore, come to the conclusion that supply of a copy of the inquiry report along with the recommendations, if any, in the matter of proposed punishment to be inflicted would be within the rules of natural justice and the delinquent would, therefore be entitled to the supply of a copy thereof. The Forty-Second Amendment has not brought about any change in this position.

17. There have been several decisions in different High Courts which, following the Forty-Second Amendment:

“have taken the view that it is no longer necessary to furnish a copy of the inquiry report to delinquent officers. Even on some occasions this Court has taken that view. Since we have reached a different conclusion the judgments in the different High courts taking the contrary view must be taken to be no longer laying down good law. We have not been shown any decision of a coordinate or a larger Bench of this Court taking this view. Therefore, the conclusion to the contrary reached by any two-judge Bench in this Court will also no longer be taken to be laying down good law, but this shall have prospective application and no punishment imposed shall be open to challenge on this ground”.

8. Learned counsel for the respondents would however submit that the ratio, as laid down by the Supreme Court in the aforesaid decision, is not at all applicable to the facts of the instant case, inasmuch as the punishment on the delinquent-petitioner had been imposed long before the judgment of the Supreme Court, which came into existence only on 20.11.1990. No doubt, this argument of learned counsel for the respondents is built upon the last portion of the sentence in paragraph 17, namely, “...but this shall have prospective application and no punishment imposed shall be open to challenge on this ground”. To this interpretation, as put by learned counsel for the respondents on the aforesaid portion of the judgment of the Supreme Court, I am unable to affix my seal of approval. What perhaps Their Lordships of the Supreme Court wanted to convey by the phraseology employed therein was that the punishment imposed on a delinquent employees once and for all concluded and set at rest is not liable to challenge by reference to writ proceedings subsequent to their decision. If such an arrangement is thrown open to challenge, it is nothing but opening of Pandora's box thereby making no end to litigations.

9. Since the petitioner had been removed from service by order dated 20.1.1984 with retrospective effect from 28.12.1982 FN., and the same thing had been agitated further by resortment to the present action, it cannot be stated that the ratio of the decision of the Supreme Court is not at all applicable.

10. For the reasons, as stated above, it goes without saying that this writ petition deserves to be allowed and the same is accordingly allowed as prayed for. Rule nisi issued is made absolute. There will, however, be no order as to costs in the circumstances of the case.

time - Likely to be again required for public use - Procedure.*

Under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, once the land is taken possession, it vests with Government free of all encumbrances. It is seen from the averments made in the affidavit and from the letters written by Amalgamation Company that the lands were given to the Company and that the said Company was taken over by another company later. As such the lands which were handed over to the company originally were resumed and were leased out to another company. Nobody can prevent that. From the records before this Court, it is seen that the lands were with the Government as Government lands even under the common law, the lands are vested with the Government nearly 28 years ago. It is settled law under S.O.90 of 32 that no land shall be disposed of to any person which is no longer required for the public purpose for which it was acquired and if the land relinquished are likely to be again required for public purposes, it should be merely leased out for such term as may be considered desirable in each case.

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorarified mandamus calling for the records of the Notifications issued in G.O.R.No.1392, Industries, Labour and Co-operation (Industries), dated 18.9.1962 on the file of the 1st respondent herein and published in the Fort St.George Gazette, dated 17.10.1962 and quash the same, directing the respondents herein to hand over vacant possession of the land of an extent of 1.47 acres covered and comprised in Survey No.843 bearing patta No.322 situated in Madhavaram village, Chingleput District to the petitioner herein. C.S.Prakasa Rao, for Petitioner.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The prayer in the writ petition is to issue a writ of certiorari mandamus to call for the records of the notifications issued in G.O.R.No.1392, Industries, Labour and Co-operation (Industries), dated 18.9.1992 on the file of the first respondent herein and published in the Fort St.George Gazette, dated 17.10.1962 and quash the same, directing the respondents herein to hand over vacant possession of the land of an extent of 1.47 acres covered and comprised in Survey No.843 bearing Patta No.322, situate in Madhavaram village, Chingleput district to the petitioner herein. 2. It seems that certain lands were sought to be acquired for Reichhold Chemicals India Ltd., for the manufacture of synthetic resins and accordingly they were acquired in the year 1962, when the father of the petitioners herein was alive. After the death of the father of the petitioners herein, in the year 1985, the petitioners herein seem to have written a letter in the year 1992 to the first respondent calling for the respondents 1 and 2 to hand over the lands so acquired, since the lands were not utilised for the purpose for which they were acquired. The petitioners were replied that the company for which the lands were acquired had been taken over by UB Groups during the year 1988, that the lands so acquired were in the custody of Amalgamation Group and as such the petitioners were informed that they should write to Amalgamation Group Limited. Later, the petitioners' counsel issued a notice to Amalgamation Group and the petitioners were replied by M/s.Amalgations Limited, the third respondent herein, that the lands were acquired by the Government of Tamil Nadu and the acquisition had become final as early as 1964, that M/s.Simpson and General Finance Co. Ltd., took possession of the lands on 30.4.1964 and that by that time, the petitioners title to the said land had become extinguished once and for all. The petitioners were also informed that the lands in question were resumed by the Government under the terms and conditions of the agreement between the Government and Simpson and General Finance Limited and that they were issued by the Government to Sri Rama Vilas Services Limited for the purpose of setting out their Transport Industry.

3. Mr.C.S.Prakasa Rao, the learned counsel for the petitioners contends that once the lands, which were acquired for certain purposes were not used for that purpose, the State Government cannot make use of the land by leasing out the same to third party and that the said lands should be returned to original owners. It is also stated by the learned counsel that the lands were acquired for Reichhold Chemicals India Limited, that when the company was not in existence, it is not open to the Government to lease out the lands to some other Company without authority of law that the action of the Government is illegal. It is also argued by the learned counsel then the petitioners are ready and willing to pay back the amount of compensation paid for the said land acquired.

4. After hearing the learned counsel for the petitioners and after going through the affidavit filed in support of the writ petition I am not able to accept the arguments of the learned counsel for the petitioner. Under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, once the land is taken possession, it vests with Government free of all encumbrances. The lands in question were acquired as early as 1964 and I do not think the petitioners can claim any interest in the said lands; nearly after 28 years and try to contend as if they are having title over the lands. Once the land is taken over and compensation is paid to the owner, the matter ends there itself. It is not in dispute that the petitioners' father had received compensation for the lands so acquired by the Government and the lands were vested with the Government thereafter. It is not clear from the affidavit or from the arguments of the learned counsel for the petitioners whether the lands were handed over to the company for the purpose, for which the lands were acquired. It is seen from the averments made in the affidavit and from the letters written by Amalgamation company that the lands were given to the company and that the said company was taken over by another company later. As such lands which were handed over to the company originally were resumed and were leased out to another company. Nobody can prevent that. From the records before this Court it is seen that the lands were with the Government as Government lands. Even under the common law, the lands are vested with the Government nearly 28 years ago. I do not think the provisions of standing orders of the Board of Revenue, relied on by the learned counsel for the petitioner will apply to the facts of the case on hand. It is settled law under S.O.90 of 32 no land shall be disposed of, to any person, which is no longer required for the public purpose for which it was acquired and if the land relinquished is likely to be again required for public purposes, it should be merely leased out for such term as may be considered desirable in each case. There are no merits in this writ petition. Accordingly, it shall stand dismissed.

Motor Vehicles Act (LIX of 1988), Secs.74 and 88(8) - Exemption under - G.O.Ms.No.894, dated 29.5.1991 - Applicability - Basic permit issued to vehicle to operate within a radius of 2 Kms. from place of business of permit-holder - Holder, if can be considered holder of permit under Sec.74 - Special permit issued by State other than Tamil Nadu permitting vehicle to pick up passengers and get them down in State of Tamil Nadu - Exemption granted under G.O., if applicable to such vehicle.

The permit issued is very clear in its terms and it is mentioned in paragraph 6 that the vehicle is to operate within a radius of 2 Kms. from the place of business of the permit-holder. That is said to be the radius/area for which the permit is valid. If the basic permit is not valid with reference to any area outside the radius of 2 Kms. from the place of business of the permit-holder, it goes without saying that under the provisions of Sec.88(8) of the Act, the petitioner cannot be considered to be a holder of the permit under Sec.74 of the Act for such area. Hence, for the purpose of G.O.Ms.No.894, dated 29.5.1991, the petitioner cannot be considered to be a valid special permit-holder under Sec.88(8) of the Act as he does not have any basic permit under Sec.74 of the Act with reference to any area outside the radius of 2 Kms. from the place of the business. In the present case, it is seen from the copy of the special permit produced by the petitioner that it is issued pursuant to the orders of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh in a writ petition and the permit has been granted to the permit holder to pick up passengers at Madras. If the special permit relied on by the petitioner permits him to pick up passengers and get them down in the State of Tamil Nadu and if such permit is issued by a State other than the State of Tamil Nadu, proviso (a) to G.O.Ms.No.894, dated 29.5.1991 will clearly govern and in the present case, there can be no doubt that proviso (a) is applicable. Consequently, the exemption granted by G.O.Ms.No.894, dated 29.5.1991 is not available to the petitioner. [Para. 1]

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of mandamus forbearing the respondents herein and their subordinates from seizing the petitioner's vehicle TCW.5553 or the documents of the vehicle TCW.5553 or demand tax pursuant to G.O.Ms.No.894, Home (Transport-A) Department, dated 29.5.1991.

M.Sachidanandham, for Petitioner.

V.R.Rajasekaran, Government Advocate, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: This matter is covered by my order dated 26.2.1993 in W.P.Nos.15923 of 1991 etc. (batch) (K.V.Sekar v. The State of Tamil Nadu and others). In those cases, I have held that the basic permit was only operative within a radius of 2 Kms. from the place of business of the permit holder and such basic permit would not enable the petitioner to claim the benefit of G.O.Ms.No.894, dated 29.5.1991 by virtue of the special permit obtained by him under Sec.88(8) of the Motor Vehicles Act, for short "the Act". In the present case, it is argued by learned counsel for the petitioner that the basic permit refers to Sec.74 of the Act and it is the one issued under that section, with the result the provisions of Sec.88(8) of the Act are satisfied. Learned counsel refers to the caption at the top of the permit which reads as follows:

"Basic contract carriage permit issued under Sec.74 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988".

There is a fallacy in this contention. No doubt Sec.88(8) of the Act merely refers to permits granted under Secs.72, 74 and sub-sec.9 of Sec.88. But, Sec.74 which is the relevant section in this case prescribed that a Regional Transport Authority may, on an application made to it under Sec.73, grant a contract carriage permit in accordance with the application or with such modifications as it deems fit or refuse to grant such a permit; provided that no such permit shall be granted in respect of any area not specified in the application. It is not necessary to consider whether the petitioner had applied for a larger area or not. The permit issued is very clear in its terms and it is mentioned in paragraph 6 that the vehicle is to operate within a radius of 2 Kms. from the place of business of the permit holder. That is said to be the radius/area for which the permit is valid. If the basic permit is not valid with reference to any area outside the radius of 2 Kms. from the place of business of the permit holder, it goes without saying that under the provisions of Sec.88(8) of the Act, the petitioner cannot be considered to be a holder of the permit under Sec.74 of the Act for such area. Hence, for the purpose of G.O.Ms.No.894, dated 29.5.1991, the petitioner cannot be considered to be a valid special permit holder under Sec.88(8) of the Act, as he does not have any basic permit under Sec.74 of the Act with reference to any area outside the radius of 2 Kms. from the place of business. In the present case, it is seen from the copy of the special permit produced by the petitioner that it is issued pursuant to the orders of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh in a writ petition and the permit has been granted to the permit holder to pick up passengers at Madras. Proviso (a) to G.O.Ms.No.894, dated 29.5.1991 is as follows:

"the public service vehicles covered by special permits granted under sub-section (8) of sec.88 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 (Central Act 59 of 1988) by the transport authority of a State other than the State of Tamilnadu to pick up and get down passengers in the State of Tamil Nadu.”

If the special permit relied on by the petitioner permits him to pick up passengers and get them down in the State of Tamilnadu and if such permit is issued by a State other than the State of Tamil Nadu proviso (a) will clearly govern and in the present case, there can be no doubt that proviso (a) is applicable. Consequently, the exemption granted by G.O.Ms.No.894, dated 29.5.1991 is not available to the petitioner.

2. In the result, the writ petition is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

(A) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.33, Rule 11 (as amended in Madras) - Person instituting suit as a pauper dying - Legal representatives brought on record - Suit dismissed - Court fees, if can be recovered from legal representatives.

From a careful perusal of O.33, Rule 11, Civil Procedure Code as amended in Madras, it is rather crystal clear that where the plaintiff fails in the suit in the sense of the suit meriting dismissal, the court shall order the plaintiff or any other person added as co-plaintiff to the suit to pay the court-fees. In the instant case, the petitioner had been added as co-plaintiff in the suit consequent on the death of their father as his legal representatives. In such a situation, to contend that the petitioners are not liable to pay the court-fees either personally or from out of their properties and if at all they are liable only to the extent of the estate of the deceased available in their hands as contended by learned counsel for the petitioner cannot at all be countenanced.

[Para. 10]
(B) Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.33, Rule 14 - Revenue Recovery Act (1890) - Limitation Act (XXXVI of 1963), Art.136 - Person instituting suit as indigent dying - Legal representatives brought on record - Suit dismissed - Court ordering recovery of court-fees from the legal representatives - Copy of decree forwarded to Collector for recovery - Collector taking proceedings for recovery more than twenty years after decree - Proceedings, if sustainable.

From O.33, Rule 14, Civil Procedure Code, it is clear that the court-fees payable is recoverable as if it is an arrear of land revenue without prejudice to any other mode of recovery under Art.136 of the Limitation Act, the period prescribed for exemption of any decree other than a decree granting a mandatory injunction or order of any civil court is 12 years when the order or decree becomes enforceable. The suit in C.S.No.114 of 1960 on the file of this Court was dismissed by judgment dated 6.3.1963 requiring the plaintiffs in the suit to pay the court-fees due to the Government. Twelve years calculated from the said date of dismissal of the suit, the exemption proceedings ought to have been taken on or before 5.3.1975. Of course, no proceedings for exemption of the decree been taken before the civil court. But what has been done in this case is to recover the court-fees dues payable by the institution of the proceedings. Under the Revenue Recovery Act, as already stated, Rule 14 of O.33, Civil Procedure Code, makes it abundantly clear that recovery of court-fees is permissible by resorting to the provisions of the said Act without prejudice to any other mode of recovery. At this juncture, it has to be borne in mind that under the said Act, there is no provision at all prescribing any period of limitation for the recovery of moneys to be realised as if such recovery is an arrear of land revenue. The fact that there is no period of limitation prescribed under the said Act does not mean the authorities can sleep over the matter for any length of time, as in the instant case, for about more than two decades in seeking to recover such dues. In such circumstance the recovery attempts made therefor by the authorities concerned has to face dismissal/failure purely on the ground of laches on their part. [Para. 13]

V.Raghupathy, Additional Government Pleader, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: One N.P.Venkatachala Mudaliar instituted a suit on the file of the Original Side of this Court against the Imperial Tobacco Company of India Limited for recovery of a sum of Rs.1,46,000 with interest at 6%. When he presented the plaint, he also sought permission to institute the said proceedings in forma pauperis and filed an application No.187 of 1960 seeking leave to institute the proceedings in forma pauperis under the provisions of O.33, Rule 1, C.P.C. read with O.14, Rule 10 of O.S.Rules. Learned Master of this Court appeared to have passed an order dated 27.7.1960 declaring the said Venkatachala Mudaliar as indigent person and leave was granted to him to sue as a pauper.

2. The suit was numbered as C.S.No.114 of 1960 (pauper). During the pendency of the suit he appeared to have died on 28.1.1961 leaving behind him the petitioner, namely, V.Muthukumaran and V.Satyanarayanan and others as his heirs. An application No.637 of 1961 had been filed for bringing the L.Rs. on record and the said application appeared to have been allowed and they were impleaded as plaintiffs. On trial the suit was dismissed by judgment dated 6.3.1962. While dismissing the suit, learned Judge however did not order costs, but required the plaintiffs in the suit to pay the court-fee due to Government. For the recovery of the amount of court-fees this Court appeared to have caused a copy of the decree to be forwarded to the second respondent-Collector of Madras pursuant to the provision adumbrated under O.33, Rule 14, C.P.C.

3. The second respondent-Collector did not appear to have proceeded further in the matter with due diligence and in the year 1984, the third respondent-the Tahsildar, Purasawalkam-Perambur Taluk, Clements Road, Madras-7 appeared to have required the petitioners by letter C.1/15826/78, dated 7.4.1984 to pay a sum of Rs.10,950 failing which the amount would be recovered from them under the provisions of the Tamil Nadu Revenue Recovery Act II of 1864 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act').

4. On receipt of the said letter the petitioners caused a legal notice to be given through their counsel dated 24.5.1984 disputing their liability to pay the amount on three grounds, namely, (1) They had been impleaded as L.Rs. of N.P.Venkatachala Mudaliar, who instituted the suit in forma pauperis and consequently they cannot be mulcted with liability for the payment of court-fees either from their person or out of the properties belonging to them and if at all such recovery is permissible from out of the State available in their hands; (2) The claim is barred by limitation in the sense of more than 12 years lapse since the passing of the decree, and (3) Even otherwise the laches on the part of the authorities concerned since all were sleeping well over a period of about two decades is certainly a factor which ought to be taken into account in the process of arriving at a decision. Even after the receipt of notice by respondents 2 and 3 they made an attempt to initiate proceedings under the Act to attach their personal properties for the amount due by way of court-fees. The petitioners, therefore, resorted to the present action praying for issuance of a writ of mandamus forbearing the respondents from taking action against the petitioners under the Act pursuant to the proceedings in C2/15826/78, dated 7.4.1984.

5. Learned counsel appearing for the petitioners would raise three contentions:

(i) The petitioners, after all having been impleaded as L.Rs. of the deceased plaintiff N.P.Venkatachala Mudaliar, who instituted the suit as a pauper, cannot at all be mulcted with liability for the payment of court-fees due by the dismissal of the suit from out of their person or properties belonging to them and if at all the estate belonging to late N.P.Venkatachala Mudaliar alone, if any, available in their hands may be proceeded for the realisation of the court-fees due.

(ii) The proceedings for the recovery of the court-fees due by resorting to the provisions of the said Act is a mode of execution of the decree and since such proceedings had been initiated for beyond the period of 12 years from the dismissal of the suit, the same is barred by limitation as per the sanguine provisions adumbrated under Art.136 of the Limitation Act.

(iii) Even otherwise there is lethargy and inaction on the part of the authorities concerned in not resorting to take action for the recovery of the court-fees due for well over a period of two decades. Such lapses on their part will denude them of their right to recover the dues, if there is any.

6. Learned Additional Government Pleader would however repel those submissions.

7. There is no pale of controversy that this suit had been initially instituted by N.P.Venkatachala mudaliar on the original side of this Court for the recovery of certain dues payable to him by the Imperial Tobacco Company of India Limited and he had been allowed to sue as a pauper. The other admitted fact is that while the suit was pending he died and the petitioners herein and others had been impleaded as his L.Rs. The suit was allowed to be proceeded and the same got dismissed by judgment dated 6.3.1963. While dismissing the suit, learned Judge, though not ordered for costs, required the plaintiffs in the suit to pay the court-fees due to the Government and the court-fees so ordered to be recovered from the plaintiffs was sought to be recovered or the first time in 1984 by the impugned proceedings.

8. The main question that falls for determination from the rival submissions of either counsel is as to whether the court-fees due is recoverable from out of the person or personal properties of the petitioners herein or from the estate of the deceased plaintiff N.P.Venkatachala Mudaliar available in their hands by resorting to initiation of proceedings under the Act.

9. In understanding the implications of such a question, reference has to be necessarily made to the sanguine provisions adumbrated under O.33, Rule 11, C.P.C. There is a Madras Amendment to the said Rules and such amended rule dealing with "Procedure where pauper fails" is couched in the following terms: "Where the plaintiff fails in the suit or is dispaupered or where the suit is withdrawn or where part of the claim is abandoned or where the suit is dismissed-

a. because the summons for the defendant to appear and answer has not been served upon him in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the court-fees or postal charges (if any) chargeable for such service, or

b. because the plaintiff does not appear when the suit is called on for hearing the court shall order the plaintiff, or any person added as a co-plaintiff to the suit, to pay the court-fee and in the case of abandonment of the part of the claim the proportionate court-fee, which would have been payable by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper.

In cases where the plaintiff is dispaupered the court may, instead of proceeding under the previous paragraph, order the plaintiff to pay the requisite court-fee within a time to be fixed by it and in default dismiss the suit and make an order for the payment of court-fee as in the previous paragraph.

"Where the court finds that the suit has been instituted unreasonably or improperly by a next friend on behalf of a minor plaintiff on a cause of action which accrued during the minority of such plaintiff, the court may order the next friend to personally pay the court-fee."

10. From the careful perusal of what has been extracted above, it is rather crystal clear that where the plaintiff fails in the suit in the sense of the suit meriting dismissal, the court shall order the plaintiff or any other person added as co-plaintiff to the suit to pay the court-fees. In the instant case the petitioners had been added as co-plaintiffs in the suit consequent on the death of their father N.P.Venkatachala Mudaliar as his Legal Representatives. In such a situation to content that the petitioners are not liable to pay the court-fees either personally or from out of their properties and if at all they are liable only to the extent of the estate of the deceased available in their hands as contended by learned counsel for the petitioners cannot at all be countenanced.

11. O.33, Rule 14, C.P.C. provides for the recovery of the amount of court-fees. It reads as under:

"Where an order is made under Rule 10, Rule 11 or Rule 11A, the court shall forthwith cause a copy of the decree or order to be forwarded to the Collector, who may, without prejudice to any other mode of recovery, recover the amount of court-fees specified therein from the person or property liable for the payment as if it were an arrear of land revenue."

12. From the provision as extracted above, it is clear that the court-fees payable is recoverable as if it is an arrear of land revenue without prejudice to any other mode of recovery. Under Art.136 of the Limitation Act, the period prescribed for execution of any decree other than a decree granting a mandatory injunction or order of any civil court is 12 years whether the order or decree becomes enforceable. As adverted to earlier the suit in C.S.No.114 of 1960 on the file of this Court was dismissed by judgment dated 6.3.1963 requiring the plaintiffs in the suit to pay the court-fees due to the Government. Twelve years calculated from the said date of dismissal of the suit, the execution proceedings ought to have been taken on or before 5.3.1975. Of course no proceedings for execution of the decree had been taken before the civil court.

13. But what had been done in this case is to recover the court-fees dues payable by the institution of the proceedings under the said Revenue Recovery Act. As already stated Rule 14, O.33, C.P.C. makes it abundantly clear that the recovery of court-fees is permissible by resorting to the provisions of the said act without prejudice to any other mode of recovery. At this juncture it has to be borne in mind that under the said Act there is no provision at all prescribing any period of limitation for the recovery of moneys to be realised as if such recovery is an arrear of land revenue. The fact that there is no period of limitation prescribed under the said Act does not mean the authorities can sleep over the matter for any length of time, as in the instant case, for about more than two decades in seeking to recover such dues. In such circumstance the recovery attempts made therefor by the authorities concerned has to face dismal failure purely on the ground of laches on their part.

14. In this view of the matter, the writ petition deserves to be allowed and is accordingly allowed. Rule nisi issued is made absolute. There will, however, be in the circumstances of the case, no order as to costs.

(A) Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), Secs.4(1) and Rule 3 under Sec.5-A - Publication of primary notification under Sec.4(1) and publication of substance of such notification at convenient places in the locality - If mandatory - Notice in Form I in Rule 3 under Sec.5-A containing substance of notification whether would satisfy the requirement of publication of substance of notification.

It has been settled by now that there is no ambiguity of any kind in the principle that publication of primary Notification under Sec.4(1) of the Land Acquisition Act is mandatory and not only the publication in the official gazette but publication of the substance of such notification at convenient places in the locality is also mandatory. [Para. 5] (B) Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), Sec.4(1) - Notification under - Publication of - Some defect in notice - Court thinking that mandatory requirement of publication of substance of notification has not been complied with - Effect - If automatically nullifies acquisition proceedings.

In case where there is some defect in the notice of a sort that a Court may think that the mandatory requirement of the publication of the substance of the notification under Sec.4(1) has not been complied with, the Court shall not for the reason of non-compliance of this requirement alone nullify any acquisition proceedings unless it is shown that the petitioners have suffered for want of notice in the sense that they lost the opportunity to participate in the enquiry under Sec.5(1) of the Act for the reason of want of notice or could not make any representation in the case of urgency acquisition to the proper authorities to show that it was not a case for the acquisition of their lands. No remedy is extended unless it is required to redress an injury. Unless such injury is sustained, no remedy is required. The court may not, for the reason of a mere non-compliance with the requirement of a mandatory provision like to interfere with a concluded proceeding unless the petitioners without such interference have suffered any legal injury.

V.Raghavachari, for Petitioners.

M.Liagat Ali, Government Advocate, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: First and second petitioners (two brothers), third petitioner (son of the first petitioner) and 4th and 5th (minor daughters of the first petitioner) have filed the instant petition praying

"I state that proposals for the requisition of the following lands in Irumbai village for provision of house sites to Adi-Dravidars was sent to District Adi Dravidar Welfare Officer.

S.No.64/3 Govt. Dry 0.22.0 Hectares out of 0.70

to quash the proceedings for acquisition of lands to provide house sites to Adi Dravidas of Irumbai village in South Arcot District. They have stated that their lands in R.S.Nos.64/3B and 64/4B in Irumbai village have been notified in G.O.Ms.No.2556, Social Welfare, dated 13.10.1983 and published in Part 3, Sec.2 of Tamil Nadu Government Gazette, dated 9.11.1983. In the said notification, Government only mentioned names of the first petitioner and third petitioner, that the names of the other petitioners have been omitted and not mentioned and,

"There was no proper publication of Sec.4 notification in the village or in the vicinity of lands sought to be acquired. There was no issue of notice under Rule 38 of the Land Acquisition Rules framed under Land Acquisition Act to the Social Welfare Department at the time of Sec.5-A enquiry. In the issue of Sec.5-A notice, the name of Sundaramoorthy has been omitted and it is incumbent upon the Tahsildar and it is statutory obligation cast on him under Sec.5-A of Land Acquisition Act, to issue notice on each and every person interested in the lands and invite their objections and the failure or omission to do renders Sec.6 notification invalid and void ab initio."

2. There are several other facts stated in the affidavit, since, however, learned counsel for the petitioners has attached the acquisition mainly on the ground of (1) non-compliance of the mandatory requirement of the publication of the substance of the notification under Sec.4(1) of the Land Acquisition Act, for short 'the Act' at convenient places in the locality and (2) non-compliance of the requirement of Rule 38 of the Rules framed under the Act upon the third petitioner, I have not referred to other facts.

3. The above, however, has been replied to in the counter-affidavit filed on behalf of the respondents in these words:

The proposals were initiated after inspection by the then Special Tahsildar (ADW), Tindivanam on 20.6.1983. The abovesaid lands were selected for acquisition after examining the merits and demerits of the lands surrounding the colony. The proposals approved by the Collector, South Arcot District and authorised the Special Tahsildar (ADW), Tindivanam for acquiring the lands and proposals were sent by the Collector to the Government for approval in Collector's ref.W/16/194111/83, dated 21.7.1983. The same was approved by the Government in G.O.Ms.No.2656, SWD, dated 13.10.1983 and it was published in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette, dated 9.11.1983, Part II, Section 2, Page 47. Accordingly notice in Form I under Rule 3, under Sec.5-A was issued on 21.11.1983 fixing the date of enquiry on 16.12.1983 after allowing a clear interval of 15 days after the date of service of the notices. The following persons appeared for enquiry and given their statements: 1. Jayarama Naidu, S/o.Devarajulu, 2. Subbarayalu, S/o.Devarajulu, 3. Poongavanam, S/o. Rangan, 4. Natesan, S/o.Poongavanam, 5. Subramanian, S/o.Poongavanam. The land owners of R.S.No.64/5 have given their consent to acquire their land for providing house sites to Adi Dravidars. The land owners in R.S.No.64/3 have protested for the acquisition on the following grounds:

1. It is undivided property among them and if it is partitioned each will get a share of one acre of land which will not suffice their needs.
2. That sufficient poramboke lands are available for the provision of house sites to Adi Dravidars.
3. That a main electric line passes through the proposal field.
4. That he has formed about 1400 feet cement pipeline to irrigate water to the lands now proposed for acquisition.

These objections were considered and held baseless.

"I state that after conducting 5-A enquiry D.D. under Secs. 6 and 7 of the Land Acquisition Act were submitted to the District Adi Dravidar Welfare Officer and it was sent to the Government by the Collector in the Ref.W16/194111/83, dated 11.1.1984 through the Commissioner, Land Administration, Madras-5. The Government approved to the DD proposals in G.O.Ms.No.920, SWD, dated 7.3.1984 and published in the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette dated 12.3.1984. After observing usual formalities, "notice under Secs.9(1) and 10 of the Land Acquisition Act I of 1894 were issued on 12.3.1984 fixing the date for award enquiry on 28.3.1984. After completion of award enquiry, to award was passed by the then Special Tahsildar (ADW), Tindivanam. Due to the non-appearance of the land owners for the award enquiry the entire compensation of the above lands under acquisition is ordered to be deposited in the Court under Sec.31(2) of the Land Acquisition Act of 1894. The compensation amount of Rs.8,825, Rs.5,550 & Rs.3,013.29, for the lands in R.S.No.64/3B, 64/4B and 64/5 respectively was deposited in the Sub Court, Tindivanam under Sec.31(2) in this office Ref.A.2686/83, dated 7.4.1984 (in 3 references) and O.P.Nos. are awarded from the Sub Court, Tindivanam."

"With reference to the averments made in paras 5 and 6 of the affidavit, I submit that the lands in R.S.No.64/3 stands registered in the name of Venkatasamy Naidu in R.S.No.706. But the land is under possession and enjoyment of Jayarama Naidu, S/o.Devaraja Naidu. Local enquiry reveals he has a son named by Sundaram. Hence the name of Jayarama Naidu and his sons have been included in the Schedule of 4(1) Notification and published. But at the time of 5-A enquiry the above persons and his borth Subbarayalu Naidu were enquired and obtained statements. The names of the above persons and other interested persons have been included in the "Schedule under Secs.6 & 7 of the Land Acquisition Act (sic.) not published. Hence, the petitioner's plea that non-publishing the name of the 3rd petitioner Sundaramoorthy in the 4(1) notification is not correct."

4. It is thus to be seen that R.S.Nos.64/3-B and 64/4-B appear to fall in S.Nos.64/3, 64/4 and 64/5 totalling 1.85.5 hectares of land are sought to be acquired for providing house-sites to Adi Dravidars. After the publication in the Government Gazette, dated 9.11.1983 and notice in Form I under Rule 3, under Sec.5-A of the Act issued on 21.11.1983 fixing the date of enquiry on 16.12.1983, when enquiry commenced the first petitioner Jayarama Naidu and his brother the second petitioner appeared besides others and the objections that were raised were confined to R.S.No.64/3-B only in which undivided property belonging to the petitioner is said to fall.

5. It has indeed been settled by now and there is no ambiguity of any kind in the principle that publication of Primary Notification under Sec.4(1) of the Act, is mandatory and not only the publication in the Official Gazette but publication of the substance of such notification at convenient places in the locality is also mandatory. It is conceded that petitioners 1 and 2 were fully represented in the enquiry under Sec.5-A of the Act. They could not be present in the said enquiry unless they were given notice of the notification under Sec.4(1) of the Act involving their lands. The first petitioner Jayarama Naidu alone was competent to represent Padmajothi and Geetha, his minor daughters and thus when Jayaraman Naidu has participated in the enquiry he has participated for self as well as Padmajothi and Geetha, fourth and fifth petitioners. It is shown that the name of the first petitioner is included in the Schedule to 4(1) notification and his name has been published accordingly. If there has been such publication of the notification so as to reach Jayarama Naidu the first petitioner and his brother Subbarayalu Naidu, the second petitioner, in the absence of a case that Sundaramurthy (third petitioner) lived separately from Jayarama Naidu, it is not possible to give any credit to the allegation that he had no notice of the notification under Sec.4(1) of the Act and he thus got no adequate opportunity to participate in the enquiry under Sec.5-A. It is also shown that the land in R.S.No.64/3 stood in the name of Venkataswamy Naidu. The revenue records thus did not show the names of any of the petitioners. When, however, it was found that the land was in possession and enjoyment of the first petitioner and his family members and local enquiries revealed he had a son named Sundaramoorthy the third petitioner, their names were also included in the Schedule to 4(1) notification. Thus, there is no gainsaying if it is said that Sundaramurthy, his son had no notice and he was prejudiced because he could not as a person interested, file objections and participate in the enquiry under Sec.5-A of the Act. It is needless here to say that the petitioner's attempt to show any prejudice to Sundaramurthy is ignoring the fact that a joint family of several owners is represented by one of them, who is called 'kartha' and knowledge to him, of the proceedings under Sec.5-A must be deemed to be knowledge to all of them.

6. But the thrust of the argument of the learned counsel for the petitioners with respect to the requirement of the publication of the substance of the notification under Sec.4(1) of the Act is that since this requirement is mandatory and it is not shown by the respondents that there has been a publication of the substance of the notification under Sec.4(1) in the locality the proceedings for acquisition must fall to the ground. This he has submitted ignoring the statement in the counter-affidavit that notice in Form I in Rule 3 under Sec.5-A was issued on 21.11.1983 only days after the gazette notification under Sec.4(1) of the Act on 9.11.1983 and if this notice contained the substance of the notification it did stand in compliance with the mandatory requirement of the publication of the substance of the notification.

7. Courts have held that the requirements of simultaneous publication of the notification in the Official Gazette as well as public notice of substance of such notification are the essential elements of Sec.4(1) and explained that simultaneous publication does not mean publication at the same time but also not at such distance of time that the very purpose of the public notice is defeated. For, unless full notice of the intention to acquire the land is given to the person interested in the land he is likely to suffer and could not in the case of ordinary acquisition file his objections within the prescribed period of limitation under Sec.5-A of the Act and in the case of acquisition after invoking the urgency clause the opportunity to make representations to persons concerned. The principle in this behalf has been fully stated in the judgments of the Supreme Court including in the case of Deepak Patwa v. Lt. Governor of Delhi, (1984) 4 S.C.C. 308; A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 1721, in these words:

"It may be noticed at once that Sec.4(1) does not prescribe that public notice of the substance of the notification should be given in the locality simultaneously with the publication of the notification in the Official Gazette or immediately thereafter. Publication in the Official Gazette and public notice in the locality are two vital steps required to be taken under Sec.4(1) before proceeding to take the next step of entering upon the land under Sec.4(2). The time factor is not a vital element of Sec.4(1) and there is no warrant for reading the words 'simultaneously' or 'immediately thereafter' into Sec.4(1). "Publication in the Official Gazette and public notice in the locality are the essential elements of Sec.4(1) and not the simultaneity or immediacy of the publication and the public notice. But since the steps contemplated by Sec.4(1) cannot be undertaken unless publication is made and public notice given as contemplated by Sec.4(1), it is implicit that the publication and the public notice must be contemporaneous though not simultaneous or immediately after one another. Naturally contemporaneity may involve a gap of time and by the very nature of the things, the publication in the Official Gazette and the public notice in the locality must necessarily be separated by a gap of time. This does not mean that the publication and the public notice may be separated by a long interval of time. What is necessary is that the continuity of action should not appear to be broken by a deep gap. If there is publication in the Gazette and if there is public notice in the locality, the requirements of Sec.4(1) must be held to be satisfied unless the two are unlinked from each other by a gap of time so large as may lead one to the prima facie conclusion of lack of bona fides in the proceedings for acquisition."

"If the notification and the public notice are separated by such a large gap of time it may become necessary to probe further to discover if there is any cause for the delay and if the delay has caused prejudice to anyone."

"We may consider here an argument which is usually advanced against any time gap between the publication in the Official Gazette and the public notice in the locality. Sec.5-A provides that any person interested in the land which has been notified under Sec.4(1) may object to the acquisition of the land or of any land in the locality within 30 days after the issue of the notification. It is, therefore, suggested that if the publication of the notification in the Gazette is not immediately followed by a public notice in the locality, it may lead to a denial to the person interested of an opportunity to object to the acquisition. We think, that this is too narrow an interpretation of Sec.5-A. Notice to interested persons of a proposed acquisition of land is given by publishing a notification to the effect that land in any locality is needed or is likely to be needed for any public purpose in two ways-first, by causing publication of the substance of the notification to be given at convenient places in the locality. There is no reason to confine the period of 30 days prescribed by Sec.5-A to one mode. The period of 30 days may be reckoned from either the date of publication in the Gazette or the date of the public notice of the substance of the notification in the locality, whichever is later. In our view, that is the only reasonable and practical way of construing Sec.5-A, so as to advance the object of the provision, which is to provide a reasonable opportunity to interested persons to oppose the acquisition. We particularly notice that Sec.5-A does not refer either to the date of public notice of the substance of the notification in the locality. It speaks of the issue of the notification. This we consider is significant and in the context, the words 'the issue of the notification' can only signify the completion of the prescribed process-rather the twin process that of notifying the interested public of the proposed acquisition in the manner provided for by Sec.4(1), that is by publication in the Official Gazette and giving public notice in the locality."

And when urgency clause under Sec.17(4) of the Act is invoked in these words:

"The other ground of attack is that if regard is had to the considerable length of time spent on inter-departmental discussion before the notification under Sec.4(1) was published, it would be apparent that there was no justification for invoking the urgency clause under Sec.17(4) and dispensing with the enquiry under Sec.5-A. We are afraid, we cannot agree with this contention. Very often persons interested in the land proposed to be acquired make various representations to the concerned authority against the proposed acquisition. This is bound to result in a multiplicity of enquiries, communication and discussions leading to delay in the execution of even urgent projects. Very often the delay makes the problem more and more acute and increases the urgency of the necessity for acquisition. It is, therefore, not possible to agree with the submission that mere pre-notification delay would render the invocation of the urgency provisions void. We, however, wish to say nothing about post-notification delay. In Jagat Ram v. State of Haryana, A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1033, this Court pointed out "the fact that the State Government or the party concerned was lethargic at an early stage is not very relevant for deciding the question whether on the date on which" the notification was issued there was urgency or not". In Kasi Reddy Papaiah v. Government of Andhra Pradesh, A.I.R. 1975 A.P. 269, it was held, "delay on the part of the tardy officials to take further action in the matter of acquisition is not sufficient to nullify the urgency which existed at the time of the issue of the notification and to hold that there was never any urgency." In the result, both the submissions of the learned counsel for the petitioners rejected...."

8. If publication of the substance of the notification is a ritual there is no reason to think that it has not been complied with by the notice in Form I under Rule 3 issued by the respondent on 2.11.1983, fixing the date of enquiry on 16.12.1983. If it is a provision of substance in the sense that as noticed by the Supreme Court it has been introduced to ensure that persons know well in time that the Government has intended to acquire the land and for that reason the requirement of public notice is mandatory, can it be said in the instant case that for want of such notice the petitioners have suffered any legal injury. The answer is that the petitioners have suffered no legal injury at all. They participated in the enquiry through the first petitioner and the second petitioner and their objections have been fully taken into account.

9. In the instant case, I have not found any defect in the publication of the notification. I intend, however, to observe that in case where there is some defect in the notice of a sort that a court may think that the mandatory requirement of the publication of the substance of the notification under Sec.4(1) has not been complied with the court shall not for the reason of non-compliance of this requirement alone nullify any acquisition proceedings unless it is shown that the petitioners have suffered for want of notice, in the sense that they lost the opportunity to participate in the enquiry under Sec.5(1) of the Act for the reason of want of notice or could not make any representation in the case of urgency acquisition to the proper authorities to show that it was not a case for the acquisition of their lands. No remedy is extended unless it is required to redress an injury. Unless such injury is sustained no remedy is required. The court may not for the reason of a mere non-compliance with the requirement of a mandatory provision like to interfere with a concluded proceeding unless the petitioners without such interference have suffered any legal injury.

10. Learned counsel for the petitioners however, has drawn my attention to some Government Orders, one among them being G.O.Ms.No.620, Housing and Urban Development Department, Madras dated 29.6.1990 which has quoted several Government Orders previously issued. They appear to intend to convey to the officers proceeding to acquire lands that the temple lands should not be acquired for any purpose except in cases where it is accepted by the H.R. & C.E. Department that the temples do not derive any benefit from such lands and land belonging to poor persons with meagre land holdings need not generally be acquired unless otherwise inevitable for the purpose of maintaining proximity and vicinity to the main village, that the lands belonging to scheduled castes/tribes should not be acquired except where it becomes absolutely inevitable, and that the wet lands should not be acquired for housing scheme, except in unavoidable circumstances etc. It has not been shown by learned counsel for the petitioners as to whether these Government Orders have any force of a statute. It is also not shown by learned counsel for the petitioners that these Government Orders are in the form of executive instructions in lieu of a statute. In the absence of anything showing that these Government Orders do not interfere in the field occupied by the Land Acquisition Act and the Rules, framed thereunder, it is not possible to take any judicial notice of these Government Orders. Even assuming that these Government Orders have a legal sanction they do not appear to show that the Government ever intended to make these instructions mandatory or binding on all concerned. There is nothing in the writ petition to show that necessary precautions were not taken by the concerned authorities and that they just pounced upon the lands of the petitioners although there were other lands available, except in general terms stating that they were/are other lands available which the respondents could acquire for the public purpose of house sites for the Adi Dravidars. In my opinion, the writ petition has no merit and it must fail for the reasons aforementioned. Accordingly, it is dismissed. On the facts of this case, I am inclined to award costs. Hearing fee Rs.250.

B.S. ----- Petition dismissed.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present: Abdul Hadi, J.

S.A.No.887 of 1982 11th January, 1993.

Sundara Rajan and another ...Appellants

Sundaramoorthy ...Respondent.

(B) Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Sec.109 - Original lessor assigning his interest - No agreement between assignee and tenant of original lessor - Fresh attornment by tenant to assignee, if necessary.

(C) Tamil Nadu City Tenants' Protection Act (III of 1922), Secs.9 and 11 - Landlord suing for declaration of title and possession - Tenant filing application under Sec.9 to purchase suit property - Contending in written statement in suit that suit was not maintainable for want of valid notice - Notice under Sec.11, whether necessary - It can be considered to have been waived by implication.

Held: The claim on the footing that the defendant is an agreement-holder for purchasing the suit property may be a denial of landlord and tenant relationship. Such a repudiation of the said relationship may also entail forfeiture under Sec.111(g) of the Transfer of Property Act. But the said Sec.111 which deals with the modes of determination of tenancy says in the said clause (g) that in the case of such forfeiture, for the determination of the lease, landlord should also, give notice determining the lease. No such notice has been given in the present case. It may also be pointed out that it has also been held that denial of title of an assignee of the original lessee would not work forfeiture of the lease. [Para. 3-A]

On the assignment of the interest of the original lessor in favour of the plaintiffs, in view of Sec.109 of the Transfer of Property Act, even in the absence of any fresh agreement between the plaintiffs and the defendant, the assignee-plaintiffs became entitled to the rights which the original lessor (vendor of the plaintiffs) possessed; a fresh attornment by the defendant to the assignees-plaintiffs is not necessary. [Para. 3-D]

This Court has held in more than one decision that filing of application under Sec.9 of the Act would amount to such a waiver of notice under Sec.11 of the Act. It has also been held that even the written statement which claims right under Sec.9 could be treated as such an application. In the present case, it is found that even in the original written statement filed by the defendant, the following plea was raised in paragraph 4: 'In any event, the suit is not maintainable for want of valid notice'. It cannot be held that there is a waiver of notice under Sec.11 by implication. Sec.11 notice is necessary even in the present case. [Paras. 4, 5 & 9]

V.Natarajan, for Appellants.

K.Sampath, for Respondent.

The Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT: Plaintiffs are the appellants in this second appeal. They filed the suit O.S.No.1951 of 1978, on the file of the District Munsif of Cuddalore, for declaration of their title to the suit property and for possession thereof. They claim title under Ex.A-3 sale deed dated 23.8.1977. The trial Court has upheld their title and also held that the alleged prior sale agreement in relation to the suit property between the defendant-respondent and the plaintiffs' vendor Krishnamoorthy Rao, is not true and that the defendant is a tenant of the suit property. So saying, the trial Court decreed the suit for declaration of title and possession and directed the defendant to remove the superstructure put up by him on the suit land within two months.

2. However, in the appeal filed by the defendant, viz., A.S.No.122 of 1981 on the file of Sub Court, Cuddalore, the defendant was allowed to file additional written statement. There, he pleaded that he became a tenant of the suit site under the above said Krishnamoorthy Rao and put up the superstructure thereon. He also claimed benefits under the Tamil Nadu City Tenants Protection Act (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') and sought to purchase the suit site under Sec.9 of the Act. In view of the said additional written statement, the following fresh issues were framed in the appeal:

1. Whether the defendant is entitled to claim the benefits under City Tenants' Protection Act?
2. Whether the defendant's claim for such benefits under City Tenants' Protection Act is in time?
3. Whether the defendant is entitled to the value of the superstructure and if so to what extent?

The lower appellate court, after stating that the parties did not let in fresh oral evidence on the said issues, came to the following conclusions: The defendant is a tenant of the suit site, let into possession by the abovesaid Krishnamoorthy Rao in 1968 and he put up the superstructure therein in 1968-69. The suit is not maintainable since the notice prescribed under Sec.11 of the Tamil Nadu

City Tenants Protection Act, has not been given by the plaintiffs to the defendant before filing the suit. The claim for the benefits under the said Act is in time. The abovesaid third issue does not arise.

2-A. The first appellate court has thus held that the plaintiffs are not entitled to get possession, though they are entitled to the declaration of their title. The result is that the first appeal has been allowed in part, granting only a decree for declaration of title and not possession. Since possession decree was not given, the plaintiffs have preferred this second appeal.

3. The learned counsel for the plaintiffs-appellants has initially contended that the defendant has denied the title of the plaintiffs to the suit property by setting up a sale agreement in his favour and that hence he is not entitled to the benefits of the abovesaid Act. He also cited the decisions in Bhargaravakula v. Arunachala, (1990)1 L.W. 46, Subba Rao v. Krishna Rao, A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 2187 and Bhargaraavakula v. Chakravarthi, (1992)2 M.L.J. 83 in this regard.

3-A. I shall first deal with this contention. The claim on the footing that the defendant is an agreement holder for purchasing the suit property, may be a denial of landlord and tenant relationship. Such a repudiation of the said relationship may also entail forfeiture under Sec.111 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act. In Brij Kishore v. Mushtari Khatoon, A.I.R. 1976 All. 399, also it was so held. But the said Sec.111, which deals with the modes of determination of tenancy, says in the said Clause (g) that in the case of such forfeiture, for the determination of the lease, landlord should also give notice determining the lease. No such notice has been given in the present case. I may also point out that it has also been held that denial of title of an assignee of the original lessee would not work forfeiture of the lease (vide: Abdullah v. Mohd. Muslim, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1205).

3-B. But the question here is not whether the lease in favour of the defendant has been determined in accordance with Sec.111 of the Transfer of Property Act, but whether the setting up of the abovesaid case under a sale agreement would disentitle the defendant from claiming the benefits of the City Tenants' Protection Act, when in the first appeal, he has impliedly at least, given up his original case and accepted the position that he is only a tenant. Bhargaravakula v. Arunachala, (1990)1 L.W. 46 (D.B.), has held, taking into account the relevant definition of the term 'tenant' under the abovesaid Act, that the tenant who wants to claim the benefits of the abovesaid Act must be a person liable to pay rent and such a liability should be under a tenancy agreement, express or implied. No doubt, as per his original plea, in his original written statement, the defendant would not fulfil the above requirements mentioned in Bhargaravakula v. Arunachala, (1990)1 L.W. 46 (D.B.). But, by filing the abovesaid additional written statement, he has given up his said original stand and accepted the position that he is a tenant. An appeal is only a continuation of the suit. In the first appeal, the above different plea taken up by him, had been allowed to be raised and the first appellate court proceeded with the case further, only on the footing of the abovesaid altered plea. Yet, can it be said that in view of his original plea, he cannot have the benefits of the said Act, relying on the abovesaid decisions, including Bhargaravakula v. Arunachala, (1990)1 L.W. 46 (D.B.)?

3-C. No doubt, in this connection, the learned counsel for the appellants also argues that the abovesaid additional written statement should not have been entertained since the defendant, by the said statement, sought to set up a different and inconsistent case. But, I am unable to agree with this contention since the very plea of the plaintiffs themselves is that the defendant is a tenant and so, the defendant has only adopted the case of the plaintiffs and sought to claim the benefits of the abovesaid Act on the footing that he is a tenant.

3-D. In this connection, I may also deal with one other argument of the learned Counsel for the respondent, in reply to the argument of the learned Counsel for the appellants, that, because of denial of title, the defendant cannot claim the benefits of the said Act. The said reply argument is that in the present case, the plaintiffs are not the original lessors of the defendant, but they are subsequent purchasers of the suit property from the said original lessor and that there is no estoppel with reference to such a purchaser under Sec.116 of the Evidence Act, when the defendant has not attorned the tenancy in favour of the plaintiffs. Therefore, according to the said counsel for the respondent, the abovesaid decisions like Bhargaravakula v. Arunachala, (1990)1 L.W. 46 (D.B.), cannot be relied on by the plaintiffs to contend that the defendant is not entitled to claim the benefits of the abovesaid Act. Though initially I was inclined to accept this argument, later, on a deeper investigation, I have to hold that this argument cannot be accepted. On the assignment of the interest of the original lessor in favour of the plaintiffs, in view of Sec.109 of the Transfer of Property Act, even in the absence of any fresh agreement between the plaintiffs and the defendant, the assignees-plaintiffs became entitled to the rights, which the original lessor (vendor of the plaintiffs) possessed; a fresh attornment by the defendant to the assignees-plaintiffs, is not necessary (vide Briji Bihari v. Deoki Devi, A.I.R.1978 Pat. 117 (D.B.)). Therefore, I am of the view that the abovesaid decisions like Bhargaravakula v. Arunachala, (1990)1 L.W. 46 (D.B.) cannot be said to have no application to the present case. Anyway, since the defendant has impliedly at least given up his original plea in his original written statement, and admitted in his additional written statement that he is a tenant under the plaintiffs, as pleaded by the plaintiffs themselves, I think he cannot be denied the right to claim benefits of the abovesaid Act.

4. Next, as already pointed out, the lower appellate Court has dismissed the suit solely on the ground that the abovesaid Sec.11 notice was not given by the plaintiffs to the defendant prior to the filing of the suit. In this connection I posed the question to the learned counsel for the respondent whether it cannot be construed that there is a waiver by the defendant of the abovesaid notice, in view of the fact that he has chosen to file the abovesaid additional written statement, claiming to purchase the suit land under Sec.9 of the abovesaid Act. This Court has held in more than one decision that filing of application under Sec.9 of the Act would amount to such a waiver of notice under Sec.11 of the Act (vide Vedachala Naicker v. Durai Mudaliar, (1950)1 M.L.J. 732 and Natesa Naicker v. Vedagiri, (1975) 1 M.L.J. 301). No doubt, in the present case, there is no application as such, filed under Sec.9 of the Act. But, since it has also been held that even the written statement which claims right under Sec.9 could be treated as such an application, the question in the present case is whether there is a waiver of Sec.11 notice by the defendant, by his claiming the right under Sec.9 in his abovesaid additional written statement. It has also been held in Balasubramania Iyer v. S.P.Muthu Kumaraswamy Devasthanam, ((1983)1 M.L.J. 280, that since the abovesaid notice under Sec.11 is for the benefit of the tenant, he could waive the said notice.

5. In answer to my abovesaid question, the learned counsel for the respondent drew my attention to Sri Agatheeswarar P.V.Perumal Devasthanam v. Narasimhan, (1982)2 M.L.J.70 (D.B.) and Lakshmi Narayan Guin v. Nuranjan Modak, (1985)1 S.C.C. 270. In Sri Agatheeswarar P.V.Perumal Devasthanam v. Narasimhan, (1982)2 M.L.J. 70, also it was held that notice contemplated by Sec.11 could be waived by the tenant either expressly or impliedly by his conduct. In the said case, there was an application under Sec.9 to purchase the suit site therein. But that was preceded by filing a written statement, questioning the maintainability of the suit without a proper notice by the landlord. In that context, the said decision distinguished the abovesaid decisions in Vedachala Naicker v. Duraiswami Mudaliar, (1950)1 M.L.J. 732 and Natesa Naicker v. Vedagiri, (1975)1 M.L.J. 301, on the ground that in those two cases, application under Sec.9 was there "without any demur as regards the non-compliance with Sec.11." In Sri Agatheeswarar P.V.Perumal Devasthanam v. Narasimhan, (1982)2 M.L.J. 70 (D.B.), in the written statement that preceded Sec.9 application, the question of maintainability of the suit without proper notice, had been raised; the Division Bench held that there was no waiver. In the present case also I find that even in the original written statement filed by the defendant, the following plea was raised in paragraph 4:-

"In any event, the suit is not maintainable for want of valid notice."

Therefore, I think Sri Agatheeswarar P.V.Perumal Devasthanam v. Narasimhan, (1982)2 M.L.J. 70 (D.B.) applies to the present case and I cannot hold that there is waiver of notice under Sec.11, by implication.

6. No doubt, the said learned Counsel also points out that in the same Sri Agatheeswarar P.V.Perumal Devasthanam v. Narasimhan, (1982)2 M.L.J. 70 (D.B.), it has also been held that waiver is a question of fact and ought to be pleaded and proved, but that there is no plea by the plaintiff regarding the said waiver. But, as already stated, there is plea by the defendant in his additional written statement that he is entitled to the benefits of the abovesaid Act and he is willing to purchase the site at a value that may be fixed by the Court. However, despite this plea, I have already held that there is no waiver by implication.

7. The other decision cited by the learned Counsel for the defendant, viz., Lakshmi Narayan Guin v. Niranjan Modak, (1985)1 S.C.C. 270 does not actually deal with the question of waiver at all. There was also no claim at all to purchase the suit site. The case arose under West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. How far the said Act is similar to the abovesaid Tamil Nadu City Tenants Protection Act is also not quite clear since the said Act as such was not produced before me. However, paragraphs 6 to 9 of the said judgment were relied on by the said counsel. In these paragraphs, no doubt, it was observed that where the decree for eviction is passed by the trial Court against the tenant under the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act and the statute giving protection to tenants against eviction is extended to the concerned area during the pendency of appeal against the decree for eviction, the appellate court is bound to take into account the change of law and extend its benefits to the tenant and consequently set aside the decree of the trial court and dismiss the suit. Sec.13 of the said West Bengal Act is said to provide for a qualified protection to the tenant against eviction inasmuch as it injuncts the court from passing an order or decree in landlord's suit for recovery of possession except on the limited grounds detailed in sub-sec.(1) thereof and that sub-sec.(6) therein provides that no suit for the recovery of possession of any of the grounds mentioned in sub-sec.(1) can be filed by the landlord unless he has given to the tenant one month's notice expiring with the month of tenancy. The High Court therein found that the notice for eviction given was only of less than one month and that, therefore, there was no compliance with the abovesaid Sec.13(6). Consequently, the High Court held that the suit was incompetent. The said decision of the High Court was no doubt approved by the Supreme Court. But, as already stated by me, the question of waiver was not considered at all by the Supreme Court in the said case, nor was there any claim to purchase the suit site in the said case. So, that decision will have no application to the abovesaid question posed by me, based on the claim for purchase of the suit site, made by the defendant.

8. No doubt, the learned counsel for the appellant also argues that no notice under Sec.11 at all is necessary since the suit was filed even prior to Act 2 of 1980 which amended the parent Act. (City Tenants Protection Act). In this connection, he cited the decision in Abdul Shukur Sahib v. Geethammal, 1977 T.L.N.J. 125. No doubt, there, the tenant resisted the landlady's suit for ejectment on the ground that the landlady has not issued to him the abovesaid Sec.11 notice. The courts below therein rejected the contention and decreed the suit, which was instituted in 1972. The abovesaid Act was extended to the municipal town in question therein on 8.1.1973 and the argument was that the suit though pending on 8.1.1973 should nevertheless have been dismissed, the moment the notification rendered Sec.11 applicable to the property. In this connection, Sec.10 of the said Act was also pointed out which rendered applicable some of the beneficial provisions of the Act even to pending suits. However, Balasubramaniam, J., who heard the said case, did not accept the said argument and held that in view of the fact that the abovesaid notification came into force only pending the suit, the abovesaid required notice was not necessary. In that connection the learned Judge also observed thus:

"We cannot imagine the section saying, expect you to have complied with the conditions even earlier". That would be asking landlords to ride the Time Machine backwards, to recapture moments which are past recapturing. The law does not require, or even expect any man or woman to do the impossible. On a reading of Sec.11 of the Act and the Government Notification in this case it would not be held the suit by the landlady to be not maintainable."

9. However, the learned Counsel for the respondent, in reply, relies on the above referred to observations (vide paragraph 7) in Lakshmi Narayan Guin v. Niranjan Modak, (1985)1 S.C.C. 270, itself and argues that in view of Lakshmi Narayan Guin v. Niranjan Modak, (1985)1 S.C.C. 270, Abdul Shukur Sahib v. Geethammal, 1977 T.L.N.J. 125, is no longer good law. At any rate, I am bound by the Supreme Court decision and so I have to hold that Sec.11 notice is necessary even in the present case. When admittedly such a notice has not been given, the appellants cannot have possession decree.

10. Accordingly the present second appeal is dismissed. However, in the circumstances of the case, no costs.

...Appellants

R.M.Ramanathan Chettiar

...Respondent.

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.17, Rules 2 and 3 and Explanation to Rule 2 (as amended by Act CIV of 1976) - One of the parties absent on date of hearing - Suit can be disposed of only under Rule 2 - Rule 3 not attracted in the absence of party - Evidence of party not taken at all or some evidence taken but substantial portion of evidence of that party yet remains to be taken - Party absent - Court, if can proceed with the case.

Held: The clear words, 'if the parties are, or any of them is absent, proceed under Rule 2' in Rule 3 of O.17, leave no manner of doubt that in all cases of the absence of the party, the order has to be passed under Rule 2 and not under Rule 3. The words in Rule 2 'or make such order as it thinks fit' do not mean that the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit in the absence of the party under Rule 3. Rule 3 is not attracted at all in the case of the absence of a party and thus 'or make such other order as it thinks fit' must mean an order other than to proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by O.9 of the Code, but surely not to dispose of the suit on merits. 'Such other order' may be a further adjournment to enable the party which is absent to appear or to regulate the proceedings in some other manner. It is also relevant to take notice of the language in the explanation that where the evidence or a substantial portion of the evidence of any party has already been recorded and such party fails to appear, that is, if a party's evidence is already on the record or substantial portion of the evidence of that party has already been taken and only a negligible part of the evidence is left out and such party has failed to appear, the court may proceed with the case as if that party were present. If evidence of a party has not been taken at all and if some evidence has been taken, but substantial portion of the evidence of that party is yet to be taken and that party is absent, the explanation shall not enable the court to proceed with the case in the absence of that party but to proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by O.9, or to make such other order, that is to say, adjourn again for another date or take such steps as would ensure the appearance of the parties and their evidence.

Mrs.Pushpa Sathyanarayanan for M/s.T.R.Rajagopalan and T.R.Rajaraman, for Appellants.

N.S.Varadachari, for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mishra, J.: A learned single Judge of this Court has disposed of a suit in purported exercise of power under O.17, Rule 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure and has dismissed the application for setting aside the ex parte decree saying:

"The respondent-plaintiff filed the suit for return of the advance amount of Rs.1,18,650 paid by the plaintiff to the defendants. the suit was filed in 1980 and the defendants filed their written statements only in March, 1982. Issues were framed and the suit came up in the list for trial. The defendants were not ready and three weeks adjournment was granted as a matter of negligence. Again on the adjourned date, the defendants were absent and since the defendants filed written statements, evidence was let in on the plaintiff's side and the defendants' counsel cross-examined the witness. No further evidence was let in on the side of the defendants, though time was granted. The defendants are not set ex-parte and the suit was disposed of on merits. Hence, the proper course for the defendants is only to file appeal and not to invoke O.9, Rule 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In other words, it is a judgment on merits and therefore this application is not maintainable".

After holding that the application is not maintainable, learned Judge has also said that,

"...in the affidavit filed in support of this application, no sufficient reasons were forthcoming and therefore their absence was deliberate and wilful. Ample indulgence was shown to them to defend the claim, but they were bent upon to protract the proceedings and in fact succeeded in drawing on the suit for three years taking advantage of the fact that they are the residents of Kerala".

It is rather unfortunate that in a trial on the Original Side of this Court, when such was the situation that the plaintiffs were present and defendants were absent, attention of the court was not drawn to Rules 2 and 3 of O.17, particularly the amendment by the Amendment Act, 104 of 1976. O.17, which contains rules as to adjournments, has existed too long for any person not knowing the true effect of the rules under it, various interpretations by the leading judgments of the courts, High Court amendments to the rules therein and the amendment by the Parliament to set at rest any controversy as to the interpretation of the rules therein. Rules 2 and 3 of this Order before 1976 Amendment read as follows:

"Rule 2: Where, on any day of which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the parties or any of them fail to appear the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by O.9 or make such other order as it thinks fit.

Rule 3: Where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other set necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith".

A Bench of this Court in the case of Chandramati Ammal v. Narayanaswami Aiyar, (1910) I.L.R. 33 Mad. 241, took the view that Sec.157 of the Old Code of Civil Procedure (equivalent to Rule 2 in the present Code before 1976 amendment) dealt with cases of absence of parties and Sec.158 of the old code of Civil Procedure (Equivalent to Rule 3 of the present Code before 1976 amendment) with failure to do what was ordered. A contrary view, however, was expressed by another Bench of the Court in Naganada Iyer v. Krishnamurthi Iyer, (1911) I.L.R. 34 Mad. 97, where it was held that absence of a party on the date of the adjourned hearing did not preclude the court from dealing with the case under Sec.158 of the old Code. The matter thus came on reference by a learned single Judge of the Court before a Full Bench in the case of Pichamma v. Sreeramulu, 34 M.L.J. 24: A.I.R. 1918 Mad. 143(2). This was a reference in suit instituted first in the Court of the District Munsif of Kovvur and afterwards transferred to that of the Additional District Munsif. In the latter Court, the plaintiff examined most of his witnesses and on the application of the defendants, the suit was adjourned to 7th of February, 1916. On that date, neither the defendants' guardian nor the vakils were present. The District Munsif closed the case and delivered judgment in favour of the plaintiff on 8th February, 1916. When it was placed before a learned single Judge Abdur Rahim, J., he noticed as follows:

There is, in my opinion, a conflict of rulings in this Court as to whether Rule 2 or Rule 3, O.17, applies to facts like these. In Naganada Iyer v. Krishnamurthi Aiyar, (1910) I.L.R. 34 Mad. 97, which was a judgment of Manro. J. and myself, it was held that Sec.158 of the old Code empowers the Court in circumstances such as those in their case to decide the suit on the merits, whether the party at whose instance

- the adjournment was granted was present or not at the date fixed for hearing.

2. If the parties or any of them fail to appear on the fixed date, it is open to the court to proceed either under Sec.157 or Sec.158. If there are no materials before the court on which to come to a proper decision on the merits, it would ordinarily deal with the case under Rule 2, otherwise under Rule 3. In the case of Naganada Iyer v. Krishnamurthi Aiyar, (1910) I.L.R. 34 Mad. 97, on earlier decision of this Court reported in Chandramati Ammal v. Narayanaswami Iyer, (1910) I.L.R. 33 Mad. 241, to which the present learned Chief Justice and Krishnaswami Ayyer, J., were parties, was not noticed. There it was held that Sec.158 old Civil Procedure Code, which corresponds to Rule 3, O.17 of the new Code, would only apply if the parties are in attendance and there is failure to do what a party is given time to do. If the parties are not in attendance, then according to that ruling, Sec.157 old Code, corresponding to Rule 2, O.17, of the present Code, would alone apply and that these two rules are mutually exclusive. This view seems to have been approved in Gaudan v. Kamakha Rama Chetti, (1916) 33 I.C. 660, while the view propounded in Naganada Iyer v. Krishnamurthi Aiyar, (1910) I.L.R. 34 Mad. 97, appears to be the same as that taken in Knatulla v. Jiben Mohan Roy, A.I.R. 1914 Cal. 360.

Leading judgment in the Full Bench was delivered by Kumaraswami Sastri J. and the same was concluded with these words:

"I am of opinion that the decision in Chandramati Ammal v. Narayanaswami Iyer, (1910) I.L.R. 33 Mad. 241, which if I may say so with respect, is a well considered judgment dealing fully with the matter, correctly sets out the principle to be applied to cases of absence of either party at the adjourned hearing. The decision of the question must depend on the express language of O.17, Rules 2 and 3. As pointed out in Chandramati Ammal v. Narayanaswami Iyer, (1910) I.L.R. 33 Mad. 241, Sec.157 (Rule 2) deals with cases of absence of parties and Sec.158 (Rule 3) with failure to do what was ordered. If the party fails to appear Sec.157 (Rule 2) applies and there is no reason why the Court should assume (in the absence of any explanation) that he is guilty of default so as to apply the stringent provisions of Sec.158 (Rule 3). I think the correct rule is to treat Rule 3 as applying only to cases where the parties are present and have not satisfied the court as to the existence of any adequate reason for their not having done what they were directed to do. I have already dealt with the matter from the point of view of hardship to the parties and my own experience is that the rule laid down in Chandramati Ammal v. Narayanaswami Iyer, (1910) I.L.R. 33 Mad. 241, has been a safe and uniform guide to courts. The construction, moreover, is one that suggests itself on a consideration of the plain language of Rules 2 and 3. I have no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that the decision in Chandramati Ammal v. Narayanaswami Iyer, (1910) I.L.R. 33 Mad. 241 ought to be followed". Wallis C.J., who recorded a separate opinion, however, had been more specific in this behalf, saying as follows:

"Under the Code, where the plaintiff appears and the defendant does not appear either on the day fixed for the first hearing O.9, Rule 6(1) or on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned O.17, Rule 2 read with O.9, Rule 6(1), the Court, if it is proved that the summons was duly served, may proceed ex parte. In either case, where the court has disposed of the case ex parte and passed a decree against the absent defendant, he may, under O.9, Rule 13, move to set aside the decree on the ground that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on. When a case is called on and the defendant is absent and the Court resolves to proceed against him ex parte there is nothing, in my opinion, to prevent the court from applying the provisions, of O.17, Rule 3, and disposing of the suit notwithstanding the defendant's failure to do what he had been granted time to do, but that disposal will be, nonetheless both in fact and in law, ex parte, and the decree will be liable to be set aside by the defendant under O.9, Rule 13. If the ex parte decree is set aside and the case restored and the defendant appears, it will still be open to the court to apply the provisions of O.17, Rule 3, after hearing what the defendant has to say in explanation of his failure to do what he had been given time to do. There is, I think, no conflict at all between the two rules, and each may be fully applied on this construction at the proper stage of the case. In so far as we laid down in Chandramati Ammal v. Narayanaswami Iyer, (1910) I.L.R. 33 Mad. 241, that the two rules must be read as mutually exclusive I think we went too far". This authority of the full Bench of this Court has almost always found a reference in almost every judgment of the High Courts, when question whether Rule 3 of O.17, would apply or Rule 2 thereof would apply has been posed. Some Courts on account of conflicts emerging in the views of the Judges of the High Courts as to when and how Rule 3 or Rule 2 should be applied resorted to the amendments. The Andhra Pradesh High Court added the following explanation to Rule 2.

"The mere presence in Court of a party or his counsel not duly instructed shall not be considered to be an appearance of the party within the meaning of this Rule". (27.4.1961).

and added at the end of Rule 3, the following proviso:

"Provided that in a case where there is default under this rule as well as default of appearance under Rule 2, the court will proceed under Rule 2".

The Allahabad High Court amended Rule 2 by adding the following:

"Where the evidence, or a substantial portion of the evidence, of any party has already been recorded and such party fails to appear on such day, the court may in its discretion proceed with the case as if such party were present; and may dispose of it on the merits.

Explanation: No party shall be deemed to have failed to appear if he is either present or is represented in Court by agent or pleader, though engaged only for the purpose of making an application".

and added in Rule 3, a comma, after the first word 'where' and inserted thereafter the words 'in a case to which Rule 2 does not apply' to make the rule read as follows:

"Where in a case to which Rule 2 does not apply any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence..."

We shall presently see that the Allahabad amendment in Rule 2 has almost been adopted in the 1976 amendment to the said rule by the Parliament and the Andhra Pradesh Proviso in Rule 3 has formed the basis of the 1976 amendment by the Parliament in the said Rule. The controversy as to the application of Rule 2 to a case in which Rule 2 of O.17 would apply or a case in which Rule 3 would apply, however, has been so acute that one could find any number of cases decided by the courts in support of one or the other view and when such a large number of cases in conflict were found creating confusion in the matter of administration of justice. The Allahabad High Court constituted a Full Bench of five Judges, which, however, disposed of the matter by a majority judgment of 3, 2, holding as follows: in M.S. Khalsa v. Chiranji Lal, A.I.R. 1976 All 290:

"An analysis of Rule 2 will show that it would be attracted to cases-(i) which come up for hearing on a date which was fixed after adjournment of the suit on a previous day:

(ii) The parties or any one of them fail to appear on the date so fixed;

(iii) where the evidence or substantial portion of evidence of any party has already been recorded on a previous day and such party if fails to appear on the day so fixed a court can use its discretion to proceed with the case and may dispose of it on the merits treating that such party was present;

(iv) A party which is present and does not do anything else, will be treated as not having failed to appear; and

(v) A party represented in court by an agent or pleader, though engaged only for the purpose of making an application will also be deemed not to have failed to appear.

3. Rule 2 substantially concerns itself when a party or any one of them fails to appear on the adjourned date. When both the parties or any one of them is absent on the adjourned date, Rule 2 squarely will apply and Rule 3 will be excluded. It follows, therefore, that when any party to a suit, to whom time had been granted, fails to produce its evidence or to produce its witnesses or fails to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit for which time had been allowed, is absent on the adjourned date, Rule 3 will not apply.

4. The difficulty, however, arises when a party which is treated or deemed as present and does not do anything or engages a counsel for the purpose of making any application on the adjourned date will its case fall out of the ambit of Rule 2 and the court will have no power to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by O.9. The amendment made by the Court is clear in one respect that the court at its discretion can dispose of a suit if the party which is absent has already adduced its evidence wholly or substantially either in one of the modes allowed by O.9, C.P.C. or can make any other order it thinks fit. In such a case also Rule 3 will not apply as it would be covered by Rule 2.

5. If, however, a party is present but does not do anything, it cannot be said to have failed to appear that is, it cannot be said to be absent on the adjourned date and it is a party to whom time had not been granted to do anything as envisaged by Rule 3, its case then poses a problem. Since it is not absent and thus has not failed to appear, strictly speaking, the court cannot proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by O.9 or make such other order as the court thinks fit. Likewise, will be the case of the party which is represented by a counsel only to make an application, who then withdraws and does not do anything else for the furtherance of the suit and which party has also not taken time to do any of the acts envisaged by Rule 3.

6. The situation described above in the case of a party gives rise to a conundrum. Since the party is not absent and has not failed to appear, it can be said to fall out of Rule 2 but at the same time Rule 3 would not be attracted as it is not a party which had taken time to do any of the acts envisaged by Rule 3. It is this situation which has defied solution and the situation calls for reconsideration and framing of clear and precise rules since it is out amendments which have created the impasse.

7. So long as Rules 2 and 3 stand as they are, defectively though,

(1) Rule 3 cannot be resorted to where the parties or any of them is absent even though on the previous date the hearing of the suit was adjourned for granting to both or to any one of them time to produce evidence or witnesses or perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit. Such a case would squarely be covered by Rule 2, the parties or any one of them having failed to appear.

(2) Rule 3 can only be resorted to when the party, to whom time was given to produce evidence or to cause attendance of the witnesses or to perform any other act necessary for further progress of the suit, is actually present on the adjourned date of hearing but fails to do any of the acts for which the time was granted. For this purpose the fictional presence envisaged by the Explanation to Rule 2 is not to be taken into consideration. It is only the factual presence which is to be taken into account.

The Full Bench would recommend that the courts below in their anxiety to dispose of the suit should not readily proceed to decide the suit on the merits under Rule 3 for they have the discretion not to proceed to decide the suit forthwith under that rule. It is only in exceptional cases that this be done in order to penalise a really negligent or cantankerous party. I would leave the matter at that.

The author of the majority judgment in his detailed judgment, however, answered the question referred to the Full Bench. Whether a case in which the defendant obtains an adjournment on the date of final hearing of the suit and fails to appear on the adjourned date would be covered by Rule 2 of O.17 of the Code of Civil Procedure and whether the court has jurisdiction to pass an order under Rule 3 of O.17 of the Code of Civil Procedure, saying as follows:

“The answer to the question.... is that the mentioned case is covered by Rule 2 of O.17 and an application under O.9, Rule 13, will lie even if the Court professes to act under Rule 3. Rule 3 applies only when a party is present or is deemed to be present and has defaulted in doing the acts mentioned in Rule 3”.

The court gave this answer in a case in which a Civil Judge had held that on a date fixed for final hearing, when defendants moved an application for adjournment on ground of illness and the prayer was allowed, but on the adjourned date again another application was moved, which was rejected by the Court, and the counsel for defendants stated that he had no further instructions and was therefore withdrawing from the case. The majority judgment of the Allahabad High Court has opined in 1976 what has squarely been stated by a Full Bench of our court in a judgment reported in 1918 that, Rule 2 applies to all cases of absence of parties and Rule 3 in cases of failure to do what was ordered and, the correct rule is to treat Rule 3 as applying only to cases where the parties are present and have not satisfied the court as to the existence of any adequate reason for their not having done what they were directed to do. The consistent view, however, of the Madhya Pradesh High Court is expressed in a Full Bench consisting of five Judges in the case of Rama Rao v. Shantibai, A.I.R. 1977 M.P. 222, which is not different from the view expressed by this Court in its judgment of the year 1918. It has said as follows:

“The plain and unambiguous language of the two provisions; the deliberate departure made in the phraseology of the two Rules; the undisputed need to construe Rule 3 strictly; the consequences which necessarily follow as a result of the construction made and the heading of the two Rules, are factors which lead us without any hesitation to the conclusion that Rule 2 applies to all cases of default in appearance of all or any of the parties with the result that Rule 3 does not apply to any of those cases. This conclusion also enables the defaulting party to have the order made under O.9, C.P.C. set aside in the manner provided for that purpose in the code by showing that there was valid reason for default appearance on the date fixed. This is done in the manner prescribed by the Code. We also think that the expression, ‘such other order as it thinks fit’ used in Rule 2 permits disposal of the suit and not a decision thereof on merits contemplated by Rule 3 in a mode other than that provided in O.9, example by an order of adjournment. A contrary conclusion would result in several needless difficulties. In the first place, that would permit an order of the type contemplated by Rule 3 even in the case of a default in appearance of any of the parties which is a construction not acceptable to us for the reasons already given. That apart, it would permit the making of an order contemplated by Rule 3 within the ambit of Rule 2 itself so that such a construction would render Rule 3 superfluous. It is settled that unless it is unavoidable, a construction which renders a provision superfluous must be rejected. All these reasons impel us to take the view that the expression ‘or make such other order as it thinks fit’ used in Rule 2 does not include within its ambit a decision falling within the ambit of Rule 3. As for Rule 3, it follows that this Rule presupposes the presence of all parties and then the failure of the party at whose instance and for whose benefit the hearing was adjourned on the previous date to perform the act necessary to the further progress of the suit. It is only to this class of cases that Rule 3 applies and it has no application to cases falling within the ambit of Rule 2. In our opinion, whenever, such a question arises, it has first to be seen whether Rule 2 applies to the facts of a case since on Rule 2 being attracted, the operation of Rule 3 would be automatically excluded. It is only when there is no default in appearance of all any of the parties that the question of applying Rule 3 would arise to the facts of a case, provided the requirements laid down in Rule 3 are fulfilled". The Allahabad Judgment, however, had the advantage of the Allahabad High Court's amendment to the Rules. The Madhya Pradesh Judgment, above cited, has considered the amended Rule. We have the advantage of the 1976 Amendment to the two Rules. Before we proceed further we may extract the amended Rule in full;

Rule 2: Procedure if parties fail to appear on day fixed where, on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the parties or any of them fail to appear, the court may proceed to dispose of the suit on one of the modes directed in that behalf by O.9 or make such other orders as it thinks fit.

Explanation: Where the evidence or a substantial portion of the evidence of any party has already been recorded and such party fails to appear on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the Court may, in its discretion, proceed with the case as if such party were present.

Rule 3: Court may proceed notwithstanding either party fails to produce evidence, etc. where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default--

(a) if the parties are present, proceed to decide the suit forthwith; or

(b) if the parties are, or any of them is, absent, proceed under Rule 2".

The clear words, "if the parties are, or any of them is absent proceed under Rule 2", thus leave no manner of doubt that in all cases of the absence of the party, the order has to be passed under Rule 2 and not under Rule 3. The words in Rule 2, 'or make such other order as it thinks fit' do not mean that the court may proceed to dispose of the suit in the absence of a party under Rule 3. Rule 3 is not attracted at all in the case of the absence of a party and thus 'or make such other order as it thinks fit' must mean an order other than to proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by O.9 of the Code but surely not to dispose of the suit on merits. 'Such other order' may be a further adjournment to enable the party, which is absent to appear or to regulate the proceedings in some other manner. There is some scope to take a view as taken by the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in the case of M.S.Khalsa v. Chiranji Lal, A.I.R. 1976 All. 290, for the reason of the language in the Explanation to Rule 2, that there is a discretion to dispose of a suit in the absence of a party on merits, which although will be an order under Rule 2, will not be different from the disposal under Rule 3. We, however, have no reason to think that the Courts shall not exercise constraint, respect the judicial verdicts in this behalf and in this Court all the binding precedents shall not be followed, inasmuch as the Allahabad Full Bench in M.S.Khalsa v. Chiranji Lal, A.I.R. 1976 All. 290, has said.

"The courts below in their anxiety to dispose of the suit should not readily proceed to decide the suit on the merits under Rule 3 for they have the discretion not to proceed to decide the suit forthwith under that rule. It is only in exceptional cases that this be done in order to penalise a really negligent or cantankerous one party"

It is also relevant to take notice of the language in the Explanation that where the evidence or a substantial portion of the evidence of any party has already been recorded and such party fails to appear, that is, if a party's evidence is already on the record or substantial portion of the evidence of that party has already been taken and only a negligible part of the evidence is left out and such party has failed to appear, the court may proceed with the case as if that party were present. If evidence of a party has not been taken at all and if some evidence has been taken, but substantial portion of the evidence of that party is yet to be taken and that party is absent, the Explanation shall not enable the Court to proceed with the case, in the absence of that party, but to proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by O.9 or to make such other order, that is to say, adjourn again for another date or take such steps as would ensure the appearance of the parties and their evidence. In the instant case, since we have not intended to make a digest of the case law in our judgment, we have not referred to many judgments, including a judgment of a Bench of this Court in Dakshinamoorthi v. Ponnuswami, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 78, a judgment of a learned single Judge of this Court in C.P. Corers v. Government of Pondicherry, (1975) 1 M.L.J. 155; a judgment of a learned single Judge of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh in the case of In re. Ramineni Suryanarayana, A.I.R. 1980 A.P. 129 and a decision of a Full Bench of the High Court of Bombay in the case of Basalingappa v. Shidramappa, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 321, which appear to take a contrary view; but the views expressed in these judgments obviously stand in conflict with the express language of the 1976 Amendment and consistent view of this Court on the subject, right from the Full Bench judgment in the case of Pichamma v. Sreeramulu, A.I.R. 1918 Mad. 143(2). When we come to the facts of this case, we have no hesitation in holding that the learned single judge has committed clear error of law in holding that the application under O.9, Rule 13 of the Code to set aside the decree in the suit passed in the absence of the party as well as its counsel is not maintainable. We held that the impugned judgment, for the said reason, has to be set aside; and the application for setting aside the decree restored for hearing and disposal in accordance with law. It is obvious that any finding that no sufficient reasons were forthcoming and that absence was deliberate and wilful, has to come after such enquiry, as has been envisaged for the purpose under O.9, Rule 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure and not without that, the observations in the impugned judgment in this behalf are obviously not correct.

8. In the result, the Appeal is allowed; the impugned judgment is set aside and the case, that is to say, Application No.26 of 1984 is restored and remitted to the trial Court for disposal in accordance with law. On the facts of this case, there shall be no order as to costs.

Appeal allowed.

S.Manimudi ...Petitioner
v.

State of Tamil Nadu and others ...Respondents.

(A) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960, as amended by Act XXIII of 1973) - Object of - Provisions of Act if should protect only tenants.

As per the preamble to the Act, it is one to amend and consolidate the law relating to the regulation of the letting of residential and non-residential buildings and the control of rents of such buildings and the prevention of unreasonable eviction of tenants therefrom in the State of Tamil Nadu. It is seen from the preamble itself that the Act is not merely confined to prevention of unreasonable eviction of tenants. It is also intended to consolidate the law relating to the letting of buildings and control of rents. Even the expression 'unreasonable eviction' is significant. The Act does not prevent 'reasonable eviction'. It cannot be said that the Act is intended to protect only the tenants. The Legislature has taken care to protect the interests of the landlord also. The contention that the provisions of the Act should protect only the tenants and no benefit shall be conferred on the landlord is, to say the least, preposterous. The Legislature has, in its wisdom, balanced between the rights of the landlord and the rights of the tenants and brought about the present measure to hold the scales even. [Para. 5]

(B) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960 as amended by Act XXIII of 1973), Sec.11 - Scope and object of - If runs counter to the object of the Act.

Sec.11 of the Act is enacted with a view to prevent defaulters from continuing the possession of the property taking advantage of the pendency of an application for eviction without performing their own part of the obligations. It should be noted that Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act recognises the duty on the part of the tenant to pay or tender the rent due by him within a particular time. Under that sub-section, it shall be paid or tendered within fifteen days after the expiry of the time fixed in the agreement of tenancy or in the absence of any such agreement, by the last day of the month next following that for which the rent is payable. The Act has not absolved the tenant from the liability to pay the rent within the prescribed time. If the tenant chooses to commit default wilfully, that itself will give a cause of action to the landlord to file an application for eviction. Even after the filing of the petition for eviction, the tenant is duty-bound to fulfil his obligation to pay the rent regularly within the prescribed time. The tenant should not fail to pay the rent and take advantage of the pendency of the proceedings; nor should he indulge in delaying tactics in order to protract the proceeding. The section is intended only to prevent the tenant from failing to fulfil his obligations and protracting the proceedings for eviction.

(C) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960 as amended by Act XXIII of 1973), Secs.10(2)(i) and 11 - Sections if inconsistent with such other.

The order in Sec.11 has nothing to do with the order in the main proceedings. If during the pendency of the proceeding, the tenant fails to comply with the order passed under Sec.11 of the Act, he is liable to be evicted immediately and there is no question of the tenant claiming the benefit of the proviso to Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act in such cases. Hence, there is no inconsistency between the two provisions.

(D) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960 as amended by Act XXIII of 1973), Sec.11 - Section whether bad for not containing guidelines.

There is no substance in the contention of the petitioner that the section does not contain any guidelines. The language of the section is very clear and there is no necessity for any further guidelines. It is for the courts to understand the section and act accordingly. This is not a case of any delegated legislation to warrant prescription of guidelines by the legislature itself. [Para. 26]

(E) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960 as amended by Act XXIII of 1973), Sec.11 - Section enabling collection of the rent, the recovery of which is barred by limitation - It's unconstitutional on that ground.

There is no substance in the contention that because the section enables collection of rent, the recovery of which, under the general law is barred by limitation, the section is unconstitutional.

[Para. 26]

(F) Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (XVIII of 1960 as amended by Act XXIII of 1973), Sec.11 - If violative of provisions of Constitution of India.

Art.38 of the Constitution has no application.

Art.31 has been deleted with effect from 20.6.1979.

Hence, there is no question of Sec.11 of the Act violating the provisions of Art.31(2) or Art.38 of the Constitution of India. Sec.11(4) of the Act is valid and not violative of any of the provisions of the Constitution of India. [Paras. 27 & 30]

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of declaration declaring that Sec.11(4) of the Tamil Nadu Buildings Lease and Rent Control Act is unconstitutional being repugnant to the very object of the Tamil Nadu Act 18 of 1960, as amended upto date and pass all consequential orders that are necessary in the subject matter.

S.K. Sundaram, for Petitioner.

V.R. Rajasekaran, Government Advocate, for Respondent No.1.

V. Raj Narayanan, for Respondent No.2.

The Court made the following

ORDER: This is a petition to declare that Sec.11(4) of the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'), is unconstitutional, being repugnant to the very object of the Act.

2. The petitioner is admittedly a tenant under the second respondent of premises No.8, Thulukanam Street, Varadarajapuram, Madras-2. On a rent of Rs.50 per mensem. The second respondent filed R.C.O.P.No.64 of 1983 under Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act for eviction of the petitioner on the ground of wilful default in payment of rent. An application was filed by the second respondent under Sec.11 of the Act for a direction to the petitioner to pay the arrears of rent and in default to stop the proceedings. An order was passed by the Rent Controller directing the tenant to pay the rent and as he did not comply with the same, an order was passed under Sec.11(4) of the Act on 8.4.1985 directing him to put the second respondent in possession of the building. The second respondent filed E.P.No.177 of 1988 for executing the order. The petitioner contested the same and filed M.P.No.852 of 1988 under Sec.47 of the Code of Civil Procedure for dismissal of the execution proceeding. One of the contentions raised by the petitioner was that the premises fell within an area declared to be slum area by the Government in G.O.No.1528, dated 4.12.1971, under the Tamil Nadu Slum Clearance and Improvement Act, 1971. The tenant paid a sum of Rs.2,000 towards arrears on 6.1.1989 and another sum of Rs.2,350 on 7.3.1989. The second respondent did not press the E.P. and it was dismissed on 7.3.1989. A fresh E.P. was filed in E.P.No.312 of 1991. In the meanwhile, a writ petition was filed challenging the validity of the Notification under the Tamil Nadu Slum Clearance and Improvement Act in this Court and the same was allowed. The Notification was held to be null and void. Again, the petitioner filed M.P.No.577 of 1991 under Sec.47 of the Code of Civil Procedure raising the same contentions. That petition was dismissed on 7.1.1992. The petitioner filed an appeal against the said order. The petitioner also filed M.P.No.138 of 1992 under Sec.47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That was dismissed on 27.4.1992. The petitioner filed R.C.A.No.572 of 1992 against the said order. That appeal was dismissed on 28.8.1992.

3. The petitioner filed this writ petition on 20.8.1992 and got an interim stay of eviction. In this proceeding the petitioner challenges the constitutional validity of Sec.11(4) of the Act in order to contend that the order of eviction passed against him is consequentially null and void. The grounds urged by the petitioner in support of his petition.

(1) The section is against the object of the Act, which is a beneficial enactment intended to protect the tenants. Hence, the provision for eviction on failure to pay or deposit the arrears of rent, even before the disposal of the main petition for eviction runs counter to the object of the Act.

(2) The section is ambiguous. The meaning of the expression "arrears of rent" is not made clear as to whether it would refer to the arrears accrued prior to the filing of the petition or arrears accrued after the filing of the petition and during the pendency of the main proceeding.

(3) There are no guidelines prescribed by the section on the basis of which the court should act. A view has been taken in some cases that even time barred arrears can be directed to be paid or deposited under the section. That will place an unreasonable burden on the tenant.

(4) The operation of the section is not confined to a proceeding for eviction on the ground of wilful default. Whatever may be the ground urged in the main petition for eviction, Sec.11 is made applicable to such proceeding. That again causes an unreasonable burden on the tenant.

(5) The section is opposed to principles of equity and natural justice.

(6) There are 45 lakhs of tenants in the City of Madras and only 4 lakhs of landlords. The section confers benefits on the landlords who form a small group when compared with the number of tenants. Hence, the section violates Arts.31(2) and 38 of the Constitution of India.

4. Before considering the various contentions raised by the petitioner as stated above, it is better to refer to the object of the Act. The Rent Control legislation was first introduced in the State as a temporary measure to meet an emergency brought about by the Second World War. It was expressly stated on the floor of the Legislature Assembly that the Act was purely a temporary measure and if the pressure as a result of the World War was over, it would not continue on the statute book. The fore-runner to the present Act was introduced in 1946. That was Act XV of 1946. Subsequently, it was substituted by Act XXV of 1949, which was replaced by Act XVIII of 1960. That was amended extensively by Act 23 of 1973. The Act was then made permanent.

5. As per the preamble to the Act, it is one to amend and consolidate the law relating to the regulation of the letting of residential and non-residential buildings and the control of rents of such buildings and the prevention of unreasonable eviction of tenants therefrom in the State of Tamil Nadu. It is seen from the preamble itself that the Act is not merely confined to prevention of unreasonable eviction of tenants. It is also intended to consolidate the law relating to the regulation of the letting of buildings and control of rents. Even the expression "unreasonable eviction" is significant. The Act does not prevent "reasonable eviction". It cannot be said that the Act is intended to protect only the tenants. The Legislature has taken care to protect the interests of the Landlord also. The contention that the provisions of the Act should protect only the tenants and no benefit shall be conferred on the landlord is, to say the least, preposterous. The Legislature has, in its wisdom, balanced between the rights of the landlord and the rights of the tenants and brought about the present measure to hold the scales even.

6. The object of the Act has been considered in several decisions of this Court and the Supreme Court. In Raja Chetty v. Jagannathadas Govindas, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 694, a Division Bench of this Court observed as follows:

"This Act was primarily intended to prevent unreasonable eviction of tenants and to regulate the letting of residential and non-residential buildings and to control the rents of such buildings. Though most of the provisions of the Act are obviously thus intended to safeguard the rights of tenants, there are provisions which, so far as they go, are in favour of the landlord also. Now Sec.7(2)(1) is one of such provisions which gives a right to the landlord to pray for the eviction of the tenant on default of due payment of rent."

7. Another Division Bench of this Court in Iranu v. Chidambaram Chettiar, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 221, dealt with the object of the Act and the scope of the preamble. The following passage is relevant:

"It is common ground that as the preamble to the statute shows the object of the Legislature is to regulate the letting out of residential and non-residential buildings alike and to control the rent of such buildings and to prevent unreasonable eviction of tenants therefrom in the State of Madras. It is common ground too that the preamble which is said to be a good means of finding out the meaning of the statute and, as it were, a key to the understanding of it may legitimately be consulted to solve any ambiguity or to find the meaning of words which may have more than one or to keep the effect of the Act within its real scope whenever the enacting part is in any of these respects open to doubt. (Vide Maxwell, on the interpretation of statutes, Ninth Edn., by Sir Gillat Jackson, page 46.)”

8. In Dr.K.C.Nambiar, v. State of Madras, (1953)1 M.L.J. 49, Subba Rao, J. pointed out that the Act was really a restriction on the rights of the landlord which existed prior thereto and it created certain rights in the tenant. The following passage in the judgment is very instructive:

“The contention was that Sec.13 is an unreasonable restriction on the petitioner’s right to hold a property. So stated, the argument appears plausible, but ignores the nature of the right, the circumstances under which it was created and the underlying purpose of the restriction imposed. Before the Act became law, the landlords and tenants were governed by the contract and the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. If it was a monthly tenancy, the tenant could be asked to quit after notice for the prescribed period was given. But the Act evolved a scheme imposing restrictions on the landlord. While the main object of the Act was to prevent the arbitrary eviction of the tenants, it took good care to see that interests of the landlords were protected within reasonable limits. A statutory tenant the creation of the Act, with certain rights and restrictions cannot accept the rights and complain of the restrictions. No question of unreasonable restriction on his part would arise as the statute itself created that right “subject to restrictions”. He acquired the right not to be evicted except under certain circumstances and one of those circumstances is when the Government exempts a particular building from all or particular provisions of the Act. His right to the user of the properties therefore is not an absolute one, but is circumscribed by the provisions of the Act itself.”

9. A similar view was expressed by Somasundaram, J. in Aiyannah Chetty v. Maddukishnayya & Co., (1956)2 M.L.J. 54, in the following terms:

“The Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act curtails, abridges and modifies the ordinary law relating to landlord and tenant and the Act has, therefore, to be construed strictly. No doubt, the policy of the Legislature was that the right of the tenants should not be affected unreasonably but subsequent experience showed that some benefits be conferred on the landlord also. It was with that object in view, that an amendment was introduced in 1951 by the Madras Act VIII of 1951 by which certain rights coupled with certain duties and liabilities were given to the landlord. It cannot be said that this law was intended mainly for the benefit of the tenants and therefore, every section in the statute must be construed only in favour of the tenant and against the landlord. The Act has to be taken as not merely conferring certain benefits on the tenant but also affording protection to the landlord. In short, the ordinary rule of interpretation which has to be applied to enactments, namely, that the provisions of the statute are to be strictly construed are not in any way affected by policy of this enactment.”

10. In P.J.Irani v. State of Madras, (1962)1 M.L.J. 92 (S.C.), the Supreme Court held that the Act was enacted for achieving three purposes: (1) The regulation of letting, (2) The control of rents and (3) The prevention of unreasonable eviction of tenants from residential and non-residential buildings and observed that though the enactment conferred rights on tenants it was possible that the statutory protection could either have caused great hardship to a landlord or was the subject of abuse by the tenant himself and therefore the power of exemption conferred on the State Government under Sec.13 of Act XXV of 1949 was constitutionally valid.

11. In Kangu v. Ahmed Unnissa Begum, (1963)1 M.L.J. 97, Veerasami, J. emphasised that the Act protected the tenant only against unreasonable eviction.

12. In R.Venkataswami Naidu and another v. Narasaram Naraindas, (1966) 1 M.L.J. 1 (S.C.), the Supreme Court observed that a preamble is a key to the interpretation of a statute, but is not ordinarily an independent enactment conferring rights or taking them away and cannot restrict or widen the enacting part which is clear and unambiguous.

13. In M/s.Raval and Co. v. Ramachandran, (1966)2 M.L.J. 68, a Full Bench of this Court held that the Act of 1960 and the amending Act of 1964 are valid and not violative of the provisions of the Constitution. Referring to the purposes of the Act, the Bench observed that the Legislature intended to regulate the letting of buildings and the control of rents and prevent the unreasonable eviction of tenants in the context of spiralling inflation in respect of urban rent for building, conditions of scarce accommodation and perhaps considerable hardship to tenants occasioned by evictions strictly under the law.

14. In K.R. Saraswathi v. Vadivelu Chettiar, (1967) 2 M.L.J. 81, Ramaprasada Rao, J. pointed out that the sine qua non of the Act was that tenants ought not to be unreasonably evicted by landlords and the Act created inroads into the rights of ownership of immovable properties. He observed that it cannot be presumed that the rights vested in landlord could be curtailed by mere surmises.

15. In Nanda Rao v. Lakshmanaswami Mudaliar, (1969) 1 M.L.J. 153, Natesan, J. observed that the guiding line in the interpretation of the Act must be that it is intended to confer personal security on a tenant in respect of his home or his business premises and at the same time, the landlord is protected and the Act provides for his securing a fair return for his investment.

16. In Gulabibai Jain v. District Munsif, Poonamallee, (1969) 2 M.L.J. 303, a Division Bench of this Court held that the preamble to the Act does not control the statute and it is not unreasonable to evict a tenant within the scope of Sec.14(1)(b) of the Act.

17. In Kewal Singh v. Lajwanti, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 161, the Supreme Court while considering the provisions of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, observed as follows:

"Before discussing the relevant provisions of the Act it may be necessary to observe that the Rent Control Act is a piece of social legislation and is meant mainly to protect the tenants from frivolous evictions. At the same time, in order to do justice to the landlords and to avoid placing such restrictions on their right to evict the tenant so as to destroy their legal right to property certain salutary provisions have been made by the legislature which give relief to the landlord. In the absence of such a legislation a landlord has a common law right to evict the tenant either on the determination of the tenancy by efflux of time or for default in payment of rent or other grounds after giving notice under the Transfer of Property Act. This broad right has been curtailed by the Rent Control Legislation with a view to give protection to the tenants having regard to their genuine and dire needs. While the rent control legislation has given a number of facilities to the tenants it should not be construed so as to destroy the limited relief which it seeks to give to the landlord also. For instance one of the grounds for eviction which is contained in almost all the Rent Control Acts in the country is the question of landlord's bona fide personal necessity. The concept of bona fide necessity should be meaningfully construed so as to make the relief granted to the landlord real and practical."

18. An analysis of the above rulings will clearly show that there is no substance in the contention of the petitioner that the object of the Act is to protect only the tenants and the provisions of Sec.11 of the Act are running counter to the said object inasmuch as they enable the landlord to get an order of eviction even before the disposal of the main petition for eviction. Learned counsel for the petitioner relied on the judgments of the Supreme Court in S.K. Verma v. Industrial Tribunal-cum-Labour Court, New Delhi, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 422; (1980) 4 S.C.C. 443; (1981) 1 S.C.W.R. 89; 1981 Ser.L.J. 107; (1981) 1 Lab.L.J. 388; (1981) 1 S.C.R. 789; 1980 Lab.I.C. 1292 and Lalappa Lingappa v. Laxmi Vishnu Textile Mills, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 852; 1981 Lab.I.C. 307; (1981) 1 Lab.L.J. 308; (1981) 2 S.C.C. 238; 1981 Ser.L.J. 430. In both the cases, the Court held that welfare statutes must, of necessity, receive a broad interpretation and where the legislation is designed to give relief against certain kinds of mischief, the court should not make inroads by making etymological excursions, and a rule of beneficial construction should be adopted.

19. Neither of the rulings will have any bearing in the present case. As pointed out already, the Act is not intended to protect the tenants exclusively against any eviction. As stated clearly in the preamble, the tenants are protected only from unreasonable eviction. Sec.11 of the Act is enacted with a view to prevent defaulters from continuing in possession of the property taking advantage of the pendency of an application for eviction without performing their own part of the obligations. It should be noted that Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act recognises the duty on the part of the tenant to pay or tender the rent due by him within a particular time. Under that sub-section, it shall be paid or tendered within fifteen days after the expiry of the time fixed in the agreement of tenancy or in the absence of any such agreement, by the last day of the month next following that for which the rent is payable. The Act has not absolved the tenant from the liability to pay the rent within the prescribed time. If the tenant chooses to commit default wilfully, that itself will give a cause of action to the landlord to file an application for eviction. Even after the filing of the petition for eviction, the tenant is duty bound to fulfil his obligation to pay the rent regularly within the prescribed time. The tenant should not fail to pay the rent and take advantage of the pendency of the proceeding; nor should he indulge in delaying tactics in order to protract the proceeding. The Section is intended only to prevent the tenant from failing to fulfil his obligations and protracting the proceedings for eviction.

20. The purpose and scope of the section have been considered in several decisions. In Janakamma v. Rangaraj, (1960)1 M.L.J. 362, Ganapatia Pillai, J. considered the scope of Sec.7-A(4) of the old Act 25 of 1949, which corresponds to the present Sec.11(4). The learned Judge pointed out that the order passed under the section had nothing to do with the original default in payment of rent on which the application for eviction was based. The following passage in the judgment is relevant:

"It will be seen that Sec.7-A(4), of the Rent Control Act deals with payment of arrears as a condition precedent to the hearing of the tenant on the objection raised by him. The Act empowers the Rent Controller in a case in which eviction is sought on the ground of default in payment of rent to give an opportunity to the tenant to pay off all the arrears up-to-date. Non-compliance of this order results in a termination of the proceeding and making an order directing the tenant to put the landlord in possession of the building. This has nothing to do with the original default on which the application for eviction is based."

21. The above ruling gives an answer to the contention raised by learned counsel for the petitioner incidentally in the course of arguments. Learned counsel submitted that under the proviso to Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act, the Controller may give the tenant a reasonable time not exceeding fifteen days to pay or tender the rent due by him to the landlord, if he is satisfied that the tenants default to pay or tender rent was not wilful. Learned counsel submitted that the proviso contains a non obstante clause and the power given to the Controller can be exercised notwithstanding anything contained in Sec.11 of the Act. It was argued that while Sec.11 of the Act enables the Controller to pass an order of eviction on the failure of the tenant to pay or deposit the rent as directed by the Controller, the proviso to Sec.10(2)(i), of the Act enables the Controller to grant further time after the conclusion of the main proceeding for eviction. According to learned counsel, the two provisions are contrary to each other and they cannot stand together. There is no substance in this contention. As pointed out in Janakamma's case, (1960)1 M.L.J. 362, the order in the present Sec.11 corresponding to old Sec.7-A has nothing to do with the order in the main proceeding. If during the pendency of the proceeding the tenant fails to comply with the order passed under Sec.11 of the Act, he is liable to be evicted immediately and there is no question of the tenant claiming the benefit of the proviso to Sec.10(2)(i) of the Act in such cases. Hence, there is no inconsistency between the two provisions.

22. In Perumal v. Muthuswami, (1962)2 M.L.J. 218: A.I.R. 1962 Mad. 447, a Full Bench of this Court considered the provisions of Sec.7-A of the old Act of 1949 and observed that the Section enabled the Rent Controller or the Appellate Authority to direct the tenant to deposit the rents and it had no reference to the determination of the disputed questions in the main petition, as it was intended only to prevent defaulters from continuing in possession of the property taking advantage of the pendency of an application without at the same time performing their own obligations.

23. In Kaluram v. Baidyanath, (1965)2 S.C.J. 145: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 1909, a similar provision in the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act was considered by the Supreme Court and it was observed that the object obviously appeared to be that when a suit or proceeding had commenced between the landlord and tenant for ejectment and the tenant had received notice of it, the payment of rent should be made in Court to avoid any dispute in that behalf.

24. In Lachiram v. Kumaresan, (1979)2 M.L.J. 135, Ramaprasada Rao, C.J., observed as follows:

"A proceeding under Sec.11(4) of the Act is intended to accelerate the long-drawn proceedings under the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act. As eviction is possible in a case where the tenant commits wilful default in the payment of rents and particularly, after the recent amendment in 1973 explaining wilful default as meaning non-payment or tender of rent after the issue of a notice calling for such payment of rent by the landlord, the importance of sec.11(4) has to be brought to light and in its true light. Sec.11(4) is, therefore, intended to make the tenant alert during the entirety of the proceedings and be conscious of his obligations and statutory duties in the matter of payment of rents. Even here, the Legislature has provided that the Rent Controller in a case where an application under Sec.11 is taken by the landlord should enquire into the dispute as to the amount of rent to be paid by the tenant and make such enquiry as he deems necessary and summarily determine the rent so to be paid or deposited. Such enquiry should not be long drawn as in the case with the main proceedings. They are intended to be summary and they have to be disposed of at least within four weeks from the date when such applications are filed. This would be therefore, a directive to the lower court to see that applications under Sec.11(4) are heard and decided within two months from the date of presentation of such applications. There is absolutely no justification to keep such applications beyond such time."

25. In Kesava Naicker v. Sivagnana Mudaliar, A.I.R. 1980 Mad. 225, Ratnam, J. held that the applicability of the section is not confined to cases where there is an admission of the tenancy or a prior adjudication as regards tenancy. It is pointed out that a tenant could get over the provisions of the section by raising a frivolous contention denying the title of the landlord or relationship of landlord and tenant. The learned Judge held that the simple denial of the relationship of landlord and tenant cannot oust the jurisdiction of the authorities under the Act and it is necessary to find out whether the denial is bona fide. The learned Judge quoted in extenso from the judgment of the Supreme Court in Om Prakash Gupta v. Dr. Rattan Singh, (1963) 2 S.C.J. 475 and upheld the orders of the Rent Controller and Appellate Authority who found that the relationship of landlord and tenant did exist between the parties and passed orders under Sec.11 of the Act.

26. There is no substance in the contention of the petitioner that the section does not contain any guidelines. The language of the section is very clear and there is no necessity for any further guidelines. It is for the Courts to understand the Section and act accordingly. This is not a case of any delegated legislation to warrant prescription of guidelines by the legislature itself. There is also no substance in the content that the section is bad because time-barred debts could also be collected by enforcing the provisions of the Section. It is held in Moothalayandum Chettiar v. Renganathan & Co., 81 L.W. 383, that the expression "arrears" used in the section would imply all arrears due to the landlord irrespective of any bar of limitation. It was pointed out that the provisions of the Limitation Act would only bar the remedy of the creditor and do not extinguish the debt. The same view was taken by the Apex Court in Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ram Chandarji Virajman Mandir, A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 287, while considering a similar provision in Sec.20(4) of the U.P. Urban Buildings (Regulations of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act (13 of 1972). It was held that the words "entire amount of rent due" used in Sec.20(4) of that Act would include rent which had become time-barred. The decision of the Allahabad High Court was affirmed. Reliance was also placed by the Court on the following observations of Cotton, L.J. in Curven v. Milburan (1889), 42 Ch. D. 424.

"Statute-barred debts are dues, though payment of them cannot be enforced by action."

Reference was made to an earlier decision of the Court in Bombay Dyeing and Manufacturing Co. Ltd. v. The State of Bombay, A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 328. A similar view taken by a Full Bench of the Patna High Court in Ram Nandan Sharma v. Mt. Maya Devi, A.I.R. 1975 Pat. 283 was approved by the court. Hence, there is no substance in the contention that because the section enables collection of rent, the recovery of which under the general law is barred by limitation, the section is unconstitutional. There is no substance in the other contentions urged by learned counsel for the petitioner. They are stated only to be rejected.

27. The last contention that there are only four lakhs of landlords as against 45 lakhs of tenants in Madras City has no merit whatever. Art.38 of the Constitution has no application. Art.31 has been deleted with effect from 20.6.1979. Hence, there is no question of Sec.11 of the Act violating the provisions of Arts.31(2) or Art.38 of the Constitution of India.

28. Reliance is also placed by learned counsel on the judgment of the Supreme Court in S.Sundaram v. V.R.Pattabhiraman, A.I.R. 1985 S.C. 582. The Court had to consider only the expression "wilful default" found in Sec.10(2) of the Act. The ruling has nothing to do whatever with the contentions raised in the present case.

29. Learned counsel also referred to the rulings in Janakiammal v. Natarajan, (1988)1 L.W.416 and Arputham v. Singarayan Nadar, (1988)2 L.W. 245. In the former case, I considered the provisions of the Partition Act and observed whether Sec.4 thereof curtailed the rights of a Person which are normally appended to ownership of property should continue in the statute book in the wake of modern progression is a matter for the Parliament to ponder. I have pointed out that so long as the section continues to exist in the statute book, the court has to give effect to the same. In the latter case, I have rejected the argument that the Rent Controller should pass a separate order in the first instance in the interlocutory application under Sec.11 of the Act and then pass another consequential order in the main proceedings. I have held that if the tenant fails to deposit as directed by the Rent Controller, an order under Sec.11(4) of the Act would automatically follow and the Rent Controller is not in error in passing such an order. Neither of the decisions helps the petitioner in present case.

30. I have no hesitation to hold that Sec.11(4) of the Act is valid and not violative of any of the provisions of the Constitution of India.

31. The writ petition fails and is dismissed with costs. Counsel's fee Rs.500 to each counsel.

...Respondents.

Constitution of India (1950), Art.226 - Discretionary jurisdiction under - Exercise of - Petitioner is guilty of suppression of material facts - Furnishing of misleading statements - Whether entitled to relief under discretionary jurisdiction.

The petitioner got allotted two house sites, suppressing material facts and furnishing misleading statements. Subsequently, the allotment was cancelled. The petitioner approached the High Court with a petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India for the issue of a writ of certiorari and quash the orders of cancellation of allotment of one plot. In her writ, she suppressed the fact that she filed two applications assured that her family was allotted three and not four plots and also stated that her husband and his second wife gave a letter dated 25.10.1982 voluntarily withdrawing from the allotment.

Held: In the present case, inasmuch as the petitioner not only suppressed material facts, furnished misleading statements to the authorities but also, in a dexterous fashion executed such a fear before this Court also in the affidavit filed in support of the application, in order to put forward a case of violation of principles of natural justice and obtained successfully interim relief with the oblique motive of squatting over the property all along, that is to say for ten years from 7.10.1982, the date on which the impugned order was passed. Since the petitioner revelled in suppression of material facts and furnished misleading statements, merits whatever she may have, cannot at all be looked into especially when the discretionary jurisdiction of this Court under Art.226 of the Constitution of India is based on justice, equity and good conscience.

Petition under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of certiorari calling for the records connected with the order of the Superintending Engineer, World Bank Circle, Tamilnadu Housing Board, Madras-40 the first respondent herein made in his letter No.AS 5/14843/81, dated 7.10.1982 cancelling the allotment of plot 3/173 in Villivakkam sites and services scheme and quash the order therein dated 7.10.1982.

G.Desappan, for Petitioner.

S.Doraisamy, for Respondents.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The present action by R.Sarojini, the petitioner herein, is under Art.226 of the Constitution of India, for issue of a writ of certiorari, calling for the records connected with the order of the Superintending Engineer, World Bank Circle, Tamil Nadu Housing Board, Madras-40, the first respondent herein, in Letter No.AS 5/14843/81, dated 7.10.1982, cancelling the allotment of plot No.3/173 in Villivakkam Sites and Services Scheme and quash the order therein dated 7.10.1982.

2. The Tamil Nadu Housing Board in collaboration with Madras Metropolitan Development Authority floated a scheme with the assistance of the World Bank to provide house sites together with semi-structure for the benefit of the economically weaker sections of people. The scheme was taken up at Kodungaiyur Village and Villivakkam area and was called Villivakkam Sites and Services Scheme Phase-I. According to the scheme and the rules in force, it is said, only one, either the husband or the wife in other words in only family is entitled for only one allotment, provided the applicant being a resident of Madras City for more than ten years, and does not own a house site or houses within the limits of Chengalpattu and Madras Districts. As per the scheme, a lot will be drawn for the allotment of plots and the eligible applicants will be favoured with allotments, subject to certain conditions. One of the conditions of allotment in clause 11 thereto prescribes that allotment is liable for cancellation if any information given by the applicant is found to be false.

3. The petitioner, it transpires, submitted two applications viz. 28,620 and 24,722 for allotment of plots on 10.11.1981 and 6.11.1981 respectively. In Application No.28620, she indicated her husband's name as I.Veeraraghavan profitably employed as Supervisor in M/s.Sakthi Builders, Madras-18 getting a monthly salary of Rs.500. In Application No.24722 she did not indicate her husband's employment and income but indicated her income as Rs.250 per month, as a clerk in the very same concern, M/s.Sakthi Builders. She is said to have been favoured with allotments in both applications and Plots 3/173 and 6/14 'A' type in Villivakkam were allotted. The petitioner's husband, Veeraraghavan, filed Application No.34294 in Kodungaiyur scheme mentioning that he was Job Typist in the High Court. The petitioner's husband's second wife Tmt.Sargunalakshmi filed Application No.28352 for allotment in Kodungaiyur. Both were allotted plots in Nos.4/26 and 3/232 in Kodungaiyur.

4. The same address viz. No.20, Muthukrishnan Street, Kondithope, Madras-1, was stated to have been furnished in all the applications submitted by the petitioner and her husband, thereby indicating that both of them were living together as members of one family. However, the petitioner's husband's second wife gave her address as C/o.N.Balakrishnan, Plot No.1482, 13th West Cross Street, Housing Board Colony, Vyasarpadi. All the four applications were stated to have been affixed with photo prints of the members of the family, thereby pointing out with certainty that all applications related to the members of one family. Thus, in effect, the petitioner's family was favoured with four allotments.

5. On coming to know about the allotments secured by suppression of facts and false declarations, the first respondent cancelled allotment of Plot No.3/173 in favour of the petitioner with forfeiture of earnest money deposit with interest, giving rise to the present action.

6. She obtained interim relief of stay of cancellation of allotment on the ground of violation of principles of natural justice inasmuch as no notice was given prior to cancellation.

7. Subsequent to the present action, it is said, on 4.1.1993 allotment of Plot No.6/14 in favour of the petitioner had been cancelled. However, the other two allotments, Plot Nos.4/26 and 2/307, in favour of the petitioner's husband and her husband's second wife respectively are still in tact. During the course of arguments on a direction from this court, the files relating to the various applications by the petitioner, her husband and her husband's second wife, had been produced for perusal by court and the facts as stated above had been culled out from the said files.

8. In the affidavit filed in support of the petitioner in the present action, she suppressed the material fact of her filing two applications which were favoured with allotments, and she also made a misleading statement in paragraph 5 that the family was favoured with only three and not four allotments, taking advantage of the inherent mistake committed by the first respondent in the impugned communication. She also stated falsely that her husband and his second wife gave a letter dated 25.10.1982 to the first respondent voluntarily withdrawing from the allotment.

9. The question that crops up for consideration in the background of the facts of the case is whether the petitioner, would be entitled to the relief prayed for in the writ petition.

10. The earliest Indian decision on the point is by Malik, C.J. in Asiatic Engg. Co. v. Achhru Ram, A.I.R. 1951 All. 746 (F.B.), wherein learned Chief Justice referred to the following observations of Scrutton, L.J. in Rex v. Kensington Income Tax Commissioner, (1917)1 K.B. 486:

"It has been for many years the rule of the court and one which it is of the greatest importance to maintain, that when an applicant comes to the court to obtain relief on an ex parte statement he should make a full and fair disclosure of all the material facts--facts, not law, the applicant must state fully and fairly the facts, and the penalty by which the court enforces that obligation is that if it finds out that the facts have not been fully and fairly stated to it, the court will set aside any action which it has taken on the faith of the imperfect statement."

Thereafter, the Full Bench went into the fact in great detail and stated thus in Paragraph 51:

"A person obtaining an ex parte order or a rule nisi by means of a petition for exercise of the extraordinary powers under Art.226 of the Constitution must come with clean hands, must not suppress any relevant facts from the court, must refrain from making misleading statements and from giving incorrect information to the court. courts, for their own protection, should insist that persons invoking these extraordinary powers should not attempt, in any manner, to misuse this valuable right by obtaining ex parte orders by suppression, misrepresentation or misstatement of facts. Applying this principle to the present case, we feel, that, in this case, the petitioner-company has disentitled itself to ask for a writ of prohibition by material suppressions, misrepresentations and misleading statements which have been found by us above."

11. In Charanji Lal v. Financial Commissioner, A.I.R. 1978 P. & H. 326, it was alleged that there was "A calculated and designed suppression of material facts in order to secure admission and interim relief". The Court was satisfied on facts that there was a calculated suppression of material facts, which if disclosed would have disentitled the petitioners to the extraordinary remedy, or in any case would have materially affected the merits on both the interim and ultimate relief claimed. The Full Bench after referring to King v. General Commissioner, (1917)1 K.B. 486 and some other decisions and in agreeing with a long line of precedents and affirming a rule which appeared hoary by usage, held that the writ petitioners had by their own conduct disentitled themselves to the relief which they sought to claim.

12. A similar view was taken in G.A.Pillai v. Government of India, A.I.R. 1970 Ker. 110 (F.B.), wherein the petitioner had not made a 'full and true disclosure of the facts but has' in order to put forward his case of a violation of the principles of natural justice, chosen to suppress his representation and adverse order thereon.

13. The principle evolved in various decisions referred to above is applicable on all fours to the case on hand inasmuch as the petitioner has, as adverted to earlier, not only suppressed material facts, furnished misleading statements to the authorities, but also in a dexterous fashion executed such a feat before this court also in the affidavit filed in support of the application, in order to put forward a case of violation of principles of natural justice and obtained successfully interim relief with the oblique motive of squatting over the property all along, that is to say for ten years from 7.10.1982, the date on which the impugned order was passed. Since the petitioner revelled in suppression of material facts and furnished misleading statements, merits whatever she may have, cannot at all be looked into especially when the discretionary jurisdiction of this court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India is based on justice, equity and good conscience.

14. In the circumstances, the writ petition, as such, deserves to be dismissed. The rule nisi issued is, therefore, discharged and the writ petition is dismissed. No costs.

The Deputy Commissioner of Labour (Appeals), Madras and others
...Respondents.

Tamil Nadu Shops and Establishments Act (XXXVI of 1947), Secs. 4(1)(a) and 5 - Applicability of Act - Exclusion of certain categories of employees and establishments by Sec. 4(1)(a) - State Government issuing orders making Act applicable to those categories by virtue of power under Sec. 5 - Sec. 5 if invalid for excessive delegation.

Under Sec. 4 of the Tamil Nadu Shops and Establishments Act, 1947 exemption has been granted in respect of certain persons employed in establishments. But for the exemptions, the category of 'persons employed' and 'establishment' would be governed by the provisions of the Act. Sec. 5 of the Act has been given overriding effect as it opens with non obstante clause. Therefore, the provision of Sec. 4 of the Act is subject to the provisions of Sec. 5 excepting in regard to establishments mentioned in Clauses (c) and (f) of sub-sec. (1) of Sec. 4 of the Act. The State Government has been further empowered to modify or cancel any notification made under Sec. 5 of the Act. A reading of the various provisions of the Act makes it clear that the enactment not only provides for regulation of conditions of work in shops and commercial establishments but also provides the grounds of termination of services of employees and gives right of appeal against the arbitrary and illegal termination of services of persons employed. The expression 'persons employed' and 'establishment' has been defined in sub-clauses (12) and (6) of Sec. 2 respectively.

Sec. 5 of the Act does not run counter to the essential features of the Act or policy of the enactment. By withdrawing the exemption granted under Sec. 4 of the Act, the essential features and policy of the enactment are not in any way changed. On the other hand, the coverage of Act is widened.

[Para. 19]

The provision of Sec. 5 of the Act is valid and does not suffer from the vice of excessive delegation as contended by the learned counsel for the petitioner. The State Government has not usurped the functions of the State Legislature. Further, Sec. 5 does not contravene any constitutional provision. It is not the case of the petitioner that Sec. 5 of the Act contravenes any of their fundamental rights or ultra vires the powers of the State. Since the exemption contained in Sec. 4 is subject to the provisions of Sec. 5, the delegated authority by issuing the notification withdrawing the exemption is not altering the statute or acts contrary to the statute. Sec. 5 limits the powers of the delegated authority and the power of the State Government is defined clearly. Delegated power under Sec. 5 of the Act cannot extend to the withdrawal of exemption granted under clauses (c) and (f) of sub-sec. (1) of Sec. 4 and sub-sec. (2) of Sec. 4 of the Act.

[Paras. 24 & 26]

Further the Act has to be construed liberally, being a social welfare legislation and it is also a preconstitutional enactment. Legislative policy is contained in Secs. 4 and 5 of the Act, standards and guidelines are discernible from the various provisions and schemes and object of the Act. Therefore, Sec. 5 is valid and legal.

for Respondent Nos. 1 and 3.

The Court made the following

ORDER: The petitioner abovenamed has filed the present writ petition for the following relief: To issue a writ of certiorari or any other writ, order or direction, calling for the records of the 1st respondent culminating in the order dated 20.11.1987 in T.S.E.A.No.27 of 1987 and quash the same.

2. In brief, the relevant facts of the case are as follows: Air France has an office at Madras and the 2nd respondent was the District Manager, along with five other employees. The petitioner management decided to close its Madras office for economic reasons. In compliance with the requirements of Sec. 25 FFA, under which a statutory notice of sixty days to various authorities of the State and the affected parties has to be given, by letter dated 8.1.1987, the notice intimating the management's intention to close its Madras office with effect from 31.3.1987 was sent to all the authorities prescribed under the Act as well as to the affected parties. The services of the workmen were terminated in accordance with law and they were offered their full terminal compensation.

3. The conditions of service of the supervisory and managerial staff are governed by regulations and conditions of service agreed by the parties. In terms of Clause 8.1 of the said Regulations, by letter dated 27.2.1987, the services of the 2nd respondent were terminated with effect from 31.3.1987. But, as the 2nd respondent has averred that the said letter reached him only on 6.3.1987, the petitioner management paid him his salary for April, 1987 also, in effect, his services stand terminated from 1.5.1987. The 2nd respondent was admittedly the District Manager of the Madras office of the petitioner and therefore, Sec. 4(1)(a) of the Tamil Nadu Shops and Establishments Act, 1947 (hereinafter referred to as the Act) excludes its applicability to the 2nd respondent. The above section has been included in the Act by the competent Legislative Assembly of the State of Tamil Nadu. The power to legislate for State vests in the State Legislative Assembly and that the State Legislative Assembly alone is competent to amend, modify or repeal any substantive provision of the Act. There is no change made in Sec. 4(1)(a) of the Act by the State Legislative Assembly.

4. However, the 2nd respondent contended in his reply affidavit before the 1st respondent/Deputy Commissioner of Labour (Appeals) that by G.O.Ms.No.4074, Industries, Labour and Housing (Labour), dated 5.10.1966, all the provisions of the Act have been made applicable to class of persons mentioned in Clause (a) of sub-sec.(1) of Sec.4 of the Act. The aforesaid G.O., was issued by the Governor of Tamil Nadu in exercise of the powers conferred by Sec.5 of the Act. According to the petitioner, Sec.5 of the Act has delegated powers to the State to apply the provisions to any class of persons by notification, but the power does not go and cannot go to the extent of allowing the delegate (in this case the State) to amend or change a substantive provision of the Act itself. This is a function which can be done only by the State Legislative Assembly. That apart, Sec.4(1) (a) of the Act deliberately excludes the applicability of the Act to persons employed in any establishment in a position of management. It is settled law that conditions of service of management employees are governed by the conditions of service entered into by the parties under the common law of master and servant. In the circumstances, it is submitted by the petitioner/management that even if it is assumed that Sec.4(1)(a) of the Act has lost its force by virtue of the above mentioned notification of the State Government, the said notification will be hit by Art.251 of the Constitution of India and be void to the extent of its repugnancy in its application to managerial or supervisory officers whose conditions of service are governed by agreements entered into by the employees and employers under the Contract Act, which is a Central Act.

5. According to the petitioner/management, the termination of service of the 2nd respondent is in full conformity with Rule 8.1 of the Regulations and Conditions of Service entered into by the parties, which is extracted hereunder

"8. Termination of employment.

8.1 Resignation-Discharge.

After the expiry of the probationary period, an employee who resigns must give one month's notice, otherwise the Company shall be entitled to deduct one month's salary in lieu from his last salary. Conversely, the Company may not discharge any employee, except in case of misconduct, without giving one month's notice, or paying one month's salary."

6. Thus, according to the petitioner/management, it is obvious that the clause recognises the rights of either party to terminate the service by giving one month's notice or in lieu of notice, on paying a month's salary in the case of the employer, and in the case of the employee, to surrender one month's salary. The word 'except' in case of misconduct, refers to Clause 13 of the terms and conditions of service under which the employer can dismiss an employee without notice in a case of misconduct. It is further submitted that Clause 8.2 of the conditions of service only lays down the age on which the employer normally terminates. It does not confer any right on any employee to work till the age of 60. In any event, it is submitted that Sec.41(2) of the Act only requires that the termination will be bad in case where there is no notice and no reasonable cause for termination and it is admitted that notice was given in this case before termination of the services of the 2nd respondent.

7. The 1st respondent, who heard the appeal (T.S.E.No.27 of 1987) by his judgment dated 20.11.1987, allowed the appeal and set aside the order of termination dated 27.2.1987 of the service of the 2nd respondent. The said judgment and the reasons for rejection of the contentions raised on behalf of the management are void and without jurisdiction. Therefore, the said judgment is liable to be quashed. The petitioner/management has, therefore, filed the above writ petition for the relief asked for therein.

8. The petitioner has also filed two W.M.Ps., during the pendency of the writ petition viz., W.M.P.Nos.25907 and 25908 of 1991 to implead the State of Tamil Nadu represented by the Secretary, Labour Department as 3rd respondent in the above writ petition and also to permit the petitioner/management to raise additional grounds in the writ petition that Sec.5 of the Act is invalid and void and has to be struck down as ultra vires. The following are the additional grounds raised in W.M.P.No.25908 of 1991:

"5. That the petitioner desires to raise an additional ground that Sec.5 of the Tamil Nadu Shops and Establishment Act, 1947, hereinafter called the Act, itself is invalid and void as it suffers from the vice of excessive delegation.

6. That as the validity of the provision of Sec.5 of the Act is being challenged, it is necessary to implead the State of Tamil Nadu also as a party in the said writ petition."

9. The 2nd respondent has filed his counter affidavit dated 11.4.1988. According to the 2nd respondent, the petitioner, without any justification and in blatant violation of the mandatory requirement of Sec.41 of the Act, terminated the services with effect from 31.3.1987, purporting to be under Clause 8 of the Staff Regulation, under a communication dated 27.2.1987. Aggrieved by the same, he filed an appeal under Sec.41(2) of the Act before the 1st respondent. The petitioner/management filed a counter and contested the said appeal. The 1st respondent found that by virtue of G.O.Ms.No.4074, Industries, Labour and Housing (Labour), dated 5.10.1966, the provisions of the Act have been made applicable to class of persons mentioned in Sec.4(1)(a) of the Act and therefore, the appeal filed by the 2nd respondent was maintainable in law. It was further held by the 1st respondent that the contract between the employer and the person employed cannot override the express statutory provisions. It was the further finding of the 1st respondent that the petitioner/management is obliged to mention the reasonable cause in the order of termination for enabling him to apply his mind to determine the reasonableness of the reason for termination. It is untenable to contend that the District Manager like the 2nd respondent has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal. Persons in the position of management are specifically brought within the purview of the Act in exercise of the statutory powers. Sec.5 of the Act is an overriding provision as could be seen from the opening lines of the said section. G.O.Ms.No.4074, Industries, Labour and Housing (Labour), dated 5.10.1966 is not in conflict with the unwritten law of master and servant. The provisions of the Act themselves make an inroad into the ordinary law of master and servant. The effect of an order made by the Appellate Authority setting aside an order of termination is that the order of termination is non est and never existed and that the employee who was removed from service continues in employment without any interruption or break. For the reasons aforementioned, the 2nd respondent has prayed that the writ petition may be dismissed.

10. The petitioner/management filed a reply affidavit. As the 2nd respondent was occupying a managerial post, the Act did not apply in his case and his appeal under Sec.41 of the Act was misconceived and not maintainable in law. Sec.5 of the Act only delegate certain powers to the State and the State, as delegate, cannot efface a substantive provision of the Act by a notification under Sec.5 of the Act. Even assuming for arguments sake that the language of Sec.5 of the Act is so wide as to include the powers to change Sec.4 of the Act itself, Sec.5 of the Act itself will be invalid in law as it will hit by the vice of excessive delegation. The Constitution has granted the power to the State Legislature to legislate on the topic. Excessive delegation of power is not permissible in law and the Legislative body has to exercise some control over delegated legislation. In any event, the law of master and servant is a Central Law and conditions of service between employers and employees occupying managerial post are governed by the Central Law and therefore, any State provision of Law in conflict with the Central Law will be void to the extent of the conflict.

11. I have heard the elaborate arguments of Mr.S.Govind Swaminathan, learned Senior Advocate on behalf of M/s.N.S.Sivam and K.Madhavan, for the petitioner and Mr.A.L.Somayaji of M/s.Aiyar and Dolia, learned counsel for the 2nd respondent.

12. W.M.P.No.25908 of 1991 has been filed by the petitioner during the pendency of the writ petition seeking permission to raise the additional ground that Sec.5 of the Act is invalid and void and has to be struck down as ultra vires and the said petition was ordered by S.Ramalingam, J., on 10.12.1991. In the affidavit filed in support of the above W.M.P., it is stated that Sec.5 of the Act is invalid and void because it suffers from the vice of excessive delegation.

13. Mr.S.Govind Swaminathan, learned Senior Advocate for the petitioner, has raised the contention that power to withdraw the exemption granted under Sec.4 of the Act could be exercised only by the Legislature itself and the said power to withdraw the exemption cannot be delegated. In other words, it is the contention of Mr.S.Govind Swaminathan, that the delegation of the power under Sec.5 of the Act is an unconstitutional delegation of Legislative power.

14. Per contra, Mr.A.L.Somayaji, learned counsel for the 2nd respondent, would submit that the delegation of the power under Sec.5 of the Act to remove the exemption granted is in accordance with law the accepted legislative practice and is not unconstitutional.

15. In support of his contention, Mr.S.Govind Swaminathan would invite my attention to the following decisions, reported in In re. Art.143, Constitution of India, etc., 1951 S.C.J. 527: 1951 S.C.R. 747: A.I.R.1951 S.C. 332 - paragraph 74 at page 355; *Harishankar Bagla v. 16. Mr.A.L.Somayaji, learned counsel for the 2nd respondent would invite my attention to the following decisions in support of his contention that Sec.5 of the Act is valid and constitutional. They are reported in Pandit Banarsi Das Bhanot v. The State of Madhya Pradesh, A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 909, The Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. In re., (1950)2 L.L.J. 1043, The Management of Blue Star & Co. Ltd. v. The Assistant Commissioner, Madras-6, (1989)1 L.L.J. 233, which in turn followed The Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. In re., (1950)2 L.L.J. 1043, Mohmedalli v. Union of India A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 980: 24 F.J.R. 221: (1964)1 S.C.J. 329, *State Bank of Travancore v. 17. In order to appreciate the respective contentions of the parties, it is necessary to extract the provisions of Sections 4 and 5 of the Act.

"4. Exemptions: (1) Nothing contained in this Act shall apply to-

- (a) persons employed in any establishment in a position of management;
- (b) persons whose work involves travelling;

and persons employed as canvassers and caretakers;

(c) establishments under the Central and State Governments, local authorities, the Reserve Bank of India, a railway administration operating any railway as defined in clause (20) of Art.366 of the Constitution and cantonment authorities;

(d) establishments in mines and oil fields;

(e) Establishments in bazaars, in places where fairs or festivals are held temporarily for a period not exceeding fifteen days at a time;

(f) establishments which, not being factories within the meaning of the Factories Act, 1948, are in respect of matters dealt with in this Act, governed by a separate law for the time being in force in the State.

(2) Nothing contained in Sec.7 or Sec.13, as the case may be, shall apply to—

(a) hospitals and other institutions for the treatment or care of the sick, the infirm, the destitute or the mentally unfit;

(b) such chemists' or druggists' shops as the State Government may, by general or special order, specify;

(c) clubs and residential hotels, hostels attached to schools or colleges, and establishments maintained in boarding schools in connection with the boarding and lodging of pupils and resident masters;

(d) stalls and refreshment rooms at railway stations, docks, wharves or ports.

5. Power of Government to apply Act to exempted persons or establishments: Notwithstanding anything contained in Sec.4, the State Government may, by notification, apply all or any of the provisions of this Act to any class of persons or establishments mentioned in that Section, other than those mentioned in Clauses (c) and (f) of sub-sec.(1), and modify or cancel any such notification."

18. Under Sec.4 of the Act, exemption has been granted in respect of certain persons employed in establishments. But, for the exemption, the category of 'persons employed' and 'establishment' would be governed by the provisions of the Act. Sec.5 of the Act has been given overriding effect as it opens with non obstante clause. Therefore, the provision of Sec.4 of the Act is subject to the provisions of Sec.5 excepting in regard to establishments mentioned in Clauses (c) and (f) of sub-sec.(1) of Sec.4 of the Act. The State Government has been further empowered to modify or cancel any notification made under Sec.5 of the Act. A reading of the various provisions of the Act makes it clear that the enactment not only provides for regulation of conditions of work in shops and commercial establishments, but also provides the grounds of termination of services of employees and gives right of appeal against the arbitrary and illegal termination of services of persons employed. The expression "persons employed" and "establishment" has been defined in sub-clauses (12) and (6) of Sec.2 respectively.

19. The Legislative policy is very clear that the exemption granted in respect of persons and establishment except in regard to establishments enumerated in clauses (c) and (f) of sub-sec.(1) of Sec.4 of the Act is subject to the provisions of Sec.5 of the Act. Sec.5 of the Act does not run counter to the essential features of the Act or policy of the enactment. By withdrawing the exemption granted under Sec.4 of the Act, the essential features and policy of the enactment are not in any way changed. On the other hand, the coverage of the Act, in my opinion, is widened.

20. The contention raised by Mr.S.Govind Swaminathan, learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner was that under Sec.5 of the Act, there is an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power. The Apex Court had occasion to consider a similar question in the case reported in Pandit Banarsi Das Bhanot v. The State of Madhya Pradesh, A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 909. That case arose under the Central Provinces and Berar Sales Tax Act, 1947. Sub-sec.1 of Sec.6 of the said Act provided that no tax shall be payable under this Act on the sale of goods specified in the second column of Schedule II and sub-section 2 of the said section provided that the State Government may, after giving notice by notification amend the Schedule and thereupon such Schedule shall be deemed to be amended accordingly. The contention raised in that case was, that the power conferred on the State Government by Sec.6(2) of the said Act to amend the schedule relating to exemption was unconstitutional because it amounts to delegation of legislative power and that it is impermissible in law. This contention was repealed by the Apex Court in the following terms:

"We are, therefore, of the opinion that the power conferred on the State Government by

Sec.6(2) to amend the schedule relating to exemption is in consonance with the accepted legislative practice relating to the topic, and is not unconstitutional.

21. While taking the above view, the Apex Court had referred to with approval the judgment of our High Court reported in Syed Mohamed & Co. v. State of Madras, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 105. In that case, the Madras High Court has held that the delegation of authority under Sec.5(vi) of the Madras General Sales Tax Act to the rule making authority to determine at which single point in the series of sales by successive dealers, the tax should be levied, was within the permissible constitutional limits. In the decision reported in The Edward Mills Co. Ltd. Beawar v. The State of Ajmeer, A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 25, the Supreme Court upheld the power given to the State Government under the Minimum Wages Act, 1948 to add to the list of employment mentioned in the schedule and extend the Act to that employment.

22. In the decision reported in Mohmedalli v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 980, the Supreme Court upheld the provisions of Sec.1(3) of the Employees' Provident Funds Act, 1952, authorising the Central Government to bring within the purview of that Act such establishment as it might specify under sub-clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (3) of Sec.1 of the said Act, applying to factories and establishments specified therein in which 20 or more persons are employed. Hence, Sec.1(3)(a) and (b) of the said Act excludes from its purview factories and establishments in which less than 20 persons are employed. But, under the Proviso to Sec.1(3), the Central Government is given the power to apply the provisions of the Act, by notification, to any establishments employing less than 20 persons. The above provision has been upheld by the Supreme Court and it has been observed as follows:

"It has been contended (1) that Sec.1(3)(b) under which the notification including restaurants and hotels were brought under the operation of the Act, is invalid because it confers uncontrolled and uncanalised power on the Government; (2) that the Act was intended to apply to mere wage-earners and not to salaried people and that, therefore, the two notifications as a result of which the petitioners' employees have been brought within the purview of the Act are bad inasmuch as they are salaried employees and not mere wage-earners, and (3) that the scheme is bad under Article 14 of the Constitution because it is discriminatory.... By Sec.4, the Central Government has been authorised to add to the Schedule any other industry in respect of the employees whereof it is of opinion that a provident fund scheme should be framed under the Act, and when such a notification is issued, the industry so added shall be deemed to be an industry specified in the Schedule. The general rule as to the application of the Act has been laid down in that sub-section. By way of exception to that general rule, the Appropriate Government has been authorised by Sec.17 to exempt from the operation of all or any of the provisions of any scheme framed under the Act. The scheme is to be framed by the Central Government, under Sec.5 for the establishment of provident fund under the Act for employees or any class of employees, in pursuance of the provisions of the Act."

23. In the case of Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Trivandrum v. K. Kunhambu, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 350: (1980)2 S.C.R. 260, the Supreme Court upheld Sec.60 of the Madras Co-operative Societies Act, 1932, which gave power to the State Government to grant exemption to any society from any of the provisions of the Act, as well as the power to apply the provisions of the Act to any specific society, and it has been observed as follows:

"The policy of the Act is there and so are the guidelines, why the legislation? 'To facilitate the formation and working of Co-operative Societies'. Co-operative Societies, for what purpose? 'For the promotion of thrift, self-help and mutual aid'. Amongst whom? 'Among agriculturists and other persons with common economic needs'. To what end? 'To bring about better living, better business and better methods of production'. The objectives are clear; the guidelines are there. There are numerous provisions of the Act dealing with registration of societies, rights and liabilities of members, duties of registered societies, privileges of registered societies, property and funds of registered societies, inquiry and inspection, supersession of committees of societies, dissolution of societies, surcharge and attachment, arbitration etc. We refrain from referring to the details of the provisions except to say that they are generally designed to further the objectives set out in the preamble. But, numerous as the provisions are, they are not capable of meeting the extensive demands of the complex situations which may arise in the course of the working of the Act and the formation and the functioning of the societies. In fact, the too rigorous application of some of the provisions of the Act may itself occasionally result in frustrating the very objects of the Act instead of advancing them. It is to provide for such situations that the Government is invested by Sec.60 with a power to relax the occasional rigour of the provisions of the Act and to advance the objects of the Act. Sec.60 empowers the State Government to exempt a registered society from any of the provisions of the Act or to direct that such provision shall apply to such society with specified modifications. The power given to the Government under Sec.60 of the Act is to be exercised so as to advance the policy and objects of the Act, according to the guidelines as may be gleaned from the preamble and other provisions which we have already pointed out, are clear. We are therefore of the view that Sec.60 is not void on the ground of excessive delegation of legislative power. We so declare and otherwise dismiss the appeal.

24. Sec.1(3) of the Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948, was held to be valid as an example of conditional legislation in the decision reported in Basant Kumar Sarkar v. The Eagle Rolling Mills Ltd., A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 1260 and the law has been stated in the following terms:

"Sec.1(3) is not an illustration of delegated legislation; it is what can be properly described as conditional legislation. Sec.3(1) of the Act purports to authorise the Central Government to establish a corporation for the administration of the scheme of Employees' State Insurance by a notification. In other words, when the notification should be issued and in respect of what factories it should be issued, has been left to the discretion of the Central Government and that is precisely what is usually done by conditional legislation. Assuming that there is an element of delegation, the plea that the discretion conferred by Sec.1(3) is not guided by any legislative provision is unsustainable, because there is enough guidance given by the relevant provisions of the Act and the very scheme of the Act itself. In the very nature of things, it would have been impossible for the legislature to decide in what areas and in respect of which factories the Employees' State Insurance Corporation should be established. It is obvious that a scheme of this kind, though very beneficent, could not be introduced in the whole of the country all at once. Such beneficial measures which need careful experimentation have sometimes to be adopted by stages and in different phases, and so, inevitably, the question of extending the statutory benefits contemplated by the Act has to be left to the discretion of the appropriate Government. The course adopted by modern legislatures in dealing with welfare scheme has uniformly conformed to the same pattern. The legislature evolves a scheme of socio-economic welfare, makes elaborate provisions in respect of it and leaves it to the Government concerned to decide when, how and in what manner the scheme should be introduced. That cannot amount to excessive delegation. (S) The Edward Mills Company Ltd. v. The State of Ajmer, A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 25 and A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 306 and Bhikusa Yamasa Kshatriya (P) Ltd. v. The Union of India, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1591 Rel. on. I.L.R. 40 Pat. 193, Affirmed."

Hence, I am of the view, that the provision of Sec.5 of the Act is valid and does not suffer from the vice of excessive delegation as contended by the learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner.

25. The Act in question being a welfare legislation, the court should lean in favour of wider delegation of legislative power as observed by the Supreme Court in the case reported in Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Trivandrum v. K. Kunhambu, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 350; (1980) 2 S.C.R. 260, which is as follows:

"A good deal of latitude has been held to be permissible in the case of taxing statutes and on the same principle a generous degree of latitude must be permissible in the case of welfare legislation, particularly those statutes which are designated to further the Directive Principles of State Policy."

26. The State Government has not usurped the functions of the State Legislature. Further, Sec.5 of the Act does not contravene any constitutional provision. It is not the case of the petitioner that Sec.5 of the Act contravenes any of their fundamental rights or ultra vires the powers of the State. I have found already that Sec.5 of the Act does not suffer from the vice of excessive delegation. As already mentioned, the Legislature has enacted Secs.4 and 5 with clarity. Sec.5 overrides the provisions of Sec.4. Since the exemption contained in Sec.4 is subject to the provisions of Sec.5, the delegated authority, by issuing the notification withdrawing the exemption, is not altering the statute or acts contrary to the statute. Sec.5 limits the powers of the delegated authority and the power of the State Government is defined clearly. Delegated power under Sec.5 of the Act cannot extend to the withdrawal of exemption granted under Clauses (c) and (f) of sub-sec.(1) of Sec.4 and sub-sec.(2) of Sec.4 of the Act.

27. Further, Sec.5 of the Act has to be construed liberally, being a social welfare legislation, and it is also a pre-constitutional enactment. In this connection, reference can be usefully made to the decision of the Apex Court reported in M/s. Harihar Polyfibres v. Regional Director, E.S.I. Corporation, (1984) 4 S.C.C. 324, wherein it has been observed as follows:

"The Employees' State Insurance Act is a welfare legislation and the definition of 'wages' is designedly wide. Any ambiguous expression must receive beneficent construction... The E.S.I. Act being a social welfare legislation must be given a liberal interpretation beneficial to the interests of the employees so as to serve the purpose and objects of the Act."

28. In the above view of mine, there is no need to refer in detail the judgments relied on by the learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner, for, there cannot be any demur to the proposition made by the learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner that there cannot be a delegation of legislative function.

29. Sec.5 of the Act does not delegate essential legislative function to the State Government. Exemption granted under Sec.4 is subject to withdrawal under Sec.5 and the power withdraws the exemption does not suffer from the vice of excessive delegation. Legislative policy is contained in Secs.4 and 5 of the Act. Standards and guidelines are discernible from the various provisions, and scheme and object of the Act. Therefore, I hold that Sec.5 of the Act is valid and legal.

30. This Court has been taking the consistent view that the employer is bound to disclose the reasons for termination in the order of termination itself and failure to do so would render the order of termination void and non est as could be seen from the following decisions. In the decision reported in The Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. (1950) 2 L.L.J. 1043, P.V.Rajamanner, C.J., and A.V.Viswanatha Sastri, J., it has been observed as follows:

"Under Sec.41(1) of the Act, the services of a person like the first respondent who has been employed continuously for over a period of six months can be dispensed with for a reasonable cause after giving the person at least a month's notice or wages in lieu of such notice or on a charge of misconduct supported by satisfactory evidence recorded at an enquiry held for the purpose in which case notice would not be necessary. From the order of the company dispensing with the services of the 1st respondent, the only reason appearing is the non-requirement of his services. The order does not state anything else. The only question, therefore, for the appellate authority was to determine whether that ground can be said to be reasonable cause. The authority held that it could not be and we agree with him."

31. In the decision reported in State Bank of Travancore v. Deputy Commissioner of Labour, Coimbatore, (1981) 1 L.L.J. 393, Nainar Sundaram, J., as he then was), it has been observed as follows:

"The first ground is that the proceedings under Sec.41 of the Act before the first respondent are incompetent because the petitioner has passed the order of termination against the second respondent under paragraph 522 (1) of the Sastri Award. His submission is not tenable because it cannot be disputed that so far as the employment in question is concerned, the provisions of the Act are definitely attracted. The petitioner satisfies the definition of an employer and the second respondent satisfies the definition of a person employed within the meaning of the Act and any contract between the employer and the person employed cannot override the express provision of the Act, or, in particular, Sec.41 thereof. The learned counsel for the petitioner is not in a position to cite any direct authority that wherever there is a contract governing the relationship between the employer and the person employed the provisions of the Act will have to be ignored and there is no necessity to adhere to and satisfy the formalities laid down under Sec.41 of the Act. Hence, I am not able to appreciate and accept the first contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner. The second ground urged by the learned counsel for the petitioner is that even otherwise the petitioner has dispensed with the services of the second respondent for a reasonable cause and there has been strict compliance with the first limb of sub-sec.(1) of Sec.41 of the Act, in the sense the second respondent has been paid more than a month's wages in lieu of the notice contemplated. In the instant case, a memo was issued to the second respondent on 11th May, 1976 and an explanation was obtained on 10th June, 1976. The order of termination dated 17th March, 1977 does not disclose as to whether the explanation was accepted or not and the factors which weighed with the petitioner to pass the order of termination on the basis of reasonable cause. If the termination is to be on the ground of reasonable cause, it is incumbent on the part of the employer to disclose the reasonable cause in the order of termination and in the absence of a disclosure it is not possible for any authority, and in particular the Appellate Authority under Sec.41(2) of the Act to determine as to whether the grounds put forth by the employer can be stated to constitute a reasonable cause and as to whether the order of termination has been passed bona fide. The necessity to disclose the reasonable cause in the order of termination has been stressed by a Bench of this Court in Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd., (1950) 2 L.L.J. 1043."

32. In the decision reported in The Management of Blue Star & Co. Ltd., v. The Assistant Commissioner of Labour, Madras-6, (1989) 1 L.L.J. 233, Shanmukham, J., has held as follows:

"From the above evidence, it is clear it is the practice of the management not to put down the reasons in writing in respect of managers, but to inform verbally and according to that practice, reasons were verbally stated and not stated in the letter. Thus, not only the documentary evidence emanated from the management but also the evidence of the management itself will give a direct lie to the stand taken by the management that it is because of the specific request made by the 2nd respondent, the reasons for termination were not disclosed in the order of termination dated 3rd January, 1980. If so much is established, it follows that the order has to be struck down as illegal in view of the decision of this Court in State Bank of Travancore v. Deputy Commissioner of Labour, Coimbatore and another, (1981)1 L.L.J. 393, which in turn followed the decision of this Court in Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd., 1950 L.L.J. 1043. Mr. Justice Nainar Sundaram in State Bank of Travancore v. Deputy Commissioner of Labour, (1981)1 L.L.J. 393 at 395."

It is also seen from the above decision, the learned Judge has followed the decision of this Court in State Bank of Travancore v. Deputy Commissioner of Labour, (1981)1 L.L.J. 393, which in turn followed the decision of this Court in Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. (1950)2 L.L.J. 1043.

33. It is admitted by the learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner that if Sec.5 of the Act is held to be valid, the notification viz., G.O.Ms.No.4074, Industries, Labour and Housing (Labour), dated 5.10.1966 would be valid and consequently, the 2nd respondent can invoke the remedy under Sec.41(2) of the Act, and since no reason has been given in the order of termination, the order of termination, in my view, is void and non-est. The order of termination, which is marked as Ex.A-1 before the Appellate Authority/1st respondent, is also reproduced hereunder:

Sir,

In terms of our agreement Clause 8, we hereby terminate your services in Air France with effect from 31st March, 1987.

Yours Faithfully,

34. Therefore, the view of the Appellate Authority/1st respondent exercising powers under Sec.41(2) of the Act, that the order of termination issued by the writ petitioner to the 2nd respondent does not contain reasonable cause and that therefore, the same is liable to be set aside does not call for any interference by this Court. The writ petition is, therefore, liable to be dismissed and accordingly, the same is dismissed. However, there will be no order as to costs.

(A) French Code De Commerce, Arts.179 and 185 - Promissory note - When becomes mature - Demand for payment of sum due under pronote - If necessary before pronote becomes matured for payment.

(B) Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), Sec.87 - Pronote - Date of - 12.2.1975 altered into 12.2.1976 - Alteration, whether material - Pronote whether void on that ground.

The plaintiff-appellant filed a suit O.S.No.127 of 1979 on the file of the Sub Court, Pondicherry for the recovery of a sum of Rs.6,055 due under a promissory note executed by the 1st and 2nd defendant (respondents). The 2nd defendant remained ex parte. According to the 1st defendant, the suit pronote bears only the date 12.2.1975, but that it had been altered by the plaintiff to 12.2.1976. The trial court proceeded on the footing that there was a material alteration and directed the plaintiff to begin his side. The plaintiff had no oral evidence. The case was posted for arguments on 22.10.1981. On appeal, the lower appellate court dismissed the suit holding that the pronote was a void one in view of the material alteration. In appeal, Held: The lower appellate court has held that as per the French Law, the limitation of three years' period would begin to run only from 1.2.1979 the date when the demand for the amount due under the promissory note was made by the plaintiff pursuant to the suit notice. This Court thinks that what the lower appellate court has observed in this respect can be taken as correct. As per the official transaction of Art.179 of the French Code de commerce, the relevant expression used therein would mean, in commerce, only 'maturity' and not 'payment' as contended by the respondent's counsel. If so, the lower appellate court cannot be said to be wrong in having come to the conclusion that the limitations of 3 years, as per the said Art.179 begins to run only from the date of demand. The said Art.179 no doubt relates to bills of exchange. But Art.185 which relates to promissory notes says that the law applicable to Bills of Exchange as found in Art.179) would apply, to promissory notes Art.179, no doubt, used the word 'maturity' in relation to bills of exchange. But in relation to demand promissory notes, that term could refer only to the date of demand unless demand is made for payment of the sum due under the promissory note, a promissory note payable on demand cannot be said to have become matured for payment.

[Para. 7]

Applying the meaning given by the Supreme Court to the expression, 'material alteration', it has to be concluded that the abovesaid alteration of the date of the suit promissory note in the present case does not vary 'the rights, liabilities or legal position of the parties or' the legal effect of the said promissory note, nor the said alteration may otherwise prejudice the party bound' by the document. In view of the abovesaid peculiar French Law of limitation, which is applicable to the present case, there is no likelihood even of prejudice to the defendants because of the abovesaid alteration of the year 1975 to 1976. So, the said alteration cannot be termed a material alteration.

C.N.G. Ezhil Arasi, for Appellant.

T.P. Manoharan, for Respondent No.1.

JUDGMENT: Plaintiff is the appellant in this second appeal against the reversing judgment in A.S.No.205 of 1981 on the file of the Principal District Judge, Pondicherry, which dismissed his suit O.S.No.127 of 1979 on the file of the Principal Subordinate Judge, Pondicherry for the recovery of a sum of Rs.6,055 due under Ex.A-1 promissory note executed by both the defendants in favour of the plaintiff.

2. The only question that is argued before me in this second appeal relates to the material alteration of Ex.A-1 promissory note. The 2nd defendant remained ex parte. According to the 1st defendant, the suit promissory note bears, only the date 12.2.1975, but it has been altered by the plaintiff to 12.2.1976. The lower appellate court has found that there is such an alteration and it has also held that it is a material alteration within the meaning of Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. Therefore, the lower appellate court has dismissed the suit since as per Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, Ex.A-1 is a void document in view of the said material alteration.

3. Though the learned counsel for the appellant argues that there was no such alteration at all, after seeing Ex.A-1, I have only to concur with the lower appellate court that there was such alteration of date.

4. Further, the 1st defendant also marked Ex.B-1, which is draft copy of Ex.A-1 promissory note and that bears the date 12.2.1975 only and the lower appellate court also observes that the marking of Ex.B-1 was not objected to by the plaintiff and that on the contrary, by his suggestion to the 1st defendant, the plaintiff impliedly admitted the existence of the draft. No doubt, the learned counsel for the appellant argues that the existence of this draft Ex.B-1 was not adverted to in the written statement. But, on that ground, the genuineness of Ex.B-1 cannot be challenged when the plaintiff has not only chosen to object to the marking of the said document, but also put a suggestion to the 1st defendant in the witness box impliedly admitting the existence of the draft.

5. But, the question that has to be considered is whether the said alteration is a "material alteration" within the meaning of that term under Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. In this connection, there is of course a defence plea in the written statement of the 1st defendant, alleging the abovesaid alteration. The relevant plea in the 1st defendant's written statement is as follows:

"The 2nd defendant and the plaintiff are colluding together. The plaintiff is the brother-in-law of the 2nd defendant. There has been recent enmity and misunderstanding between 1st and 2nd defendant. The plaintiff and the 2nd defendant construed together and altered the years and brought into existence a false endorsement."

The lower appellate court also says that the point for determination in the first appeal is whether the promissory note is void for material alteration. Even in the trial court, though there is no specific express issue regarding the abovesaid material alteration, on 28.9.1981, while the suit was pending there was an interim order by the trial court as follows:

"Heard both sides on the question of burden proof. Perused pleadings and issues. The first defendant has alleged in his written statement that he has not executed any pro-note and the suit pronote is not enforceable as there is a material alteration of the year. On perusing the issues and on considering the pleadings, I find that the burden of proof first lies with the plaintiff and he has to discharge the burden first. Accordingly, I direct the plaintiff to begin his side. For trial call on 19.10.1981".

Thus, the trial court, on the footing that there was plea of material alteration by the 1st defendant, found that the burden of proof initially was on the plaintiff and had directed the plaintiff to discharge the said burden first by first letting in evidence. But, on 19.10.1981, when the suit was taken up for trial, the plaintiff did not choose to lead evidence and the 1st defendant alone examined his witnesses, and the trial court below, on that day, recorded that the plaintiff had no oral evidence, and that his counsel submitted to argue the case and posted the case for argument on 22.10.1981. So, even before considering whether there was material alteration, it has to be seen whether the plaintiff has to be non-suited on the sole footing that he has not chosen to discharge the abovesaid burden of proof, by letting in evidence first. The lower appellate court also observes as follows after referring to the abovesaid interim order dated 28.9.1981 of the trial court:

"The plaintiff did not challenge in any manner that order of the trial court on the ground that any evidence was inadmissible in the teeth of the admission by the defendants in Ex.A-3. On the contrary he rested content with reporting that he had no evidence to place before the court. That refusal by itself in view of the order made earlier by the court would have been sufficient to dismiss the suit. At any rate under the circumstances of the case, it cannot be said that the recital in Ex.A-3 tantamounts to an admission and that no further enquiry on the matter was unnecessary and inadmissible. I therefore do not accept his contention."

But, on this point, I am unable to concur with the lower appellate court and I shall presently give out my reasons for holding that view. No doubt, the learned counsel for the appellant submits that in view of what is stated in Ex.A-3, there was no necessity for the plaintiff to let in any evidence first. Ex.A-3 dated 6.2.1979 is the reply by the 1st defendant to the suit notice Ex.A-2 dated 1.2.79. No doubt, the relevant observation therein is as follows:

"It is true that my client along with his brother executed a pronote on 12.2.76 in your client's favour."

The learned counsel for the appellant points out that there is an admission that the suit promissory note was executed only in 1976 and not in 1975. But, first of all, D.W.1, the 1st defendant has explained the abovesaid deposition as follows:

"Ex.A-3 is the reply. On the date of giving the reply as per A-3. I don't remember the year and date of pro-note. Only at the time when I took the draft B-1 and saw immediately after receiving the summons I came to know the year of pronote is only 75".

That apart, I have already observed that by simply seeing Ex.A-1 promissory note, it is clear that the year 1975 has been altered as 1976. So, the abovesaid explanation given by D.W.1 has to be accepted and the above referred to finding that there is alteration in the promissory note is correct. When that is so, it is only for the plaintiff to discharge the burden case on him, particularly in the light of the abovesaid order dated 28.9.1981 specifically directing him to let in evidence first to discharge the burden. When that is not done and the plaintiff has not let in any oral evidence, explaining the abovesaid alteration and convincing the court that it was not a material alteration can the suit be dismissed on that score alone, when the 1st defendant has chosen to let in his evidence and without even considering whether in law, there would be material alteration?

6. The Supreme Court has observed in M.M.B. Catholicos v. T. Paulo Avira, A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 31 @ 38 (D.B.), as follows:

"The question of burden of proof at the end of the case, when both parties have adduced their evidence is not of very great importance and the court has to come to a decision on a consideration of all materials".

Likewise, in Devadattam v. Union of India, (1963)2 I.T.J. 123; (1963)2 S.C.J. 256; (1963)2 An.L.T. 254; (1963)49 I.T.R. 165 (S.C.) A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 880. The Supreme Court has also observed at page 885 as follows:

"The question of onus probandi is certainly important in the early stages of a case. It may also assume importance where no evidence at all is led on the question in dispute by either side; in such a contingency the party on whom the onus lies to prove a certain fact must fail. Where however evidence has been led by the contesting parties on the question in issue, abstract considerations of onus are out of place; truth or otherwise of the case must always be adjudged on the evidence led by the parties."

Further, in Rishi Kesh Singh v. State, 1969 All.L.J. 657; A.I.R. 1970 All. 51 at 82; 1970 Cr.L.J. 132; I.L.R. (1969)1 All. 362 (F.B.), it has been observed as follows:

"Whenever the law places a burden of proof upon a party a presumption operates against it. Hence, burdens of proof and presumptions have to be considered together..... As has been often pointed out, when there is ample evidence from both sides, the fate of the case is no longer determined by presumptions or burden or proof but by a careful election of the correct version, based no doubt on preponderance of probabilities which has to be so compulsive or overwhelming in the case of a choice in favour of a conviction as to remove all reasonable doubt. In other words, the importance of burdens of proof and presumptions vanishes in the face of evidence given by both sides."

So, the 1st defendant, having chosen to let in evidence, the court has only to analyse the whole evidence before it and come to a conclusion based on the entire evidence and the law applicable, and cannot come to a decision solely on the presumption that operates against the plaintiff in view of himself not discharging initial burden of proof. 7. So, it has to be seen whether there is really any material alteration in the present case, taking into consideration the entire evidence and the law on the point. The suit was filed only on 25.4.1979, as I find it from the decree copy. No doubt in this regard, the lower appellate court's observation that the suit was filed on 9.2.1979, is not correct since 9.2.1979 is only the date of the plaint, though the suit has been filed only on 25.4.1979. The lower appellate court has held that as per the French Law, the above said limitation of three years' period would begin to run only from 1.2.1979, the date when the demand for the amount due under the promissory note was made by the plaintiff pursuant to the suit notice Ex.A-2 regarding this peculiarity of French Law, as stated by the lower appellate court, I tried to make some investigation, since the learned Counsel for the 1st respondent contended that what was stated by the lower appellate court could not be the law since it would lead to absurdity. In this connection, Mr.V.S.Ramakrishnan, who was Government Pleader for Pondicherry some time back and who knows French also, at my request, rendered assistance for me to understand some of the relevant provisions in the French Code De Commerce and I record my appreciation of the service rendered by him. From what I could gather from the said assistance given, I think what the lower appellate court has observed in this aspect can be taken as correct. As per the official translation of Art.179 of the French Code De Commerce, the relevant expression used therein would mean, in commerce, only "maturity" and not "payment" as contended by the respondent's counsel. It so, the lower appellate court cannot be said to be wrong in having come to the conclusion that the limitation of 3 years, as per the said Art.179, begins to run only from the date of demand. The said Art.179 no doubt relates to bills of exchange, But, Art.185 which relates to promissory notes says that the law applicable to Bills of Exchange (as found in Art.179) would apply to promissory notes. Art.179 no doubt uses the word "maturity" in relation to bills of exchange. But in relation to demand promissory notes, that term could refer only to the date of demand. Unless demand is made for payment of the sum due under the promissory note, a promissory note payable on demand cannot be said to have become matured for payment.

7-A. In this connection I may also point out that as per Sendamarai Ammal v. Vijaya Rajagopal Chettiar, (1984)1 M.L.J. 324: A.I.R. 1984 Mad. 122: 97 L.W. 85: 1984 T.L.N.J. 109, only French Law of Limitations has to be applied, in view of Sec.29(2) read with Sec.3 of the Limitation Act, 1963 and the said French Law would be "special or local law" referred to in the said Sec.29, applicable in the Union Territory of Pondicherry.

8. The learned counsel for the appellant cited decisions like Nathu Lal v. Gomti Kuar, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 160 and Loonkaran Sethia v. Ivan E.John, (1977)1 S.C.C. 379: (1977)1 S.C.R. 853: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 336 to contend that only if the alteration in question varies the rights, liabilities or legal position of the parties, it will be material alteration. According to him, since the suit is actually within time, as also found by the lower appellate Court, there is no variance, by the abovesaid alteration of the rights, liabilities or legal position of the parties, particularly, that of the defendants, In Loonkaran Sethia v. Ivan E.John, (1977)1 S.C.C. 379: (1977)1 S.C.R. 853: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 336, the Supreme Court, observed as follows, after quoting a passage from Halsbury's Laws of England:-

"A material alteration, according to this authoritative work, is one which varies the rights, liabilities or legal position of the parties as ascertained by the deed in its original state, or otherwise varies the legal effect of the instrument as originally expressed, or reduces to certainty some provision which was originally unascertained and as such void, or which may otherwise prejudice the party bound by the deed as originally executed..... To the same effect are the observations made by the Privy Council in Nathu Lal v. Gomti Kuar, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 160."

Nathu Lal v. Gomti Kuar, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 160 has also observed that it cannot be said that an alteration in date is always material, irrespective of its effect upon the rights, liabilities or legal position of the parties.

9. On the other hand, the learned counsel for the 1st respondent contends that the abovesaid observation of the Supreme Court was made only in relation to a material alteration of a deed and not a negotiable instrument. But, I do not think that there is any basis for such distinction, which is sought to be made by the said counsel between the material alteration of negotiable instrument and that of a deed. No authority also has been cited by the said counsel supporting the said argument. No doubt, the said counsel relied on the decision of K.M.Natarajan, J., in Vythinathan v. Murugayya Padayachi, 1985 T.L.N.J. 265, in this regard, but, in the said case, there was only an argument that Loonkaran Sethia v. Ivan E. John, (1977) 1 S.C.C. 379: (1977) 1 S.C.R. 853: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 336, Nathu Lal v. Gombi Kuar, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 160 and Rajagopala v. AVadai Velar, (1961) 1 M.L.J. 193: 74 L.W. 29: A.I.R. 1961 Mad. 251 (D.B.), consisting of P.V.Rajamannar, C.J., and Veeraswamy, J.) are in respect of deeds, and not a negotiable instrument. But, I do not find in the said case that such distinction as such, was accepted by the learned Judge, who decided the said case. No doubt, as pointed out by the learned counsel for the 1st respondent in the said decision in Vythinathan v. Murugayya Padayachi, 1985 T.L.N.J. 265, there was reference to Rangaswami Reddi v. Doraiswami Reddi, (1957) 2 M.L.J. 196: 70 L.W. 583: I.L.R. 1957 Mad. 987: 1957 M.W.N. 434: A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 715 (D.B.), consisting of the same P.V.Rajamannar, C.J., and another learned Judge. But in Rangaswami Reddi v. Doraiswami Reddi, (1957) 2 M.L.J. 196: 70 L.W. 583: I.L.R. 1957 Mad. 987: 1957 M.W.N. 434: A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 715 (D.B.), the issue was entirely different. On the footing that there actually a material alteration, the issue there was, whether the plaintiff therein was entitled to any relief, despite Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act making the promissory note in question void, and the court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff therein could not fall back on the original consideration, nor could he invoke Sec.65 of the Contract Act to sustain his claim.

10. In Vythinathan v. Murugayya Padayachi, 1985 T.L.N.J. 265, also, the date of the suit promissory note was altered, but it was found on facts that even without the said alteration, the suit would not be barred by limitation, in view of the promulgation of moratorium Acts. Yet, the lower appellate court therein held that there was material alteration and in view of Sec.870 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the suit promissory note had become void. K.M.Natarajan, J., who decided the said case, after setting out the rival submissions, concluded thus:

“But in view of the provisions of Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and the ratio laid down by this court in Rangaswami Reddi v. Doraiswami Reddi, (1957) 2 M.L.J. 196: 70 L.W. 583: I.L.R. 1957 Mad. 987: 1957 M.W.N. 434: A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 715 (D.B.), it cannot be said that the decision rendered by the appellate Judge is erroneous and unsustainable.”

11. But, with due respect, I have to reiterate that no support can be drawn from Rangaswami Reddi v. Doraiswami Reddi, (1957) 2 M.L.J. 196: 70 L.W. 583: I.L.R. 1957 Mad. 987: 1957 M.W.N. 434: A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 715 (D.B.), to decide the question whether there was actually a material alteration, since the said decision proceeded on the footing that there was actually a material alteration and the only question there was whether despite material alteration, relief could be given to the plaintiff. Further, the abovesaid Sec.87 only speaks to the effect or consequence of material alteration. It does not say what “material alteration” is or in what cases there would be material alteration. Nor any of the other provisions of the Negotiable Instruments Act defines or explains “material alteration” That is why courts have been called upon to explain the same. In this connection, the Privy Council and the Supreme Court have adopted the meaning of the said terms as explained in Halsbury’s Laws of England. As already indicated, in applying the said meaning, no authority has been cited before me, which lays down that a distinction should be made between deeds on the one hand and the negotiable instruments on the other hand and that the said meaning cannot be applied to negotiable instruments. Therefore, I have to apply the abovesaid meaning given by the Supreme Court in Loonkaran Sethia v. Ivan E. John, (1977) 1 S.C.C. 379: (1977) 1 S.C.R. 853: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 336. even with reference to material alteration of negotiable instruments. On so doing, I have only to conclude that the abovesaid alteration of the date of the suit promissory note in the present case, does not vary “the rights, liabilities or legal position of the parties” or “the legal effect" of the suit promissory note, nor the said alteration "may otherwise prejudice the party bound" by the document. I reach this conclusion only because of the above referred to peculiar French Law that the limitation begins to run only from the date of demand. That is why, the above referred to alteration from the year 1975 to 1976, will have no bearing on the limitation question in the present case. No doubt, a Division Bench of this court in Govindasami v. Kuppusami, I.L.R. 12 Mad. 239, has held in a case where the date of the promissory note has been altered from 11th September to 25th September, that the said alteration materially affected the liability of the defendant, for it extended the time within which the plaintiff was entitled to sue. But, the said decision is not applicable to the present case, because the change of date in the present case does not and is also not likely to alter the law of limitation since the French Law, which alone is applicable to the present case, is different, as already indicated. Therefore, the change of date effected in the present case, will not amount to material alteration, in the light of the abovesaid observation of the Supreme Court as to the meaning of the said term. It must also be pointed out that the Supreme Court has also impliedly indicated, by approving the abovesaid meaning given in Halsbury's Laws of England that for material alteration, it is enough, if by alteration, prejudice is likely to cause though not actually caused ultimately to the party bound by the document. This is indicated by the expression used, "which may otherwise prejudice the party bound by the deed as originally executed", in the abovesaid observation of the Supreme Court, approving what is contained in Halsbury's laws of England, viewed in this light, the following observation in Subramania Patta v. Porathana Andi, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 303, which was also referred to by K.M.Natarajan, J. in Vythinathan v. Murugayya Padayachi, 1985 T.L.N.J. 265, is no doubt correct:

"The fact that an alteration does not ultimately involve any change in the rights and liabilities of the parties is not very germane to the consideration of the question whether it amounts to a material alteration within the meaning of Sec.87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act."

But the further observation therein, viz., "whether the change be prejudicial or beneficial to the maker does not in the least matter, "with due respect, cannot be quite correct, since if the change "may prejudice" him—that is, it is likely to prejudice him it will be material alteration.

12. While so, in the present case, in view of the abovesaid peculiar French Law on limitation, which is applicable to the present case, there is no likelihood even of prejudice to the defendants because of the abovesaid alteration of the year 1975 to 1976. So, the said alteration cannot be termed a material alteration.

13. The lower appellate court has no doubt observed thus:

"Therefore in the present case, though it is true that the change of the year from 1975 to 1976 has not ultimately in any manner changed the right of the plaintiff as regards the limitation, there was every reason for the plaintiff to apprehend that the suit would be declared barred by limitation. This apprehension which prompted him to change the date would show that the alteration was a material one".

But, I do not find any evidence to show that the plaintiff had such "apprehension which prompted him to change the date." The 1st defendant, as D.W.1, did not whisper anything about such apprehension on the part of the plaintiff. D.W.2 is the scribe of the suit promissory note. He also did not whisper anything about the above referred to apprehension. No doubt the plaintiff himself did not choose to get into the witness box to depose that he did not have such apprehension. But from the said fact alone there is no warrant for coming to the conclusion that the plaintiff had such an apprehension at the time when he altered the date, particularly when the defendants have not even chosen to allege such apprehension on the part of the plaintiff. That apart, it is a moot point whether in the light of the above referred to Supreme Court observation as to the actual meaning of "material alteration", the existence or otherwise of such apprehension or even ulterior bad intention on the part of the plaintiff is germane to the issue whether the alteration is a material alteration or not.

14. In the result, the second appeal is allowed, the judgment and decree of the lower appellate court are set aside and that of the trial court are restored. However, in the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), Sec.180 - Doctrine of election - Principles - Election when arises - Legatee if can accept and reject the same instrument - Election once made, if can be revoked.

Sec.180 of Succession Act, 1989, corresponds to Sec.35(1) of the Transfer of Property Act which deals with the doctrine of election. The main principle is that there is an obligation on the legatee who takes a benefit under a Will or other instrument to give full effect to that instrument and if he finds that instrument purports to deal with something which it is beyond the power of the donor to dispose of but to which effect can be given by the concurrence of him who receives a benefit under the same instrument, the law will impose on him who takes the benefit, the obligation of carrying the instrument into full and complete force and effect. He must elect either to retain his own property or to relinquish his own and take in its place property given to him by the Will. The doctrine of election rests on the principle that he who accepts a benefit under an instrument must accept the whole of it conforming with all its provisions and renouncing every right inconsistent with them. Election under Sec.180 arises wherever the legatee derived some benefit from the Will to which he would not be entitled except for the Will. In such a case, he has to elect whether to confirm the Will or dissent from it. He cannot accept and reject the same instrument. This is the foundation of the law of election. Election once made is irrevocable. [Paras. 4 & 7A]

M.V.Krishnan, for Appellant.

P.S.Sri Sailam, for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Thangamani, J.: The appellant is the plaintiff in the trial court. Defendants 1 and 2 are his brothers. They are the sons of one Sankiah Pillai and Chithirathammal. While the third defendant is the wife of the first defendant, the fourth defendant is the wife of the second defendant. Door No.2 in Ramu Pillai Lane, South Veli Street, Madurai, described as item 1 in 'A' schedule appended to the written statement of the first defendant originally belonged to the mother of Sankiah Pillai. On the death of his mother Sankiah Pillai became exclusively entitled to this house as his separate property. He was also assigned an extent of 5 cents in Maruthur village. Sankiah Pillai bequeathed these two items in favour of the appellant by his Will Ex.A-1, dated 26.10.1966. The appellant claims that on the death of Sankiah Pillai on 29.12.1973, he became the exclusive owner of these properties. By the same Will Sankiah Pillai purported to bequeath 'A' schedule buildings and 'B' schedule lands and 'C' schedule nanja land described in the plaint. The appellant instituted O.S.No.213 of 1979 on the file of learned Subordinate Judge of Madurai for partition and separate possession of his 1/3 share in the abovesaid A, B and C schedule items and the items specified in Schedules D, E, F, G and H in the plaint. His claim was on the basis that A and B schedules are the family ancestral properties. The 'C' schedule property originally belonged to Chithirathammal, the wife of Sankiah Pillai. And on her death on 14.3.1978 it devolved on the appellant and defendants 1 and 2 who are her heirs. Plaint D and E schedule are house property and vacant site in Survey No.44/5 of Thirumalai Nagar Colony. Plaint 'F' schedule items are vessels while 'G' schedule are furniture, garments and other articles. Plaint 'H' schedule are jewels. Alleging that Sankiah Pillai had no right to dispose of plaint A, B and C schedule properties under Ex.A-1 Will, the appellant ignored the provisions of the Will regarding these items and claimed his 1/3 share therein. However, he did not include Door No.2. Ramu Pillai lane and the 5 cents plot referred to above and described as items 1 and 4 respectively in 'A' schedule to the written statement of the first defendant. He omitted to include them in any of the plaint schedules.

2. Defendants 1 to 4 contended that plaint D and

E schedules are the separate properties of defendants 3 and 4 respectively. All the items described in F, G and H schedules are not available. Out of items 1 to 44 specified in 'F' schedule, only 18 items are in existence. Of the silver articles, item 45 alone is available, and items 46 and 47 are not at all in existence. In 'G' schedule, items 1 to 3, 13, 14 and 15 are not in existence. The other items are available only in Door No.50, one of the family houses where the appellant himself is residing. In 'H' schedule jewels items 1 to 11 are not in existence. Items 12 to 15 weigh only 33 1/2 sovereigns. The first defendant has paid Court Fees and prayed for the allotment of his share and the share of his brothers.

3. Their main contention is that the appellant cannot approbate and reprobate at the same time regarding the terms of the Will. He cannot be allowed to avail the portion which is beneficial to him and repudiate those which are against him. The trial Court held that the appellant must be deemed to have repudiated Ex.A-1 Will and that Sankiah Pillai died intestate. It also found that plaintiff D and E schedule items are the separate properties of defendants 3 and 4 respectively. Regarding plaintiff schedules F, G and H, items specified in schedules B, C and D appended to the written statement of the first defendant alone are available. It also held that the lands and buildings mentioned in 'A' schedule to the written statement including Door No.2 Ramu Pillai Lane and the 5 cents of nanja land at Maruthur village are available for partition. Accordingly, the preliminary decree for partition and separate possession was passed in respect of plaintiff A, B and C schedules, the lands and houses described in 'A' schedule to the written statement of the first defendant and the movables mentioned in Schedules B, C and D appended to the written statement of the first defendant. The suit against defendants 3 to 14 was dismissed. Parties were directed to bear their respective costs.

4. Learned counsel for the appellant mainly assailed the findings of the trial court regarding the inclusion of Door No.2. Ramu Pillai lane and the 5 cents land in Maruthur village covered in 'A' schedule to the written statement in the preliminary decree on the basis that Sankiah Pillai died intestate. It is his argument that while the said property was validly bequeathed to him under Ex.A-1 Will, the disposition in favour of defendants 1 and 2 in respect of plaintiff A, B and C schedule items cannot confer any right on the legatees. But, this argument runs counter to the express provision under Sec.180 of the Indian Succession Act which reads as under:

"Where a person, by his Will, professes to dispose of something in which he has no right to dispose of, the person to whom the thing belongs shall elect either to confirm such disposition or to dissent from it, and, in the latter case, he shall give up any benefits which may have been provided for him by the Will."

This section corresponds to Sec.35(1) of the Transfer of Property Act which deals with the doctrine of election. The main principle is that there is an obligation on the legatee who takes a benefit under a Will or other instrument to give full effect to that instrument and if he finds that instrument purports to deal with something which it is beyond the power of the donor to dispose of, but to which effect can be given by the concurrence of him who receives a benefit under the same instrument, the law will impose on him who takes the benefit the obligation of carrying the instrument into full and complete force and effect. He must elect either to retain his own property or to relinquish his own and take in its place property given to him by the Will. The doctrine of election rests on the principle that he who accepts a benefit under an instrument must adopt the whole of it, conforming with all its provisions, and renouncing every right inconsistent with them. Election under Sec.180 arises wherever the legatee derives some benefit from the Will to which he would not be entitled except for the Will. In such a case he has to elect whether to confirm the Will or dissent from it. He cannot accept and reject the same instrument. This is the foundation of the law of election.

5. In this case the testator Sankiah Pillai had intended to dispose of the entirety of plaintiff A, B and C schedule properties over which he had no such disposing power by Ex.A-1. This intention appears on the face of Ex.A-1 Will by the express words employed. He has chosen to bequeath these items along with No.2. Ramu Pillai Lane over which he had exclusive right to dispose of. By instituting the suit for partition in respect of plaintiff A, B and C schedule properties the appellant has elected to repudiate the Will and dissent from it. So by the terms of Sec.180 he has necessarily to give up his right in No.2, Ramu Pillai Lane and the 5 cents plot which have to be divided among all the heirs as if Sankiah Pillai had died intestate. However, the trial Court is wrong in saying that the Will is void and he has died intestate. Under Sec.180 of the Indian Succession Act, it is only the legatee who is made to give up the benefits provided for him by the Will. It does not mean that the testator died intestate.

6. Learned counsel for the appellant relied on the decision in Valliammal Achi v. Nagappa Chettiar, (1968)1 M.L.J. 347, to assail the finding of the court below. In that case one Palaniappa's father Nagappa had considerable properties. This Nagappa made a Will making certain dispositions in favour of his own wife and gave the residue of his property to Palaniappa and appointed him as an executor of the Will. After Nagappa's death Palaniappa obtained probate of the Will and after providing for the legacies to others as indicated therein came into possession of the residue of the property. Later on the plaintiff Nagappa was adopted by Palaniappa. Dispute arose between Nagappa the adopted son of Palaniappa and Valliammai Achi the widow of Palaniappa as to the character of property left by Palaniappa's father Nagappa. It was found that all the properties left by Palaniappa's father were joint family properties of Palaniappa and his father which Palaniappa could acquire by survivorship on his father's death. It was urged on behalf of the appellant therein that Sec.180 would apply to the facts of that case for the property willed by Palaniappa's father was not his which he could Will away as it was joint family property in which Palaniappa who was a residuary legatee had also equivalent interest. Therefore Palaniappa had either to confirm the disposition or dissent from it, and his conduct showed that he had confirmed it for he took out probate. Therefore it must be held that after probate was taken out, the residue became the absolute property of Palaniappa and lost its character as joint Hindu Family property. The consequence of this was when Palaniappa adopted respondent Nagappa long after he had become the absolute owner of the properties, the respondent acquired no interest in them by virtue of the adoption. Palaniappa died after the Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956 came into force. As there was no joint family property of Palaniappa and respondent Nagappa, the respondent could not claim half the property on the ground that it was joint family of himself and Palaniappa, as Palaniappa's election to take under the Will of his father would bind him also. On the question of election held that as Palaniappa and his father were members of a joint Hindu family and as entire property left by Palaniappa's father was joint family property and Palaniappa had interest in the residue of the survivorship, there was no question of election by Palaniappa for all the property he got by the Will would have come to him by survivorship. In any case the Supreme Court pointed out that election under Sec.180 would only arise where the legatee derives some benefit from the Will to which he would not be entitled except for the Will. In such a case he has to elect whether to confirm the will or dissent from it. But where there is no question of legatee deriving any benefit from the Will to which he would not be entitled except for the Will, the fact that he confirms the Will and accepts what the Will provides would not amount to election, for he would have in any case got what the Will gave him. Thus election only arises where the legatee has to choose between his own property which might have been willed away to somebody else and the property which belongs to the testator and which the testator has given to the legatee by the Will. This decision cannot help the appellant in any manner because the facts therein are different from those in the present appeal. There what Nagappa Chettiar gave away under the Will belonged to the joint family of Nagappa Chettiar and his son Palaniappa in entirety. Even if there had been no Will, Palaniappa had a right by birth in it for a half share and on the death of his father would have become entitled to the entire property by survivorship. So the existence or otherwise of the will made no difference. But in the present case there were three sets of properties. While plaint A and B schedule properties belonged to the joint family of Sankiah Pillai and his three sons, 'C' schedule property belonged to his wife Chithirathammal. But he had dealt with these three items as his own along with No.2 Ramu Pillai Lane and 5 cents plot which are his exclusive properties. So the plaintiff had to choose either to ignore the Will and take his share in all the items as per the Law of Succession or to confirm the Will and get only what was bequeathed to him. Since he has elected to dissent from the Will and chosen to file the suit he cannot now be allowed to approbate and reprobate.

7. In Mani Mani and others v. Mani Joshua, (1970)1

S.C.R. 71, it has been laid down that under sec.180 of the Indian Succession Act, if a legatee has been given any benefit under a Will and his own property has also been disposed of by that very will, the legatee must elect either to confirm such disposition or to dissent from it, and in the latter case, he must relinquish all his claims under the Will if he chooses to retain his own property. The presumption being that a testator intends to dispose of only his own property, general words will not usually be construed so as to include a particular property over which he has no disposing power, unless, such an intention appears on the face of the Will either by express words or by necessary implication. In Bhau Ram v. Baij Nath Singh, (1962)1 S.C.R. 358; (1962)1 S.C.A. 368; A.I.R. 1961 S.C. 1327, the Apex Court has pointed out that a person who takes a benefit under an order de hors the claim on merits cannot repudiate that part of the order which is detrimental to him because the order is to take effect in its entirety. The existence of a choice between two rights is one of the conditions necessary for the applicability of the doctrine of approbate and reprobate. While so, it is evident that there is no merit in the contention of the appellant.

7-A. Learned counsel for the appellant also submitted that even in this appeal he is entitled to make an election affirming the Will in entirety and claiming share on the basis of the Will as a whole. This is not possible since election once made is irrevocable. Moreover in this case, the plaintiff having made an election and filed the suit has put the defendants to unnecessary inconvenience and made them suffer expenditure. Hence he cannot be permitted to make a fresh election now.

8. The next contention raised in the appeal memo relates to D and E schedule properties. While defendants 3 and 4 claimed that these items are their separate properties, they have been included by the appellant in the plaint on the basis that they were acquired in the names of defendants with joint family funds. In view of Sec.4(1) and Sec.4(3)(a) of the Benami Transactions (Prohibition) Act 45 of 1988 this plea is no longer open to the appellant. The appellant has also not advanced any argument on this aspect.

9. The appeal memo further reads that the trial court has erred in holding that only the movables mentioned in B, C and D schedules of the written statement appended to written statement of first defendant are available for partition. And the Court below ought to have held that 8 1/2 sovereigns are available with the first defendant belonging to the joint family and they are liable for partition. But the appellant as P.W.1 states in his evidence that he has given the details in F, G and H schedule only from his memory and there is no authentic record to establish that all these items are available in the joint family. Regarding these items the trial court has taken the view that excepting the averments in the written statement of the first defendant, there is nothing to suggest that all of them were taken away by defendants 1 and 2. And accordingly the preliminary decree has been passed only in respect of items disclosed as schedules B, C and D in the written statement of the first defendant. We find no reason to differ from the view of the trial court. And learned counsel for the appellant has also not challenged the same.

10. In the result, the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs of respondents 1 and 2.

O.S.Appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the Order of S.A.Kader, J., dated 7.10.1985 and made in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court in C.S.Nos.276 of 1983 and 146 of 1981, respectively.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by S.M.Ali Mohamed, J.: The above two appeals are against a common judgment of the learned single Judge in C.S.No.146 of 1981 and C.S.No.276 of 1983 respectively dated 7.10.1985. O.S.A.No.176 of 1986 is against C.S.No. 146 of 1981. The defendant-the State of Tamil Nadu, represented by the Collector of Madras (Accommodation Wing), is the appellant. The respondents herein are the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs filed a suit against the defendant-the State of Tamil Nadu, for recovery of a sum of Rs.43,66,959 with subsequent interest and costs. It is averred in the plaint that the premises known as, 'Rushkeyrum' bearing New Door No.149, Mount Road, Madras, belongs to the plaintiffs 2 to 8, who are the sons and daughters of the first plaintiff. The first plaintiff was the power of attorney agent of the plaintiffs 2 to 7 and property guardian appointed by the court of the eighth plaintiff who is a non-compose-mentis. The premises bearing New Door No.149, Mount Road, Madras, was taken over by the Accommodation Controller under Sec.3 of Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act 1949 on 24.11.1956 and the same was allotted to the Director of Industries and Commerce, on a Provisional Rent of Rs.2,617.50 per month subject to fixation of fair rent. The Accommodation Controller subsequently revised the provisional rent and fixed it at Rs.4,000, subject to fixation of fair rent with effect from 1.4.1961. The Director of Industries and Commerce vacated the premises, which was then re-allotted to the Tamil Nadu Electricity Board, in 1973. The State of Tamil Nadu is thus the statutory tenant of the premises in question. The plaintiffs filed a petition before the Rent Controller, Madras on 2.1.1974 for fixation of fair rent under the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1960. The Rent Controller fixed the fair rent of the premises on 22.4.1978 at Rs.28,000 per month. The plaintiff and the defendant preferred separate appeals in H.R.A.No.483 of 1970 respectively. The appellate authority dismissed the appeal filed by the defendant, but reduced the fair rent in the appeal filed by the first plaintiff to Rs.21,943. The plaintiff thereafter preferred a revision before this Court in C.R.P.No.756 of 1980. Pending disposal of the revision petition, the plaintiffs filed the above suit for recovery of the difference between the fair rent as fixed by the appellate authority and the tentative rent fixed by the Accommodation Controller after giving notice under Sec.80, C.P.C. 2. The case of the plaintiff before the trial court was that the fair rent in respect of the building taken over by the Accommodation Controller has retrospective operation from the date of taking over of the building and hence the plaintiffs were entitled to claim the difference between the fair rent and the provisional rent fixed by the Accommodation Controller, from 24.11.1956 when the building was taken over. However, they restricted the claim from 1.10.1960 when the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1960 under which the fair rent has been fixed came into force. The difference in rent from 1.10.1960 till 31.12.1980 came to Rs.43,72,584 and deducting the sum of Rs.5,625 towards the maintenance and repairs from the plaintiffs' claim of Rs.43,66,959. The plaintiffs further reserved their right to file a separate action after the disposal of C.R.P.No.756 of 1980. C.R.P.No.756 of 1980 was allowed on 29.10.1981 and the fair rent of Rs.28,000 per month was restored and thereafter, the plaintiff filed the second suit, viz., C.S.No. 276 of 1983, claiming a sum of Rs.15,18,288 with subsequent interest and costs thereon.

3. The appellant/defendant/the State of Tamil Nadu, raised the following contentions before the trial court. The fair rent fixed by the Rent Controller in H.R.C.No.143 of 1974 at Rs.28,000 per month was to take effect only from the date of the petition. The appellate authority reduced the fair rent to Rs.21,943 and the High Court restored the order of the Rent Controller at Rs.28,000 per month, and there was no direction for payment of fair rent at the time of tenancy. It was further contended that the claim of the plaintiff was subject to Law of Limitation and at best, the plaintiffs would be entitled to claim the difference from a date three years before the date of the institution of the suit i.e., from 3.1.1978. The defendant has no objection for the plaintiffs' claim being allowed from 1978 till the date of filing of the suit and the claim beyond 3.1.1978 is barred by limitation. It was also contended that the plaintiff's claim was hit by O.2, Rule 2, Civil Procedure Code and is not maintainable.

4. On the above pleadings, the following issues were framed:

1. Whether any part of the claim of the plaintiffs for arrears of rent is barred by time?
2. Whether the suit is hit by O.2, Rule 2, Code of Civil Procedure?
3. To what reliefs are the plaintiffs entitled?

5. O.S.A.No.175 of 1986 is against C.S.No.276 of 1983. C.S.No.276 of 1983 was filed by the plaintiff claiming the difference between the fair rent finally fixed by the High Court. The fair rent was fixed by the appellate authority from 1.10.1960 upto 20.8.1981. The plaintiffs claimed a sum of Rs.15,18,288 with subsequent interest and costs. It is also averred that the plaintiffs sold the suit property to Sri Tirupurasundari Hotels Private Limited. The appellant-defendant- the State of Tamil Nadu raised the same contentions as in the earlier suit. On the above pleadings, the following issues were framed:

1. Whether any part of the claim of the plaintiffs for arrears of rent is barred by time?
2. Whether the suit is hit by O.2, Rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure?
3. To what reliefs are the plaintiffs entitled?

6. Both the suits were tried together as the subject matter of the litigation and the issues involved were the same by the learned single Judge.

7. In a well-considered judgment, learned single Judge has held that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree as prayed for in both the suits and rejected the contentions of the defendant. With regard to Issue No.1 in C.S.No.146 of 1981 and C.S.No.276 of 1983, the learned Single Judge following the rulings of this Court in Second Appeal No.1615 of 1969 in Dr.S.S.David v. State of Madras represented by The District Collector, Coimbatore and the ruling reported in State of Tamil Nadu v. K.N.Dhanasekaran, 93 L.W. 207, held that the fair rent fixed for the building taken over by the Government, as a statutory tenant is payable retrospectively from the date of the tenancy subject to Law of Limitation. With regard to the question of limitation, the learned Single Judge, following the rulings of Privy Council reported in Mt.Bolo v. Mt.Koklan, 59 M.L.J. 621: A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 270; 127 I.C. 737: 57 I.A. 825 and Rangayya Appa Rao v. Bobba Sriramulu, I.L.R. 27 Mad. 148 (P.C.) and also the ruling reported in J.M.Andrews v. Radio Engineering Company, A.I.R. 1963 Mys. 113, has held that no part of the claim is barred by limitation. With regard to Issue No.2, in both the suits, whether the suit claim is barred under O.2, Rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, since no submissions were advanced by the defendant, the learned single Judge has held that it was not shown as to how the suit is barred under the above provisions of Civil Procedure Code. The said issues in both the suits were also found against the appellant-defendant. Accordingly, the learned single Judge decreed the suit in C.S.No.146 of 1981 for a sum of Rs.43,66,957 with subsequent interest and costs and decreed the suit in C.S.No.276 of 1983, for a sum of Rs.21,77,229 with interest and costs. Aggrieved by the above common judgment, the State of Tamil Nadu have filed the above two appeals.

8. The learned counsel for the appellant contended that the fair rent fixed for the building taken over by the Government, will operate only from the date of filing of the application and not from the commencement of original tenancy. It is also contended that under Art.52 of the Limitation Act, 1963, the period of limitation for a suit for arrears of rent is three years from the date when the arrears become due. It is also contended that the suit claim is barred under O.2, Rule 2, C.P.C.

9. On the other hand, Mr.S.Govindaswaminathan, learned Senior Counsel appearing for the respondents-plaintiffs submitted that the contentions of the appellant-defendant are erroneous and unsustainable and there are no sufficient reasons to modify the well-considered judgment of the learned Single Judge.

10. We are unable to accept the contentions of the learned counsel for the appellant to the effect that the fair rent fixed for the building taken over by the Government as a statutory tenant, will operate only from the date of filing of the application and not from the commencement of the original tenancy. In this connection, it is pertinent to point out that the premises known as, 'Rush Keyrum' bearing New Door No.149, Mount Road, Madras belonging to the plaintiffs 2 to 8 was taken over by the Accommodation Controller on 24.11.1956 under Sec.3 of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act of 1949 and allotted to the Director of Industries and Commerce on a provisional rent of Rs.2,617.50 per month subject to the fixation of fair rent. The Accommodation Controller subsequently revised the provisional rent and fixed it at Rs.4,000 subject to fixation of fair rent with effect from 1.4.1961. The Director of Industries and Commerce vacated the premises and the same was allotted to the Tamil Nadu Electricity Board in 1973 and it is the admitted case that the State of Tamil Nadu is a statutory tenant of the premises in question. Even though the plaintiffs were entitled to claim the difference between the fair rent and the provisional rent fixed by the Accommodation Controller from 24.11.1956 when the building was taken over by the Government, they restricted the claim from 1.10.1960 when the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1960 under which the fair rent has been fixed, came into force. The plaintiff claimed the difference in the rent from 1.10.1960 to 31.12.1980. Ex.P-1 is the order of the Accommodation Controller dated 24.11.1956 and it clearly shows that the rent of Rs.2,617.50 per month, is subject to fixation of fair rent. Proviso 3 and 4 to Sec.3(5) of the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1960 runs as follows:

"Provided also that the rent payable shall be the fair rent, if any, fixed for the building under the provisions of this Act; and if no fair rent has been so fixed, such reasonable rent as the authorised officer may determine in such manner as may be prescribed;

Provided also that the reasonable rent fixed by the authorised officer under the foregoing proviso shall be subject to such fair rent as may be fixed by the controller."

It is therefore clear the provisional rent fixed by the Accommodation Controller is subject to fixation of the fair rent under the provisions of the Act. The plaintiffs filed H.R.C.No.143 of 1974, before the Rent Controller, Madras, on 2.1.1974 to fix the fair rent and the Rent Controller fixed the fair rent on 22.4.1978 at Rs.28,000 per month. The learned single Judge has followed the ratio laid down by M.M.Ismail, J., (as he then was) in S.A.No.1615 of 1969 in the case of Dr.S.S.David v. State of Madras and a Division Bench of this Court in the case reported in State of Tamil Nadu v. K.N.Dhanasekaran, 93 L.W. 207, and has held that the fair rent fixed for the building taken over by the Government operates retrospectively from the date of tenancy and the recovery of the excess rent is subject to the Law of Limitation.

11. In the above case, the question before the Division Bench of this Court was when a building has been taken over by the Government, under Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) 1960 as amended by Act 23 of 1973 and when the Government became tenant as provided under the Act, whether the Government is liable to pay fair rent fixed under the Act subsequent to such tenancy from the date of the commencement of tenancy or from the date of the application for fixing the fair rent.

12. The Division Bench after considering the relevant provisions of the Act independent of the reasoning of Ismail, J., in S.A.No.1615 of 1969 was of the following view:

"The fair rent fixed pursuant to the proviso to Sec.3(5) of the Act will become effective from the date of commencement of the original tenancy itself subject to the Law of Limitation regarding the recovery of excess, where the fair rent fixed is more than the reasonable rent fixed by authorised officer. Where the fair rent fixed is less than the reasonable rent fixed by the authorised officer, then Explanation to Sec.3(5) would be attracted and the recovery of the excess amount or adjustment of the same shall be governed by the terms of the Explanation."

In view of the ratio in the above ruling of this Court, the learned single Judge was right in holding that the fair rent fixed for the building taken over by the Government operates retrospectively from the date of tenancy subject to the Law of Limitation. We find no reason to differ from the findings of the learned single Judge. Therefore, we reject the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that the fair rent fixed for the building taken over by the Government will operate only from the date of filing of the application and not from the commencement of original tenancy.

13. It was also contended by the learned counsel for the appellant that under Art.52 of the Limitation Act, 1963, the period of limitation for a suit for arrears of rent is three years from the date when the arrears become due and at best the plaintiffs would be entitled to claim a difference from a date three years before the date of institution of the suit, i.e. from 3.1.1978. We are unable to accept the above contention of the learned counsel for the appellant. Art.52 of Limitation Act, 1963 reads as follows:

Description of suit	Period of Limitation	Time from which period begins to run
For arrears of rent	Three years	When the arrears become due.

A similar provision in Art.110 of Schedule II of Indian Limitation Act (Act XV of 1877) which prescribes for a suit for arrears of rent, a period of limitation of three years reckoned from the time when the arrears become due was the subject matter of judicial scrutiny by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, in the case of Rangayya Appa Rao v. Bobba Sriramulu, I.L.R. 27 Mad. 148 at 150 (P.C.) and it was held as follows:

"The object of a Limitation Act is presumably to compel people who have actionable claims to sue upon them with due promptitude or to forfeit the right to do so at all. In such an act, the falling due of rent naturally means the falling due of an ascertained rent, which the tenant is under an obligation to pay and which the landlord can claim and, if necessary, sue for....

As long as proceedings are pending before the Collector and on appeal from him, before the civil courts, the rate of rent is in suspense, for no one can say what it will prove to be and that therefore no arrear of rent can be said to have become due within the meaning of the Limitation Act."

Therefore, the right to sue for enhanced rent accrues when the enhanced rent is ascertained. With regard to when the right to sue accrues, the leading decision on the subject is that of the Privy Council in Mt. Bolo v. Mt. Koklan, 59 M.L.J. 621: 127 I.C. 753: A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 270: 57 I.A. 825.

Therein, Sir Benod Mitter observed as follows:

"There can be no 'right to sue' until there is an accrual of the right asserted in the suit and its infringement, or at least a clear and unequivocal threat to infringe that right, by the defendant against whom the suit is instituted."

The said principle was restated and followed by the Judicial Committee in Annamalai Chettiar v. Muthukaruppan Chettiar, 60 M.L.J. 1: 58 I.A. 1: A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 9 and in Gobinda Narayan Singh v. Sham Lal Singh, 61 M.L.J. 9: 58 I.A. 125: 131 I.C. 753: A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 89 and the same view has been followed by our Supreme Court in the case reported in Rukhmabai v. Laxminarayan, A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 335.

14. In the instant case, the enhanced rent was payable and fell due only when the enhanced rent was ascertained, i.e. when the fair rent was fixed by the Rent Controller on 22.4.1978 in H.R.C.No.143 of 1974 at Rs.28,000 per month. The respondent/plaintiff has filed the suits only after the fair rent was ascertained and fixed by the Rent Controller in H.R.C.No.143 of 1974. It is, therefore, clear that from the date when the fair rent was fixed, the arrears of rent became due and the cause of action to sue accrued with regard to Art.52 of Limitation Act, 1963. Therefore, the learned single Judge was right in his view that, "where the right asserted in the suit itself came into existence within the prescribed period before the date of the suit, it is obvious that its infringement, if any, must be within such period and consequently, no question of limitation arises." In view of the above rulings of the Privy Council and the Supreme Court, we are of the view that the findings of the learned Single Judge on this issue is correct and we reject the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant.

15. The last contention of the learned counsel for the appellant is that the suit claim is barred under O.2, Rule 2 of C.P.C. But no arguments were advanced before the learned Single Judge on this point and before us also, no arguments were advanced to substantiate the contention that the suit claim is barred under O.2, Rule 2, C.P.C. In view of the above, we reject the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant. The learned Single Judge has elaborately considered all the contentions raised by the appellant-defendant and has given a well-considered judgment and the appellant-defendant has not made out any case both on facts and in law to set aside the common judgment.

16. In view of the above, both O.S.A.Nos.175 and 176 of 1986 are dismissed and the judgment and decree in C.S.No.146 of 1981 and C.S.No.276 of 1983 respectively are confirmed. On the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, there is no order as to costs.

B.S. ---- Appeals dismissed.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

Present: Srinivasan and Thangamani, JJ.

App.No.817 of 1982. 25th February, 1993.

Nallaya Gounder and another ...Appellants
v.
P.Ramaswami Gounder (died) and others
...Respondents.

Specific Relief Act (XLVII of 1963), Secs.9 and 10 - Person asking for specific performance - Not coming forward with clean hands - Relief refused.

In the present action, the court has no hesitation in negating specific performance for the reason that the plaintiffs have not come forward with clean hands in asking for the equitable relief.

G.Subramaniam, Senior Counsel, for K.Govindarajan, for Appellants.

K.Doraiswami, Senior Counsel, for Mrs.Muthumani Doraiswami, for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Thangamani, J.: Appeal against the judgment and decree of learned Subordinate Judge of Salem in O.S.No.124 of 1981 on his file.

2. The appellants are defendants 4 and 5 in the trial Court. Respondents-plaintiffs instituted the suit for specific performance against the appellants and three others alleging that on 27.8.1980 defendants 1 to 3 entered into Ex.A-1 sale agreement with them undertaking to sell the suit properties for Rs.52,500. They received a portion of the sale price of Rs.20,000 as advance and agreed to receive the balance of Rs.32,500 within a period of 5 1/2 months from that date and to execute the sale deed in favour of the plaintiffs. On 16.11.1980 which corresponds to the 1st of Tamil month Karthigai the plaintiffs were put in possession of the properties as agreed and since then they are in actual enjoyment of them. Appellants were aware of Ex.A-1 agreement as well as handing over possession of the properties to the plaintiffs by defendants 1 to 3. Since defendants 1 to 3 were postponing the execution of the sale deed, the plaintiffs convened panchayat thrice. The last panchayat took place at the house of Village Munsif of Konnaray on 1.1.1981 in which defendants 1 to 3 undertook to execute the conveyance on 7.1.1981. Appellants were also present along with defendants 1 to 3 in that panchayat. However, defendants 1 to 3 and the appellants have colluded together and created Ex.B-2 sale agreement dated 5.3.1980 in favour of the appellants on 3.1.1981 by ante dating the same. Ex.B-1 sale deed dated 2.1.1981 was also executed by defendants 1 to 3 in favour of the appellants in respect of the suit properties fraudulently in order to deprive the plaintiffs of their right. The recitals as to consideration, possession are all false and fabricated so as to get over the right of the plaintiffs under Ex. A-1 agreement dated 27.8.1980. Appellants cannot derive any right, title or interest in the suit properties by virtue of Ex.B-1 sale deed. Appellants are not bona fide transferees for value without notice of the earlier agreement for sale in favour of the plaintiffs and their possession.

3. Defendants 1 to 3 remained ex parte in the suit.

4. The appellants resisted the suit denying that Ex.A-1 came into existence on 27.8.1980 and that the plaintiffs were ever in actual possession of the properties and that there was any medication in this connection. They pleaded that they lawfully entered into Ex.B-2 agreement with defendants 1 to 3 on 5.3.1980 and in pursuance of the same defendants 1 to 3 conveyed the suit properties in favour of them under two sale deeds Ex.B-1 dated 2.1.1981 and Ex.B-9 dated 13.1.1981. They were also put in actual possession of the suit properties. Till then their vendors alone were in enjoyment of the properties and Ex.B-2 agreement is not an anti-dated one.

5. Holding that Ex.A-1 is a genuine agreement and there is nothing to suspect that it was created later on by antedating the instrument, that appellants were aware of the existence of Ex.A-1 agreement, that possession was delivered to the plaintiffs as per Ex.A-9 delivery receipt dated 16.11.1980, that Ex.B-2 sale agreement was created by ante-dating the same and that the plaintiffs had come to court with clean hands, the trial court decreed the suit with costs for specific performance.

6. The endeavour of Mr.G.Subramanian, learned senior counsel for the appellants was mainly to place before the Court the suspicious circumstances attendant on the transactions and to demonstrate that Ex.A-1 sale agreement dated 27.8.1980 was created subsequent to the coming into existence of Ex.B-2 agreement on 5.3.1980. In other words, his argument was that Ex.B-2 agreement preceded Ex.A-1 agreement. The first submission in this connection relates to delivery of possession of the property. It is the evidence of the first plaintiff as P.W.1 that on 27.8.1980 defendants 1 to 3 agreed to convey the suit items to them for Rs.52,500 and received an advance of Rs.20,000. The sale deed was to be executed within a period of 5 1/2 months. He was willing to pay the balance of sale consideration and get the sale deed executed. On 16.11.1980 defendants 1 to 3 handed over possession of the properties to him as per Ex.A-9 delivery receipt. Learned senior counsel for the appellants pointed out that as per the recitals in Ex.A-1 the property in Survey No.231/1 is a plot of 30 cents with a five anganam thatched shed thereon. 1st defendant Periyakaruppa Gounder and third defendant Nallammal are to enjoy this property till their life time and only thereafter appellants are to take possession of the same. There is no reason why contrary to the express recitals in Ex.A-1 defendants 1 and 3 should have surrendered the right to reside in that house till their life time. None of the witnesses examined on the side of the plaintiffs seeks to give any explanation on this aspect. So in all probability plaintiffs were never given possession as indicated in Ex.A-9 delivery receipt.

7. Ex.A-1 agreement reads that the properties are to be handed over to the prospective purchasers on the 1st of Karthigai month. The specific averments in the plaint are to the effect that defendants 1 to 3 are closely related to defendants 4 and 5, and they are colluding with each other. It is not the evidence of the first plaintiff as P.W.1 that defendants 1 to 3 are in any way related to or interested in him. While so, it passes one's comprehension as to the necessity or urgency for defendants 1 to 3 to undertake and later on hand over possession of the properties to the plaintiffs even before receiving sale consideration in full. Besides the version of the first plaintiff as P.W.1 that because there were standing cotton crops, the vendors undertook to hand over possession on the first of Karthigai month does not inspire confidence. Had it been the real reason, certainly this would have found a place in Ex.A-1 sale agreement itself.

8. Ex.A-9 purports to be a delivery receipt dated 16.11.1980 evidencing handing over possession of the suit properties by defendants 1 to 3 in favour of the plaintiffs. No doubt Ex.A-1 agreement recites that on the 1st of Tamil Month Karthigai the vendors are to hand over possession to the vendees. And in Ex.A-3 the notice dated 6.1.1981 issued by the plaintiffs to the defendants stating that Ex.B-2 agreement has been created by ante-dating mention is made about the plaintiffs taking possession on 16.11.1980. However, it is significant to note that this notice makes no reference to Ex.A-9 delivery receipt. Even the plaint is conspicuously silent about the execution of Ex.A-9 delivery receipt, even though there is an allegation that possession was handed over on 16.11.1980. Besides, a scrutiny of Ex.A-9 reveals that it has been filed into Court only on 28.6.1982 during trial. Had it really been in existence on the date of document, such a vital piece of evidence would not have been failed to be disclosed in the list of documents appended to the plaint.

9. P.W.2 Kuppanna Gounder is an ancestor to Ex.A-9 delivery receipt. He owns lands adjacent to the suit properties. It is significant to note that when he was examined on 24.6.1982, he merely stated that on the 1st of Tamil Month Karthigai possession was delivered and he attested delivery receipt. However, the said receipt was not placed before him on that day. Even P.W.1 who was examined on 24.6.1982 stated that delivery of property was given to him on 16.11.1980. He made no mention of the existence of this receipt on that day. Only when he was again examined on 28.6.1982 Ex.A-9 was produced and marked through him. P.W.2 also identified his signature in Ex.A-9 only when he was examined for the second time on 29.6.1982. Further this witness admits in cross-examination that subsequent to Ex.A-1 he had never visited the suit properties. Evidently he could not have had any personal knowledge of the handing over of possession as per Ex.A-9 delivery receipt. So there is substance in the argument of learned senior counsel for the appellants that Ex.A-9 delivery receipt was got up for the occasion as an after thought when the trial proceeded. And the evidence of P.W.1 that the appellants were present at the time of delivery is only an attempt to attribute knowledge of Ex.A-1 agreement to them.

10. Yet another factor brought to our notice by learned senior counsel for the appellants is this. P.W.1 states in the witness box that on 26.8.1980 he purchased some other property for Rs.22,200 from defendants 1 to 3 under Ex.A-8. There was no written agreement preceding the said sale. At the time of Ex.A-8 he was in possession of one lakh rupees. After paying the sale consideration of Rs.22,200 under Ex.A-8 the balance was remaining with him. And as per the version of P.W.2 Kuppanna Gounder, the plaintiffs were ready to pay the money and get the sale deed executed in their favour. While so it is not known why the suit properties were not also purchased along with the items conveyed under Ex.A-8. There was absolutely no reason for entering into Ex.A-1 agreement on the same day undertaking to complete the sale transaction within a period of 5 1/2 months from that day.

11. P.W.2 Kuppanna Gounder and P.W.3 Kuppusubramaniam are the attestors to Ex.A-1 agreement. P.W.4 Hanumantha Rao purports to be the scribe of this agreement. While P.W.3 Kuppusubramaniam is the karnam of Elachipalayam, P.W.4 Hanumantha Rao is the Karnam of Kilapalayam village. P.W.1, the first plaintiff is categorical in his version that Ex.A-1 was written in the house of Kilapalayam Karnam, though in the first instance they only went to the house of P.W.3 to write the document there, whereas P.Ws.2 to 4 would say that this agreement was written in the house of P.W.3 only. The first plaintiff as P.W.1 says that Ex.A-8 sale deed was written and registered on the same day and the terms of the agreement under Ex.A-1 were also concluded on that day, but it was written only on the next day. We find from Ex.A-8 that that sale deed was written on 26.8.1980 and registered on 27.8.1980. Further according to P.W.2 Kuppanna Gounder, they left Mallasamudram at 3.15 p.m. and reached Elachipalayam at 4.00 P.M. And P.W.3 Kuppusubramaniam says that Ex.A-1 was written at his residence from 4.00 P.M. to 5.00 P.M. on 27.8.1980. But the endorsement in Ex.A-8 reveals that this sale deed was registered between 3.00 and 4.00 P.M. on that day. P.W.2 Kuppanna Gounder is one of the attestors to Ex.A-8. P.W.4 Karnam of Kilapalayam is the scribe of this sale deed. When these persons were available in Mallasamudram itself, it is not known why Ex.A-1 was not written there itself on the date of registration of Ex.A-8 sale deed. It is also significant to note that P.W.4 Karnam nowhere states that he wrote Ex.A-1, though he has chosen to give evidence that the defendants 1 to 3 executed the agreement wherein the plaintiffs also affixed their signature and thumb impression. The infirmities in the evidence of P.Ws.1 to 4 certainly cast doubt about the credibility of their versions regarding the coming into existence of Ex.A-1 agreement.

12. Ex.B-2 is the agreement dated 5.3.1980 executed by defendants 1 to 3 in favour of the appellants in respect of the suit properties. The 5th defendant as D.W.1 says that pursuant to the same they purchased the property under Ex.B-1 the sale deed dated 2.1.1981. Since one item was omitted to be included in the sale deed, later on they got Ex.B-9 executed in their favour on 13.1.1981. Ex.B-2 agreement has been attested by D.W.2 Kandasamy Gounder. He speaks about the typing of this agreement at the Sub Registrar's Office at Tiruchengodu and the passing of Rs.15,000 part of sale consideration. The stamp paper for Ex.B-2 has been purchased in the name of 5th defendant Kulandaivel at Thammampatti on 20.2.1980. Mr.K.Doraiswami, learned senior counsel for the respondents laid stress on the purchase of the stamp paper at Thammampatti and argued that on coming to know of Ex.A-1 agreement, the appellants went in search of old stamp papers and connected Ex.B-2 agreement with the aid of one they secured at distant Thammampatti. Even the trial Court discarded Ex.B-2 on the ground that to create antedated agreement stamp papers were searched for and purchased at Thammampatti which is 50 miles away from Mallasamudram, while admittedly there is a Sub Registrar's Office at Mallasamudram and stamp papers are available there. However, on a careful scrutiny of the evidence on record, we do not feel convinced of this claim. It is seen that as per the evidence of D.W.1 Kulandaivel, 20 days prior to Ex.B-2 the negotiation for sale was over in the house of the first defendant. Five days later he purchased the stamp paper and 10 or 15 days subsequent to that date Ex.B-2 was written. It is not as if the stamp paper for Ex.B-2 sale deed stands in the name of somebody else. If it is so, one can argue that an old stamp paper was searched for and obtained in order to create an antedated agreement. But it is significant to note that the stamp paper for Ex.B-2 stands only in the name of 5th defendant Kulandaivel. Be it also seen that the stamp papers for Ex.B-1 sale deed have been purchased in the name of 5th defendant Kulandaivel in Madras as well as Salem. D.W.1 has denied the suggestion that on coming to know of Ex.A-1 sale agreement a search was made for old stamp paper in all the places and since it was available only at Thammampatti, the stamp paper was purchased there and the agreement was written by putting an earlier date. But there is one fallacy in this claim. Be it noted that Ex.A-1 agreement has come into existence only on 27.8.1980. Whereas the stamp paper for Ex.P-2 has been purchased on 20.2.1980. So evidently the stamp paper for Ex.B-2 could not have been purchased on coming to know of the existence of Ex.A-1 agreement.

13. Ex.A-21 is a duplicate of Ex.B-2 agreement. Besides, reciting all the contents of Ex.B-2, Ex.A-21 contains the signatures of the executants. D.W.2 alone figures as a witness in both Exs.B-2 and A-21. While one Palani Gounder son of Sengoda Gounder is an attester in Ex.B-2, in the other agreement one Palaniappan son of Subbu Gounder is the attester. Of course there are some discrepancies in the schedule of property in the two agreements. While Ex.B-2 makes mention of S.F.No.231/3, in Ex.A-21 it is typed as Survey

No.231/34. But extent and assessment are the same in both the documents. Evidently it is a typographical error. Further, while Ex.B-2 makes mention of Survey No.232/2, that survey filed does not find a place in Ex.A-21. It is possible that this last item in Ex.B-2 is an omission in Ex.A-21. There is no reason for not accepting the testimony of D.W.1 that because the first defendant wanted a copy, they typed Ex.A-21 and handed it over to him. This witness further says that all of them signed in that copy and the person who typed also affixed his signature to the same. And the view of learned Subordinate Judge that because of these discrepancies, Ex.B-2 is an antedated agreement does not appear to be sound.

14. Further, learned senior counsel for the appellants drew our attention to the fact that this Ex.A-21 was marked during the cross-examination of D.W.1 by the plaintiffs' counsel. As per the evidence of D.W.1. Ex.A-21 was handed over to the first defendant since he wanted a copy of Ex.B-2 agreement. There is no explanation as to how this document found its way into the hands of the plaintiffs. Evidently it should have been handed over to them by the first defendant. This factor clinchingly points out the collusion between defendants 1 to 3 on one hand and the plaintiffs on the other. As a corollary it follows that Ex.A-1 document could have necessarily come into existence later on after the agreement under Ex.B-2 was entered into on 5.3.1980. Probably defendants 1 to 3 wanted to go back on the agreement since the plaintiffs who are neighbouring land owners chose to offer higher price on coming to know of Ex.B-2 in favour of the appellants. That Ex.A-6 the prior title deed executed in favour of the first defendant was produced by the plaintiffs also goes to strengthen the view that the collusion was only between the plaintiffs and defendants 1 to 3. We find as per the plaint averment, "the plaintiffs convened panchayat thrice and the last panchayat took place at the house of the Village Munsif of Konnayar on 1.1.1981 in which it was decided and the defendants 1 to 3 agreed to convey the suit properties to the plaintiff free of all encumbrances at their cost on 7.1.1981. The panchayatdars are Sellappa Gounder, son of Periya Gounder, Sankaranpalayam, (2) Kaliyanna Gounder, Nallamapalayam, (3) Ponnayaru Poon Gounder, Kuppuswami Gounder, Selliyamman Koil Trustee, Konnarayar and Ex.V.M. of Konnayar." However, in his evidence P.W.1 gives the names of panchayatdars as Kuppanna Gounder, Konnayar Munsif, Sellappa Gounder, Pulli Gounder and Subramanian. The discrepancy in the names of the panchayatdars mentioned in the plaint and the evidence has not been explained. And the plaintiffs have not chosen to examine any of the panchayatdars to substantiate their allegations. Though Ex.A-3 notice has been issued on 6.1.1981, subsequent to the date of the last panchayat, the said panchayat is not referred to this notice. Ex.A-1 agreement stipulates that the sale is to be completed within 5 1/2 months from 27.8.1980. However, the plaintiffs have not given any reason for convening three panchayats within the date agreed to under agreement Ex.A-1. While the date of the last panchayat alone finds a place in the plaint, the dates of other panchayats are neither pleaded nor spoken to in evidence. So there could be no doubt that this plea of panchayat is also far from truth. In the circumstances, we are of the view that it is Ex.B-2 agreement which preceded Ex.A-1 agreement and not vice versa as concluded by learned trial Judge.

15. Learned senior counsel for the appellants next submitted that the remedy of specific relief being an equitable one, the plaintiffs must come to court with clean hands. In this case there is positive proof that Ex.A-9 delivery receipt has been concocted for the purpose of this case. We have also seen that the plaintiffs have put forward a false case regarding convening of panchayat. So even if we are to take that Ex.A-1 agreement has come into existence prior to Ex.B. agreement, the plaintiffs cannot maintain this action. In support of his contention he cited the decision of Ismail, J. (as he then was) in Ramaswamy Gounder v. Venkatachalam, (1976) 1 M.L.J. 243. In that case, the plaintiff denied in his evidence that he averred in the plaint that the defendants did not come to the Sub-Registrar's office. Further, while the allegation in the plaint was to the effect that prior to a particular date he had tendered the entire balance of Rs.14,000 to the defendant, it was borne out from his evidence that he came into possession of part of the money only at a later date. There was also discrepancy in his evidence regarding the persons in whose names the stamp papers were purchased. Besides, his version in the witness box on the receipt of the notice was not consistent with the averment in the plaint. On the question whether the plaintiff would be entitled to the relief of specific performance, it was held that the falsity of the case put forward by the plaintiff disentitled him from obtaining the discretionary relief of specific performance of agreement. The falsity of the case directly impinged on the essential ingredients and elements necessary for claiming the relief. In Vyapuri v. Vijayan, 1978 T.L.N.J. 62, the court found that a sum of Rs.11,000 was not paid as advance as contended by the plaintiff and that what was paid was only a sum of Rs.1,000. The Division Bench comprising of Ismail and Nainar Sundaram, JJ. held that the plaintiff who comes to the Court with a false case in material ingredients necessary for the grant of relief of specific performance will not be entitled to the equitable remedy and is in the discretion of the Court, which discretion has to be exercised according to recognised principles of law and not arbitrarily. In Appeal No.355 of 1984 we had occasion to consider the same question. In that case the appellant based his relief on Ex.A-1 agreement after making interpolation so as to make it appear that he has a right in it. On the ratio laid down in the decisions referred to above, this Bench took the view that that was sufficient to refuse the relief to the appellant. So, in the present action also we have no hesitation in negating specific performance for the reason that the plaintiffs have not come forward with clean hands in asking for the equitable relief.

16. Under Sec.16(c) of the Specific Relief Act, specific performance of a contract cannot be enforced in favour of a person who fails to aver and prove that he has performed or has always been ready and willing to perform the essential terms of the contract which are to be performed by him, other than terms the performance of which has been prevented or waived by the defendants. Learned senior counsel for the appellants submitted that the plaint in this case did not contain any averment to the effect that the plaintiffs made a demand for specific performance and there was a refusal on the part of defendants 1 to 3 to comply with the said demand. It will not be sufficient if the plaintiff pleads and proves that he is ready and willing to perform his part of the contract, but he must also plead that he made a demand on the defendant for performance of the contract and the defendant refused to comply with the same and that the language of Rule 3 of O.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure is mandatory and any plaint in a suit for specific performance has to be strictly in conformity with Form No.47 or 48 of Appendix A of the Code of Civil Procedure learned counsel for the appellants further pointed out that the plaint does not contain averments regarding cause of action also. He relied on the decision in Abdul Khader Rowther v. Sara Bai, (1989)4 S.C.C. 313, wherein the Apex Court has laid down; "A suit for specific performance has to conform to the requirements prescribed in Forms 47 and 48 of the First Schedule in the Civil Procedure Code. In a suit for specific performance it is incumbent on the plaintiff not only to set out agreement on the basis of which he sues in all its details, he must go further and plead that he has applied to the defendant specifically to perform the agreement pleaded by him but the defendant has not done so. He must further plead that he has been and is still ready and willing to specifically perform his part of the agreement. Neither in the plaint nor at any subsequent stage of the suit the plaintiff has taken those pleas. As observed by this Court in Prem Raj v. D.L.F. Housing and Construction (Private) Limited, (1968)3 S.C.R. 648, that it is well settled that in a suit for specific performance that plaintiff should allege that he is ready and willing to perform his part of the contract and in the absence of such an allegation the suit is not maintainable".

17. A perusal of Form Nos.47 and 48 shows that in a suit for specific performance there must be averments to the effect that plaintiff has applied to the defendant specifically to perform the agreement on his part, but the defendant has not done so. The plaintiff was still ready and willing specifically to perform the agreement on his part of which the defendant had notice. And we find from the plaint that besides stating that they are ready and willing to perform their part of the contract mention is made of the plaintiffs convening panchayat thrice and defendants 1 to 3 agreeing to execute the conveyance and later on selling the properties in favour of the appellants under Exs.B-1 and B-9. So in our view there is sufficient compliance of the requirements of Forms 47 and 48 of Appendix-A of the Code of Civil Procedure.

18. In the result, the appeal is allowed and the judgment and decree of the trial court are set aside and the suit is dismissed with costs of defendants 4 and 5 (appellants) throughout.

property and thereafter the assets should be applied in rateable payment to each partner of what is due to him firstly on account of advances as distinguished from capital and secondly on account of capital, the residue, if any, being divided rateable among all the partners. It is obvious that the Act contemplates complete liquidation of the assets of the partnership as a preliminary to the settlement of accounts between partners upon dissolution of the firm and it will, therefore, be correct to say that, for the purposes of the Indian Partnership Act, and irrespective of any mutual agreement between the partners, the share of each partner is, in the words of Lindley: 'his proportion of the partnership assets after they have been all realised and converted into money, and all the partnership debts and liabilities have been paid and discharged.'

12. In Commissioner of Income Tax, West Bengal, Calcutta v. Juggilal Kamalapat, (1967)1 S.C.J. 177: (1967)1 S.C.R. 784: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 401, the facts were that three brothers and one J entered into a partnership business. The firm owned both moveable and immoveable properties. Sometime thereafter the three brothers created a Trust with themselves as the first three trustees and simultaneously executed a deed of relinquishment relinquishing their rights in and claims to all the properties and assets of the firm in favour of J and of themselves in the capacity of trustees. Thereafter a new partnership firm was constituted between J and the Trust with specified shares. The Trust brought a sum of Rs.50,000 as its capital in the new firm. The new firm applied for registration under Sec.26-A of the Income Tax Act, 1922, but the application was rejected by the authorities. The tribunal held that the deed of relinquishment being unregistered could not legally transfer the rights and the title to the immoveable properties owned by the original firm to the trust. Since the immoveable properties were not separable from the other business assets it held that there was no legal transfer of any portion of the business assets of the original firm in favour of the trust. A reference was made to the High Court on the question whether the new partnership legally came into existence and as such should be registered under Sec.26-A. The High Court held that there was no impediment to its registration. The matter was brought in appeal before this Court. This Court pointed out that the deed of relinquishment was in respect of individual interests of the three brothers in the assets of the partnership firm in favour of the Trust and consequently, did not require registration, even though the assets of the partnership included immoveable property. In taking this view reliance was placed on the decision Ajudhia Pershad Ram Pershad v. Sham Sunder, A.I.R. 1947 Lahore 13, as well as the decision of this Court in Addanki Narayanappa v. Bhaskara Krishnappa, A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 1300: (1966)2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 60: (1966) An.W.R. (S.C.) 60: (1966)2 S.C.J. 490: (1966)3 S.C.R. 400.

13. Again in C.I.T., Madhya Pradesh v. Dewas Cine Corporation, A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 676: (1968)2 S.C.R. 173: (1968)1 S.C.J. 691: (1968)1 I.T.J. 444, the partnership firm was dissolved and on dissolution it was agreed between the partners that the theatres should be returned to their original owners who had brought them into the books of the partnership as its assets. In the books of account of the partnership the assets were shown as taken over on October 1, 1951 at the original price less depreciation, the depreciation being equally divided between the two partners. In the proceedings for the assessment year 1952-53 the firm was treated as a registered firm. The appellate tribunal held that restoration of the two theatres to the original owners amounted to transfer by the firm and the entries adjusting the depreciation and writing off the assets at the original value amounted to total recoupment of the entire depreciation by the partnership and on that account the second proviso to Sec.10(2)(vii) of the Income Tax Act, 1922 applied. The High Court in reference upturned the decision of the Tribunal and held in favour of the assessee against which the Revenue appealed to this Court. This Court after referring to Secs.46 and 48 of the Partnership Act held that on the dissolution of the partnership each theatre must be deemed to be returned to the original owner in satisfaction partially or wholly of his claim to a share in the residue of the assets after discharging the debts and other obligations. In law there was no sale or transfer by the partnership to the individual partners in consideration of their respective share in the residue. In taking this view reliance was once again placed on the decision of this Court in Addanki Narayanappa v. Bhaskara Krishnappa, A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 1300: (1966)2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 60: (1966)2 An.W.R. (S.C.) 60: (1966)2 S.C.J. 490:

(1966)3 S.C.R. 400.

14. In C.I.T., U.P. v. Bankey Lal Vaidya, A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 2270, this Court pointed out that on dissolution of partnership the assets of the firm are valued and the partner is paid a certain amount in lieu of his share of the assets, the transaction is not a sale, exchange or transfer of assets of the firm and the amount received by the partner cannot be taxed as capital gains. In taking this view reliance was placed on the decision of this Court in C.I.T., Madhya Pradesh v. Dewas Cine Corporation, A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 676; (1968)2 S.C.R. 173; (1968)1 S.C.J. 691; (1968)1 I.T.J. 444.

15. Again in Malabar Fisheries Company, Calicut v. C.I.T. Kerala, (1980)1 S.C.R. 696; A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 176, the facts were that the appellant firm which was constituted on April 1, 1959, with four partners carried on six different business in different names. The firm was dissolved on March 31, 1963 and under the deed of dissolution the first business concern was taken over by one of the partners, the remaining five concerns by two of the other partners and the fourth partner received his share in cash. It appears that during the assessment years 1960-61 to 1963-64 the firm had installed various items of machinery in respect of which it had received Development Rebate under Sec.33 of the Income Tax Act, 1961. On dissolution, the Income Tax Officer took the view that Sec.34(3)(b) of the Act applied on the premises that there was a sale or transfer of the machinery by the firm whereupon he withdrew the Development Rebate earlier allowed to the firm by amending the orders in that behalf. The appeal filed on behalf of the dissolved firm was dismissed by the Appellate Assistant Commissioner, but was allowed by the Tribunal. At the instance of the revenue a reference was made to the High Court and the High Court allowed the reference holding that there was a transfer of assets within the meaning of Sec.34 (3)(b). The dissolved firm approached this Court in appeal. This Court after referring to the definition of the expression 'transfer' in Sec.2(47) of the Act and the case law on the point concluded as under:

"Having regard to the above discussion, it seems to us clear that a partnership firm under the Indian Partnership Act, 1932 is not a distinct legal entity apart from the partners constituting it and equally in law the firm as such has no separate rights of its own in the partnership assets and when one talks of the firm's property or firm's assets all that is meant is property or assets in which all partners have a joint or common interest. If that be the position, it is difficult to accept the contention that upon dissolution the firm's rights in the partnership assets are extinguished. The firm as such has no separate rights of its own in the partnership assets but it is the partners who own jointly in common the assets of the partnership and, therefore, the consequence of the distribution, division or allotment of assets to the partners which flows upon dissolution after discharge of liabilities is nothing but a mutual adjustment of rights between the partners and there is no question of any extinguishment of the firm's rights in the partnership assets amounting to a transfer of assets within the meaning of Sec.2(47) of the Act."

16. From the foregoing discussion it seems clear to us that regardless of its character, the property brought into stock of the firm or acquired by the firm during its subsistence for the purposes and in the course of the business of the firm shall constitute the property of the firm unless the contract between the partners provides otherwise. On the dissolution of the firm each partner becomes entitled to his share in the profits, if any, after the accounts are settled in accordance with Sec.48 of the Partnership Act. Thus in the entire asset of the firm all the partners have an interest albeit in proportion to their share and the residue, if any after the settlement of accounts on dissolution would have to be divided among the partners in the same proportion in which they were entitled to a share in the profit. Thus during the subsistence of the partnership, a partner would be entitled to a share in the profits and after its dissolution to a share in the residue, if any on settlement of accounts. The mode of settlement of accounts set out in Sec.48 clearly indicates that the partnership asset in its entirety must be converted into money and from the pool the disbursement has to be made as set out in clause (a) and sub-clauses (i), (ii) and (iii) of clause (b) and thereafter if there is any residue that has to be divided among the partners in the proportions in which they were entitled to a share in the profits of the firm. So viewed, it becomes obvious that the residue would in the eye of law, be moveable property i.e., cash, and hence distribution of the residue among the partners in proportion to their shares in the profits would not attract Sec.17 of the Registration Act. Viewed from another angle it must be realised that since a partnership is not a legal entity but is only a compendious name each and every partner has a beneficial interest in the property of the firm even though he cannot lay a claim on any earmarked portion thereof as the same cannot be predicated. Therefore, when any property is allocated to him from the residue it cannot be said that he had only a definite limited interest in that property and that there is a transfer of the remaining interest in his favour within the meaning of Sec.17 of the Registration Act. Each and every partner of a firm has an undefined interest in each and every property of the firm and it is not possible to say unless the accounts are settled and the residue or surplus determined what would be the extent of the interest of each partner in the property. It is, however, clear that since no partner can claim a definite or earmarked interest in one or all of the properties of the firm because the interest is a fluctuating one depending on various factors, such as, the losses incurred by the firm, the advances made by the partners as distinguished from the capital brought in the firm, etc., it cannot be said unless the accounts are settled in the manner indicated by Sec.48 of the Partnership Act, what would be the residue which would ultimately be allocable to the partners. In that residue, which becomes divisible among the partners, every partner has an interest and when a particular property is allocated to a partner in proportion to his share in the profits of the firm, there is no partition or transfer taking place nor is there any extinguishment of interest of other partners in the allocated property in the sense of a transfer or extinguishment of interest under Sec.17 of the Registration Act. Therefore, viewed from this angle also, it seems clear to us that when a dissolution of the partnership takes place and the residue is distributed among the partners after settlement of accounts, there is no partition, transfer or extinguishment of interest attracting Sec.17 of the Registration Act.

17. Strong reliance was, however, placed by the learned counsel for the respondents on two decisions of this Court, namely, Ratan Lal Sharma v. Purshottam Hari, A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1066: (1974) 3 S.C.R. 109 and Lachman Das v. Ram Lal, (1989) 3 S.C.C. 99. Insofar as the first mentioned case is concerned, the facts reveal that the appellant and the respondent who had set up a partnership business in December, 1962 soon fell out. The partnership had a factory and other moveable and immovable properties. On August 22, 1963, the partners entered into an agreement to refer the dispute to the arbitration of two persons and gave the arbitrators full authority to decide their dispute. The arbitrators made their award on September 10, 1963. Under the award exclusive allotment of the partnership assets, including the factory, and liabilities was made in favour of the appellant and it was provided that he shall be absolutely entitled to the same in consideration of a sum of Rs.17,000 plus half the amount of realisable debts of the business to the respondent. The arbitrators filed the award in the High Court on November 8, 1963. On September 10, 1964, the respondent filed an application for determining the validity of the agreement and for setting aside the award. On May 27, 1966, a learned single Judge of the High Court dismissed the application as barred by time but declined to make the award the rule of the court because in his view the award was void for uncertainty and created rights in favour of the appellant over immovable property worth over Rs.100 requiring registration. The Division Bench dismissed the appeal as not maintainable whereupon this Court was moved by special leave. Before this Court it was contended, (i) that the award is not void for uncertainty, (ii) that the award seeks to assign the respondent's share in the partnership to the appellant and therefore does not require registration, and (iii) that under Sec.17 of the Arbitration Act, the court was bound to pronounce judgment in accordance with the award. This Court while reiterating that the share of a partner in the assets of the partnership comprising even immovable properties, is moveable property and the assignment of the share does not require registration under Sec.17 of the Registration Act. The legal position is thus affirmed. However, since the award did not seek to assign the share of the respondent to the appellant but on the contrary made an exclusive allotment of the partnership asset including the factory and liabilities to the appellant, thereby creating an absolute interest on payment of consideration of Rs.17,000 plus half the amount of the realisable debts, it was held to be compulsorily registrable under Sec.17 of the Registration Act. The court did not depart from the principle that the share of a partner in the asset of the partnership inclusive of immoveable properties, is moveable property and the assignment of the share on dissolution of the partnership did not require registration under Sec.17 of the Registration Act. The decision, therefore, turned on the interpretation of the award in regard to the nature of the assignment made in favour of the appellant. So far as the second case is concerned, we think it has no bearing since that was not a case of assignment of partnership property under a dissolution deed. In that case, the dispute was between two brothers in 2 1/2 kallas of land situate in Panipat, Haryana. The said land stood in the name of one brother, the appellant. The respondent contended that he was a benamidar and that was the dispute which was referred to arbitration. The arbitrator made his award and applied to the court for making it the rule of the court. Objections were filed by the appellant raising various contentions. The award declared that half share of the ownership of the appellant shall "be now owned by Shri Ram Lal, the respondent in addition to his half share owned in those lands". Therefore, the award transferred half share of the appellant to the respondent and since the value thereof exceeded Rs.100, it was held that it required registration. It is, therefore, obvious that this case has no bearing on the point in issue herein.

18. In the present case, the Division Bench of the High Court concluded that the award required registration because of an erroneous reading of the award. The Division Bench after extensively reproducing from the Schedules A to F of the award proceeded to state in paragraph 39 that the allotments are exclusive to the brothers and they get independent rights of their own under the award in the properties allotted under the Schedule and hence it is not a case purely of assignment of the shares in the partnership but it confers exclusive rights to the allottees. On this line of reasoning it concluded that the award required registration. The court next pointed out in paragraph 42 of the judgment that the award also partitions certain immoveable properties jointly owned by the disputants. In this connection it has placed reliance on paragraph 10(c) of the award which reads as under:

"(c). Other Lands and Buildings and House properties belonging to S.V.Sivalinga Nadar and Brothers standing in the name of the firm and or otherwise jointly owned by the disputants. These have been allotted by us to one or other or jointly to some of the disputants as per schedules annexed hereto."

The reasons which weighed with the Division Bench of the High Court in concluding that the award requires registration appear to be based on an erroneous reading of the award. We have carefully read the award and it is manifest therefrom that the arbitrators had confined themselves to the properties belonging to the two firms in question and scrupulously avoided dealing with the properties not belonging to the firm. This is manifest from paragraphs 15 to 18 of the award. However, properties standing in the names of disputants, individually or jointly, and others as benamidars but belonging to the firm also case to be included in the distribution of the surplus partnership asset under the award. That is the purport of paragraph 10(c) extracted hereinabove. When on settlement of accounts the residue is required to be divided among the partners in proportions in which they were entitled to share profits under sub-clause (iv) of clause (b) of Sec.48, the properties will have to be allocated to the partners as falling to their share on the distribution of the residue and, therefore, the arbitrators indicated in the schedules the properties falling to the share of each brother. Mere statements that a certain property will now exclusively belong to one partner or the other, as the case may be, cannot change the character of the document or the nature of assignment because that would, in any case, be the effect on the distribution of the residue. The property falling to the share of the partner on the distributing of the residue would naturally then belong to him exclusively but so long as in the eye of law it is money and not immovable property there is no question of registration under Sec.17 of the Registration Act. Besides as stated earlier, even if one looks at the award as allocating certain immovable property since there is no transfer, no partition or extinguishment of any right therein, there is no question of application of Sec.17(1) of the Registration Act. The reference to other land and buildings and house properties jointly owned by the disputants in clause (c) of paragraph 10 of the award merely indicates that certain properties belonging to the firm stood in the names of individual partners or in their joint names, but they belonged to the firm and, therefore, they were taken into account for the purpose of settlement.

of accounts under Sec.48 of the Partnership Act and distributed on the determination of the residue. The award read as a whole makes it absolutely clear that the arbitrators had confined themselves to the properties belonging to the two firms and had scrupulously avoided other properties in regard to which they did not reach the conclusion that they belonged to the firm. On a correct reading of the award, we are satisfied that the award seeks to distribute the residue after settlement of accounts on dissolution. While distributing the residue the arbitrators allocated the properties to the partners and showed them in the schedules appended to the award. We are, therefore, of the opinion that on a true reading of the award as a whole, there is no doubt that it essentially deals with the distribution of the surplus properties belonging to the dissolved firms. The award, therefore, did not require registration under Sec.17(1) of the Registration Act.

19. For the above reasons, we allow these appeals and set aside the impugned orders of the Division Bench and remit the matters to the Division Bench for answering the other contentions which arose in the appeal before it, but which were not decided in view of its decision on the question of registration of the award. We also make it clear that the award which is pending for registration may be registered by the Sub-registrar notwithstanding the objection raised by one of the partners S.V.Sivalinga Nadar through his lawyer if that is the only reason for withholding registration. The appeals are allowed accordingly with costs.

C.A.No.2944 of 1992 11th August, 1992.

B.Lakshmipathi Naidu ...Appellant

 $\mathbf{v}_i$

District Educational Officer and others

...Respondents.

Educational service - Special Rules for the Tamil Nadu Higher Secondary Educational Service - Post of Head Master of Aided Higher Secondary School - Rule requiring experience of not less than ten years as B.T. Assistant or Pandit in a Secondary School or Higher Secondary School after obtaining a teaching degree - Person working as Telugu Pandit from 1975 but acquiring teaching degree only in 1983 - Whether eligible for appointment as Head Master in 1986.

According to the Special Rules for the Tamil Nadu Higher Secondary Educational Service, a candidate to be appointed as a Head Master of a Higher Secondary School should have experience for a period of not less than ten years as B.T. Assistant or Pandit in a Secondary School/Training School/Higher Secondary School after obtaining a teaching degree recognised by the Director of School Education. The appellant who was working as a Telugu Pandit since 1975 and acquiring the degrees of Master of Arts in Telugu in 1978 and Bachelor of Education in 1983 claimed to be appointed as a Head Master when a post fell vacant on November 1, 1986. A single Judge of the High Court and a Division Bench held him ineligible for the post as he acquired the teaching degree in 1983 and had put in only 3 years as a Pandit after obtaining that degree. In appeal, it was contended that in view of several other provisions in the Rules as also instructions issued by the State, the experience of a language Pandit had to be equated with that of a trained-graduate.

Held:- The Madras High Court had to deal with the claim of a Tamil Pandit in P.Subbannan v. Director of School Education, (W.P.No.4470 of 1982 decided on 21.2.1983), and that of a Hindi Pandit in Chandrasekhar Case, (W.P.No.7367 of 1983 decided on 18.10.1983). Since the same considerations arise in regard to any language Pandit, the decisions are certainly in favour of the appellant. A writ appeal was filed against the judgment in P.Subbannan case, which along with another writ appeal was withdrawn by the State as is evident by the order of the Division Bench in W.A.Nos.950 and 951 of 1983. The learned counsel is, therefore, right in contending that the two judgments interpreting the rule in favour of language Pandits prevailed in the State for a considerably long period. It should further be presumed that the said principle has become settled and must have been applied in the other schools of the State. In view of this consideration, it is held that the High Court, in the present case, should not have departed from the settled position and should have followed the two decisions mentioned above.

V. Krishnamurthy and V. Balachandra, for Appellant.

S. Balakrishnan, R.N. Keshwani and R. Mohan, for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Sharma, J.:- Heard the learned counsel for the parties. Special leave is granted.

2. The appellant is a school teacher claiming appointment as Head Master. He has been working as a Telugu Pandit since 1975 in the school concerned. He got the degree of Master of Arts in Telugu in 1978 and Bachelor of Education in 1983. The post of Head Master fell vacant on November 1, 1986. According to the impugned judgment of the learned Single Judge of the Madras High Court, he has been held to be ineligible for the post. The decision was confirmed on appeal by a short order by a Division Bench which is under challenge in the present appeal.

3. The main ground for holding that the appellant was not qualified for the post of Head Master in 1986 is based upon the minimum qualification fixed in this regard by the Special Rules for the Tamil Nadu Higher Secondary Educational Service in its annexure by requiring the candidate to have:

“(iii) Experience for a period of not less than ten years as B.T. Assistant or Pandit in a Secondary School/Training School/Higher Secondary School, after obtaining a teaching degree, recognised by the Director of School Education;”

According to the respondents, the above condition requires ten years experience as a Pandit, after obtaining a teaching degree, recognised by the Director of School Education. It is said that since the appellant acquired the degree only in 1983, his experience in 1986 was of about three years. The plea of the appellant that this period has to be calculated from 1975 when he was appointed as Telugu Pandit has been rejected departmentally as well as by the High Court.

4. The learned counsel for the appellant has contended that in view of several other provisions in the Rules as also instructions issued by the State, the experience of a language Pandit has to be equated with that of a trained graduate and on this basis, at least two judgments were delivered by the Madras High Court in P. Subbannan v. Director of School Education, W.P.No.4470 of 1982, decided on 21.2.1983, and in P.S. Chandrasekhar v. Director of School Education, W.P.No.7367 of 1983, decided on 18.10.1985. We have examined the judgment in P. Subbannan v. Director of School Education, W.P.No.4470 of 1982, decided on 21.2.1983, wherein the High Court had to deal with the claim of Tamil Pandit and in P.S. Chandrasekhar v. Director of School Education, W.P.No.7367 of 1983, decided on 18.10.1985, that of a Hindi Pandit, but since the same considerations arise in regard to any language Pandit the decisions are certainly favour of the appellant. A writ appeal was filed against the judgment in P. Subbannan Case, which along with another writ appeal was withdrawn by the State as is evident by the order of the Division Bench in W.A.Nos.950 and 951 of 1983 vide Annexure J. The learned counsel is, therefore, right in contending that the two judgments interpreting the rule in favour of language Pandits prevailed in the State for a considerably long period. It should further be presumed that the said principle has become settled and must have been applied in the other schools of the State. In view of this consideration, we hold that the High Court, in the present case, should not have departed from the settled position and should have followed the two decisions mentioned above.

5. The learned single Judge has also mentioned another ground for rejecting the appellant's case. It has been held that for the promotion to the post of Head Master it was necessary that the claimant had passed Accounts Test, and since the appellant was lacking in this qualification he was not eligible. The learned counsel for the appellant has drawn our attention to the G.O.Ms.No.720 dated April 28, 1981 showing that this qualification was not to be insisted upon until further orders for appointment of Head Master of aided higher secondary schools. It is averred on behalf of the appellant and not denied on behalf of any of the respondents that the school in question is an aided higher secondary school and that no further orders to the contrary have been passed so far. The second ground put against the appellant in the impugned judgment also must be rejected.

6. For the reasons indicated above, we set aside the judgments of the High Court, rendered by the learned Single Judge and the Division Bench. We further hold that the appellant must be treated to be fully qualified for the post of the Head Master. Hence his case will be taken into consideration before taking a final decision in the question of the appointment of the Head Master in the school concerned. The appeal is accordingly allowed, but in the circumstances, without costs.

Tamil Nadu Chit Fund Rules (1964), Appendix II, Arts.1 (as amended) and 8-A as inserted by the Amendment -Validity of.

The Act and the Rules provide a complete mechanism for the constant supervision and regulation of the 'Chit Fund' business in the State of Tamil Nadu. No person can start or conduct any 'chit' unless he registers the proposed bye-laws in accordance with the procedure prescribed. It is common knowledge that there are large number of subscribers to the 'chit fund' business. The Act and Rules primarily protect the subscribers and in the process help the proprietors to run the 'chit fund' business to their advantage. There are elaborate provisions under the Act and the Rules providing investigation into the functioning of the said business. The scheme of the Act and the Rules shows that there is effective supervision and control at every stage of the functioning of the 'Chit Fund' business. The High Court grossly erred in holding that the number of the subscribers or the instalments has no nexus with the registration fee. Every subscriber has to enter into an agreement with the foreman who conducts the business on behalf of the proprietors. The object of the Act/Rules, obviously, is to protect the interest of the subscribers. More the subscribers more the burden on the authorities under the Act/Rules and as a consequence more fee is required to meet the expenditure. It is no doubt correct that after registration of bye-laws, fees are payable under Sec.53 of the Act for the performance of various other functions by the Registrar and his staff, but that is justified in view of the scheme of the Act. The expectation of winning a draw or a bid at the auction and becoming rich overnight lures the lower-middle class and the poor to subscribe to the chit fund out of their savings or even by borrowing money. In such a situation apart from regulatory measures it is necessary to have strict control and supervision over 'Chit Fund' business. The Act and the Rules are operating with that objective. The enhanced fee, in this case, is justified on the legal as well as the factual anvil of quid pro quo. Apart from the appointment of the Registrar, its staff and various other functionaries, the scheme of the Act in its operation involves huge expenditure which is entirely met out of the Fee Fund. The fees collected under the Act have, therefore live nexus under the expenditure incurred for the benefit of the 'Chit Fund' business. The Registrar is justified, rather duty bound to act in furtherance of the objects of the Act and the Rules. Even otherwise when the Rules provide for filing of the balance sheets by the Chartered Accountants, it is necessary in the context of the rules and the Act to provide machinery to examine and verify the contents of the balance sheets. No fault can be found with the reasons given by the State for bringing in Art.8-A in Appendix II to the rules.

Sree Murugan Financing Corporation v. State of Tamil Nadu, (1985) 1 M.L.J. 474.

V. Krishnamurthy and V.R. Karthikeyan, for Appellants.

K.V. Mohan, Smutha Singh and T.V.S.N. Chari, for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Fathima Beevi, J.:- These appeals arise out of the common judgment of the Madras High Court in a batch of writ petitions in which the respondents challenged the validity of the amendments effected to Art.1 and insertion of Art.8-A to Appendix II of the Tamil Nadu Chit Fund Rules, 1964 (for short 'the Rules'). The High Court in its judgment dated March 20, 1985 has struck down as invalid the impugned amendments.

2. The Tamil Nadu Chit Funds Act, 1961 (the Act) provides for the regulation of chit funds in the State of Tamil Nadu. 'Chit' is a transaction by which its foreman enters into an agreement with a number of subscribers that every one of them shall subscribe certain sum by instalments for a definite period and that each subscriber in his turn as determined by lot or by auction, shall be entitled to a prize amount. The sum total of the subscription payable by all the subscribers for any instalment of a chit without any deduction for discount or otherwise is chit amount.

3. It is useful to summarise the scheme of the Act and the rules. The Registrar of Chit Funds is appointed by the Government under Sec.51. No person can start or conduct any chit unless he registers with the Registrar the proposed bye-laws of the chit. Sec.7 provides that the Registrar, on being satisfied that the bye-laws have been registered, the chit agreement has been filed, and the security required under Sec.12 has been furnished by the foreman, grants "certificate of commencement". The auction or drawing of any chit commences only on obtaining such certificate. The security furnished under Sec.12 can only be released by Registrar in accordance with the prescribed procedure.

4. Under Sec.16 every foreman has to prepare and file with the Registrar a duly audited balance-sheet. A defaulting non-prized subscriber is liable to be removed and the aggrieved person has a right of appeal to the Registrar whose order in the matter is final. Any substitution in place of a defaulting subscriber has to be recorded and copy filed with the Registrar. The rights of the prized or non-prized subscribers in the chit cannot be transferred or interfered with without the previous sanction in writing of the Registrar. The foreman is required to maintain all the records pertaining to a chit for a specified period. The Registrar is empowered under Sec.37 to inspect the chit books and all records after giving due notice. If the Registrar is of the opinion that the accounts of any chit are not properly maintained and that such account should be audited, it shall be lawful for him under Sec.51(4) to have such account audited by a chit auditor. The foreman has a right of appeal against the order of the Registrar refusing to register bye-laws or to grant a certificate of commencement or refusing to accept the security or refusing to release the property charged by way of security as provided under Sec.54. Penalty for the contravention of the provisions is provided under Sec.56.

5. The provisions of the Act impose duties on the Registrar and are intended to regulate the conduct of the business. The Registrar has to take adequate security and keep the same intact until the claims of all subscribers are satisfied and till the termination of the chit, the Registrar is required to discharge several duties.

6. Sec.63 empowers the Government to make rules for carrying out all or any of the purposes of the Act. Sec.53 which provides for levy of fees reads:

"53. Levy of fees:- (1) There shall be paid to the Registrar such fees as the Government may from time to time, prescribe for-

(a) the registration of the bye-laws of a chit under Sec.3;

(b) the grant of a certificate of commencement under Sec.7;

(c) filing with the Registrar of the chit agreement and copies of documents under Secs.11, 20, 21, 29 and 32;

(d) the inspection of documents under Sec.52;

(e) the certificate, copy of or extract of documents under Sec.52;

(f) the audit of accounts of the foreman and the issue of an audit certificate;

(g) such other matters as may appear necessary to give effect to the purposes of this Act.

(2) A table of fees payable under Sub-sec.(1) shall be published in the Fort St. George Gazette-now the Tamil Nadu Government Gazette."

7. The rules have been framed under Sec.63. Rule

3 states that the bye-laws shall provide for the matters specified thereunder. If the Registrar refuses to register the bye-laws of a chit, he shall record his reasons for such refusal in writing and communicate a copy of the order to the applicant. Rule 11 prescribes the particulars to be contained in the chit agreement, Rule 14 prescribes the form of minutes of the proceedings and Rules 15 to 22 regulate the acceptance and release of security. In the case of cash deposited in an approved bank and transferred in favour of Registrar, intimation has to be given by the Registrar to the bank. Under Rule 22 the Registrar before releasing the security may call upon the foreman to produce register and books of accounts maintained and issue a notice to the subscribers. Registrar has to hear objections, if any, and inquire into the same and record the decision in writing. On the application of the foreman, the Registrar shall cause the balance-sheet and profit and loss account to be audited by the chit auditor as expeditiously as possible. Rule 42 states that the fees payable to the Registrar for the matters specified under Sec.53 shall be as set out in Appendix II and shall be paid in cash. Appendix II contains the table of fees for the registration of by-laws of chit under Sec.3 as Art.1 and for the audit of accounts under sub-sec.(4) of Sec.51 as Art.8.

8. The impugned amendments are to the following effect:

AMENDMENT

In the said rules, in Appendix II, in the Table of Fees (1) for Art.1 and the entries relating thereto, the following Article and entries shall be substituted, namely;

(1) For the Registration of bye-laws of a chit under Sec.3,--

Rates of Fees

(a) for chits for a term of less than one year	Re.1 per subscriber or instalment whichever is higher subject to a minimum of Rs.50
(b) for chits for a term of one year and above
(i) chit amount of value up to Rs.5,000	Rs.2.50 per subscriber or instalment whichever is higher subject to a minimum of Rs.50
(ii) for chit amount of value between Rs.5,001 and Rs.10,000	Rs.5 per subscriber or instalment whichever is higher subject to a minimum of Rs.50
(iii) for chit amount of Rs.10,001 and Rs.20,000	Rs.7 per subscriber or value between instalment whichever is higher subject to a minimum of Rs.50
(iv) for chit amount of value between Rs.20,001 and Rs.30,000	Rs.10 per subscriber or instalment whichever is higher subject to a minimum of Rs.50
(v) for chit amount of value between Rs.30,001 and Rs.40,000	Rs.12 per subscriber or instalment whichever is higher subject to a minimum of Rs.50
(vi) for chit amount of value between Rs.40,001 and Rs.50,000	Rs.15 per subscriber or instalment whichever is higher subject to a minimum of Rs.50
(vii) for chit amount of value exceeding Rs.50,000	Rs.20 per subscriber or instalment whichever is higher subject to a minimum of Rs.50

(2) * * *

(3) After Art.8, as so amended, the following Article and entries shall be inserted, namely:
"8-A. For filing balance sheets audited and certified by Chartered Accountant--(a) when the chit amount does not exceed Rs.500 .. Rs.10.00

(b) when the chit amount exceeds Rs.500 for the first Rs.500 as under sub-clause (a) and for every Rs.500 or part thereof in excess of Rs.500 subject to the maximum of Rs.250. The fee leviable under this clause shall not exceed Rs.250 .. Rs.5.00."

9. The challenge was mainly on the ground that the rates of fees fixed in Art.1 and Art.8-A in Appendix II to the Rules were disproportionately high having no nexus to the nature of services rendered and intended to augment revenue and partake of the character of tax and as such the levy suffered from the vice of arbitrariness, hostile discrimination and unreasonable restriction on trade. The High Court came to the conclusion that the necessary element of quid pro quo was absent and as such struck down the amendment on the said ground.

10. The High Court declared the amendment by which the registration fee was enhanced, as ultra vires, on the following reasoning:

"When a foreman starts a chit, under Sec.3 he has to apply for registration of the by-laws. It is only thereafter, he can approach the subscriber and get the chit agreements as prescribed under Sec.5 executed and file them under Sec.6. He cannot commence the business till he secures the certificate under Sec.7(2). Therefore, when an application is made for registration of by-laws, at that stage, Sec.3(3) authorises the Registrar to find out as to whether the by-laws are in accord with the provisions of the Act or the rules made thereunder. As to what the by-laws should provide, Rule 3 enumerates them. An application for registration is to be in Form 1 accompanied by fees set out in Appendix II. Hence, the number of the subscribers or the instalments, has no nexus with what are required to be done under Sec.3(3) by the Registrar. Whether they are more or less, it was only a question of furnishing particulars and recording them and no more. If for the entire period of the chit except the registration fee no other fee is demanded and the entire service rendered is covered by this demand alone, then the correlation claimed could be available. Sec.53 enables imposition of fees in respect of almost each one of the subsequent stages of the conduct of the chit whenever the authorities are to be approached or they are to exercise their powers. In the context of such provisions having been made in the Act, the registration fees claimed has to be restricted to what are required to be done under Sec.3(3)."

11. The High Court held Art.8-A to be invalid on the following reasoning:

"When rules themselves do not contemplate production of registers, books of accounts and other records, the claim made that pursuant to the filing of the balance sheet, records have to be verified and that the whole matter has got to be thoroughly examined is unacceptable. In such of those matters where irregularities are noticed, the Registrar can call for all the records and scrutinise them and thereafter initiate prosecution or take such other action. Such instances would arise in both categories. Hence, when the rules themselves contemplate different type of services to be rendered when Chartered Accountant's Certificates are filed, the fee imposable under Art.8-A cannot be the same as in Art.8 which contemplates more comprehensive services to be rendered. Therefore as rightly pleaded by the petitioners, the necessary element of quid pro quo is not existing and furthermore this is an unreasonable restriction on right of trade and the rate fixed is aimed at increasing general revenues."

12. The High Court relied upon the judgment of this Court in Kewal Krishan Puri v. State of Punjab, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1008: (1980)1 S.C.C. 416: (1979)1 S.C.R. 1217, wherein it was observed that a substantial portion of the amount collected on account of fees, must be shown with reasonable certainty as being spent for rendering services to justify the quid pro quo which is a distinguishing feature of 'fee' from 'tax'.

13. This Court in Sreenivasa General Traders v. State of A.P., A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 1246: (1983)4 S.C.C. 353, considered Kewal Krishan Puri v. State of Punjab, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1008: (1980)1 S.C.C. 416: (1979)1 S.C.R. 1217 and observed as under:

"The decision in Kewal Krishan Puri v. State of Punjab, A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1008: (1980)1 S.C.C. 416: (1979)1 S.C.R. 1217, does not lay down any legal principle of general applicability. The observation made therein seeking to quantify the extent of correlation between the amount of fee collected and the cost of rendition of service, namely, 'At least a good and substantial portion of the amount collected on account of fees, may be in the neighbourhood of two-thirds or three-fourths, must be shown with reasonable certainty as being spent for rendering services in the market to the payer of fee', appears to be an obiter. It was not intended to lay down a rule of universal application but it was a decision which must be confined to the special facts of that case."

14. This Court in several judgments over a period of 40 years has authoritatively crystallised the contradistinction between 'tax' and 'fee'. The judgments of this Court in Commissioner of H.R. & C.E., Madras v. Shri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar, (1954)1 M.L.J. 596: 1954 S.C.J. 335: 1954 S.C.R. 1005: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 282, H.I. Sudhundara Thirtha Swamiar v. Commissioner, H.R. & C.E. Mysore, A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 966: (1963)2 S.C.R. (Supp.) 302, Hingir Rampur Coal Company Ltd. v. State of Orissa, A.I.R. 1961 S.C. 459: (1961)2 S.C.R. 537, H.H. Shri Swamiji v. Commissioner, H.R. & C.E. Department, (1980)1 S.C.R. 368: 1980 S.C.C. (Tax) 16: (1979)4 S.C.C. 642, and Southern Pharmaceuticals and Chemicals, Trichur v. State of Kerala, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 1863: (1981)4 S.C.C. 391: 1981 S.C.C. (Tax) 320: (1982)1 S.C.R. 519, were considered by this Court in Municipal Corporation of Delhi v. Mohd. Yasin, A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 1617: (1983)3 S.C.C. 229: 1983 S.C.C. (Tax) 154: (1983)2 S.C.R. 999, wherein the Court speaking through Chinappa Reddy, J. held as under:

"What do we learn from these precedents? We learn that there is no generic difference between a tax and a fee, though broadly a tax is a compulsory exaction as part of a common burden, without promise of any special advantages to classes of taxpayers whereas a fee is a payment for services rendered, benefit provided or privilege conferred. Compulsion is not the hallmark of the distinction between a tax and a fee. That the money collected does not go into a separate fund but goes into the consolidated fund does not also necessarily make a levy a tax. Though a fee must have relation to the services rendered, or the advantages conferred, such relation need not be direct, a mere causal relation may be enough. Further, neither the incidence of the fee nor the service rendered need be uniform. That others besides those paying the fees are also benefited does not detract from the character of the fee. In fact, the special benefit or advantage to the payers of the fees may even be secondary as compared with the primary motive of regulation in the public interest. Nor is the court to assume the role of a cost accountant. It is neither necessary nor expedient to weigh too meticulously the cost of the services rendered etc. against the amount of fees collected so as to evenly balance the two. A broad relationship is all that is necessary. Quid pro quo in the strict sense is not the one and only true index of a fee; nor is it necessarily absent in a tax."

15. In Municipal Corporation of Delhi v. Mohd. Yasin, A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 1617: (1983)3 S.C.C. 229: 1983 S.C.C. (Tax) 154: (1983)2 S.C.R. 999, the Municipal Corporation of Delhi enhanced the slaughtering fee in respect of two categories of animals by eightfold. Some butchers of the city questioned the revision of rates on the ground that the proposed enhanced fee was wholly disproportionate to the cost of services and supervision and was in fact not a fee, but a tax. During the pendency of the writ petitions in the High Court, by virtue of an interim arrangement, the Municipal Corporation of Delhi was permitted to collect slaughter fee at double the rates (instead of 8 times) and as a result thereof the Corporation realised a sum of Rs.4,24,494. The budget of the Corporation showed a sum of Rs.2,56,000 as the expenditure involved in connection with the slaughter house. The High Court came to the conclusion that even if the original fee was doubled the amount realised would be more than sufficient to meet the expenditure involved and, therefore, there was no reason at all for increasing fee eightfold and so the proposed fee was not fee but a tax for which there is no legislative mandate. This Court allowed the appeal and set aside the judgment of the High Court. This Court clarified the concept of 'fee' which we have quoted above. We respectfully agree with the same.

16. The Act and the Rules provide a complete mechanism for the control, supervision and regulation of the 'chit fund' business in the State of Tamil Nadu. No person can start or conduct any 'chit' unless he registers the proposed bye-laws in accordance with the procedure prescribed. It is common knowledge that there are large number of subscribers to the 'chit fund' business. The Act and Rules primarily protect the subscribers and in the process help the proprietors to run the 'chit fund' business to their advantage. There are elaborate provisions under the Act and the Rules providing investigation into the functioning of the said business. The scheme of the Act and the Rules as detailed in the earlier part of the judgment shows that there is effective supervision and control at every stage of the functioning of the 'chit fund' business. The High Court grossly erred in holding that the number of the subscribers or the instalments has no nexus with the registration fee. Every subscriber has to enter into an agreement with the foreman who conducts the business on behalf of the proprietors. The object of the Act/Rules, obviously is to protect the interest of the subscribers. More the subscribers more the burden on the authorities under the Act/Rules and as a consequence more fee is required to meet the expenditure. It is no doubt correct that after registration of bye-laws, fees are payable under Sec.53 of the Act for the performance of various other functions by the Registrar and his staff, but that is justified in view of the scheme of the Act. The expectation of winning a draw or a bid at the auction and becoming rich overnight lures the lower-middle class and the poor to subscribe to the chit fund out of their savings or even by borrowing money. In such a situation apart from regulatory measures it is necessary to have strict control and supervision over 'chit fund' business. The Act and the Rules are operating with that objective. The counter-affidavit filed by the State before the High Court justified the enhancement of the registration fee inter alia on the following grounds:

"...Considering that in respect of chits of longer duration and larger number of instalments, greater amount of service had to be rendered in that, more minutes etc., were filed, it is equitable and fair to fix the fees for registration of bye-laws with regard to number of instalments or duration of chits. The fees were revised taking these facts into consideration. It has also to be verified whether the foreman has taken proper security for future payment of subscription from the prized subscriber, whether proper receipts were obtained for the payment of prize monies and on due dates, if not whether the prize amount has been deposited in a Bank as required by the Act by verifying receipts of deposit etc. The extracts filed in respect of removal, substitution and assignment etc. have also to be verified and in respect of higher chit amounts in long term chit for longer duration these transactions will be more and they impose greater responsibility on the Chit Registrar. The work connected with watching the filing of various documents by the foreman on the due dates and in proper form also takes considerable time...."

17. We are of the view that the High Court fell into error in quashing the impugned amendments. The enhanced fee, in this case, is justified on the legal as well as the factual anvil of quid pro quo. Apart from the appointment of the Registrar, its staff and various other functionaries, the scheme of the Act in its operation involves huge expenditure which is entirely met out of the Fee Fund. The fees collected under the Act have, therefore live nexus under the expenditure incurred for the benefit of the 'chit fund' business.

18. To justify Art.8-A prescribing fee for filing balance sheets by the chartered accountants it was stated as under:

"...I submit that pursuant to the filing of the balance sheet, records have to be verified. The balance sheet has also got to be examined in detail to find out whether it is in conformity with the objects of the chit and also whether the figures tally with regard to the collections and payments of prize amounts and whether the prize amount also correctly reflects the scope of each chit and whether the commission of the foreman has been correctly worked out. In short, the whole matter has got to be thoroughly examined to see whether that particular year's transactions fully reflect the scope of each chit and whether the collections and disbursements including the commission retained by the foreman have all been done in conformity with the Act and the Rules, since it is the subscriber's interest which is paramount. I submit that all these involve the services of the staff of the office of the Registrar."

19. The High Court was wholly unjustified in rejecting the above quoted reasoning for levying fee under Art.8-A. The High Court reached the conclusion that it was not required under the Rules to scrutinise and investigate the contents of the balance sheets submitted through the Chartered Accountants and as such it was not necessary to do. The High Court further found that since no scrutiny or examination of balance sheets was required to be done, no expenditure need be incurred and as such no fee for that purpose could be levied. We do not agree with the High Court reasoning. The Registrar is justified, rather duty-bound to act in furtherance of the objects of the Act and the Rules. Even otherwise when the Rules provide for filing of the balance sheets by the Chartered Accountants, it is necessary in the context of the rules and the Act to provide machinery to examine and verify the contents of the balance sheets. No fault can be found with the reasons given by the State for bringing in Art.8-A in Appendix II to the rules.

20. We, therefore, allow the civil appeals and set aside the judgment of the Madras High Court dated Madras 20, 1985. The writ petitions filed by the respondents-petitioners are dismissed with costs. We quantify the costs as Rs.20,000 to be paid jointly by all the respondents-petitioners in these case.

B.S. ---- Appeals allowed and petitions dismissed.

C.A.Nos.301 and 302 of 1976 6th March, 1992.

Jammi Raja Rao

...Appellant

v.

Sri Anjaneya Swami Temple Valu and others

...Respondents.

(A) Andhra Pradesh Charitable and Hindu Religious Institutions and Endowments Act (XVII of 1986), Sec. 77 - Public being allowed to visit a temple, if indicative that the trust is public trust.

It is no doubt true that the mere fact that the public is allowed to visit a temple or thakurdwara cannot necessarily indicate that the trust is public as opposed to private. But, as pointed out by the court in Deoki Nandan v. Murlidhar, (1957)1 M.L.J. (S.C.) 28: (1957)1 An.W.R. (S.C.) 28: 1956 S.C.R. 756: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 133: 1957 S.C.J. 75, if the endowment was in favour of the idol itself, proof of user by the public without interference would be cogent evidence that the dedication was in favour of the public. [Para 27]

(B) Constitution of India (1950), Art.136 - Concurrent finding that temple is public temple - Interference by Supreme Court - Scope for.

In the instant case the trial court as well as the High Court have found that the suit temple is a public temple. The finding is a finding of fact. The said finding is not open to further scrutiny by this Court unless it suffers from an error of law.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by S.C.Agrawal, J.:- These appeals by special leave directed against the judgment dated April 25, 1975 of the Andhra Pradesh High Court in Appeal Nos.87 and 362 of 1972, involve the question whether the Temple of Sri Anjaneya Swami (hereinafter referred to as 'the suit temple') situate at Valuthimmapuram in Peddapuram Taluk, East

Godavari District, of the State of Andhra Pradesh is a private temple and not a public temple and the appellant as the hereditary trustee of the suit temple is entitled to the possession of the temple and the properties attached to it.

2. After the enactment of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 1926 (Madras Act II of 1927), hereinafter referred to as 'the 1927 Act', Turanga Rao, father of the appellant, submitted an application (O.A.No.117 of 1934) under Sec.18 and 84 of the said Act wherein it was claimed that the suit temple is a private temple and the application was the hereditary trustee of the same. One M.Satyanarayana Murthy of Peddapuram also filed a petition before the Board alleging that the suit temple is a public temple and that he may be appointed as the trustee. The said application of Turanga Rao was dismissed by the Board of Commissioners constituted under the 1927 Act by order dated March 30, 1935, and it was held that the suit temple is a public temple in terms of Sec.9(12) of the said Act and that the Act was applicable to it and to its endowments. Turanga Rao filed a petition (O.P.No.15 of 1936) in the Court of District Judge of East Godavari for setting aside the order of the Board dated March 30, 1935 and to declare him as the hereditary trustee of the suit temple. In the said proceedings, Turanga Rao filed a petition (Ex.A-7 dated April 2, 1936) seeking to withdraw O.P.No.15 of 1936 on the ground that the post of trustee for the suit temple was now vacant and the Board was proposing to appoint him as the trustee. In view of the said application of Turanga Rao, the District Judge passed an order (Ex.A-8) dated April 2, 1936 whereby O.P.No.15 of 1936 was dismissed. It appears that thereafter, in 1936, Turanga Rao was appointed as a trustee of the temple for a period of five years. The said appointment of Turanga Rao as a trustee was not renewed on the expiry of the period of five years but he continued to be in possession of the suit temple and the properties attached to it till his death in 1946. After the death of Turanga Rao, the appellant came in possession of the same. Madras Act II of 1927 was replaced by Madras Religious and Charitable Endowments Act of 1951 (Madras Act 19 of 1951). On the creation of the State of Andhra Pradesh, the said Act in its application to the State of Andhra Pradesh, was styled as Andhra Pradesh (Andhra area) Hindu Religious and Endowments Act, 1951, hereinafter referred to as 'the 1951 Act'. The said Act was replaced by the Andhra Pradesh Charitable and Hindu Religious Institutions and Endowments Act, 1966 (Andhra Pradesh Act 17 of 1966), hereinafter referred to as 'the 1966 Act', which came into force on January 26, 1967.

3. The appellant moved an application (O.A.No.19 of 1967) under Sec.57 of the 1951 Act, corresponding to Sec.77 of the 1966 Act, whereby he pleaded that the nature and character of the suit temple be determined as a private temple and the appellant be declared as its hereditary trustee, Manager-cum-Archaka. The said application of the appellant was dismissed by the Deputy Commissioner, Endowments Department, Kakinada by order (Ex.A-10) dated August 30, 1969 whereby it was held that the appellant had not been able to establish his exclusive right over the suit temple nor had he been able to extract proof that the temple is a private one and that there was no evidence that the trusteeship of the temple is hereditary one. Thereupon, the appellant filed a suit (O.S.No.21 of 1970) in the Court of District Judge, East Godavari District, to declare the suit temple as a private temple and its trusteeship, managership-cum-archakaship is hereditary after setting aside the order dated August 30, 1969 passed by the Deputy Commissioner, Endowments Department, Kakinada. Another suit, which was originally numbered as O.S.No.41 of 1968, was filed by the Executive Officer of the suit temple for recovery of possession of the scheduled lands and ejecting the appellant therefrom and for directing the appellant to render the true and proper account of the net proceeds realised by him from the suit lands during the period of six years prior to the suit and for recovery of the said proceeds. The said suit was originally filed in the Subordinate Court, Kakinada, but it was withdrawn to the Court of District Judge, East Godavari District to be tried along with O.S.No.21 of 1970 and on such withdrawal, it was tried as O.S.No.108 of 1970 of the Court of District Judge, East Godavari District.

4. The case of the appellant in O.S.No.21 of 1970 filed by him was that the suit temple was founded and the idol was installed by the ancestors of the Jammi family for the exclusive worship of the Jammi family and there were no worshippers from the public and that certain lands mentioned in the annexed Schedule were also endowed by them for the upkeep of the temple and for performing 'Nithya Naivedya Deepa Dhooparadhana' and that the trusteeship, management and archakatvam vests solely in the Jammi family ever since the inception, devolving on the family members by the right of primogeniture and in the absence of descendants in any one branch, by testamentary appointment by the last office-holder, and that no outsider had succeeded to the office even by appointment. It was claimed that Jammi Chika Charyulu held the office of the trustee, manager-cum-Archaka since installation till 1862 and thereafter Jammi Mukhya Pranacharyulu Garu held it from 1862-73, Jammi Pedda Hanumantha Rao Garu from 1873-1917, Shrimati Jammi Munemma, widow of Mukhyapranacharyulu, discharged the functions from 1917-1934, Jammi Turanga Rao, the appellant's father, from 1934-1946 and that from 1946 onwards the appellant is discharging those functions. It was claimed that the suit temple is purely a private temple and the public as such have no legal right to access to the suit temple. As regards the proceedings which took place in 1935-36, the case of the appellant was that Jammi Turanga Rao did not care to place all the material showing the nature and character of the temple and hence the Board, by its order dated March 30, 1935, held that the suit temple was a public temple and further that although Jammi Turanga Rao had questioned the correctness of the order passed by the Board by preferring O.P.No.15 of 1936, he did not properly prosecute that matter and he jeopardised the interest of the suit temple as also of the hereditary trustees by bartering away all rights in a compromise whereunder he withdraw the said petition on condition of the Board appointing him as a trustee and that in doing so, Turanga Rao acted in gross dereliction of his duties as a hereditary trustee of a private temple since he had no authority to compromise and barter away valuable rights of the temple and the trust and that the said acts of Turanga Rao cannot in any manner bind his successor trustees and the trust and that the order passed by the District Judge dismissing O.P.No.15 of 1936 is not valid. The said suit was contested by the defendant-respondents who denied the allegation that the suit temple was built and idol was installed by the Jammi family and the suit temple was constructed on the land of the appellant for their exclusive worship and it was claimed that the suit temple area was founded by the public for the benefit of all Hindus. It was claimed that the suit temple is not a private temple but a public temple right from its inception and that the trusteeship, management-cum-archakavatam did not vest solely in the Jammi family and it did not devolve on the members of the Jammi family either by primogeniture or by testamentary appointment, in the absence of descendants in any one branch, on the members of the Jammi family. It was denied that the office of the trustee, manager-cum-archaka of the suit temple was held by persons mentioned in the plaint and it was claimed that during the periods mentioned in the plaint, several persons not belonging to Jammi family acted as trustees and further that even if some of the members of the Jammi family assumed management of the suit temple, it does not clothe the appellant with trusteeship much less hereditary trusteeship. It was also asserted that public have full access, right from its inception, to the suit temple and all the Hindus have been worshipping the deity in the suit temple. It was also stated that in spite of the efforts of the father of the appellant to secure an order in his favour by placing all the material, he could not succeed in showing that the suit temple is his family's private temple and that he was not guilty of negligence in prosecuting the proceedings before the Board as well as the original petition before the District Judge, but since the material was against his contention, the appellant's father had withdrawn the original petition in the Court of District Judge and that the decisions in the proceedings initiated by the appellant's father were binding on the appellant and the appellant was not entitled to lay claim once again for the relief asked for in the suit.

5. O.S.No.108 of 1970 filed by the Executive Officer proceeded on the basis that the scheduled properties belonging to the suit temple have been endowed to the temple in ancient times and that the appellant is a archaka in the temple and had been in the management of the suit lands and was unauthorisedly and unlawfully utilising the income of the scheduled lands for his own personal use and that the possession of the scheduled properties by the appellant is detrimental to the interest of the suit temple and that he is not entitled to be in possession of the properties. The said suit was contested by the appellant on substantially the same grounds which he raised in O.S.No.21 of 1970 filed by him.

6. By his common judgment dated January 10, 1972, the District Judge, East Godavari District, disposed of both the suits and O.S.No.21 of 1970 filed by the appellant was dismissed while O.S.No.108 of 1970 was decreed. It was held that the suit temple is a public temple and the appellant is not a hereditary trustee of the temple. The appellant was directed to render accounts of the net income realised for six years prior to the filing of O.S.No.108 of 1970 and it was also held that the plaintiff in the said suit was entitled to future profits till delivery of possession. The appellant filed Appeal Nos.87 and 362 of 1970 against the said judgment and decree of District Judge, East Godavari District. The said appeals were dismissed by the High Court by judgment dated April 25, 1975.

7. Shri Sitaramiah, learned counsel appearing for the appellant, has urged that the High Court has erred in holding that the suit temple is a public temple and not the private temple of the family of the appellant, and that in arriving at the said finding, the High Court has not applied the correct tests and has not properly considered the material documents produced by the appellant. Shri Sitaramiah has taken us through the relevant record and the evidence adduced by the parties. Before we refer to the same, we may briefly set out the principles of law that are applicable for determining whether an endowment is public or private.

8. In Deoki Nandan v. Murlidhar, (1957)1 M.L.J. (S.C.) 28; (1957)1 An.W.R. (S.C.) 28; 1956 S.C.R. 756; A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 133; 1957 S.C.J. 75, this Court has indicated these principles. It has been observed: (S.C.R. pp.759-60)

"The distinction between a private and a public trust is that whereas in the former the beneficiaries are specific individuals, in the latter they are the general public or a class thereof. While in the former the beneficiaries are persons who are ascertained or capable of being ascertained, in the latter they constitute a body which is incapable of ascertainment."

9. While dealing with the question, who are the beneficiaries when a temple is built, idol installed therein and properties endowed therefor, it has been stated: (S.C.R. pp.762-63)

"When once it is understood that the true beneficiaries of religious endowments are not the idols but the worshippers, and that the purpose of the endowment is the maintenance of that worship for the benefit of the worshippers, the question whether an endowment is private or public presents no difficulty. The cardinal point to be decided is whether it was the intention of the founder that specified individuals are to have the right of worship at the shrine, or the general public or any specified portion thereof. In accordance with this theory, it has been held that when property is dedicated for the worship of a family idol, it is a private and not a public endowment, as the persons who are entitled to worship at the shrine of the deity can only be the members of the family, and that is an ascertained group of individuals. But where the beneficiaries are not members of a family or a specified individual, then the endowment can only be regarded as public, intended to benefit the general body of worshippers."

10. In that case temple was held to be a public temple. One of the considerations which weighed with the Court in arriving at this conclusion was that the idol was installed not even in the precincts of the residential quarters but in a separate building constructed for that very purpose on a vacant site. It was observed that (S.C.R. p.770) "it is a factor to be taken into account in deciding whether an endowment is private or public whether the place of worship is located inside a private house or a public building."

11. Relying on this decision, Shri Sitaramiah has submitted that in the instant case, the suit temple is situate in the private residential house of the appellant and this aspect has been omitted from consideration by the High Court. The said submission of Shri Sitaramiah is, however, not borne out by the evidence on record, which shows that the suit temple is located at Valuthimmapuram and the appellant's residential house is at Peddapuram and in Peddapuram there is another temple dedicated to Anjaneya Swami in the residence of the appellant. In his deposition, as P.W.1, the appellant has stated:

"The suit temple is the last installation by him near a forest in Valuthimmapuram."

"Along with the installation of the suit idol, Hanumatdeekshitulu Garu installed one idol in our house itself. Chikkaryulu, that is, the son of Hanumatdeekshitulu, constructed a temple for that idol also, and dedicated his self-acquired property to the deity."

"Within 2 miles from the suit temple, there is no village, but within half a mile from the suit temple, there is harijanawada."

12. During cross-examination, P.W.1 has further clarified:

"Hanumatdeekshitulu, installed one temple at Kotipalli, another at Vijeswaram, one at Dowleswaram, one in our own house and the other is the suit temple."

"I and my ancestors belong to Peddapuram. Valuthimmapuram is 2 miles to Peddapuram."

13. It would thus be clear that the temple in the residential house of the appellant at Peddapuram is different from the suit temple situate at Valuthimmapuram and the suit temple is not situated in the residential house of the appellant.

14. We may now briefly refer to the documents on which strong reliance has been placed by Shri Sitaramiah, namely, Exs.A-4, A-6 and A-9. Ex. A-4 is a partition deed executed in 1867 by Jammi Mukhya Pranacharyulu and Jammi Bindu Medhava Rao, sons of Jammi Hanumantha Charyulu, and the sons of their deceased brothers Chikka Charyulu, Venkata Charyulu and Vyasarayya Charyulu wherein it is stated that Chikka Charyulu purchased some Inam Jyroythi lands in the names of Addanki Rammanna Pantulu and Venkata Krishna, the father of his son-in-law Yerramilli Kameswara Rao and got the same dedicated by them to the suit temple at Valuthimmapuram and that Chikka Charyulu himself had been exercising Saravadhikaratvam and Dharmakarthurvaam and as he became old, he appointed his brother, Bindu Madhava Rao to do service to Shri Anjaneya Swami enshrined at Valuthimmapuram. It is further stated that Yerramilli Kameswara Rao had no male issue and his daughter Munemma alias Ramanamma, was given in second marriage to Mukhya Pranacharyulu and as per the settlement at the time of marriage the Dharmakarthurvam and the properties belonging to Shri Anjaneya Swami in Valuthimmapuram should after the death of Chikka Charyulu pass to Mukhya Pranacharyulu and that after the death of Chikka Charyulu the entire properties standing in the name of Shri Anjaneya Swami passed to Mukhya Pranacharyulu and he is enjoying the same and since Mukhya Pranacharyulu has become old and has no male issue, it is settled that Mukhya Pranacharyulu, himself, during his life time shall appoint as Dharmakartha any member from out of our family only but should not appoint any other person and the Dharmakarthurvam of Shri Anjaneya Swami shall remain in our family alone and that our family members alone shall perform the worship of the deity without powers of disposition by way of gift and sale and they shall enjoy the said lands truly from son to grandson and so on in succession. In the said deed it was also stated that if the God wills otherwise, the Dharmakarthurvam of the deity at Valuthimmapuram and the entire property belonging to the said deity shall pass hereditary, by rule of primogeniture, in the family of the late Chikka Charyulu and from then onwards the individual concerned himself shall be the Dharmakartha and shall attend to the worship of the deity and maintain the family.

15. Ex.A-6 is the will dated August 13, 1973 executed by Jammi Mukhya Pranacharyulu whereby the trusteeship relating to Sri Anjaneya Swami at Thimmapuram which was in his possession was entrusted to Chinna Hanumantha Rayudu and Pedda Hanumantha Rayudu.

16. Ex.A-9 is an extract from the register prepared under Sec.38 of the 1927 Act in respect of the suit temple by Jammi Turanga Rao, the father of the appellant, who was trustee of suit temple at that time. Against column 4(a) relating to names of previous trustees, the periods of their previous service, their addresses and dates of assuming of the said posts and their particulars, it has been mentioned: (1) Jammi Chikka Charyulu till the year 1862; (2) Jammi Mukhya Pranacharyulu till the year 1873; (3) Jammi Pedda Hanumantha Rao Garu till the year 1917; (4) Jammi Munemma alias Ravanamma till the year 1931; and (5) Jammi Turanga Rao till the year 1934. Against column 4(b) relating to whether the suit Temple is under the control of or whether it is managed as per the scheme approved by the Court or whether it is under the management of the independent trustees who were not governed by the such scheme whether the said trustees are appointed by as per the terms of deeds or as per the custom other particulars, it has been stated: "As per the deed executed in 1873 by Jammi Mukhya Pranacharyulu and subsequently since 1934 onwards acted as de facto trustee and as per the orders issued by the Board of Trustees in March, 1936."

17. While considering whether any weight could be attached to the above-mentioned documents, the High Court has pointed out that by order Ex.B-7 passed in O.A.No.117 of 1934, the suit temple was declared as public temple by the Board and O.P.No.15 of 1936 filed by Turanga Rao, the father of the appellant, for setting aside the said order of the Board was dismissed since the said petition was withdrawn by Turanga Rao. In this context, the High Court has also referred to the documents Exs.B-1, B-2, Ex.4, Ex.B-5. Ex.B-1 is the certified copy of Inam Register of the lands in T.D.No.1620 in Village Valuthimmapuram. Under column No.16 relating to particulars regarding the name of the present owner there is the entry: "Sri Anjaneya Swami Varu Manager Yerramilli Kameswara Rao". This relates to the period 1869-70. Ex.B-2 is certified copy of Inam Register No.36, Village Valuthimmapuram relating to suit lands in T.D.No.192 containing entries of the year 1860. Under column 2 relating to General Class to which the Inam belongs, it is mentioned, "Devadayem Religious Institutions". Under column 7 relating to description of Inam, it is stated: "Devadayem granted for the daily offerings". Under column 12 relating to written instruments in support of the claim it is stated: "Deed of sale executed by Godavari Juggana to Yerramilli Venkata Kroostnama on October 1, 1844, selling this Inam of 5 Jooms (not clear) for 44 Rupees". Under column 16 relating to particulars regarding present owner it is mentioned: "Vali Timma Pooram Anjaneya Swami Manager Yerramilli Camaswara Rao". Under column 19, relating to surviving heirs of the present incumbent, it is stated: "Thus Inam was purchased by Yerramilli Venkata Kroostnama the father of the present Dharmakarthha or Manager Yerramilli Kameswara Rao from Jagana son of the party in column 14 for 44 Rs. Document in support of this sale is produced". In column 21, relating to Deputy Collector's opinion and recommendation, it is stated: "In the account for fasli 1241, it is stated that this Inam of 5 Jooms was older (not clear) as this is an old Inam it is to be confirmed to the temple as long as it is maintained properly". This endorsement bears the signature of Deputy Collector and the date January 11, 1860. Ex.B-4, is certified copy of the entry in the Inam Register 'B' for the years 1312 Fasli for Village Valuthimmapuram wherein in column 1 relating to particulars of Inam, it is stated: "income from the temple". Under column 12 relating to name and profession of Pattadar entered in the Inam Register it is mentioned: "Sri Anjaneya Swami Varu (Deity)". Similarly Ex.B-5 is the certified copy of Inam Register No.31 of Valuthimmapuram village wherein in column No.2 relating to the name of the Inamdar there is the entry "Sri Anjaneya Swamivaru", and in column No.16 relating to names of the Managers of Religious Endowments and Inams, Archakas and trustee, there is the entry "Manager Yerramilli Kameswara Rao". This entry relates to the year 1808 Fasli (1901 A.D.). After referring to these documents, the High Court has observed:

"These documents, which relate to the suit temple and the suit lands, clearly show that the members of the Jammi family were not mentioned either as trustees or managers of the suit temple or as the persons in possession and enjoyment of the suit lands, though they mention that Anjaneya swami as the pattaholder of the said lands and Yerramilli Kameswara Rao as the manager or as Dharmakarthha of the temple and its lands. If the plaintiff's predecessors were in possession of the lands described in the suit schedule of O.S.No.108 of 1970, they would have paid taxes and the plaintiff could have proved the possession and enjoyment by filing the necessary documents. Not even a single land revenue receipt was produced by the plaintiff to show that the land revenue or the quit rent was paid by the plaintiff's father and forefathers. In the absence of any such documents and in the face of Exs.B-1, B-2, B-4, and B-5 it is clear that the members of the Jammi family never dealt with the suit lands or with the suit temple in the manner as mentioned in Exs.A-4 and A-6 or in Ex.A-9 and that Exs.A-4 and A-6 were never acted upon by the Jammi family."

18. The High Court has further observed:

"In view of Exs.B-1, B-2, B-4 and B-5, it is difficult to accept the plaintiff's case that the lands which were endowed to the temple were purchased by Chikkacharyulu with his own funds. Whatever may be the recitals in Exs. A-4 and A-6, it is clear that there is no iota of evidence to show that in fact the plaintiff's father's predecessors acted as hereditary trustees and enjoyed the suit lands as mentioned in Exs.A-4 and A-6. On the other hand, Exs.B-1, B-2, B-4 and B-5 make it abundantly clear that Yerramilli Venkatakrishnamma and Yerramilli Kameswara Rao were acting as Dharmakarthas or managers of the suit temple and the suit lands. Hence Exs.A-4 and A-6 were never acted upon. Thus Exs.A-4 and A-6 are of no consequence."

19. We are unable to hold that the High Court was not justified in preferring to place reliance on the entries in the Inam Register (Exs.B-1, B-2, B-4 and B-5) as compared to Ex.A-4 and Ex.A-6 which are documents executed by the members of the appellant's family and Ex.A-9, the register prepared by Turanga Rao, the father of the appellant after his appointment as a trustee under the 1927 Act. Laying stress on the importance of the entries in the Inam Registers, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, in Arunachalam Chetty v. Venkatachalapathi Guruswamigal, 37 M.L.J. 460: (1919) L.R. 46 I.A. 204: A.I.R. 1919 P.C. 62, has observed: (I.A. pp.217-18)

"It is true that the making of this Register was for the ultimate purpose of determining whether or not the lands were tax free. But it must not be forgotten that the preparation of this (Inam) Register was a great act of State, and its preparation and contents were the subject of much consideration under elaborately detailed reports and minutes. It is to be remembered that the Inam Commissioners through their officials made inquiry on the spot, heard evidence and examined documents, and with regard to each individual property the Government was put in possession not only of the conclusion come to as to whether the land was tax free but of a statement of the history and tenure of the property itself."

20. It was held that they could not fail to attach "the utmost importance, as part of the history of the property, to the information set forth in the Inam Register". These observations were reiterated by this Court in Narayan Bhagwantrao Gosavi Balajiwalale v. Gopal Vinayah Gosavi, (1960)1 S.C.R. 773, 780: A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 100.

21. Shri Sitaramiah has placed reliance on the decision of this Court in The Poohari Fakir Sadavarthy of Bondilipuram v. Commissioner Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments, (1962)2 S.C.R. (Supp.) 276: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 510: (1962)2 An.L.T. 274, wherein after referring to the decision of the Privy Council in Arunachalam Chetty v. Venkatachalapathi Guruswamigal, 37 M.L.J. 460: (1919) L.R. 46 I.A. 204: A.I.R. 1919 P.C. 62, it was observed (S.C.R. p.291)

"The observations of the Privy Council in Arunachalam Chetty v. Venkatachalapathi Guruswamigal, 37 M.L.J. 460: (1919) L.R. 46 I.A. 204: A.I.R. 1919 P.C. 62, that in the absence of the original grant the Inam Register is of great evidentiary value, does not mean that the entry or entries in any particular column or columns be accepted at their face value without giving due consideration to other matters recorded in the entry itself."

22. In the present case, it cannot be said that there is an ambiguity in the entries in the Inam Registers. They indicate that the lands attached to the suit temple were purchased by Yeramilli Venkata Kroostnama, the father of Yerramilli Kameswara Rao, and Yerramilli Kameswara Rao was in possession as Dharam Karta or Manager and that the lands were entered in the said Registers as property of the deity, namely Shri Anjaneya Swami and the Inam was "Devadayam" for the religious institution and was granted to the temple as long as it was maintained properly. These entries relate to the years 1860, 1869-70, 1901 and state that Yerramilli Kameswara Rao was the Manager of the suit temple in these years and the lands were granted in Inam for the maintenance of the temple. 23. Apart from the aforesaid documentary evidence, there is oral evidence of D.Ws.1 to 4. D.W.1, Bachala Chandrayya, is a Harijan residing in Valuthimmapuram. He has stated:

"People from Kondapalli used to visit the temple. Settbalijas from my village used to visit the temple. Kurukuri Subbanna of Rayabhupalapatnam, for 3 years, got the pujas performed in Karteeka Masam in the suit temple and also arranged feasting. One Kittamsetti Gangaraju of Peddapuram, a Devangi by community presented eyes to the idol."

On cross-examination, he has stated:

"Some people used to offer Namaskaram to God, standing out side of the road, and some people used to go inside the temple. P.W.1 used to lock the temple and keep the key in a niche and whoever wanted to enter the temple in the absence of P.W.1, used to open the temple with the key from the niche, and used to pay homage and go after locking and keeping the key in the niche."

24. Similarly, D.W.2, Pithani Subbarao, who belongs to Valuthimmapuram, has stated:

"I am a Settibaliju. I am in the habit of visiting the temple along with other members of my community..... Not only the people of my village, but also the people of the neighbouring villages visit the temple."

On cross-examination, he has stated:

"When P.W.1 leaves the temple, he leaves the key in the niche so that anybody that visits the temple in his absence, may open the lock with the key and break coconut and lock it again and go away."

25. D.W.3, Kurukuri Subbanna of Village Rājabhaopalapatam has stated:

"On auspicious days, I used to get Abhishekam performed by the Archaka. For three years, I arranged Santarpana in Karteek Masam in the suit temple."

On cross-examination, he has stated:

"I arranged Santarpana not only for my workers but also for villagers, and the persons belonging to my village in the suit temple."

26. D.W.4, Duvva Raju of Village Anuru Kon-dapalli has stated:

"While passing in front of the suit temple, I and other villagers offer homage to the God, and break coconuts. It is not the exclusive temple of P.W.1 and it is open to all."

On cross-examination, he has stated:

"I used to go to the temple at 10.00 a.m. There used to be one by that time. Sometimes, it used to be locked, and sometimes it used to be kept open. The keys used to be kept in the niche."

27. It is no doubt true that "the mere fact that the public is allowed to visit a temple or thakurdwara cannot necessarily indicate that the trust is public as opposed to private" Babu Bhagwan Din v. Gir Har Saroop, (1940)1 M.L.J. 1: (1939) L.R. 67 I.A. 1: A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 7. But, as pointed out by this Court in Deoki Nandan v. Murlidhar, (1957)1 M.L.J. (S.C.) 28: (1957)1 An.W.R. (S.C.) 28: 1956 S.C.R. 756: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 133: 1957 S.C.J. 75, if the endowment was in favour of the idol itself "proof of user by the public without interference would be cogent evidence that the dedication was in favour of the public". The entries in the Inam Registers mentioned above (Exs.B-1, B-2, B-4 and B-5) indicate that the dedication in the present case was in favour of the idol (Sri Anjaneya Swami).

28. While considering the question whether the suit temple is a public temple or a private temple, it cannot be ignored that the suit temple falls in the area which was formerly part of Madras Presidency. In the greater part of the Madras Presidency, where private temples are practically unknown, the presumption is that temples and their endowments form public religious trusts. Exception is made in respect of Malabar, where the large tarwards often established private temples for their own use and there is no presumption one way or the other. (Mundacheri Koman v. Thachangat Puthan Vittil Achuthan Nair, 67 M.L.J. 788: L.R. 61 I.A. 405, 408: A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 230.) In T.V. Mahalinga Iyer v. State of Madras, (1981)1 S.C.C. 445: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 2036, it has been observed that so far as Tamil Nadu is concerned there is initial presumption that a temple is a public one, it being up to the party who claims that it is a private temple, to establish that fact affirmatively and this initial presumption must be rebutted by clinching testimony and the crucial question is as to whether the public worship in the temple as of right. In the instant case, we find that the said presumption, instead of being rebutted by the appellant, is reinforced by the entries in the Inam Registers as well as by the oral evidence of D.Ws.1 to 4 with regard to public having free access to the suit temple for the purpose of worshipping the deity.

29. As pointed out by this Court in Narayan Bhagwantrao Gosavi Balajiware v. Gopal Vinayah Gosavi, (1960)1 S.C.R. 773, 780: A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 100, the finding that the suit temple is a public temple and not a private one is a finding of fact. In the instant case, the trial court as well as the High Court have found that the suit temple is a public temple. The said finding is not open to further scrutiny by this Court unless it suffers from an error of law. We have examined the contentions urged by Shri Sitaramiah to assail this finding, but we do not find any merit in the same. We, therefore, uphold the finding recorded by the High Court that the suit temple is a public temple and not a private one and that the appellant has failed to establish his case that he is a hereditary trustee of the same.

30. Shri Sitaramiah has urged that even if the suit temple is held to be a public temple, the appellant has acquired title over the suit lands by prescription inasmuch as after the death of his father, Jammi Turanga Rao, in 1946 he has been in possession of the suit property in his own right and that O.S.No.108 of 1970 was filed only in 1968, long after the expiry of the prescribed period of limitation. Shri Sitaramiah has conceded that the plea of limitation was not raised by the appellant at any stage earlier but he argued that in view of the express provision contained in Sec.3 of the Limitation Act, 1963, it is permissible for the appellant to raise the plea before this Court in these appeals and in this context he placed reliance on the decision of the Privy Council in Raja Har Narain Singh v. Chaudhrain Bhagwant Kuar, L.R. 18 I.A. 55: I.L.R. 13 All. 300, and the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Troilokya Nath Basu v. Jyoti Perkash Nandi, I.L.R. (1903)30 Cal. 761: 8 C.W.N. 251. In support of his submission that rights can be acquired in property of a religious and charitable trust by adverse possession, Shri Sitaramiah has placed reliance on the decisions of the Privy Council in Balwant Rao Bishwant Chandra Chor v. Purun Mal Chaube, L.R. 10 I.A. 90: I.L.R. 6 All. 1, Ambalavana Pandara Sannidhi v. Meenakshi Sundareswarar Devasthanam (by its Manager), L.R. 47 I.A. 191: A.I.R. 1921 P.C. 97: 25 C.W.N. 1, Lala Hem Chand v. Lala Pearey Lal, (1943)1 M.L.J. 11: A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 64: 47 C.W.N. 46 and the decision of this Court in Sri Sarangadevar Peria Matam v. Ramaswamy Gounder, (1966)1 S.C.R. 908: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 1603. Shri Nambiar, the learned counsel for the respondent has, on the other hand, submitted that since the appellant obtained possession over the suit properties as the legal representative of Turanga Rao, who was the trustee, the bar of limitation would not apply in view of Sec.10 of the Limitation Act, 1963. In our opinion, the objection with regard to the bar of limitation was rightly not raised by the appellant before the lower courts in view of the provisions contained in Sec.94 of the 1951 Act and in Sec.103 of the 1966 Act. Sec.94 of the 1951 Act provided as under:

"Nothing contained in any law of limitation for the time being in force shall be deemed to vest in any person the property or funds of any religious institution which had not vested in such person or his predecessor-in-title before the commencement of this Act."

Sec.103 of the 1966 Act reads as under:

"103. Property of charitable or religious institution or endowment not to vest under the law of Constitution after commencement of this Act: Nothing contained in any law of limitation for the time being in force shall be deemed to vest in any person the property or funds of any charitable or religious institution or endowment which had not vested in such person or his predecessor-in-title before the September 30, 1951 in the Andhra Area of the State and on the date of commencement of this Act in the remaining areas of this State."

31. The suit temple falls in the Andhra area of the State of Andhra Pradesh and in view of Sec.103, the relevant date for considering whether a right has been acquired by prescription is September 30, 1951. In order to succeed the appellant would have to establish that he had acquired the right over the suit properties by prescription before September 30, 1951. Shri Sitaramiah does not dispute that possession of Jammi Turanga Rao, father of the appellant, was not adverse to the trust in view of his having been appointed as the Trustee in 1936. Adverse possession on behalf of the appellant has been claimed after the death of his father in 1946. Even if it be assumed that the possession of the appellant was adverse ever since 1946, it cannot be said that he had acquired his title over the suit properties by adverse possession before September 30, 1951. In this view of the matter, it cannot be held that the appellant has acquired title over the suit properties by adverse possession. In these circumstances, we do not consider it necessary to go into the question whether in view of Sec.10 of the Limitation Act the appellant cannot claim title by adverse possession since he obtained possession of the suit property as the legal representative of Jammi Turanga Rao who was in possession of the suit property as Trustee.

32. Shri Sitaramiah has lastly contended that Ex.A-4 shows that after meeting the expenses for the upkeep of the deity, the income from the suit property was to be used for the benefit of his family which means that there was only a partial dedication of the property in favour of the deity. The submission of Shri Sitaramiah is that in view of the fact that the dedication was only partial, the property retained its original private and secular character and that there was only a charge on the common obligation used as part of the income for the upkeep of the deity and therefore, the said property attached to the temple cannot be regarded as the trust property. reliance has been placed on the decision of this Court in S.Shanmugam Pillai v. K.Shanmugam Pillai, (1973)2 S.C.C. 312: (1973)1 S.C.R. 570, 582, 583. Since we have not accepted the case set up by the appellant on the basis of the aforesaid document and have found that in view of the entries in the Inam Registers, there was complete dedication of the property to the deity, it cannot be held that there was only a partial dedication of the suit property and the property continued to retain its private and secular character.

33. In the result, the appeals fail and are accordingly dismissed with costs.

C.A.No.2446 of 1991 6th May, 1992.

Mrs.Payal Ashok Kumar Jindal ...Appellant
v.

Captain Ashok Kumar Jindal ...Respondent.

Family Courts Act (LXVI of 1984), Sec.10 - Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.5, Rules 9, 10, 20 and 21 - Natural Justice - Principles of - Divorce proceedings pending before Family Court, Pune - Wife filing petition before Supreme Court for transfer of case from Pune to Family Court, Delhi - Interim stay granted - Transfer petition dismissed and stay vacated - Thereafter notices sent by Family Court Pune, to wife at her addresses at Noida and Delhi coming back with endorsement 'not found' - Substituted service in newspaper published - Thereafter ex parte order of divorce passed - Legality.

Held:- In the facts and circumstances of this case, the wife was justified in her assumption that the proceedings before the Family court, Pune, would be resumed after fresh notice to the parties. The applicability of the rules of natural justice depends upon the facts and circumstances of the case. In this case fair play and the interest of justice required the issuance of a fresh notice to the parties after the stay order was vacated by the Supreme Court. [Para 12]

The Family Court sent two registered notices to the appellant at her Noida address and also at the address given by her in the proceedings before the Supreme Court. Unfortunately, both the notices came back with the endorsement that the appellant could not be found on the given addresses. This is not material on the record to reach a conclusion that the appellant refused to receive the notices. There is also nothing on the record to show as to whether the postal authorities made any efforts to deliver the registered letters to any of the appellant's relations at the given addresses. The courts below are wholly unjustified in holding that the appellant refused to receive the notices and further that the said notices could have been received by any of her relations on the given addresses. After the notices sent by registered post were received back, the Family Court did not make any attempt to serve the appellant through the process of the Court. The appellant was no stranger to the respondent. She was his wife. It could not have been difficult for him to find out the address where she was staying. Under the circumstances, resort to the substituted service by way of publication in the newspaper was not justified. The ex parte order of divorce must therefore be set aside. [Paras 12, 13, and 14]

C M. Chopra, for Appellant.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Kuldip Singh, J.:- His parents advertised for "homely non-medico" bride. Her parents responded. Marriage took place on January 24, 1988 at Noida near Delhi. They hardly lived as husband and wife at Pune for about seven months when on August 16, 1988 the husband filed a petition under Sec.13 of the Hindu Marriage Act for dissolution of marriage on the ground of cruelty. He alleged "she had a habit of smoking" and "it was found that she was in the habit of drinking and even once came drunk to the applicant's house and abused everybody" He further alleged "it was found by the applicant that she was working as a model prior to marriage and he found few pictures of the respondent in bikini and semi-nude clothes in magazines". She vehemently denied the allegations and claimed that she was a homely, vegetarian, non-smoking, teetotalter and faithful housewife. The Family Court at Pune proceeded ex parte and granted divorce-decree by the order dated November 30, 1989. Wife's application for setting aside the ex parte decree was dismissed by the Family Court on June 24, 1990. The High Court by its judgment dated October 10/11, 1990 upheld the findings of the Family Court with the modification that in place of decree for dissolution of marriage it granted a decree for judicial separation. This appeal by way of special leave is by the wife against the judgments of the courts below.

2. During the pendency of the divorce-proceedings before Family Court, Pune, the wife filed a petition, on May 1, 1989, before this Court seeking transfer of the case from the Family Court, Pune to Delhi. This Court granted ad interim stay of the proceedings before the Family Court, Pune. The stay remained operative till September 11, 1989 when this Court dismissed the transfer petition and vacated the stay. Thereafter the husband appeared before the Family Court on September 15, 1989 whereas the appellant-wife remained absent. Notices were sent by registered post to the wife on her address at Noida and also at her Delhi address given by her in the proceedings before this Court. The notices came back with the remarks "not found". The family Court ordered substituted service and a notice was published in the "Times of India" New Delhi of date October 24, 1989 asking the wife to appear before the Family Court on November 16, 1989 or the proceedings would be taken ex parte. On November 16, 1989 the Family Court ordered ex parte proceedings. The issues were framed on November 21, 1989, the evidence of the husband was recorded on November 25, 1989 and the judgment was pronounced on November 30, 1989.

3. The appellant filed an application dated December 18, 1989 for setting aside the ex parte divorce-decree wherein she stated that after she was forced to leave her matrimonial-home at Pune, she was residing with her parents at Noida. She further stated that in October/November, 1989 she had gone to reside with her brother at Delhi. According to her, she applied to the Army Authorities claiming maintenance out of her husband's salary. Respondent-husband is an Army officer. The Army authorities sent a letter dated December 14, 1989 to her father wherein it was mentioned that his daughter's application for maintenance allowance could not be entertained because the husband had already obtained a divorce-decree from the court. A copy of the Family Court judgment granting divorce-decree to the husband was also annexed to the letter. The appellant claims that for the first time, on or about December 14, 1989, she came to know through her father that the respondent had already been granted an ex parte divorce-decree by the Family Court. The appellant in her application inter alia stated as under:

"The applicant submits that the applicant did not receive any notice/letter/summons or communication from this Hon'ble Court's office. Even there was no intimation given by postal authorities and the applicant honestly states that till the receipt of the letter from the Army H.Q., New Delhi, she was not aware of the date of proceeding. The applicant submits, the applicant was under bona fide belief that she will receive a notice from this Hon'ble Court. As such and being far from Pune, either in Noida (U.P.) or at New Delhi, it was not possible for her to approach this Hon'ble Court for any enquiry since she was also not permitted to appear through the lawyer..... At any rate and in any event, the applicant also did not come across the public notice published in the "Times of India", New Delhi on October 24, 1989 as stated in the decree. The applicant submits, the applicant had every intention to resist the marriage petition filed by the opponent since the same was absolutely false, frivolous and out and out false, and has been resisted by the applicant by filing written statement, preliminary objections including to approach the Supreme Court of India. The intention of the applicant was clear. The applicant submits, the applicant was also advised by her Advocate that she will receive a fresh notice in due course of time after the stay was vacated by the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India from this Hon'ble Court. The applicant states, she resides at a far long distance from Pune. She was also refused any assistance of lawyer. The applicant has no relation or any representative who can look after her in the present proceeding in Pune. It was in these circumstances, the applicant was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing in the marriage petition proceeding No.561 of 1989 and as such the said decree is required to be set aside..... The applicant states, the applicant is unable to maintain herself, she has no source of income.... The applicant submits, because of the passing of ex parte decree, she has been refused maintenance allowance. The applicant also prays for granting of maintenance allowance pending final disposal of this application."

4. The Family Court dismissed the application for setting aside ex parte divorce-decree on the following reasoning:

"But where the party itself knows that stay obtained by it has been vacated, there appears no warrant for the proposition that again a notice is required to be given to the said party. I do not think that such advice was really given to the applicant. The applicant has not produced any evidence to the effect that she received such advice from a lawyer. It is her own statement. It is a self-serving statement and can hardly be believed. I think that if the applicant was really keen and desirous to contest matrimonial petition, she would have at once made enquiries to find out as to when the next date for hearing in this court was fixed after her application for transfer of the case was dismissed by the Supreme Court and the stay obtained by her was vacated. The order of vacating the stay was passed on September 11, 1989 by the Hon'ble Supreme Court and the applicant knew fully well about it. The opponent who had also appeared in the Supreme Court in connection with that matter did appear in this Court on September 15, 1989. The record of P.A.No.561 of 1989 shows that opponent applied for issuing of notice to the present applicant. The notice was issued by registered post on two separate addresses. One of the addresses was the one shown by applicant herself in the Supreme Court petition and the other address was the one which was admitted to be her address in the matrimonial petition (which was address of her father at Delhi). Both these notices were sent by registered post in due course. The court waited till return of this notice. On both these envelopes postal authorities have endorsed that the present applicant was not found on these addresses. The opponent had, therefore, made application that the applicant was avoiding to take notice and hence substituted service by publishing in the "Times of India" be made. Accordingly, a notice was published as per order of the Court on opponent's application..... Thus the contention of the respondent that she had no notice of the further proceeding in marriage petition does not appear convincing. As stated already in the first instance, there was no necessity for her to wait for receipt of the notice in the circumstances of the present case. The notices sent to her were obviously evaded, otherwise there was no reason why the applicant was found on either of the addresses which she admits to be the correct addresses. Even if she was not present, there was no reason why other major members of the family did not accept these notices. And lastly the publication of the notice in one of the most widely circulated newspaper at Delhi was sufficient notice to the applicant."

5. The High Court upheld the reasoning and the conclusions reached by the Family Court and dismissed the appeals filed by the wife.

6. The respondent appeared before us in person and himself argued his case. The learned counsel for the appellant raised the following points for our consideration:

(a) That the Family Court and the High Court grossly erred in dismissing the application filed by the appellant for setting aside the ex parte proceedings;

(b) that the divorce-petition was filed hardly seven months after the marriage. Sec.14 of the Hindu Marriage Act provides 'it shall not be competent for any court to entertain any petition for dissolution of a marriage by a decree of divorce, unless at the date of the presentation of the petition one year has elapsed since the date of the marriage'. The divorce petition should have been dismissed as not competent in terms of Sec.14 of the Hindu Marriage Act;

(c) that even on merits the divorce-decree is based on no evidence. That allegations in the divorce-petition are wholly vague. In any case the evidence of Major Ved Prakash being wholly interested and contrary to the record the courts below fell into grave error in accepting serious allegations against the appellant on the basis of his evidence;

(d) that the High Court acted illegally in substituting the decree of divorce to that of a decree for judicial separation. The High Court should have dismissed the divorce-petition.

7. We may take up the first point.

8. The appellant filed written statement before the Family Court, Pune vehemently denying the allegations made against her by the respondent. She also raised preliminary objections regarding the maintainability of the divorce petition. She filed a transfer petition before this Court which was dismissed in September, 1989. She filed another transfer petition which was dismissed by this Court on April 12, 1990 with the following observations Payal Ashok Kumar Jindal v. Ashok Kumar Jindal, Transfer Petition (Civil) Nos.318-19 of 1990, decided on April 12, 1990:

"It is open to the petitioner to move the High Court under Sec.24 Code of Civil Procedure for consideration of her prayer that the case be transferred to another Judge. On the merits of this prayer, we decline to make any observation.

It would appear that the case is now listed before the Family Judge at Pune on April 13, 1990. It will be appropriate that having regard to the apprehension expressed by the petitioner the Court should not proceed with the matter until her prayer for transfer is considered by the High Court. We accordingly direct the Family Court, Pune to stay further proceedings in the case a period of 60 days from today to enable the petitioner to approach the High Court."

9. It is no doubt correct that the appellant did not approach the High Court for the transfer of the case but the fact remains that she has been seriously contesting the divorce proceedings and it would not be fair to assume that she deliberately chose to abstain from the Family Court and was intentionally avoiding the summons.

10. The Family Court and the High Court have held that after the dismissal of the transfer petition and vacation of stay by this Court the appellant-wife should have, on her own, joined the proceeding before the Family Court. According to the courts below no notice for appearance was required to be sent to the parties after the stay was vacated.

11. It is not necessary for us to go into the question as to whether a fresh notice to the parties is necessary where the superior Court vacates the stay order and as a consequence the proceedings recommence before the court below. We are of the view that in the facts and circumstances of this case the interest of justice required the issue of such a notice. The admitted facts in this case are as under:

(i) While dismissing the transfer petition and vacating the stay order this Court did not fix any date for the appearance of the parties before the Family Court, Pune.

(ii) The Family Court had permitted the assistance of a lawyer to the appellant-wife in the following terms: "As applicant is from Delhi and it would cause hardship, permission is granted for engaging an Advocate for pleading her case only for the purpose of presenting applications or serving notices and noting the orders of the Court."

(iii) The appellant did not engage a lawyer to represent her before the Family Court, Pune.

(iv) The appellant-wife was residing with her parents at Noida (Delhi).

12. Even the distance between Noida and Pune was a big hassle for the appellant especially when she had no counsel to look after the proceedings before the Family Court, Pune. We are of the view that in the facts and circumstances of this case she was justified in her assumption that the proceedings before the Family Court would be resumed after fresh notice to the parties. The applicability of the rules of natural justice depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. We are of the view that in this case fair play and the interest of justice required the issuance of a fresh notice to the parties after the stay order was vacated by this Court. We do not, therefore, agree with the findings of the courts below to the contrary.

13. In any case, realising the requirements of natural justice, the Family Court, sent two registered notices to the appellant at her Noida address and also at the address given by her in the proceedings before this Court. Unfortunately, both the notices came back with the endorsements that the appellant could not be found on the given addresses. This is not material on the record to reach a conclusion that the appellant refused to receive the notices. There is also nothing on the record to show as to whether the postal authorities made any efforts to deliver the registered letters to any of the appellant's relations at the given addresses. The courts below are wholly unjustified in holding that the appellant refused to receive the notices and further that the said notices could have been received by any of her relations on the given addresses.

14. After the notices sent by registered post were received back, the Family Court did not make any attempt to serve the appellant through the process of the Court. The appellant was no stranger to the respondent. She was his wife. It could not have been difficult for him to find out the address where she was staying. Under the circumstances, resort to the substitute service by way of publication in the newspaper was not justified.

15. We are, therefore, of the view that there was sufficient cause for the non-appearance of the appellant in the matrimonial petition before the Family Court.

16. The view we have taken on the first point, it is not necessary to deal with the other points raised by the learned counsel for the appellant.

17. We, therefore, set aside the order of the Family Court dated June 24, 1990 and allow the appellant's application dated December 18, 1989 and set aside the ex parte decree passed against the appellant in marriage petition No.A-561 of 1989. As a consequence the judgment of the Family Court, Pune dated November 30, 1989 and the judgment of the High Court in First Appeal No.649 of 1990 and First Appeal No.696 of 1990 dated October 10/11, 1990 are also set aside.

18. The appellant had asked for transfer of her case from the Principal Judge, Family Court, Pune to some other court and this Court gave liberty to the appellant to move the High Court for the said purpose. We are satisfied that the reasons given by the appellant for such transfer and the apprehensions entertained by her are wholly unjustified. We are, however, of the view that the Principal Judge, Family Court Pune, has taken the grievances made by the appellant before this Court rather seriously and has commented adversely about the same. With a view to do complete justice between the parties we direct that this case be transferred from the file of Principal Judge, Family Court, Pune to the Principal Judge, Family Court, Bombay. The parties are directed to appear before the Principal Judge, Family Court, Bombay on June 22, 1992.

19. Before concluding we wish to place on record that we tried to persuade the parties to live together and in the alternative to settle their dispute amicably but with no result.

20. We allow the appeal in the above terms with no order as to costs.

B.S. Appeal allowed.

C.A.No.2460(N) of 1977 15th May, 1992.

P.M.C.Kunhiraman Nair ...Appellant
v.

C.R.Naganatha Iyer and others ...Respondents.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Sec.111(f) - Implied surrender of lease - Lessor granting a new lease to third person with assent of the lessee under existing lease - Lessee directing his sub-tenant to pay rent direct to landlord - If amount to implied surrender.

Under clause (f) of Sec.111 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 implied surrender is a mode for determination of a lease of immovable property. In English law, delivery of possession by the tenant to a landlord and his acceptance of possession effects a surrender by operation of law. It is also called implied surrender in contradistinction to express surrender which must be either by deed or in writing. It has been held that directing the occupier to acknowledge the landlord as his landlord i.e., to attorn to the landlord, is a sufficient delivery of possession by the tenant to the landlord. It has also been held that receipt of rent from a person in possession may be evidence of the landlord's acceptance of him as tenant whether he is a stranger, or whether he was already in possession as sub-tenant. [See Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edn. Vol.27, paras 444, 445, 446 and 450 and Note (1) to para 446]. Under the illustration to clause (f) of Sec.111 of the Transfer of Property Act, there would be an implied surrender of the former lease if a lessee accepts from his lessor a new lease of the property leased to take effect during the continuance of the existing lease. The said illustration is, however, not exhaustive of the cases in which there may be an implied surrender of the lease. Just as under the English law, there can be an implied surrender of the law of transfer of property in India, if the lessor grants a new lease to a third person with the assent of the lessee under the existing lease who delivers the possession to such person or where the lessee directs his subtenant to pay the rent directly to a lessor. T.R.G. Wariyar, Senior Advocate (Ms. Shanta Vasudevan and P.K. Manohar, Advocates, with him), for Appellant.

S. Balakrishnan and G. Srinivasan, Advocates, for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by S.C. Agrawal, J.: This appeal is directed against the judgment and decree dated March 10, 1977 of the High Court of Kerala. It arises out of a suit filed by respondents 1 to 6 against the appellant and respondent 7 for redemption and recovery of possession of property consisting of 25 cents of land in Valiyaveetuparamba in Nagaram Amson, District Kozhikode and the buildings and the machinery of the flour mill standing on the said land.

2. The land and the buildings belong in Jenm to the Vettathu Tharavad who leased out the same in or about 1939 to Sivarama Iyer, respondent 2 on a rent of Rs.40 per mensem. Late C.N. Rama Iyer, father of respondents 1 to 5 and husband of respondent 6 started a flour mill known as 'Sivaram Mills' on the said premises in or about 1940 and for that purpose, he installed an engine and necessary plant and machinery and also made some further constructions over the land. C.N. Rama Iyer died on May 2, 1953 and after his death, respondents 1 to 5 entered into an agreement with the appellant on February 7, 1954 whereunder the appellant advanced Rs.4,500 to respondents 1 to 5 and respondents 1 to 5 agreed to entrust the appellant with the management of the mill for a period of one year from March 5, 1954 on a monthly payment of Rs.300 out of which Rs.125 was to be appropriated every month towards the advance given. Respondents 1 to 5 could not entrust the management of mill to the appellant on or before March 5, 1954 and they could do so only in the middle of April, 1954 and on April 13, 1954, a fresh agreement (Ex.B-2) modifying the terms of the previous agreement was entered into between respondents 1 to 5 and the appellant. Under the said agreement dated April 13, 1954 a further sum of Rs.1,900 (in addition to the sum of Rs.4,500) was advanced by the appellant to respondents 1 to 5 and it was agreed by respondents 1 to 5 that the total sum of Rs.6,400 which had been advanced by the appellant to respondents 1 to 5 will not bear any interest from the date of the said agreement and that the appellant shall run the mill for one year and after the stipulated period, respondents 1 to 5 would get the possession of the mill back from the appellant. It was also agreed that a sum of Rs.40 which is the rent of the building where the mill is situate and current charges for each month of the electric lights of the mill should be paid by the appellant to respondents 1 to 5 and a sum of Rs.100 per month would be paid by the appellant as rent for the mill, out of which a sum of Rs.50 shall be adjusted by the appellant towards Rs.6,400 paid in advance and the balance amount of Rs.50 should be paid to respondents 1 to 5 every month. It was also agreed that on the expiry of the period of one year, respondents 1 to 5 would get back the possession of the mill after paying the balance amount of Rs.5,800 to the appellant. Before the expiry of the period of one year fixed under the agreement dated April 13, 1954, the plaintiffs-respondents 1 to 5 entered into an agreement (Ex.B-3) dated March 22, 1955 with one T.M. Rama Iyer (who happened to be the father-in-law of respondent 2). In the said agreement, reference has been made to the agreement dated April 13, 1954 with the appellant and it was stated that a sum of Rs.5,600 is to be paid as balance amount to the appellant after adjusting the sum of Rs.800 which has already been paid to him. It was further stated that a sum of Rs.5,072 and annas 2 was payable to T.M. Rama Iyer, towards the arrears of rent for the building belonging to the said T.M. Rama Iyer, which has been taken on rent by respondents 1 to 5 and that since there was difficulty for respondents 1 to 5 to clear the said liability, they have decided to assign the company (named 'Sivaram Mills & Co.') to T.M. Rama Iyer for a consideration of Rs.10,672 and annas 2, out of which Rs.5,072 and annas 2 had been adjusted and from the balance amount due to them the sum of Rs.5,600 due to be paid to the appellant may be paid to him. In the said agreement, it was also stated that the said T.M. Rama Iyer on paying the amount due to the appellant after the stipulated period could take up the management by himself, pay the rent of the building, conduct the business and if necessary file a suit against the appellant and get the company vacated and do anything as per his will and pleasure. In the said agreement, respondents 1 to 5 further agreed that either after his taking the possession of the company or whenever demanded by T.M.Rama Iyer, they would execute the sale deed and get the same registered. On December 11, 1956, the said T.M.Rama Iyer executed a Deed of Assignment (Ex.B-4) in favour of the appellant and his younger brother, Gopalan Nair, whereby he assigned the Sivaram Oil Mill and Flour Mill to the appellant and his younger brother on a sale consideration of Rs.8,000. The sum of Rs.6,000 that was payable to the appellant inclusive of interest was adjusted against the said consideration and the balance amount of Rs.2,000 was paid by the appellant to the said T.M.Rama Iyer. In the said document, it was stated that after execution of the agreement dated March 22, 1955, T.M.Rama Iyer had taken the building where the mills are situate on a monthly rent of Rs.75 for a period of one year from the Vettathu Tharavad under an oral agreement. In the said document, it was further mentioned that the appellant and his younger brother had the liberty to manage the mills, to enter into rental agreements with the Jenmi of the building by paying the rent directly, to effect alienation etc. as per their wishes and he (T.M.Rama Iyer) would not have any right or liability hereafter. In the said document, it is also mentioned that the rent receipts for the rent paid to the Jenmi were being handed over with the document.

3. Respondents 1, 3 and 5 filed a suit (O.S.No.3 of 1964) against respondents 2, 4 and 6 as well as against the appellant and T.M.Rama Iyer. In the said suit, the plaintiffs, while seeking partition and separate possession of their shares in the suit properties, had also prayed for possession of the oil and flour mills and had asserted that the agreement dated March 22, 1955 executed by respondents 1 to 5 in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer was a sham transaction and no rights were conferred on T.M.Rama Iyer under the said agreement. T.M.Rama Iyer, who was defendant 1 in the said suit, died during the pendency of the suit. In the suit all disputes between the plaintiffs (respondents 1, 3 and 5) and defendants 2 to 4 (respondents 2, 4 and 6) and the legal representatives of T.M.Rama Iyer were settled out of court and the only dispute requiring adjudication was that relating to the property in question in these proceedings which was claimed by the appellant as the assignee from T.M.Rama Iyer. The said suit was dismissed by the Additional Sub Judge, Kozhikode by judgment (Ex.A-1) dated January 25, 1968. It was held that the agreement dated March 22, 1955 was not sham, nominal and void and it operates as an outright sale of plant and machinery. It was, however, held that the tenancy right of the plaintiffs had not been affected by either the agreement dated March 22, 1954 or the Deed of Assignment dated December 11, 1956 and that the plaintiffs would be entitled to possession of the site and buildings in which the plant and machinery were installed. It was further held that the appellant had been inducted into possession of the site and buildings by virtue of the agreement dated April 13, 1954, and that the appellant would be entitled to continue in possession of the same until the right created in his favour as per agreement dated April 13, 1954 was extinguished. Respondents 1 to 6 filed an appeal (A.S.No.129 of 1968) in the High Court against the said judgment and decree of the Additional Sub-Judge. The said appeal was dismissed by the High Court by its judgment dated April 6, 1973. The High Court found that according to the averments in the plaint what was conveyed under the agreement dated March 22, 1955 was only the oil mill and it was not the case of the plaintiffs that immovable property was conveyed under the said agreement and that in view of the pleadings, there was no scope for considering whether any immovable property had been transferred and therefore, no question of registration of the document arose.

4. While the said appeal was pending before the High Court, respondents 1 to 6 filed the suit giving rise to this appeal in the Court of Munsif, Kozhikode wherein it was prayed that the possession of the suit property may be restored to the plaintiffs-respondents by way of redemption and that the plaintiffs-respondents were willing to pay any amount that is found payable by them to the appellant. The said suit is based on the footing that the earlier suit was resisted by the appellant on the ground that he was in possession of and management of the business of the mill as possessory mortgagee thereof and the same had found favour with the court. The plaintiffs-respondents have, however, pleaded that since the appellant has continued in possession and management of the property even after the expiry of the term, no amount is likely to be payable on settlement of accounts. Respondent 7 was impleaded as defendant in the said suit on the ground that the appellant had leased the mill to him. The said suit was contested by the appellant. In the said suit, a decree for possession of the suit property excluding the plant and machinery was passed in favour of the plaintiffs-respondents by the Additional Munsif, Kozhikode-I by his judgment dated June 22, 1972. The appeal filed by the appellant against the judgment and decree of the Additional Munsif was dismissed by the District Judge, Kozhikode by judgment dated November 20, 1976 and the second appeal filed by the appellant was also dismissed by the learned Single Judge of the High Court by judgment dated March 10, 1977.

5. The High Court was of the view that the appellant could not come forward with a case that there was relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiffs-respondents and him and he could not be evicted from the suit property since he is entitled to protection of the Kerala Building (Lease and Rent Control) Act. In this regard, the High Court, after referring to the judgment of the Additional Sub-Judge in the earlier suit (O.S.No.3 of 1964), has observed that in that suit the appellant did not put forward the case that as per the agreement (Ex.B-2) dated April 13, 1954 there was a relationship of landlord and tenant between plaintiffs-respondents and him and the case of the appellant in that suit was that the plaintiffs-respondents could get the possession of the property only on extinguishment of the charge created by the said agreement. The High Court held that in the circumstances the appellant could not be permitted to plead in this suit what he did not plead in the earlier suit. According to the High Court, the consideration paid for the movables under Deed of Assignment (Ex.B-4) dated December 11, 1956 would not make the appellant, the tenant of the property. The High Court was of the view that the appellant could not be allowed to put forward inconsistent pleas to the detriment of the opposite side. The High Court was also of the view that since there was a lease for running a business, it could not be said that the appellant is a tenant of a building and is entitled to the protection of the Kerala Building (Lease and Rent Control) Act.

6. In support of this appeal, Shri Wariyar, the learned counsel for the appellant, has submitted that the High Court was in error in relying upon the observations contained in the judgment of the trial court in a previous suit (O.S.No.3 of 1964) inasmuch as after the decision of the High Court in appeal (A.S.No.129 of 1968), the said judgment of the trial court had merged in the judgment of the High Court dated April 6, 1973 and that is the only judgment which is operative and that the said judgment of the High Court shows that the only question which was considered by the High Court was whether the agreement (Ex.B-3) dated March 22, 1955 was inoperative on account of non-registration. According to Shri Wariyar, the High Court has held that the said agreement did not require registration inasmuch as it related to transfer of movable property, namely, the oil mill and that the effect of the said judgment of the High Court is that the plaintiffs-respondents are precluded from claiming possession of the oil mill. The only question that remains is whether plaintiffs-respondents can claim possession of the land and building in which the mill is installed and that involves the question as to whether plaintiffs-respondents, who were originally the lessee of the land and building, had a subsisting right in the same on the date of filing of the subsequent suit by them. Shri Wariyar has urged that the plaintiffs-respondents ceased to have any subsisting right in the property as a lessee in view of the agreement (Ex.B-3) dated March 22, 1955 which shows that there was an implied surrender by the plaintiffs-respondents of their leasehold right in the property in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer which fact is further established by Deed of Assignment (Ex.B-4) dated December 11, 1956 executed by T.M.Rama Iyer in favour of the appellant and his younger brother which indicates that a fresh lease had been created by the landlord in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer and T.M.Rama Iyer had surrendered his leasehold rights in favour of the appellant.

7. We find considerable force in the aforesaid submissions of Shri Wariyar.

8. After the decision of the High Court dated April 6, 1973 in A.S.No.129 of 1968 the judgment of the Additional Subordinate Judge stood merged in the judgment of the High Court. The judgment of the High Court shows that the earlier suit was confined to the oil mill only, treating it as movable property independent of the property. Since the said suit did not relate to the land and building in which the oil mill is installed the said suit and the plea raised by the appellant in that suit can have no bearing in the present suit relating to possession of the land and building. The learned Judge of the High Court, with due respect, was not right in negating the plea raised by the appellant that he is in possession of property as a tenant on the view that the appellant did not raise this plea in the earlier suit and he could not be allowed to put forward inconsistent pleas. Since the question with regard to possession of the land and building arises in the present suit only it was permissible for the appellant to raise the plea that the plaintiffs have no subsisting leasehold interest in the suit property and that the appellant is in possession of the same as a tenant of the owner of the said property.

9. As to whether the plaintiffs had a subsisting leasehold interest in the property involves the question whether they had surrendered the said rights. The case of the appellant is that the plaintiffs had impliedly surrendered their leasehold rights when they executed the agreement (Ex.B-3) dated March 22, 1955 and thereafter a fresh tenancy was created in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer which was assigned by T.M.Rama Iyer in favour of the appellant.

10. Under clause (f) of Sec.111 of the Transfer of Property Act 1908, implied surrender is a mode for determination of a lease of immovable property. In English law, delivery of possession by the tenant to a landlord and his acceptance of possession effects a surrender by operation of law. It is also called implied surrender in contradistinction to express surrender which must be either by deed or in writing. It has been held that directing the occupier to acknowledge the landlord as his landlord, i.e., to attorn to the landlord, is a sufficient delivery of possession by the tenant to the landlord. It has also been held that receipt of rent from a person in possession may be evidence of the landlord's acceptance of him as tenant, whether he is a stranger, or whether he was already in possession as subtenant. [See Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edn. Vol.27, paras 444, 445, 446 and 450 and Note (1) to para 446]. Under the illustration to clause (f) of Sec.111 of the Transfer of Property Act, there would be an implied surrender of the former lease if a lessee accepts from his lessor a new lease of the property leased to take effect during the continuance of the existing lease. The said illustration is, however, not exhaustive of the cases in which there may be an implied surrender of the lease. Just as under the English law, there can be an implied surrender under the law of transfer of property in India, if the lessor grants a new lease to a third person with the assent of the lessee under the existing lease who delivers the possession to such person or where the lessee directs his subtenant to pay the rent directly to a lessor. [Konijeti Venkayya v. Thammanna Peda Venkata Subbarao, 1956 An.W.R. 207; A.I.R. 1957 A.P. 619 and Norattmal v. Mohanlal, A.I.R. 1966 Raj. 89; 1966 Raj. L.W. 484; I.L.R. (1966) 16 Raj. 57].

11. Reference may, therefore, be made to the relevant clauses in the agreement (Ex.B-3) dated March 22, 1955 and the Deed of Assignment (Ex. B-4) December 11, 1956 on which reliance has been placed by Shri Wariyar. In the agreement (Ex.B-3) dated March 22, 1955, executed by respondents 1 to 5 in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer, it is stated:

"(4) We will not have any responsibility or objection for your paying the amount due to Kunhiraman Nair after the stipulated period and to take up the management by yourself, pay the rent of the building, conduct the business and if necessary to file a suit against Kunhiraman Nair and get the company vacated; and to do any thing as per your will and pleasure.

(5) The company is not charged by any other liability except the loan mentioned above. The gift deed given to us and the copy of the agreement with Kunhiraman Nair are hereby given to you. Either after your taking possession of the company or whenever you make demand we shall execute sale deed and get the same registered."

12. In the Deed of Assignment (Ex.B-4) dated December 11, 1956 executed by T.M.Rama Iyer in favour of the appellant and his younger brother, it is stated:

"(2) After this for the purpose of clearing of the loan liability to you; the mill etc. started by the abovesaid Naganatha Iyer and others was given to me as per the agreement dated the 22nd of March, 1955. They belong to me and I have on oral agreement taken the building wherein the mills situate on a monthly rent of Rs.75 for a period of 1 year from the Vettathu Tharavad which is the Jenmi of the same.

(3) I have decided to assign the Oil Mill and Flour Mill described in the schedule below to you. The sale consideration is fixed at Rs.8,000 inclusive of Rs.100 given by me as advance to the Jenmi. Of this Rs.8,000 the sum of Rs.6,000 due to you inclusive of interest is adjusted and after deducting the same, the balance amount of Rs.2,000 due to me is paid and the entire sale consideration has been paid to me in full satisfaction in the abovesaid 2 counts and I have handed over to you the mills described in the schedule with all the equipments and all the other rights pertaining to the same. You have derived the same and hereafter you are at liberty to manage the mills by yourself; to enter into rental agreements with the Jenmi of the building by paying the rent directly, to effect alienation etc. as per your wishes. I will not have any right, question or liability hereafter. I have made you believe and hereby certify that the properties are not charged by any loan liability or alienation and none except myself have any right over the same. The abovesaid agreement, the gift deed obtained by Naganatha Iyer and others and the rent receipts for having paid rent to the Jenmi are hereby give."

13. From the aforesaid clauses, it would appear that by executing the agreement (Ex.B-3) dated March 22, 1955, respondents 1 to 5 surrendered their leasehold interest in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer inasmuch as in clause (4) of the said agreement they have clearly stated that plaintiffs-respondents will not have any responsibility or objection for T.M.Rama Iyer paying the amount due to the appellant after the stipulated period and take up the management by himself and pay the rent of the building and conduct its business. By empowering T.M.Rama Iyer to pay the rent of the building respondents 1 to 5 were impliedly surrendering their leasehold interest in the premises in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer. This is borne out by the Deed of Assignment (Ex.B-4) dated December 11, 1956 wherein in clause (2), T.M.Rama Iyer had stated "I have on oral agreement taken the building where the mills situate on a monthly rent of Rs.75 for a period of one year from the Vettathu Tharavad which is the Jenmi of the same". The original rent for the property as let out to respondent 2 was Rs.40 per month. The fact that after execution of the agreement dated March 22, 1955, T.M.Rama Iyer entered into another agreement with the landlord on a higher monthly rent of Rs.75 would show that a fresh lease was created by the landlord in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer and the earlier lease in favour of respondent 2 stood determined by implied surrender. In clause (3) of the Deed of Assignment (Ex.B-4) dated December 11, 1956, T.M.Rama Iyer has empowered the appellant "to enter into rental agreements with the Jenmi of the building by paying the rent directly to effect alienation." This shows that T.M.Rama Iyer had impliedly surrendered his leasehold rights by agreeing that the appellant could enter into rental agreements with the landlord by paying the rent directly. The case of the appellant is that ever since the execution of the Deed of Assignment (Ex.B-4) dated December 11, 1956, rent is being paid by him to the landlord directly. It is not the case of the plaintiffs-respondents that they had paid the rent for the premises to the landlord after March 22, 1955. In these circumstances, we are of the opinion that the plaintiffs-respondents, by executing the agreement (Ex.B-3) dated March 22, 1955, had impliedly surrendered their leasehold rights in the suit property in favour of T.M.Rama Iyer and on the date of the filing of the present suit they had no subsisting leasehold interest in the same. The suit for the recovery of the possession of the suit property filed by them on the basis that the plaintiffs-respondents are the lessees thereof was, therefore, not maintainable and is liable to be dismissed.

14. The appeal is consequently allowed, the judgment and decree of the High Court of Kerala, dated March 10, 1977 in S.No.1206 of 1976-E is set aside and O.S.No.636 of 1968 filed by respondents 1 to 6 against the appellant is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

C.A.No.2945 of 1992

14th August, 1992.

Reserve Bank of India...Appellant

v.

S.S. Investments and others...Respondents.

Arbitration Act (X of 1940), Secs. 3 and 8 and Schedule I, Clause 4 - Agreement between parties providing for arbitration by arbitrators and the appointment of an umpire - One arbitrator making an award - Other arbitrator writing award later coming to different conclusion - Matter referred to umpire - Awards if made without joint deliberations of umpires and therefore vitiated - Umpire, if can enter upon the reference.

An agreement for the sale of some residential flats was entered into between the appellant and the respondent 1. A clause in the agreement provided that disputes between the parties would be resolved by arbitration. If the parties could not agree upon a common arbitrator, each could nominate one arbitrator who would appoint an umpire. Disputes having arisen, the appellant appointed respondent 2 who was a former Judge as an arbitrator and the respondent 1 nominated respondent 3, an advocate as arbitrators. They appointed respondent 4 as umpire. On 7.12.1989, respondent 2 made an award. On 12.12.1989, respondent 3 wrote to respondent 2 stating that he would write a separate award and on 30.12.1989 he made an award which was quite different from that given by respondent 2. The appellant requested respondents 2 and 3 to refer the matter to respondent 4. Respondent 1 objected to respondent 4 entering upon the reference on the ground that both the awards had been made without joint deliberation. The respondent 4 entered upon the reference on 19.11.1990. On 17.1.1991 both the counsels for the appellant and respondent 1, made a written submission to respondent 4 stating that they had no objection for extension of time for the umpire to make the award. Respondent 1 filed proceedings before the High Court contending that the arbitration proceedings were invalid and that the reference to respondent 4 was without jurisdiction. The High Court held that there was no joint deliberation between the arbitrators and

Held:- In the present case it is not in dispute that respondents 2 and 3 were present at all the meetings in the arbitration proceedings. It is urged that there had been no joint deliberation and application of mind by them so that it cannot be said that there was any disagreement between them and respondent 4 was, therefore, not entitled to enter upon the reference. Regard must be had, to the ordinary course of conduct of judicial and arbitration proceedings, especially considering the fact that one of the arbitrators was a former Judge and the other was a member of the Bar. Discussions do ordinarily take place during the course of the arguments between counsel and the Judges or arbitrators. Questions are asked by the Judges or arbitrators which would indicate their minds to counsel and to each other. Discussions also, ordinarily, take place between the Judges or arbitrators inter se during the course of the hearings and immediately before or after the same. It is not, therefore, imperative that arbitrators should meet upon the conclusion of the hearings to discuss the matter and agree to an award or agree to disagree in that behalf. That there had been divergent views expressed even during the course of the present arbitration hearings is clear from the letter written by the respondent 3 to respondent 2 for he says "we could have sat together and discussed matters before writing the award even if our points of view or judgments varied or even differed on any issues or point for determination". That the respondent 2 wrote out his own award indicates that he had no doubt in his mind that the differences between him and respondent 3 about the case before them were irreconcilable. As has been said, disagreement can take a variety of forms. Upon the facts of this case there was a disagreement between respondents 2 and 3, the fact of such disagreement was conveyed to the parties when respondent 2 sent them his award and respondent 4 then became entitled to enter upon the reference as umpire. The High Court was not justified in placing reliance upon the fact that there was no plea on behalf of the appellant that there was a joint consultation between respondents 2 and 3 after the submission of the arguments by both sides and before the passing of the award by respondent 2, which, in its view, established that there was "no joint deliberation or united consideration" by respondents 2 and 3. Parties to an arbitration cannot be expected to know that such joint consultations or deliberations had taken place between the arbitrators. The agreement to extend the time for respondent 4 to make the award should have been qualified by the respondent 1 and should have reserved to it the right to agitate its objection to the fourth respondent's jurisdiction. The terms of the joint submission made by counsel for the appellant and respondent 1 to respondent 4 are unqualified and in the circumstances, respondent 1 must be held to have waived its objection to the entering upon the reference by respondent 4 as umpire. Kapil Sibal, (H.S. Parihar, K.S. Parihar, Advocates, with him), for Appellants.

V.A. Bobde, Senior Advocate (Mukul Mudgal, C.A. Sundaram and T. Ray, Advocates, with him), for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Bharucha, J.:- Leave to appeal granted.

2. This is an appeal against the judgment and order of the Madras High Court whereby it declared that arbitration awards given on December 7 and 30, 1989, by respondents 2 and 3 respectively, in respect of a dispute between the appellant and respondent 1, were not valid; and that the subsequent proceedings conducted by the umpire, respondent 4, were also not valid. The order of the Madras High Court remitted the matter to respondents 2 and 3 to pass awards afresh in the light of its observations.

3. An agreement for the sale of five blocks of residential flats and a community complex, along with the land, was entered into between the appellant and respondent 1 on June 4, 1984. Clause 36 of the agreement provided that disputes between the parties would be resolved by arbitration; if the parties could not agree upon a common arbitrator each would nominate an arbitrator, who would appoint an umpire before entering upon the reference. Disputes having arisen the appellant appointed respondent 2, who was a former Judge, and respondent 1 appointed respondent 3, who was a member of the Bar, as their arbitrators. Respondents 2 and 3 entered upon the reference on April 19, 1988, appointed respondent 4 as umpire and heard the appellant and respondent 1. On December 7, 1989 respondent 2 made an award holding respondent 1 to be in breach of the agreement with the appellant and gave consequential directions. On December 12, 1989 respondent 3 wrote to respondent 2 stating that he could not subscribe to the award made by respondent 2. He said that "for the purposes of the record I shall write a separate award...." He added, "We could have sat together and discussed matters before writing the award even if our points of view or judgments therein varied or even if differed on any issues or point for determination." On December 30, 1989 respondent 3 made his award. He came to a conclusion quite different from that arrived at by respondent 2. The last day upon which an award could have been made was December 31, 1989. On April 3, 1990 the appellant requested respondents 2 and 3 to refer the matter to respondent 4 as umpire in view of the differing awards made by them. On April 19, 1990 respondent 1 objected to respondent 4 entering upon the reference. It stated that respondent 2 had made his award unilaterally and without any deliberations with respondent 3. Respondent 3 had made his award on December 31, 1989. Both the awards had been made without joint deliberations and, therefore, the arbitration proceedings were vitiated and there had to be a fresh arbitration. A copy of this letter was sent to respondent 4. On November 19, 1990 respondent 4 entered upon the reference as umpire. Counsel on behalf of the appellant presented his submissions to respondent 4 in the presence of the first respondent's representatives and counsel on December 22, 1990 and January 12, 15 and 19, 1991. On January 26, 1991, the arguments on behalf of the appellant were concluded and the matter was adjourned to February 4, 1991 to enable counsel for respondent 1 to address respondent 4. In the meantime, on January 17, 1991, counsel for the appellant and respondent 1 made a written submission to respondent 4 which noted that his time to make the award expired on January 18, 1991 and that the proceedings before him were in progress. The submission stated, "The claimant and the respondent have no objection for extension of time by two months from January 18, 1991 for the umpire to make the award." On January 31, 1991 respondent 1 filed the proceedings before the Madras High Court upon which the judgment and order under appeal were passed. It prayed for declarations that the arbitration proceedings and awards passed therein were invalid and unenforceable, that the arbitration agreement was invalid and unenforceable and had ceased to have effect and that the reference to respondent 4 was without jurisdiction and invalid. Respondent 1 also prayed that the fourth respondent's authority as umpire be revoked and a permanent injunction be granted restraining the appellant and respondents 2, 3 and 4 from proceeding to pass any award or execute any award in respect of the reference before respondent 4.

4. The High Court held that the case was "one in which admittedly there has been no joint deliberation or consultation between respondents 2 and 3 before the passing of the awards and, therefore, the awards passed by respondents 2 and 3 individually in the circumstances will become void". It also stated that it was not possible to hold that respondent 1 had acquiesced in the competency of the reference to respondent 4. In the result, the High Court declared that the awards of respondents 2 and 3 were invalid and that the entering upon the reference by respondent 4 and the subsequent proceedings conducted by him were not valid. It remitted the matter to respondents 2 and 3 to pass awards afresh in the light of the observations it had made.

5. Mr. Sibal, learned counsel for the appellant, drew our attention to Sec. 3 of the Arbitration Act, 1940, which states that an arbitration agreement, unless a different intention is expressed therein, shall be deemed to include the provisions set out in the First Schedule to the Act insofar as they are applicable to the reference. Clause 4 of the First Schedule states that if the arbitrators have allowed their time to expire without making an award or have delivered to any party to the arbitration agreement or to the umpire a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree, the umpire shall forthwith enter on the reference in lieu of the arbitrators. In Mr. Sibal's submission, the awards individually made by respondents 2 and 3 and sent to the parties indicated that they could not agree and respondent 4 was, therefore, entitled to enter upon the reference as umpire. In the alternative, Mr. Sibal submitted, if the awards made by respondents 2 and 3 were not awards in law, respondents 2 and 3 had allowed their time to expire without making an award, in which event also respondent 4 was entitled to enter upon the reference. Our attention was invited by Mr. Sibal to the judgment of this Court in Keshavsinh Dwarkadas Kapadia v. Indian Engineering Company, A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1538: (1972) 1 S.C.R. 695: (1971) 2 S.C.C. 706, wherein the Court stated thus:

"As to what constitutes disagreement cannot be laid down in abstract or inflexible propositions. It will depend upon the facts of the case as to whether there was a disagreement..... Disagreement between the arbitrators may take various shapes and forms. In the present case the arbitrators by reason of attitude of a party in correspondence addressed to the arbitrators could not agree to proceed with the matter. Where one of the arbitrators decline to act and the other is left alone it will in a case of this type amount to disagreement between the two arbitrators. In the present case, there was disagreement between the arbitrators. Time to make the award also expired. Therefore, from both points of view the umpire had authority to enter upon the reference."

6. Mr. V.A. Bobde, learned counsel for respondent 1, submitted that there had to be, between the arbitrators, a joint deliberation and application of mind to the case after the hearing was concluded. There had to be such discussion because each arbitrator should have the opportunity to change the other's mind. When parties selected the forum of joint arbitrators for resolution of their differences they were entitled to have a result arrived at after discussions between the arbitrators. Emphasis was laid by Mr. Bobde upon the authorities to which we now refer.

7. In the matter of the arbitration between Allen Pering and John Keymer, In re., (1835) 3 Ad. & E. 245: 111 E.R. 406 (K.B.), a reference was made to Stevens and Vincent and such person or persons as they should appoint. They appointed a barrister as umpire. Stevens and Vincent did not agree and the three proceeded with the reference. After the case had been heard, at a meeting of the three the umpire stated the terms of a proposed award, to which Stevens objected. After some discussion Stevens left the other two to draw up the award saying he would not join in it if he could not change their minds. The three did not meet again. Afterwards, by a mistake of Vincent's clerk, the draft of a proposed award made by Vincent at an earlier stage of the case was sent to Stevens. Stevens, considering it to be a draft of the award that was then proposed to be made, sent it to the umpire with written objections. After this, and without any further communication with Stevens, the other two executed the award in the terms that they had proposed at the last meeting of the three. The award was objected to on the ground that it had been made by one of the arbitrators and the umpire without any consultation with or intimation to Stevens. The learned Judges upheld the objection. Lord Denman, C.J., after setting out the facts, noted that Stevens had placed his objections to the draft award that had been sent to him in writing but the other two, without meeting him or considering how far their view may be varied by the objections, executed an award. They were bound to hear what Stevens had to say. It was only upon full notice given to him that they were entitled to proceed without him. It is important to note that Lord Denman, C.J. said: (E.R. p.406)

"If, after discussion, it appears that there is no chance of agreement with one of the arbitrators, the others may indeed proceed without him. Here, Stevens, the arbitrator appointed by Pering, always took a view more favourable to Pering than the other arbitrators; and, on one occasion, he said that he would have no more to do with the matter. Had that declaration been acted on, I do not say that the award would not have been valid."

The same view was expressed by Coleridge, J. thus: (E.R. p.407)

"One of them refused his assent. I do not say that this might not have authorised the others to proceed without him; but they got into communication with him again, and he sent them his objections. Now they either did or did not take those objections into their consideration. If they did not, the award is clearly bad for that reason; if they did, they ought to have consulted him upon them, before they made the award. Instead of this, they made another award."

8. In Dalling v. Matchett, 125 E.R. 1138: (1740) Willes 215 (C.P.), it was held that when a cause is referred to three persons and if they or any two of them are empowered to make an award, an award made by two of them is good if the third had notice of the meetings. But if he had no such notice, then such an award is bad.

9. The same principle was applied by Calcutta High Court in Abu Hamid Zahir Ala v. Golam Sarwar, A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 865: 22 C.W.N. 301: 25 C.L.J. 396, thus:

"The presence of all the arbitrators at all the meetings and above all at the last meeting, when the final act of arbitration is done, is essential to the validity of the award."

10. The judgment quoted the then current edition of Russell on Arbitration, which said:

"As the arbitrators must all act, so must they all act together. They must each be present at every meeting; and the witnesses and the parties must be examined in the presence of them all; for the parties are entitled to have recourse to the arguments, experience and judgment of each arbitrator at every stage of the proceedings brought to bear on the minds of his fellow Judges, so that by conference they shall mutually assist each other in arriving at a just decision."

11. In J. Kuppuswami Chetty v. B.V. Anantharamier, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 297: A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 40, the court held that it was well established that whilst an arbitration agreement might provide that the decision of the majority of the arbitrators would prevail, nevertheless the law required that all the arbitrators must give their united consideration to all matters arising in the arbitration which had been referred to them.

12. In Mamidi Appayya v. Yedan Venkataswami, A.I.R. 1919 Mad. 877: 24 M.L.T. 102: 1918 M.W.N. 477, a learned single Judge held that for a final award by arbitrators to be valid it was essential that all the arbitrators should have been present at all the meetings, including the last, that witnesses should have been examined in the presence of all and that all should have consulted together as to the form that their award should take.

13. The last of the judgments referred to is Sheodutt v. Pandit Vishnudatta, A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 116: 1955 Nag.L.J. 258: I.L.R. 1955 Nag. 224. This was a case, where upon the facts, it appeared to the Court that one of the five arbitrators had dominated the proceedings and taken undue advantage of the fact that two arbitrators were illiterate. The court was left "with an uneasy feeling that all the arbitrators did not jointly deliberate in the proceedings or in the making of the award" and held that there had been such a "mishandling of the arbitration" as to result in substantial miscarriage of justice, for which reason the award was set aside.

14. Before we proceed further we must note that the relevant passage in Russell on Arbitration, 20th edn., now reads: (p.235)

"All the arbitrators must act together. As they must all act, so they must all act together. They must each be present at every meeting; and the witnesses and the parties must be examined in the presence of them all.

All must make award together. Where there are two or more arbitrators, all should execute the award at the same time and place. If they do not, the award may be invalidated, but as the objection is one of a formal character, if no other objection is shown, the court may remit the award to the arbitrators for correction."

15. While on Russell on Arbitration, we may refer with advantage to the discussion on what constitutes disagreement. It is said: (p.241)

"The question what constitutes such a disagreement between arbitrators as well entitle the umpire to make an award... is one upon which no definite rule can be laid down. It has been held that there was such a disagreement where one of the arbitrators declined to proceed further with the case, and also where one arbitrator refused to permit certain evidence to be produced which his fellow arbitrator declared to be essential, and in another case it was decided that non-agreement on important points was equivalent to disagreements."

One of the cases referred to by Russell in this context is Winteringham v. Robertson, (1858) 27 L.J. Ex. 301. A submission provided that the matters in difference should be referred to two arbitrators, and in case they should not agree it should be lawful for them to appoint another person to be umpire or to concur with them in considering the matters referred. The arbitrators appointed an umpire, who sat with them throughout the reference. On the arbitrators submitting their views to the umpire, it appeared that they were not agreed on important points and the umpire formed the opinion that there was no likelihood of their agreeing. The umpire then made his award in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant objected to the award on the ground that it had been made before the arbitrators had disagreed. It was held that the non-agreement of the arbitrators was equivalent to disagreement; that on their non-agreement as to some of the matters in dispute the umpire could make an award as to all these matters, and that his award should be enforced.

16. In the present case, it is not in dispute that respondents 2 and 3 were present at all the meetings in the arbitration proceedings. It is urged that there had been no joint deliberation and application of mind by them so that it cannot be said that there was any disagreement between them and respondent 4 was, therefore, not entitled to enter upon the reference.

17. Regard must be had, in our view, to the ordinary course of conduct of judicial and arbitration proceedings, especially considering the fact that one of the arbitrators was a former Judge and the other was a member of the Bar. Discussions do ordinarily take place during the course of the arguments between counsel and the Judges or arbitrators. Questions are asked by the Judges or arbitrators which would indicate their minds to counsel and to each other. Discussions also, ordinarily, take place between the Judges or arbitrators inter se during the course of the hearings and immediately before or after the same. It is not, therefore, imperative that arbitrators should meet upon the conclusion of the hearings to discuss the matter and agree to an award or agree to disagree in that behalf.

18. That there had been divergent views expressed even during the course of the present arbitration hearings is clear from the letter written by the respondent 3 to respondent 2 for he says, "We could have sat together and discussed matters before writing the award even if our points of view or judgments varied or even differed on any issues or point for determination". That the respondent 2 wrote out his own award indicates that he had no doubt in his mind that the differences between him and respondent 3 about the case before them were irreconcilable. As has been said, disagreement can take a variety of forms. Upon the facts of this case, we are of the view that there was a disagreement between respondents 2 and 3; the fact of such disagreement was conveyed to the parties when respondent 2 sent them his award and respondent 4 then became entitled to enter upon the reference as umpire.

19. We think that the High Court was not justified in placing reliance upon the fact that there was no plea on behalf of the appellant that there was a joint consultation between respondent 2 and 3 after the submission of the arguments by both sides and before the passing of the award by respondent 2, which, in its view, established that there was "no joint deliberation or united consideration" by respondents 2 and 3. Parties to an arbitration cannot be expected to know that such joint consultations or deliberations had taken place between the arbitrators.

20. Mr. Sibal drew our attention to the written submission made by counsel on behalf of the appellant and respondent 1 to respondent 4 extending time for him to make the award. In Mr. Sibal's submission, there was a categorical statement therein that respondent 1 had no objection to the extension of such time for respondent 4 to make the award, whereby respondent 1 had waived its objection to respondent 4 entering upon the reference as umpire. Mr. Bobde submitted, on the other hand, that the protest made by respondent 1 about respondent 4 entering upon the reference as umpire continued. In his submission, respondent 1 could not have acted otherwise because the authorities laid down that it is not open to a party to abstain from appearing before an arbitrator or umpire, although he objects to that arbitrator or umpire having entered upon the reference. The authorities do not say that the party so objecting is obliged to extend the time for the arbitrator or umpire to make the award. At any rate, the agreement to extend the time for respondent 4 to make the award should have been qualified by the respondent 1 and should have reserved to it the right to agitate its objection to the fourth respondent's jurisdiction. The terms of the joint submission made by counsel for the appellant and respondent 1 to respondent 4 are unqualified and, we think that, in the circumstances, respondent 1 must be held to have waived its objection to the entering upon the reference by respondent 4 as umpire.

21. In this view of the matter the appeal is allowed, the judgment and order of the Madras High Court dated July 8, 1991 is set aside and the petition and application filed by respondent 1 are dismissed. Respondent 1 shall pay to the appellant the costs throughout.

K.Gopinathan

...Appellant

v.

Union of India.

..Respondent.

Civil Services - Deputation - Person on deputation subsequently absorbed in deputation post - Basic pay - Fixation - Basic pay cannot be reduced even though overall pay on absorption is higher. [Para 8] M.N.Krishnamani, Senior Advocate (Pravir Choudhari, Advocate, with him), for Appellant. Gobinda Mukhoy, Senior Advocate (Naresh Bakshi, Ms.Lalitha Kaushik and Shankar Divate, Advocates, with him), for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Mohan, J.:- Leave granted.

2. The appellant K.Gopinathan was working as Assistant Sub-Inspector of Police. He was taken on deputation in the Central Bureau of Investigation (in short CBI) on February 1, 1965. On such deputation he was paid his pay pertaining to the post of his parent office, as modified from time to time. Besides, he was also paid deputation duty allowance. On February 1, 1983, he was permanently absorbed and his pay was re-fixed.

3. It requires to be stated at this stage that on such absorption his basic pay was reduced from Rs.510 to Rs.390. Therefore, he submitted a representation to the Superintendent of Police, CBI pointing out the loss caused to him by an incorrect fixation. In this regard he made repeated representations and ultimately on September 13, 1990 the appellant was informed that his pay fixation had been correctly done.

4. Aggrieved by that order, he moved Central Administrative Tribunal, Madras Bench by way of Original Application No.967 of 1990. Before the tribunal it was contended on behalf of the appellant that the basic pay on account of the absorption should not be reduced. Therefore, merely because the overall pay is more, that does not mean there could be a reduction of the basic pay.

He relied on the decision of the Bangalore and the New Delhi Tribunals for advancing this plea. However, the tribunal rejected the same. Hence, Mr.M.N.Krishnamani, learned counsel for the appellant commends the acceptance of the view of the Bangalore Bench as well as the Delhi Bench which found favour with this Court in SPL (C) No.2196 of 1992 while the respondents would submit that the reasoning in the impugned judgment is correct.

5. By means of the following tabulated statement we will point out the position of the appellant's pay as a deputationist and as absorbee in C.B.I.

	As a deputationist on the date of absorption	As an absorbee in C.B.I.
Basic Pay	Rs. 510	Rs. 390
Spl. Pay	Rs. 30	Rs. 30
Deputation allowance	Rs. 80	---
Personal Pay	--	Rs. 85
Dearness Pay	--	Rs. 214.70
DA/ADA	Rs. 279	Rs. 304
Total:	Rs. 899	Rs.1,023.70

6. Two things are striking: (i) His basic pay has been reduced from Rs.510 to Rs.390. (ii) However, the overall pay as a deputationist on the date of absorption was Rs.899 while after absorption in C.B.I. it is Rs.1,023.70.

7. On these facts the Tribunal comes to the conclusion as follows: (ATC p.581, para 4)

"In fact on the date of absorption, the dearness allowance available under the Tamil Nadu Government Pay Scales was only Rs.279 for the appellant, whereas the amount of D.A. available to him under the Central scales was Rs.518. It is also to be noted that out of Rs.518, an amount of Rs.214.70 has been merged with the pay. When the dearness pay of Rs.214.70 is added to the basic pay of Rs.390.00, we get the amount of Rs.604, which is higher than the basic pay of Government servant under the Tamil Nadu Government, attached to the post. We, therefore, hold that there has not been any reduction in the applicant's basic pay in substance, even though that basic pay consisted of two elements is different. Taking into account the fact that the Tamil Nadu Government scales were revised on April 1, 1978 and that of the Central Government on January 1, 1973, we are of the view that both the scales are not comparable. When a person is being governed by the Tamil Nadu Government pay scales while he was on deputation, and therefore as on February 1, 1983, is absorbed under Central scale of pay the diminution in basic pay of the applicant is bound to occur. We also notice that even though the basic pay of the applicant rose to Rs.604 from Rs.510 by virtue of the addition of the dearness pay of Rs.214.70 with the existing basic pay of Rs.390.00. Therefore, this is a case in which there has not been any real reduction in the basic pay of the applicant.

8. We are afraid we cannot subscribe to this reasoning. While upholding the view of Central Administrative Tribunal, Principal Bench, New Delhi in Original Application No.1680 of 1989 in S.L.P. (C) No.2196 of 1992, we have pointed out how the basic pay cannot be reduced. The same principle will be applicable to this case as well. Accordingly, the appeal is allowed. However, there shall be no order as to costs.

Hazarath Syed Shah Mian Sakkaf Khadiri Thaikal
...Respondent.

(A) Madras City Tenants Protection Act (III of 1922), Sec.9 - Landlord filing suit for possession of suit property on the ground that the appellant was a tenant holding over - Tenant filing petition under Sec.9 - Appellant, if can take different plea that appellant was not a tenant and so was not entitled to relief under Sec.9.

Held: The only reason given for denying the benefit of Sec.9 of the City Tenants' Protection Act by the High Court to the appellant is that while executing the lease deed, the mutawalli had no power to grant such lease under the provisions of the Wakf Act 29 of 1954 as amended by Amendment Act 34 of 1964. The High Court was not correct in taking the aforesaid view. The appellant in the present case was a tenant long before the coming into force of the Wakf Act, 1954. The plaintiff had come forward with a clear case in the plaint that the appellant was a tenant holding over and as such he was not entitled to take a different plea in reply to the petition filed under Sec.9 of the Act that the appellant was not a tenant as the property in question was a wakf property and the mutawalli had no right to grant a lease. Thus, in the facts and circumstances of this case the defendant/appellant was entitled to the benefit of the provision of Sec.9 of the Act. [Para 8]

(B) Pleadings - High Court cannot make out a new case beyond the pleadings. [Para 6]

A.T.M.Sampath, for Appellant.

A.V.Rangan, for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Kasliwal, J.:- This appeal by grant of special leave is directed against the judgment of the Madras High Court, dated April 2, 1980. The Hazarath Syed Shah Mian Sakkaf Khadiri Thaikal through trustee S.S.Peeran Sahib (hereinafter referred to as the 'plaintiff') filed a suit on September 15, 1967 for possession of a plot of land measuring 124' x 20' situated in the town of Tanjore. The original tenant was M.Ramasamy Pillai who is now dead and is represented through his legal representatives who are the appellants in the present appeal. The plaintiff brought the suit on the allegation that the defendant took the suit property on lease for a period of 2 years from February 1, 1955 on a monthly rent of Rs.10 and executed a rent deed on November 17, 1955. It was further alleged that the defendant was in occupation of the site as a tenant ever since February 1, 1955 and after the expiry of the period of 2 years fixed in the rent deed, the defendant was continuing as a tenant holding over on the same terms. The defendant raised a superstructure on the land in suit. Till October, 1966 the superstructure was made up of mud walls and thatched roofing. But suddenly, the defendant renewed the roofing of the front portion into one of Calicut Tiles without the knowledge or permission of the plaintiff. It was further alleged in the plaint that the plaintiff wanted to construct pucca terraced shops on the site for which the necessary licence had been obtained from the Municipality and as such the property in suit was needed for the plaintiff's own use.

2. The defendant filed a written statement on November 7, 1967 and inter alia alleged that the site was originally in the occupation of Damodara Nair and one Panchapakesan as lessees. Damodara Nair had put up a pucca Mangalore tiled roofing over the back portion of the land. Panchapakesan and his father Sundaram Mudaliar had put up a thatched structure on the front portion of the land. The defendant had purchased the superstructures from both the above persons in or about the year 1942. The defendant used the back portion for his residence and the front portion for carrying on bicycle and motor cycle repairing shop. It was further alleged in the written statement that the plaintiff had recognised the occupation of the defendant and had also accepted him as a tenant and was receiving the rent from the defendant since 1942. In 1955 the plaintiff wanted a registered rent deed and as such a registered lease deed was executed on November 17, 1955. It was in fact, a renewal of the existing tenancy. The defendant also took the plea that under the Madras City Tenants' Protection Act, it was open to the tenant to claim compensation or pray for conveyance of the site on a price to be fixed by the court. The defendant also took a plea that the suit was not maintainable as the property formed part of a Minor Inam under the Minor Inams Abolition Act 30 of 1963, but we are not concerned with this objection now.

3. The defendant also filed a separate petition under Sec.9 of the Madras City Tenants' Protection Act (hereinafter referred to as the 'Act') on November 6, 1967 and prayed for fixing a price for the suit site and to convey the property on payment of the price to be fixed by the Court. In reply to this petition under Sec.9, a stand was taken by the plaintiff that the property being a wakf property as such it was inalienable. It was also pleaded that the lease of the site under the lease deed of 1955 was invalid. It was also pleaded that even if the tenant was found entitled to the benefits of the City Tenants' Protection Act, he can claim the benefit only so far as the residential portion in the back side was concerned and not in respect of the entire property. The learned Munsif after remand of the case to him, by a common judgment dated March 10, 1976 decreed the suit for possession in favour of the plaintiff and dismissed the petition of the tenant filed under Sec.9 of the Act. The learned Munsif held that the lease deed dated November 17, 1955 being invalid, the tenant was not entitled to take benefit of Sec.9 of the Act. The tenant then filed appeals against the judgment in the suit for possession as well as miscellaneous appeal against the dismissal of his petition filed under Sec.9 of the Act. Both the appeals were dismissed by the learned Subordinate Judge. The second appeal in both the matters were also dismissed by the High Court by a common judgment dated April 2, 1980. The tenant aggrieved against the judgment of the High Court has filed the abovementioned two appeals.

4. We have heard learned counsel for the parties. The High Court held that there was no evidence on behalf of the appellant to show that he had been already recognised as a lawful tenant of the property prior to 1955 by the respondent. The High Court observed that a perusal of the recitals in Ex.A-5 the lease deed dated November 17, 1955 indicated that possession was with the respondent and the appellant was being inducted into the possession for the first time and if really, the appellants had earlier been in possession of the property concerned as a tenant having been inducted therein as far back as on 1942 there was nothing that precluded the parties from reciting this fact in 1955. The High Court thus held that under the above circumstances it was not possible to conclude that there existed the relationship of landlord and tenant between the appellant and the respondent even prior to Ex.A-5.

5. The High Court further held that under the Mohammedan Law the mutawalli had no power to execute the lease in favour of the appellant for a period of two years and as such the lease was invalid. The High Court then held that though the lease in favour of the appellant was not void but only voidable, but in the counter filed by the respondent to the application filed by the appellant under Sec.9 of the Act, a specific objection had been taken that the lease was not binding on the wakf as the same was not for its benefit nor made for any necessity. The lease was thus not binding on the wakf, even in 1955 and the same can certainly be avoided by respondent in the course of the proceedings under Sec.9 of the Act. Taking the aforesaid view the High Court held that the appellants were not entitled to invoke any benefits under the Act.

6. In the facts and circumstances of this case the view taken by the High Court is wrong and is liable to be set aside. A perusal of the plaint dated September 15, 1967 clearly shows that the plaintiff had come forward with a clear case that the defendant was a tenant holding over and the High Court, was not right to make out a new case beyond the pleadings. In para 3 of the plaint it was stated as under:

"The defendant is in occupation of the site of the undermentioned property as a tenant ever since February 1, 1955 and is continuing as a tenant after the expiry of the period fixed in the rent deed holding over on the same terms."

Again in para 10, it was stated as under:

"As the defendant has specifically undertaken in the rent deed to surrender vacant possession of the site after the expiry of the lease period and as he is now holding over on the same terms, with the consent of the plaintiff-Thaikal, he has no right to refuse to deliver vacant possession of the site to the plaintiff-Thaikal whenever called upon to do so, particularly when the plaintiff-Thaikal requires the site for raising pucca terraced structures thereon."

7. The defendant had taken the plea that he had purchased the superstructures in or about the year 1942 from Damodara Nair and Panchapakesan and had taken up his residence in the tiled portion and in the front portion he had been carrying on bicycle and motorcycle repair shop. The trial court had recorded the finding that it was made manifest by the evidence adduced in this case both oral and documentary that the defendant was in possession of the superstructure even from the year 1942. The defendant had filed property tax receipts issued by the Thanjavur Municipality to the mutawalli, the amount having been paid by the defendant as disclosed by Exs.B-5 to B-51 ranging over a period from 1942 to 1960. The trial court also observed that Exs.B-61 to B-68 were the receipts issued to the defendant evidencing payments of rent to the mutawalli. The trial court held that there can be no doubt that even from the year 1942 the defendant must have been in possession of the superstructures on the suit property. The High Court simply considered Ex.A-5 dated November 17, 1955 and held that there was no evidence to show that the appellant had been in possession of the property as a tenant under the respondent prior to the execution of Ex.A-5. The High Court placed reliance on the recitals in Ex.A-5 to indicate that the appellant was inducted into possession for the first time pursuant to the terms of the lease and observed that had the appellant been in possession of the property earlier then such facts should have been recited in Ex.A-5. The High Court was wrong in taking the above view. There was overwhelming evidence on record to show that the appellant was in occupation of the property long before 1955 and the stand taken by the appellant was correct that it was purely a renewal of the existing tenancy which had already come into existence from the year 1942. Be that as it may the suit for eviction had been filed on September 15, 1967 and the plaintiff himself had come forward with a clear case that the defendant was a tenant holding over.

8. The only reason given for denying the benefit of Sec.9 of the City Tenants' Protection Act by the High Court to the appellant is that while executing the lease deed Ex.A-5 dated November 17, 1955, the mutawalli had no power to grant such lease under the provisions of the Wakf Act 29 of 1954 as amended by Amendment Act 34 of 1964. In our opinion the High Court was not correct in taking the aforesaid view. The appellant in the present case was a tenant long before the coming into force of the Wakf Act, 1954. The plaintiff had come forward with a clear case in the plaint dated September 15, 1967 that the appellant was a tenant holding over and as such he was not entitled to take a different plea in reply to the petition filed under Sec.9 of the Act that the appellant was not a tenant as the property in question was a wakf property and the mutawalli had no right to grant a lease vide Ex.A-5 dated November 17, 1955. Thus, in the facts and circumstances of this case the defendant/appellant was entitled to the benefit of the provision of Sec.9 of the Act.

9. It may however be noted that clause (b) to Subsec.(1) of Sec.9 as added by Sec.6(ii) of the Madras City Tenants' Protection (Amendment) Act, 1960, reads as under:

"9.(1)(b) On such application, the court shall first decide the minimum extent of the land which may be necessary for the convenient enjoyment by the tenant. The court, shall then fix the price of the minimum extent of the land decided as aforesaid, or of the extent of the land specified in the application under clause (a) whichever is less. The price aforesaid shall be the average market value of the three years immediately preceding the date of the order. The court shall order that within a period to be determined by the court, not being less than three months and not more than three years from the date of the order, the tenant shall pay into court or otherwise as directed the price so fixed in one or more instalments with or without interest."

10. According to the above provision the court shall first decide the minimum extent of the land which may be necessary for the convenient enjoyment by the tenant. The court shall then fix the price of the minimum extent of the land according to the average market value of the three years immediately preceding the date of the order. While determining the aforesaid price of the land, we make it clear that the price shall be reckoned at the average market value of the three years immediately preceding the present order.

11. In the result, we allow these appeals, set aside the impugned order of the High Court as well as of the courts below and remand the case to the trial court with a direction to decide the petition filed under Sec.9 of the Act in accordance with law and in the manner indicated above. Parties to bear their own costs.

C.A.No.4865 of 1992 17th November, 1992.

A.A.Haja Muniuddin ...Appellant

v.

Indian Railways ...Respondent.

Railway Claims Tribunal Act (LIV of 1987), Secs.13(1), 15 and 18(1) - Railway Claims Tribunal Rules (1989), Rules 6 and 44 - Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O.33 - Indigent person if can be permitted to prefer claim without payment of fee, on principle of O.33, C.P.C.

It will be seen from the scheme of the Act that on its coming into force from the appointed day, all suits pending in the Civil Court would stand transferred to the Claims Tribunal if the cause of action of the suit would have fallen within the jurisdiction of the Tribunal after the appointed day. Therefore, even a suit filed under the provisions of O.33 would stand transferred to the Claims Tribunal and the Claims Tribunal would be required to dispose of it as such. That is because Sec.13 specifically provides that the Claims Tribunal shall exercise, on or from the appointed day all such jurisdiction, powers and authority as were exercisable immediately before that day by any civil court provided the same relates to the recovery of compensation for loss, destruction, damage, deterioration or non-delivery of goods entrusted to the railways for carriage by railway. Sec.15 bars the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to entertain and try such suits on and from the appointed day. In other words, after the appointed day the Claims Tribunal alone would have jurisdiction to entertain and try claims referred to in clauses (a) and (b) of Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.13 of the Act. Sec.18 then sets out the procedure to be followed by the Claims Tribunal. It is true that Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.18 in term states that the Claims Tribunal shall not be bound by the procedure laid down by the Code, but that does not mean that it is precluded from invoking the procedure laid down by the Code even if the ends of justice so require. The sub-section further states that the Tribunal shall have powers to regulate its own procedure and Sub-sec.(3) of Sec.18 enumerates the matters in respect whereof the Claims Tribunal is permitted to exercise the same powers vested in a civil court under the Code while trying a suit. Rule 44 in terms states that nothing in the Rules shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Tribunal to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice. Nowhere in the Act is there any provision which runs counter to or is inconsistent with the provisions of O.33 of the Code. Although the Act and the Rules do not specifically provide for the application of O.33 of the Code, there is nothing in the Act or the Rules which precludes the Tribunal from following that procedure if the ends of justice so require. [Para 5]

Access to justice cannot be denied to an individual merely because he does not have the means to pay the prescribed fee. Such a view would leave indigent persons without a remedy. It is, therefore, essential that the provisions of the Act and the Rules must be broadly interpreted to ensure access to justice. If a claimant is left without redress even if he has a valid claim against the railway administration merely because he is an indigent person, it would be a sad day and the poor will lose confidence in the system. No one can be heard to say, much less the railway administration, that even though the claimant has a genuine claim for compensation, against the railway administration, he must forgo the same if he does not have the means to pay the requisite fee. Such an interpretation which denies justice must be avoided.

[Para 5]

Thus, when an indigent person approaches the Tribunal for compensation for the wrong done to him, the Tribunal cannot refuse to exercise jurisdiction merely because he does not have the means to pay the fee. In such a situation, the ends of justice require that the Tribunal should follow the procedure laid down in O.33 of the Code to do justice for which it came to be established.

[Para 5]

Ms.Sandhya Ramachandra, for Appellant.
Dr.Anand Prakash, Senior Advocate (Hemant Sharma, V.K.Verma and B.Krishna Prasad, Advocates, with him), for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Ahmedi, J.:- Special leave granted.

2. The short question which arises for determination in this appeal is whether an indigent person who is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by Sub-sec.(2) of Sec.16 of the Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987

(hereinafter called 'the Act') can be permitted to prefer his claim as an indigent person on the principle embodied in O.33 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (hereinafter called 'the Code'). The brief facts giving rise to this appeal are as under.

3. The appellant despatched marble slabs from Makrana Railway Station for carriage by rail under railway risk to Ramanathapuram. The wagon carrying the marble slabs met with an accident. The marble slabs reached the station of destination in broken pieces. Treating the damage as a total loss, the appellant preferred a claim for Rs.1,05,000 before the Railway Claims Tribunal established under Sec.3 of the Act. The appellant was required to pay a fee of Rs.2,055 on the said claim-application under Sub-sec.(2) of Sec.16 of the Act read with Rule.6 of the Railway Claims Tribunal (Procedure) Rules, 1989 (hereinafter called 'the Rules'). However since the appellant did not have the means to pay the requisite fee, he lodged the claim-application on a fee of Rs.150 only and prayed that he may be permitted to prosecute the claim as an indigent person. The Tribunal, however, came to the conclusion that since O.33 of the Code had no application to claims preferred under the provisions of the Act, the appellant cannot be permitted to prosecute the application as such. The Tribunal, therefore, spurned the appellant's request. It is against the said order of the Tribunal that the present appeal by special leave has been brought to this Court.

4. In order to appreciate the contention urged before us it would be advantageous to bear in mind the scheme of the Act. The Act was enacted to inter alia provide for the establishment of a Railway Claims Tribunal for inquiring into and determining claims against the railway administration for loss, destruction, damage, deterioration or non-delivery of goods entrusted to it to be carried by railways and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto. Sec.3 provides for the establishment of a Railway Claims Tribunal. Sec.13 which confers jurisdiction reads as under:

"13. Jurisdiction, powers and authority of Claims Tribunal: (1) The Claims Tribunal shall exercise, on and from the appointed day, all such jurisdiction, powers and authority as were exercisable immediately before that day by any civil court or a Claims Commissioner appointed under the provisions of the Railways Act,—

(a) relating to the responsibility of the railway administration as carriers under Chapter VII of the Railways Act in respect of claims for—
(i) compensation for loss, destruction, damage, deterioration or non-delivery of animals or goods entrusted to a railway administration for carriage by railway;

(ii) compensation payable under Sec.82-A of the Railways Act or the Rules made thereunder; and

(b) in respect of the claims for refund of fares or part thereof or for refund of any freight paid in respect of animals or goods entrusted to a railway administration to be carried by railway.
(2) The provisions of the Railways Act and the Rules made thereunder shall, so far as may be, applicable to the inquiring into or determining, any claims by the Claims Tribunal under this Act."

Sec.15 provides that on or from the appointed day, no court or other authority shall have, or be entitled to, exercise any jurisdiction, powers or authority in relation to the matters referred to in Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.13. We now come to Sec.16 which reads as under:

"16. Application to Claims Tribunal: (1) A person seeking any relief in respect of the matters referred to in Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.13 may make an application to the Claims Tribunal.

(2) Every application under Sub-sec.(1) shall be in such form and be accompanied by such documents or other evidence and by such fee in respect of the filing of such application and by such other fees for the service or execution of processes as may be prescribed:

Provided that no such fee shall be payable in respect of an application under Sub-clause (ii) of clause (a) of Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.13."

Sec.18(1) provides that the Claims Tribunal shall not be bound by the procedure laid down by the Code, but shall be guided by the principles of natural justice and, subject to the other provisions of the Act and of any Rules, the Claims Tribunal shall have powers to regulate its own procedure. Sub-sec.(3) of Sec.18 then provides as under:

"18.(3) The Claims Tribunal shall have, for the purposes of discharging its functions under this Act, the same powers as are vested in a civil court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (5 of 1908), while trying a suit, in respect of the following matters, namely:

- (a) summoning and enforcing the attendance of any person and examining him on oath;
- (b) requiring the discovery and production of documents;
- (c) receiving evidence on affidavits;
- (d) subject to the provisions of Secs.123 and 124 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (1 of 1872), requisitioning any public record or document or copy of such record or document from any office;
- (e) issuing commissions for the examination of witnesses or documents;
- (f) reviewing its decisions;
- (g) dismissing an application for default or deciding it ex parte;
- (h) setting aside any order of dismissal of any application for default or any order passed by it ex parte;
- (i) any other matter which may be prescribed."

Sec.24 provides that every suit, claim or other legal proceeding (other than an appeal) pending before any Court, Claims Commissioner or other authority immediately before the appointed day, being a suit, claim or proceeding the cause of action whereon it is based is such that it would have been, if it had arisen after the appointed day, within the jurisdiction of the Claims Tribunal, shall stand transferred on that day to the Claims Tribunal. It is, therefore, obvious that every suit pending before any court before the appointed day would stand transferred to the Claims Tribunal if the cause of action thereof is one that would have been, if it had arisen after the appointed day, within the jurisdiction of the Claims Tribunal. Sec.28 lays down that the provisions of the Act shall have effect notwithstanding anything inconsistent therewith contained in any other law for the time being in force. Sec.30 empowers the Central Government to make Rules. In exercise of this power the Central Government made the Rules referred to above and brought them into force from the appointed day i.e. the date with effect from which the Claims Tribunal came to be established under Sec.3 of the Act. Rule 6 which is relevant for our purpose provides that every application made under Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.16 for seeking relief in respect of matters, other than claim of compensation for death or injuries to passengers, shall be accompanied by a fee as specified in Schedule II. Rule 44 lays down that nothing in the Rules shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Tribunal to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Tribunal. 5. It will be seen from the scheme of the Act that on its coming into force from the appointed day, all suits pending in the civil court would stand transferred to the Claims Tribunal if the cause of action of the suit would have fallen within the jurisdiction of the Tribunal after the appointed day. Therefore, even a suit filed under the provisions of O.33 would stand transferred to the Claims Tribunal and the Claims Tribunal would be required to dispose of it as such. That is because Sec.13 specifically provides that the Claims Tribunal shall exercise, on or from the appointed day all such jurisdiction, powers and authority as were exercisable immediately before that day by any civil court provided the same relates to the recovery of compensation for loss, destruction, damage, deterioration or non-delivery of goods entrusted to the railways for carriage by railway. Sec.15 bars the jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain and try such suits on and from the appointed day. In other words after the appointed day the Claims Tribunal alone would have jurisdiction to entertain and try claims referred to in Clauses (a) and (b) of Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.13 of the Act. Sec.18 then sets out the procedure to be followed by the Claims Tribunal. Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.18 states that the Claims Tribunal shall not be bound by the procedure laid down by the Code but shall be guided by the principles of natural justice and shall have powers to regulate its own procedure. It is true that Sub-sec.(1) of Sec.18 in term states that the Claims Tribunal shall not be bound by the procedure laid down by the Code but that does not mean that it is precluded from invoking the procedure laid down by the Code even if the ends of justice so require. The sub-section further states that the Tribunal shall have powers to regulate its own procedure and Sub-sec.(3) of Sec.18 enumerates the matters in respect whereof the Claims Tribunal is permitted to exercise the same powers vested in a civil court under the Code while trying a suit. Rule 44 in terms states that nothing in the Rules shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Tribunal to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice. Nowhere in the Act is there any provision which runs counter to or is inconsistent with the provisions of O.33 of the Code. Although the Act and the Rules do not specifically provide for the application of O.33 of the Code, there is nothing in the Act or the Rules which precludes the Tribunal from following that procedure if the ends of justice so require. If the view taken by the Tribunal is accepted as laying down the correct law, the result would be that a claimant who has a genuine claim for compensation under the provisions of the Act would be denied access to the Claims Tribunal if he is an indigent person and does not have the means to pay the fee required on the claim-application. Before the establishment of the Claims Tribunal he would have been able to file the suit invoking O.33 of the Code as an indigent person. Now that a special Claims Tribunal has been established under the Act, can it be said that indigent persons who do not have the means to pay the fee required on the claim-application are altogether debarred from seeking compensation from the railway administration for the wrong done to them? Access to justice cannot be denied to an individual merely because he does not have the means to pay the prescribed fee. Such a view would leave indigent persons without a remedy. It is, therefore, essential that the provisions of the Act and the Rules must be broadly interpreted to ensure access to justice. If a claimant is left without redress even if he has a valid claim against the railway administration merely because he is an indigent person, it would be a sad day and the poor will lose confidence in the system. No one can be heard to say, much less the railway administration, that even though the claimant has a genuine claim for compensation, against the railway administration, he must forgo the same if he does not have the means to pay the requisite fee. Such an interpretation which denies justice must be avoided. Sec.18(1) only says that the Claims Tribunal 'shall not be bound' by the procedure laid down by the Code but does not go so far as to say that it 'shall be precluded' from invoking the provisions laid down by the Code even if the same is not consistent with the Act and the Rules. Since the Claims Tribunal is empowered to regulate its own procedure, there is nothing in the Act and the Rules which precludes the invocation of O.33 of the Code. A view which advances the cause of justice must be preferred to the one which defeats it. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the Tribunal adopted a narrow interpretation of the relevant provisions of the Act in coming to the conclusion that the Act as well as the Rules did not permit invocation of O.33 of the Code. The view taken by the Tribunal results in a person not having the means to pay the fee prescribed for preferring a claim being left without a remedy. Such a view would result in gross injustice. The Tribunal has the power to lay down its own procedure and as stated earlier Sec.18(1) does not preclude it from invoking the provisions of O.33 of the Code if the ends of justice so require. When an indigent person approaches the Tribunal for compensation for the wrong done to him, the Tribunal cannot refuse to exercise jurisdiction merely because he does not have the means to pay the fee. In such a situation we think the ends of justice require that the Tribunal should follow the procedure laid down in O.33 of the Code to do justice for which it came to be established.

6. In the result we allow this appeal, set aside the order of the Claims Tribunal and remit the matter to the Claims Tribunal to deal with the appellant's claim-application in the light of the principle enunciated hereinabove. In the facts and circumstances of the case there will be no order as to costs.

C.A.Nos.1749 and 1752 of 1992 11th January, 1993.

S.V.Chandra Pandian and others Appellants
v.

S.V.Sivalinga Nadar and others ...Respondents.

(A) Partnership Act (IX of 1932) - Partnership firm
- No legal entity - Property would vest in all partners
- Rights of partners during its subsistence and on its dissolution.

It is well settled that the firm is not a legal entity, it has no legal existence, it is merely a compendious name and hence the partnership property would vest in all the partners of the firm. Accordingly each and every partner of the firm would have an interest in the property or asset of the firm but during the subsistence, no partner can deal with any portion of the property or belonging to him, nor can he assign his interest in any specific item thereof to anyone. By virtue of the implied authority conferred as agent of the firm, his action would bind the firm if it is done to carry on, in the usual way, the business of the kind carried on by the firm but the act or instrument by which the firm is sought to be bound must be done or exempted in the firm name or in any other names expressing or implying an intention to bind the firm. His right is merely to obtain such profits, if any, as may fall to his share upon the dissolution of the firm which remain after satisfying the liabilities set out in the various such clauses (i) to (iv) of clause (b) of Sec.48 of the Act. [Para 8]

(B) Registration Act (XVI of 1908), Sec.17(1) - Partnership Act (IX of 1932), Sec.48 - Dissolution of partnership - Distribution of assets of firm amongst partners of firm - If amounts to partition of immovable properties - Whether amounts to relinquishment or extinguishment of share in immovable property - Award so distributing if requires registration. Regardless of its character, the property brought into stock of the firm or acquired by the firm during its subsistence for the purposes and in the course of the business of the firm shall constitute the property of the firm unless the contract between the partners provides otherwise. On the dissolution of the firm each partner became entitled to his share in the profits, of any, after the accounts are settled in accordance with Sec.48 of the Partnership Act. Thus in the entire asset of the firm all the partners have all interest albeit in proportion to their share and the residue, of any after the settlement of accounts on dissolution would have to be divided among the partners in the same proportion in which they were entitled to a share in the profit. Thus during the subsistence of the partnership, a partner would be entitled to a share in the profits and after its dissolution to a share in the residue, if any on settlement of accounts. The mode of settlement of accounts set out in Sec.48 clearly indicates that the partnership asset in its entirety must be converted into money and from the pool the disbursement has to be made as set out in clause (a) and sub-clauses (i)(ii) and (iii) of clause (b) and thereafter if there is any residue that has to be divided among the partners in the proportions in which they were entitled to a share in the profits of the firm. So viewed, it becomes obvious that the residue would, in the eye of law, be moveable property i.e., cash and hence distribution of the residue among the partners in proportion to their shares in the profits would not attract Sec.17 of the Registration Act. Viewed from another angle, it must be realised that since a partnership is not a legal entity but is only a compendious name, each and every partner has a beneficial interest in the property of the firm even though he cannot lay a claim on any earmarked portion thereof as the same cannot be predicated. Therefore, when any property is allocated to him from the residue it cannot be said that he had only a definite limited interest in that property and that there is a transfer of the remaining interest in his favour within the meaning of Sec.17 of the Registration Act. Each and every partner of a firm has an undefined interest in each and every property of the firm and it is not possible to say unless the accounts are settled and the residue or surplus determined what would be the extent of the interest of each partner in the property. It is, however, clear that since no partner can claim a definite or earmarked interest in one or all of the properties of the firm because the interest is a fluctuating one depending on various factors such as the losses incurred by the firm, the advances made by the partners as distinguished from the capital brought in the firm on if cannot be said unless the accounts are settled in the manner indicated by Sec.48 of the Partnership Act, what would be the residue which would ultimately be allocable to the partners. In that residue which becomes divisible among the partners every partner has an interest and when a particular property is allocated to a partner in proportion to his share in the profits of the firm, there is no partition or transfer taking place nor is there any extinguishment of interest of other partners in the allocated property in the sense of a transfer or extinguishment of interest under Sec.17 of the Registration Act. Therefore, viewed from this angle also, it seems clear that when a dissolution of the partnership takes place and the residue is distributed among the partners after settlement of accounts, there is no partition, transfer or extinguishment of interest attracting Sec.17 of the Registration Act. [Para 16]

(C) Registration Act (XVI of 1908), Sec.17(1) -

Partnership Act (IX of 1932), Sec. 48 - Dissolution of partnership - Settlement of accounts - Residue divided among partners Arbitrators allotting lands and buildings of the firm or jointly owned by the partners to one or other or jointly, to some of the partners - Award - Whether confers exclusive rights to the allottees - Award, if requires registration.

Mere statements that a certain property will now exclusively belong to one partner or the other, as the case may be, cannot change the character of the document or the nature of the assignment because that would, in any case, be the effect on the distribution of the residue. The property falling to the share of the partner on the distributing of the residue would naturally belong to him exclusively but so long as, in the eye of law, it is money and not immovable property, there is no question of registration under Sec. 17 of the Registration Act. Besides as stated earlier, even when one looks at the award as allocating certain immovable property since there is no transfer, no partition or extinguishment of any right therein, there is no question of application of Sec. 17(1) of the Registration Act. The reference to other hand and buildings and house properties jointly owned by the disputants in clause (C) of paragraph 10 of the award merely indicates that certain properties belonging to the firm stood in the names of individual partners or in their joint names but they belonged to the firm and, therefore, they were taken into account for the purpose of settlement of accounts under Sec. 48 of the Partnership Act and distributed on the determination of the residue. The award read as a whole makes it absolutely clear that the arbitrators had confined themselves to the properties belonging to the two firms and had scrupulously avoided other properties in regard to which they did not reach the conclusion that they belonged to the firm. On a correct reading of the award, the court is satisfied that the award seeks to distribute the residue after settlement of accounts on dissolution. While distributing the residue, the arbitrators allocated the properties to the partners and showed them in the Schedules appended to the award. The court is, therefore, of the opinion that on a true reading of the award as a whole, there is no doubt that it essentially deals with the distributions of the surplus properties belonging to the dissolved firms. The award, therefore, did not require registration under Sec. 17(1) of the Registration Act. [Para 17]

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Ahmadi, J.:- The four appellants and respondents 1 and 2 are brothers. They were carrying on business in partnership in the name and style of Messrs. Sivalinga Nadar and Brothers and S.V.S. Oil Mills, both partnerships being registered under the Partnership Act, 1932. Most of the properties were acquired by the firm of Sivalinga Nadar and Brothers. The firm of Messrs. S.V.S. Oil Mills merely had leasehold rights in the parcel of land belonging to the first named firm on which the superstructure of the oil mill stood. Both the partnerships were of fixed durations. Disputes arose between the six brothers in regard to the business carried on in partnership in the aforesaid two names. For the resolution of these disputes the six brothers entered into an arbitration agreement dated 8th October, 1981, which was as under:

"We are carrying on business in partnership together with other partners under several partnership names. We are also holding shares and Managing the public Limited Company, namely, The Madras Vanaspati Ltd., at Villupuram. Disputes have arisen among us with respect to the several business ~~concerns~~ immovable and moveable properties standing in our names as well as other relatives.

We are hereby referring all our disputes, the details of which would be given by us shortly to you, namely, Sri B.B.Naidu, Sri K.R.Ramamani and Sri Seetharaman.

We agree to abide by your award as to our disputes."

All the three arbitrators were fairly well-conversant with the business carried on in different names by the aforesaid two partnership firms; the first two being their tax consultants and the third being their Chartered Accountant. The parties, therefore, had complete faith and trust in their objectivity and impartiality.

2. The arbitrators accepted and entered upon the reference and after giving the disputants full and complete opportunity to place their rival points of view before them, circulated a draft award and after considering the response and reaction of the disputants thereon made their final award on 9th July, 1984. The concluding part of the award reads as under:

"We hereby direct that each of the parties be allotted the schedule of properties mentioned in the various schedules A to F annexed to this award.

- | | |
|--------------------------|--------------|
| 1. S.V.Sivalinga Nadar - | Schedule 'A' |
| 2. S.V.Harikrishnan - | Schedule 'B' |
| 3. S.V.Chandrapandian - | Schedule 'C' |
| 4. S.V.Kasilingam - | Schedule 'D' |
| 5. S.V.Ramchandran - | Schedule 'E' |
| 6. S.V.Natesan - | Schedule 'F' |

We direct that the firms of M/s.Sivalinga Nadar and Brothers and M/s.S.V.S. Oil Mills and also the joint house property Rent Account be dissolved as at the close of business on 14th July, 1984."

The arbitrators then proceed to set out the properties belonging to or claimed to belong to the aforesaid two firms in paragraphs 6 to 24 of their award. Paragraph 25 is a residuary clause which says that any asset left out or realised hereafter or any liability found due other than those reflected in the account books, shall, likewise, be divided and/or borne, equally among the disputants. Paragraphs 26 and 27 deal with the use of the firm names. Paragraph 28 refers to the claim of Smt.C.Kanthimathi, sister of the six partners, with which we are not concerned in these appeals. Paragraph 29 refers to the business carried on by the relatives of the disputants in the names of Sri Brahmasakthi Agency and Srimagal Finance Corporation. The arbitrators have recognised the fact that even though the said business is not carried on by the disputants it would be desirable to dissolve the said firms also w.e.f. 24th July, 1984 in the larger interest of peace and amity among the disputants and their relatives. Paragraph 30 refers to the properties standing in the name of the father of the six disputants, i.e., partners of the two firms in question. It is stated that although initially the disputants had shown an inclination to refer the dispute concerning the properties owned by their father to the arbitration of the three arbitrators but when it was noticed that the deceased had left a will disposing of the properties the need for resolution of the dispute through arbitration did not survive. In paragraph 31 the arbitrators have determined their fees and have directed the disputants to bear them equally. At the end of the award the properties falling to the share of the disputants have been set out in detail in Schedules A to F referred to earlier.

3. After the award was made on 9th July, 1984, O.P.No.230 of 1984 was filed by S.V.Chandrapandian and others for a direction to the arbitrators to file their award in court which was done. Thereupon, the applicants S.V.Chandrapandian and others filed a Misc.Appln.No.3503 of 1984 requesting the court to pass a decree in terms of the award. Before orders could be passed on that application, O.P.Nos.247 and 275 of 1984 were filed by S.V.Sivalinga Nadar and S.V.Harikrishnan respectively under Sec.30 of the Arbitration Act to set aside the award. The said applications came up for hearing before a learned single Judge of the High Court. Various points were raised and decided by the learned single Judge but it would be sufficient for our purpose to refer to the one which we are called upon to decide in these group of appeals. That is to be found in paragraph 71 of the judgment of the learned single Judge. The contention urged was that having regard to the allotment of partnership properties under the award, it was incumbent that the award should have been registered as required by Sec.17(1) of the Registration Act and since it lacked registration, the court had no jurisdiction to make it the rule of the court and grant a decree in terms thereof.

4. The learned single Judge answered the aforesaid contention in paragraph 72 of his judgment as under:

"The learned counsel for the respondents also contended that the Award falls under Schedule 1, Art.12 of the Stamp Act and the allocation of properties owned by partnership firm on dissolution to the erstwhile partners is not partition of immovable properties. In this connection, learned counsel for the respondents placed reliance in the decision reported in Addanki Narayanappa v. Bhaskara Krishnappa, A.I.R. 1959 A.P. 380 (F.B.), which decision has been confirmed in Addanki Narayanappa v. Bhaskara Krishnappa, A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 1300: (1966)2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 60: (1966)2 An.W.R. (S.C.) 60: (1966)2 S.C.J. 490: (1966)3 S.C.R. 400 (S.C.). It was submitted by the learned counsel for the respondents that the contentions with regard to stamp and registration put forward by the petitioner cannot be accepted. It is to be pointed out that the Award has been submitted for registration long ago on 27.10.1984 itself and it is stamped and if there is any deficiency, the Registering Authority could direct proper stamp to be affixed and therefore I feel there could be no impediment for the award being made a rule of the court and a decree being passed in terms of the Award as contended by the learned counsel for the respondents."

The learned single Judge thereafter proceeded to make the final order in paragraph 78 of the judgment in the following terms:

"Thus on a careful consideration of the materials available and the contentions of either side it has to be decided that Appln. No.3505 of 1984 in O.P.No.230 of 1984 filed by the petitioners therein praying for a decree in terms of the arbitration Award dated 9.7.1984 has to be allowed and O.P.Nos.247 and 275 of 1984 and the applications filed in those two petitions, i.e., Application Nos.3474, 3476, 5030, 5031, 5032, 2827, 2828, 3773, 3762, 3874 of 1984 and 4886 and 4887 of 1985, are dismissed. The petitioner in O.P.No.230 of 1984 and the applicants in Appln. No.3505 of 1984 are directed to take steps for getting the Award registered. The parties in all these proceedings are directed to bear their own costs."

5. It may be mentioned that after the making of the award one of the arbitrators Sri B.B.Naidu passed away on 20th October, 1984. At the request of some of the parties the surviving arbitrators presented the award before the District Registrar, Madras, for registration on 27.10.1984. Even though the signature of the deceased arbitrator was identified by the surviving arbitrators the document was kept pending for registration. In the meantime, on 23rd January, 1987, advocate for Sivalinga Nadar served notice on the Registrar not to register the document and threatened to take proceedings in court if the document was registered. It will thus be seen that the registration of the document was blocked by one of the disputants Sivalinga Nadar on the premise that the High Court had in O.P.No.247 of 1984 granted a stay against the operation of the award on 5th September, 1984.

6. Against the judgment of the learned single Judge, the matter was carried in appeal to a Division Bench of the High Court of Madras. The Division Bench of the High Court reversed the aforesaid finding recorded by the learned single Judge and came to the conclusion that the award required registration under Sec.17(1) of the Registration Act. In this view that it took, it did not think it necessary to go into the other contentions dealt with by the learned single Judge. It held that since the award required registration and was in fact not registered no proceeding for making the award the rule of the court could be entertained because in the absence of a valid award the court had no jurisdiction to grant a decree in terms of the award. It, however, took note of the fact that the award was presented for registration but on account of the conduct of one of the disputants it could not be registered as the Registering Authority was threatened with civil consequences. The correspondence in this behalf was sought to be placed on record as additional evidence but the Division Bench thought that would not alter the situation since the fact remained that the award was not registered even on the date of its judgment. It, therefore, made the following observation in paragraph 46 of the judgment:

"It, however, does not mean that if the award is validly registered and presented to be made a rule of the court in accordance with law, the court cannot entertain the same."

In this view of the matter the Division Bench allowed the appeal and set aside the impugned judgment of the learned single Judge and held that as the award was not registered, it could not be made the rule of the court. It made no order as to costs. It is against this decision of the Division

Bench of the High Court that the present appeals by special leave (we also grant special leave in S.L.P.No.9408 of 1992) have been filed.

7. Before we examine the contention based on Sec.17 of the Registration Act we may notice a few relevant provisions bearing on the interest of partners in partnership property as found in the Partnership Act, 1932. Sec.4 defines partnership as a relationship between persons who have agreed to share the profit of a business carried on by all or any of them acting for all. Sec.14 provides that subject to contract between the partners, the property of the firm includes all property and rights and interest in property originally brought into the stock of the firm, or acquired, by purchase or otherwise, by or for the firm, or for the purposes and in the course of the business of the firm, and includes also the goodwill of the business. It is also clarified that unless the contrary intention appears, property and rights and interest in property acquired with money belonging to the firm shall be deemed to have been acquired for the firm. Sec.15 says that the property of the firm shall be held and used by the partners exclusively for the purposes of the business subject of course to contract between the partners. Says Sec.18, subject to the provisions of the Act, a partner is the agent of the firm for the purposes of the business of the firm. Under Sec.19 the act of a partner which is done to carry on, in the usual way, business of the kind carried on by the firm, shall bind the firm. This authority to bind the firm is termed as "implied authority". Sec.22 lays down that in order to bind a firm, an act or instrument done or executed by a partner or other person on behalf of the firm shall be done or executed in the firm name, or in any other manner expressing or implying an intention to bind the firm. Sec.29 deals with the rights of transferee of a partner's interest. Sub-sec.(1) thereof provides that such a transferee will not have the same rights as the transferor-partner but he would be entitled to receive the share of profits of his transferor on the account of profits agreed to by the partners. Sub-sec.(2) next provides that upon dissolution of the firm or upon a transferor-partner ceasing to be a partner, the transferee would be entitled against the remaining partners to receive the share of the assets of the firm to which the transferor-partner was entitled and will also be entitled to an account as from the date of dissolution. Sec.30 deals with the case of a minor admitted to the benefits of partnership. Such a minor is given a right to his share of the property of the firm and also a right to share in the profits of the firm as may be agreed upon but his share is made liable for the acts of the firm though he would not be personally liable for the same. Sub-sec.(4) however, debars a minor from suing the partners for an account or for his share of the property or profits of the firm except when he severs his connections with the firm, in which case for determining his share the law requires a valuation of his share in the property of the firm to be made in accordance with Sec.48. Secs.31 to 38 relate to incoming and outgoing partners. Sec.32 deals with the consequences of retirement. Sub-sec.(2) and (3) of Sec.32 deal with the consequences of retirement while Secs.36 and 37 speak about the rights of an outgoing partner to carry on competing business and in certain cases to share subsequent profits. Chapter VI deals with the dissolution of a firm. Sec.40 provides that a firm may be dissolved with the consent of all the partners or in accordance with the contract between the partners. Secs.41 and 42 deal with dissolution on the happening of certain events while Sec.43 permits a partner to dissolve a firm by notice if it is a partnership at will. Sec.44 speaks of dissolution through court. Sec.48 indicates the mode of settlement of accounts between the partners on dissolution while Sec.49 posits that where there are joint debts due from the firm, and also separate debts due from any partner, the property of the firm shall be applied in the first instance in payment of the debts of the firm, and, if there is any surplus, then the share of each partner shall be applied in payment of his separate debts or paid to him. The separate property of any partner shall be applied first in the payment of his separate debts, and the surplus (if any) in the payment of the debts of the firm. Chapter VII deals with the registration of firms, etc., and Chapter VIII contains the saving clause.

8. The above provisions make it clear that regardless of the character of the property brought in by the partners on the constitution of the partnership firm or that what is acquired in the course of business of the partnership, such property shall become the property of the firm and an individual partner shall only be entitled to his share of profits, if any, accruing to the partnership from the realisation of this property and upon dissolution of the partnership to a share in the money representing the value of the property. It is well-settled that the firm is not a legal entity, it has no legal existence, it is merely a compendious name and hence the partnership property would vest in all the partners of the firm. Accordingly, each and every partner of the firm would have an interest in the property or asset of the firm but during its subsistence, no partner can deal with any portion of the property as belonging to him, nor can he assign his interest in any specific item thereof to anyone. By virtue of the implied authority conferred as agent of the firm his action would bind the firm if it is done to carry on, in the usual way, the business of the kind carried on by the firm but the act or instrument by which the firm is sought to be bound must be done or executed in the firm name or in any manner names expressing or implying an intention to bind the firm. His right is merely to obtain such profits, if any, as may fall to his share upon the dissolution of the firm which remain after satisfying the liabilities set out in the various sub-clauses (i) to (iv) of clause (b) of Sec.48 of the Act.

9. In the present case, the six brothers who were carrying on business in partnership fell out on account of disputes which they could not resolve inter se. The partnership being of fixed durations could not be dissolved by any partner by notice. As they could not resolve their disputes they decided to resort to arbitration. The three arbitrators chosen by them were men of their confidence and they after giving the partners full and complete opportunity took care to first circulate a proposed award to ascertain the reaction of the disputants therein. The letter written to the arbitrators by S.V.Sivalinga Nadar dated 16th February, 1983 indicates that he was quite satisfied with the hearing given by the arbitrators. He was also by and large satisfied with the proposed award but thought it warranted certain adjustments to make it acceptable and rational. He was of the view that the award should provide for the reallocation of the shareholdings of Madras Vanaspati Ltd., whereas Brahmaksthi Tin Factory owned by his sons should be kept out of the purview of the arbitrators since it was not the subject matter of arbitration. Then he raised some objection as to the percentage of his share and the amount found due to him. In the subsequent letter written on 9th September, 1983 he has reiterated these very objections while raising certain questions regarding valuation of partnership properties. Even the application filed under Secs.30 and 33 of the Arbitration Act in the High Court objections to the award as enumerated in paragraph 15 mainly concerned, (i) the conduct of the arbitrators who, it is alleged, acted negligently, with bias and against principles of natural justice, (ii) deliberate act in leaving out certain properties from consideration e.g., share-holdings of Madras Vanaspati Ltd., stock-in-trade and cash deposits the properties of Velayudha Perumal Nadar, etc., and (iii) failure to grant him a higher share to which he was entitled. No contention was raised regarding the want of registration of the award. However, being a question of law, the learned single Judge entertained the plea and rejected it, but it found favour with the Division Bench.

10. We now think it convenient to reproduce the relevant part of Sec.17 of the Registration Act:

"17(1) The following documents shall be registered, if the property to which they relate is situate in a district in which, and if they have been executed on or after the date on which. Act No.16 of 1864, or the Indian Registration Act, 1866 (20 of 1866), or the Indian Registration Act, 1871 (8 of 1871) or the Indian Registration Act, 1877 (3 of 1877), or this Act came or comes into force, namely.

(a) instruments of gift of immovable property; (b) other non-testamentary instruments which purport or operate to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish whether in present or in future, any right, title or interest, whether vested or contingent, of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, to or in immoveable property;

(c) non-testamentary instruments which acknowledge the receipt or payment of any consideration on account of the creation, declaration, assignment, limitation or extinction of any such right, title or interest; and

(d) leases of immovable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent;

(e) non-testamentary instruments transferring or assigning any decree or order of a court or any award when such decree or order or award purports or operates to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish, whether in present or in future, any right, title or interest, whether vested or contingent, of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, to or in immovable property."

The submission made in this behalf before the courts below was that the award involved a partition of immoveable properties as a consequence of dissolution of the firms and since the value of the immovable properties which are the subject-matter of the award indisputably exceed the value of Rs.100, the award was compulsorily registrable in view of the mandatory nature of the language of Sec.17(1) which uses the expression 'shall be registered'. On the mandatory character of the provision there is no dispute. The question which requires determination is whether on the dissolution of the partnership the distribution of the assets of the firm comprising both moveable and immoveable properties after meeting its obligations on settlement of accounts amongst the partners of the firm in proportion to their respective shares amounts to a partition of immoveable properties or a relinquishment or extinguishment of a share in immovable property requiring registration under Sec.17 of the Registration Act if the allocation includes immovable property of the value of Rs.100 and above?. In other words, the question to be considered is whether the interest of a partner in partnership assets is to be treated as movable property or both moveable and immoveable depending on the character of the property for the purposes of Sec.17 of the Registration Act? This question has been the subject matter of decision in a few cases.

11. In Addanki Narayanappa v. Bhaskara Krishnappa, A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 1300: (1966) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 60: (1966) 2 An.W.R. (S.C.) 60: (1966) 2 S.C.J. 490: (1966) 3 S.C.R. 400, the members of two Joint Hindu families, the Addanki family and the Bhaskara family, had entered into partnership for carrying on business of hulling rice, etc.; each family having half share in that business. The capital of the partnership comprised, among other things, certain lands belonging to the two families. The firm acquired more lands in the course of business. Differences arose whereupon two members of the Addanki family filed a suit for dissolution of the partnership and accounts. All the members of the two families were made parties to the suit either as plaintiffs or as defendants. The Bhaskara family contended in defence that the partnership was dissolved in 1936 and accounts were settled between the two families under a karar executed in favour of Bhaskara Gurappa Setty, the karta of the Bhaskara family, by five members of the Addanki family representing that family. The defendants, therefore, contended that the plaintiffs had no cause of action and the suit for dissolution of partnership and accounts was not maintainable. The relevant part of the agreement karar reads as under:

"As disputes have arisen in our family regarding partition, it is not possible to carry on the business or to make investment in future. Moreover, you yourself have undertaken to discharge some of the debts payable by us in the coastal parts in connection with our private business. Therefore, from this day onwards we have closed the joint business. So, from this day onwards, we have given up (our) share in the machine etc., and in the business, and we have made over the same to you alone completely by way of adjustment. You yourself shall carry on the business without ourselves having anything to do with the profits and loss. Herefor, you have given up to us the property forming our Venkatasubhayya's share which you have purchased and delivered possession of the same to us even previously. In case you want to execute and deliver a proper document in respect of the share which we have given to you, we shall at your own expense, execute and deliver a document registered."

Ex facie this document disclosed that the partnership business had come to a halt and the Addanki family has given up their share in the machine, etc., in the business and had made it over to the Bhaskara family. It also recites that the Addanki family had already received certain properties purchased by the partnership as its share in the partnership assets. The submission was that since the partnership assets included immovable property and the document recorded relinquishment by the members of the Addanki family of their interest therein which exceeded Rs.100 in value, the document required registration under Sec.17(1) (c) of the Registration Act. After referring to the provisions of law, treatise and the case law, both of English and Indian Courts, this Court reproduced the following passage from the decision in Ajudhia Pershad Ram Pershad v. Shani Sunder, A.I.R. 1947 Lahore 13, with approval:

"These sections require that the debts and liabilities should first be met out of the firm
